LIGHT ON THE LIQUOR REVENUE DEFICIT

We have given heretofore the views of leading men on the sources from which the government could obtain revenue to take the place of that now coming to it from the liquor traffic in the event of National Prohibition. In a recent issue of the Patriot Phalanx, Finley C. Hendrickson of Cumberland, Md., explains the situation as he sees it.—EDITOR.

There are three distinct features of the revenue question. First, all must recognize that however beneficial prohibition will finally be as a sound governmental principle, a considerable portion of pauperism, crime and insanity traceable to the liquor evil will exist and the costs have to be met after we cease to receive revenues from the traffic. This cost will gradually lessen and finally disappear.

Second, the revenue derived by the state under license presents quite a different proposition from the revenue derived by the Federal government through the taxation of liquors. As soon as the states can protect themselves from outside shipments and make their prohibitory laws effective, or better still, every state pursues the same policy so that the criminality traceable to liquor in a license state will not have to be taken care of in part by dry states, the large expense incident to the liquor regime will at once begin to decline, and the people need fear no serious fiscal inconvenience so far as state taxation is concerned.

But a different feature is presented as to Federal revenues now derived from the liquor traffic. More than one-fourth of the revenues of the Federal government, costing less than two per cent, it is claimed, for collection, is derived from the taxation of liquors. Inasmuch as the far greater cost of pauperism, crime, and legal administration, traceable to the liquor traffic, has to be taken care of by the states under our form of government, this leaves the Federal government taking what might be called the "velvet" and walking off with it. It must be admitted that if the liquor traffic is prohibited throughout the entire nation and the people would, as a whole, be greatly enriched thereby, and the states largely benefited, as we contend, there is no system of taxation in force which would supplement this alleged loss of revenue which the Federal government now receives. I frankly admit that those who advocate prohibition should announce their policy and say whether they mean to entirely cut off part of the revenues of the Federal government or supplant that revenue by some other form of taxation, and if some other revenue, from where it is to be derived. I consider the Federal revenue feature the only one which demands serious attention. The fiscal policies of the states are so elastic that they can take care of themselves and easily make any change from license to prohibition as they have been doing, but the Federal government has always been hampered by an inelastic fiscal policy and there something needs to be done.

It is often said that all taxation is odious, and yet if properly expended it would probably appear that the average man gets more for the dollar expended in taxation than he does for the average investment, or at least speculation, or private enterprise.

Use Inheritance Tax

There is one source of revenue to which the Federal government could resort to supplement liquor revenue, a source which would more than supplement the so-called loss. That is the inheritance tax. It would require no amendment to the constitution to secure it, as in the case of the income tax, and by being graduated, a very large revenue could be derived without being felt by anyone, for the tax would never be exacted until the beneficiaries of estates would be enriched. The tax on direct inheritances should be light on small estates, heavier when the estates go to collateral heirs and graduated upward as the estates enlarge. The heaviest per cent could be laid when the estate is willed to those who are not natural heirs. There is perhaps no tax more just or less burdensome.

ARRAIGNMENT OF BEER-DRINKING BY SCIENCE

DR. CHARLES GILBERT DAVIS, Chicago, Ill.

It is no longer a question as to the effect of alcohol on the human system. Alcohol is a poison and destructive to all the normal processes of life. When it does not immediately and completely arrest the vital functions in the individual, it leaves such an impression on the centers of vitality that its effects are transmitted down through subsequent generations, resulting in insufficiency, weakness, disorder of mind and body, leading toward degeneracy and the destruction of character.

In these early years of the twentieth century, science has emphatically and irrevocably given its verdict against the use of alcohol as a beverage.

As a result of the ravages of this poison, vice, crime, insanity, pestilence, poverty and war today overshadow mankind. It is enough! Alcohol must go! Wine, whisky, ale, gin, brandy, rum and beer all contain alcohol and are injurious.

It is my professional opinion, after observations of many years in the practice of medicine, that beer is doing more harm to humanity than all other alcoholics. There is a reason for this: Beer is insidious, delusive, tempting and fascinating. Advertised to contain less alcohol than some other drinks, it appeals to the man who does not wish to be considered intemperate. But statistics prove that this is a delusion.

> What must we do to be saved? Alcohol must cease to be used as a beverage. Its sale and distribution to humanity must be prohibited. Feed beer to your dog and see what it will do. This is not a temperance lecture—it is science! It is truth!

Beer contains gluten, gum, sugar, the extractive matter of the hops, and alcohol. The nutritive properties in it are insignificant. A man could live years on milk alone, but if he drank nothing but beer he could survive only a short time.

Beer produces disease of the stomach, kidneys, heart and blood vessels. Owing to the diuretic effect of the hops, the alcohol in the beer is diverted towards the kidneys, which probably accounts for its destructive action on those organs. It causes a deposit of morbid fat in the body, especially around the heart, enlarges that organ and increases the work of the heart and blood vessels, manifested by the fatigue and shortness of breath of all beer drinkers.

A man cannot use beer daily for any great length of time and not manifest some physiological deficiency.

Professor Stengel in his great work, a translation from Jügensen of Tübingen and Schrötter of Vienna, draws attention to what he calls the "beer heart." He says: "Bavaria, especially Munich, is its home par excellence, and the people in that country in every class of society fall victims to this form of heart disease."

Beer deposits fat around the heart, weakens the muscular walls, thickens and enlarges the ventricles, and if continued, ultimately cuts short the life of the individual.

All of this has been proven time and again by the post mortems of Bollinger, who has examined and weighed the hearts of many beer drinkers. This is a terrible scientific arraignment of beer, but it is the truth, and truth is the voice of God. Humanity has not advanced one iota in physical, mental or spiritual strength since the days of ancient Babylon and Nineveh. The cause is doubtless alcoholic saturation. Flowers cannot live in the scorching heat of flame, and the soul of man cannot blossom in the fumes of alcohol. Man has reached the lowest depths of alcoholic degeneracy, and as a result modern civilization is drifting toward war and destruction.

An Estimate of Beer From the Standpoint of a Physiologist

WINFIELD SCOTT HALL, Ph. D., M. D., Professor of Physiology, Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago

The two constituents of beer which possess physiological interest are alcohol and carbohydrates, the latter represented by sugar and dextrine. The small quantities of "extractives" and "albuminoids" have no nutritional significance.

The American beers range between the "lagers" of Buffalo and Washington with 4.81 per cent alcohol and 5.04 per cent carbohydrates and the "bottled lagers" of Boston and Milwaukee, which contain 6.47 per cent alcohol and 3.50 per cent carbohydrates (analyses quoted from Friedenwald and Ruhraeh, "Diet in Health and Disease," Philadelphia, 1909).

Let us consider the average American beer which contains about 5.64 per cent alcohol and 4.27 per cent carbohydrates. One quart of this average American beer contains a little less than two ounces of alcohol and a little less than one and one-half ounces of sugar and dextrine. That much carbohydrate in the market costs less than half a cent. The food value of one quart of beer would therefore be 161.5 calories, but one quart of beer costs fifteen cents to the working man, and twenty-five to thirty cents to the man who buys the higher grades in bottles.

Fifteen cents will buy three pound loaves of bread containing 3.36 ounces of muscle and brain-building protein and 12.36 ounces of fuel-furnishing fats and carbohydrates, the whole representing 3,620 calories of food value—nearly twenty-two and one-half times as much nourishment as is supplied by fifteen cents worth of beer.

Far more important, however, than this economic phase of the problem is the physiological damage done by nearly two ounces of alcohol. Alcohol is a narcotic, poisonous drug that dulls the senses and takes the keen edge off the working power of a man. While it is readily oxidized in the liver when not taken in excess of one and one-half ounces per day, that oxidation is a protective one as shown by Dr. Reid Hunt in the government laboratories, and is not to be interpreted as an oxidation for available work energy. Furthermore, this protective oxidation, while protecting the nervous system from smaller quantities of alcohol—up to one and one-half ounces daily—is accomplished at a sacrifice of other important things; and the individual who must thus oxidize alcohol to protect the nervous system against it is far more amenable to all sorts of toxins than is the individual, the oxidizing power of whose liver may be turned against such toxins, oxidizing them and making them harmless.

Summing up the matter, we find that the man who uses a quart of beer daily expends enough for it to buy three loaves of bread for his family. He gets for himself a trivial amount of nourishment worth half a cent and incidentally takes into his system nearly two ounces of a narcotic poison, the influence of which is to make him less alert and therefore more amenable to accidents, to make him less efficient and therefore more likely to lose his job, and to make him more likely to suffer from toxins and infections.

> Jacob Ruppert says—
>
> "BEER PROMOTES EFFICIENCY."
>
> If, from your own experience, you do not know Mr. Ruppert's statement to be false, ask the physicians at any hospital, ask the president of any railroad, ask any reputable business man.
>
> If you were about to have a dangerous surgical operation performed, would you prefer to have the surgeon take a few glasses of beer just before the operation, to "PROMOTE EFFICIENCY?"
>
> If you were about to take a trip on a railroad, would you prefer to have the engineer and the telegraph operators and the switchmen along the line take a few beers while you were on your way, to "PROMOTE EFFICIENCY?"
>
> If you are a business man, do you prefer to have your employes "rush the can" occasionally, to "PROMOTE EFFICIENCY?"
>
> REMEMBER, YOU CAN GET JUST AS DRUNK ON BEER AS YOU CAN ON WHISKY!—From Beer Poster

BEER DRINKING, PROLIFIC CAUSE OF LIVER AND KIDNEY DISEASES

WM. EDGAR DARNALL, M. D., F. A. C. S., Atlantic City, N. J.

In reply to your request for an opinion as to whether beer is a harmless drink and contains valuable food elements I wish to say that it is not a harmless drink in my opinion, but that it is more prolific in producing certain organic diseases of the liver and kidneys perhaps than any other form of alcohol. The end of the beer drinker is often a "hob-nailed" cirrhosis of the liver or Bright's disease. Its food value is hardly worth mentioning.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY FORBID ALCOHOL TO TROOPS

The authorities in Austria and Hungary have issued a decree forbidding the sale or gift of alcohol to troops on trains, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association. The officer in command of the troops must see to it that within five hours of entraining no alcohol shall reach them. Alcoholic drinks shall be given to the sick or exhausted on the trains only when the medical officer regards it as indispensable. The eating houses and restaurants at the stations must have ready for the troops, besides waters and other non-alcoholic drinks, soups, hot and cold boiled milk, tea, coffee and lemonade. Circulars have been given to all the soldiers urging abstention from alcohol, "as it makes men sluggish and incapable of marching, interferes with good shooting and renders one more susceptible to infectious diseases."

The Austrian authorities have also ordered that no more barley shall be made into malt, and all supplies of barley on hand at the breweries must be declared. Permission is also given local authorities to utilize the drying facilities of the breweries to hasten the drying of new corn so that it can be ground before the usual time.

This Cartoon Appeared in the Easter Number of the St. Louis (Mo.) Post.

Distilleries and Breweries Converted Into Industrial Plants

"With the advent of prohibition, what will become of the buildings formerly used as distilleries, breweries and saloons?" is a question frequently asked. Are they to be destroyed and the men employed therein left without employment?

The question is a pertinent one and deserving of consideration. As a general answer we would quote the statement made by the commissioner of Labor of North Carolina, who, in speaking of his own state, said:

"Whisky distilleries have been displaced by industrial plants and over the remains of saloons have been erected splendid school buildings and magnificent church edifices. Gaston county alone where twenty-six distilleries formerly were in operation, now boasts of forty-seven textile plants, employing more than 7,000 people."

In West Virginia, the former plant of the Reymann Brewing Co. at Wheeling has been converted into a packing house, improvements being made to the extent of $125,000. In the packing house there will be employed between 200 and 250 men, while the brewing company employed not more than seventy-five men.

A three story wholesale liquor house in the same city has been remodeled from basement to roof and is now occupied by the largest wholesale wall paper and rug firm in the city. Immediately adjoining it is a drug store where formerly was the old Palace saloon. Immediately across the street a former saloon has been transformed into a butcher shop conducted by the same man who formerly rented the saloon. A few doors further down the street where another wholesale liquor house was, is now a shoe store, belonging to a chain of stores throughout the country. The building that was formerly occupied by the well-known White Front Cafe renting at $250 as a bar-room, has been changed beyond recognition and is now occupied by the leading confectioner of the city at a rental of $300 per month. Another place worthy of mention is the old Senate saloon. The building in which this place was has been torn down and there is now being erected on this same spot a bank building.

These facts are vouched for by the Temperance Society of the Methodist Church, and similar conditions prevail in other cities of the state.

In anticipation of the statewide prohibition law going into effect January 1, 1916, the liquor manufacturers of Colorado are contemplating a change of business.

It is reported that the big plant of the Walter Brewing company at Pueblo is to be converted into a factory for the manufacture of temperance drinks, and that practically the entire force now employed at the plant will be given an opportunity to remain.

Another brewery at Golden, Colorado, owned by Coors Bros., is planning to utilize its plant and equipment for the manufacture of malted milk and pottery.

In the state of Washington likewise there is a similar movement on the part of the big liquor concerns.

A part of the plant of the Olympia Brewing company of Tumwater, Washington, has been leased to the Olympia Dairy Products company. This newly organized concern will open a creamery, equipped with the most modern and up-to-date machinery, to supply the people of Olympia and Thurston county with pasteurized milk and cream, and butter and ice cream made of pasteurized milk. In addition a great cold storage plant for butter and eggs will be operated.

Adolph D. Schmidt, the president of the Olympia Dairy Products company and Frederick W. Schmidt, its secretary and treasurer, are sons of the founder of the Olympia Brewing company. Both have been active in the management and conduct of the brewing business. They are said to be most enthusiastic over the success of the venture.

All these concerns are to be congratulated on having changed from a business which deals in poison to one which places upon the market health-giving products.

The Blessing of Prohibition and the Curse of Liquor

A. W. VAN HOOSE, President Shorter College, Rome, Ga.

I am asked to give my experience in a town during the time that it was cursed with bar-rooms, and after the public conscience had been aroused to a realization of the heinousness of the liquor traffic to such an extent that the people, by vote, decided to banish the curse from their midst.

Five years ago I came to Rome to begin my duties as president of Shorter College. Already the city was enjoying the blessings of the prohibition law; therefore, I cannot speak from personal experience of conditions here prior to my coming. One has but to look about him, however, to see the evidences of prosperity and happiness on every hand in this beautiful hill city. I have not seen a single man under the influence of liquor. The percentage of crime, as the court records show, is far less than in the days when there was a bar-room on every corner, and several between corners. Larger and larger appropriations have been made for public schools, for better streets and sidewalks, and for larger and more modern municipal buildings, while the pay-rolls of over three score factories give every evidence of increasing prosperity and happiness. I doubt if there are a dozen men among all the eighteen thousand inhabitants of this beautiful city, with the exception of those who might wish to go into the business of selling liquor, who would vote to go back to the day of legalized saloons. The saloon is gone from Georgia forever.

But I have lived in a city cursed with bar-rooms. I have seen the time in what is now, under prohibition rule, one of the most beautiful and prosperous of southern cities, when it was unsafe for a lady to be on the streets on the day of an election; I have seen bar-rooms and grog shops take from men their reason and convert them into devils and demons; I have seen the passion for liquor cause them to take every cent of their weekly wages and spend it for drink, and I have seen the families of these same men, innocent women and children, suffer and starve and die for want of the necessaries of life. And then, I have seen this same town and the county in which it is located, rise in the strength of Christian manhood and womanhood and throw off the shackles of intemperance, close the bar-rooms, and bring prosperity and happiness where poverty and want, discord and riot had ruled supreme.

I say candidly that I would not under any circumstances live in a town or city that tolerated the saloon. The time is near at hand when our entire country will be redeemed, and when the conditions which are now found in some of our cities and states will obtain in every state throughout the nation.

Testimony of Residents of Prohibition Communities

Mayor Tells of Low Tax Rate in Dry Illinois Cities

In a speech recently delivered by Mayor W. W. Bennett of Rockford, Ill., in Beloit, Wis., he said:

"The decent manhood of my home city refuses to have its taxes paid by some broken-hearted women working over the washtub for the money to keep their households running while their derelict husbands push nickles they earn over the bar for a drink. Rockford's tax rate in the spring of 1914 was lower than any other city in the state of Illinois having a population of 15,000 or over, with the exception of Jacksonville, and Jacksonville has been dry two years longer than has Rockford. A recent postoffice census and an estimate made in the publication of a new city directory places the population of the city at 54,000.

"This lower tax rate comes because of a greater number of persons paying taxes and a greater property valuation on which to figure the rate. During the year after Rockford went dry the property valuation increased $1,200,000.

"There is more taxable property in Rockford since the saloons went. But that's not surprising for the nickel can't go over the bar to Milwaukee or St. Louis or other brewery cities and stay in your city to build homes, too.

"The bankers of Rockford have found a great increase of savings deposits during the time the city has bec . dry. One bank—the Swedish-American National bank—in the furniture factory district, a mile removed from the business center and from its nearest competing neighbor, had more than one-third of the total increase of savings deposits for the entire city during the first year that Rockford was dry. Rockford has been dry since May 1, 1912, and while on January 1, 1914, all of the banks in the city of Rockford showed less money on hand than they did on January 1, 1913, still the amazing fact came out that the total savings deposits in all of the banks of the city of Rockford were $250,000 more on January 1, 1914, than on January 1, 1912, with this bank in the furniture district again showing the greatest increase in savings of any bank in the city. A director in this bank told me recently that he examined the list of savings depositors—some 2,600 in number — and that men now had good savings accounts who during wet times never had one dollar to rub against another."

Governor Cites Prohibition Prosperity Facts

Addressing the Kansas Good Citizenship League at Emporia on April 3, Governor Capper said:

"It seems to me that the state which has tried prohibition for thirty years and made of it a complete success; that has reduced the annual expenditure for liquor from $21 per capita, the average in the United States, to $1.25 per capita in Kansas; that has reduced illiteracy to two per cent—the lowest in the United States; that has forty-eight counties that did not send a single prisoner to the penitentiary and eighty-seven counties that did not send a single insane patient to the asylums the past year; that has more than a dozen counties in which no jury has been called in ten years to try a criminal case, fifty-three counties without prisoners in their jails, thirty-eight counties without paupers in their almshouses; that has the lowest death-rate in the world—7½ for each 1,000 persons; that has more students in colleges and universities in proportion to the population than any other state; that has increased its bank deposits in ten years from $100,000,000 to $220,000,000—it seems to me that such a state can well take the lead in the crusade for a saloonless nation, and has a right to say—indeed, it is its duty to say—to the people of the United States and the world, 'The public health, the public peace, the public morals, and the public welfare demand the absolute eradication of the saloon.'

"I rejoice that it has been my privilege for nearly twenty-five years aggressively and uncompromisingly to stand for prohibition and the strict enforcement of the prohibitory law, personally and through the columns of the newspapers I have controlled."

Manufacturer Tells of Improved Conditions

"When we voted the saloons out," said F. J. Vea, president of the Stoughton (Wis.) Wagon Works, in a recent address, "a twenty per cent increase in taxes was predicted. In the last year of the saloon's existence in Stoughton, the tax rate was 25 mills. In 1914 the tax rate was 16.9 mills despite the fact that Stoughton has undergone more public improvements than in any seven years of the wet regime. We paid the bonds for the city hall, built an $80,000 high school, installed new sewers and built cement walks and paved streets. The city owns its two electric light and power plants. Through all this public improvement the tax rate has decreased instead of increased. It is my personal opinion that this is due to the abolition of saloons. Conditions in my factory were enough to make any man's heart ache—to see the pick of our men slowly degenerating through the influence of the saloons. The men are now in better condition, are more efficient and satisfied with their lot. I don't believe we will ever see another saloon in Stoughton. We are better off morally and in an economic way and the main street has a pleasant odor. They told us our stores would be empty and that grass would grow in the very streets. However business is better, collections are better. there are fewer accounts. The stores vacated by the saloons filled up so quickly with legitimate business that we were surprised."

PROHIBITION IN RUSSIA AN ECONOMIC BLESSING

M. BARK, Minister of Finance, Re-affirms Benefits of Law

The attempts of the liquor interests to discredit the reports from Russia as to the benefits of prohibition are futile in the face of the repeated and emphatic assertion of M. Bark, the Russian minister of finance, that the elimination of alcohol from the national life has proven a wonderful blessing. In a statement made by M. Bark, under date of April 12, (reported in the North American of Philadelphia), he says:

"Notwithstanding the depressing and paralyzing effect of the war, the Russian peasant class is more prosperous than at any previous time in the history of the country. It is not difficult to account for this unusual prosperity. By virtue of the allowance made by the government to the families of soldiers, which exceeds the earning power of the soldiers, the total income of these families is greater than in times of peace. Thus, instead of feeling any privation as the result of the absence of the men and the loss of their services, the people are beginning to regard the war as a peculiar sort of godsend which is putting money into their pockets."

"What about vodka?" was asked of the minister.

"It is the prohibition of the sale of vodka which is primarily responsible for the ameliorated condition of the peasant," he responded. "The sieve through which all the available earnings formerly disappeared has now been closed and the money is either spent for present necessities or saved for future wants.

Great Increase in Deposits

"It is not necessary to invent theories to explain why the Russian people should be more prosperous, for the actual fact is that this prosperity is everywhere noticeable. Before the war, the average yearly savings deposited amounted to from 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 rubles ($15,000,000 to $20,000,000), while in the month of January alone, about 60,000,000 rubles ($30,000,000) was deposited."

M. Bark was asked what means were being employed to replace the revenues formerly derived from vodka.

"The amount of this revenue exceeded 900,000,000 rubles ($450,000,000)," he replied. "This is being replaced in a diversity of ways, including a special tax on railroad transportation, matches, sugar and most ordinary commodities."

NO "BLIND PIGS" IN RUSSIA

"The prohibition argument is strong," writes H. Hamilton Fyfe, the Petrograd correspondent of the London Daily Mail, "crime has become rarer. The records of the courts prove this. Savings bank deposits have increased enormously. The number of patients in Petrograd hospitals has fallen to a surprising degree. There are fewer accidents, as well as less disease. In the towns workmen who used to spend their wages as soon as they got them are setting up in business for themselves. Peasants who, in vodka days, never put by a kopeck, are buying good ploughs and drills and harvesting machines. There is work for all, and wages are rather higher than they were before the war. In all ranks there are many (women as well as men) who are the better for their enforced abstinence. Brightness has come back to eyes dulled by over-indulgence. Cheeks which were grey and flabby have color in them again. The owners of these cheeks and eyes would pay a ridiculously high price for vodka or whisky if they could get it. I have heard of whisky changing hands at thirty shillings a bottle. But the stocks which were laid up in cellars or cupboards are mostly exhausted. Private vendors are very hard to find now, and to buy otherwise than in secret is out of the question. There are no 'blind pigs' as in Canada; and the druggists are so terrified that if you take them a prescription with alcohol in it they ring up your doctor to make sure you are not a fraud."

—Portland Oregonian

SIR WILLIAM RAMSAY, ENGLISH PHYSICIST, DEFENDS PROHIBITION

Converted by Experience in America

Prohibition as it exists in the United States has a distinguished defender in Sir William Ramsay, the noted English physicist, who has visited widely in this country and observed conditions in both license and prohibition territory.

In a letter to the London Chronicle of April 4 he declares that "when anyone says that prohibition in America has been a failure I am bound to meet his statements with an absolute denial."

The letter is in reply to statements made by Sir Thomas Dewar, who related his own experiences in evading the law in some states.

"On Dewar's own story," remarks Sir William, "it appears that evasion is not so easy. But he succeeded in getting what he wanted by conniving at smuggling and falsehood. Dewar can get whisky anywhere if he is determined to have it. My own testimony, from what I have seen, is that prohibition is beneficial. Voluntary abstinence and the influence of such an example is what I would like as being theoretically best of all, but legal abolition is practically useful. To that belief I was converted by what I saw in America."

The British scientist says that he "could tell plenty of stories about the 'blind tiger' and other ways of evading prohibition, but the fact remains that evasion proves the law, and the law is binding on the vast majority of citizens. Americans are an educated and therefore a law-abiding people. Of their own free will the law stands and the overwhelming majority obey it, as anyone who stays long enough to know the country is aware."

He relates that at one time he lived for weeks in a prohibition state, in a town of 4,000 inhabitants, in which the population was sometimes doubled on festive occasions. "It is just an ordinary town, like many hundreds of others in the states. There never has been a policeman in it. Legalize the traffic, and crime and the policeman will come in at once." In reply to an assertion by Dewar that prohibition had not diminished drunkenness, Sir William retorts, "I assert that wherever I have been in a prohibition state drunkenness never was visible."

DECREASING CONSUMPTION OF ALCOHOL

FACTS THAT PROVE IT

The liquor dealers and the distillers insist that prohibition does not prohibit and that it has no effect whatever on the amount of liquor consumed.

A good and sufficient answer to such a statement would be the recent report of the government, to the effect that increase in the extent of prohibition territory has caused a reduction of over $2,000,000 in the Federal government's income from taxes on alcoholic beverages this year.

Distillers all over the country are decreasing their output materially. As a result the commissioner of internal revenue will instruct various local collectors to get rid of a number of gaugers who have been employed at the distilleries. Commenting on this the North American of Philadelphia says:

"Peoria, Illinois, where more spirits are distilled than in any other city in the country, will be affected most by this order. The Peoria distillers already have decreased their output to such an extent that about one-fourth of the gaugers there are without employment. On May 1 the removal of gaugers from the rectifying houses will decrease the number to between thirty-five and forty per cent of the Peoria force. Under the law, the collector of internal revenue is compelled to drop all above fifteen per cent of the unassigned men. Collector McCabe, at Peoria, has been waiting for instructions from Washington before acting. Representations had been made to him that the business would pick up shortly and that even with the withdrawal of gaugers from the rectifying houses in May there would be plenty of work for all but about fifteen per cent of the men. The election of April 6 caused a sudden change in the situation. When the city of Des Moines, Iowa, went dry recently, large orders were immediately wiped off the Peoria slate. When the entire state of Iowa goes dry next January, Peoria will suffer further. The closing of saloons at the Michigan summer resorts also cuts into the Illinois distilling receipts materially. Indiana and Kentucky distilleries are suffering in a degree equal to the Peoria liquor-making concerns. The last few months have seen the closing of many distilleries throughout the country. Opponents of the liquor business here predict that the next two years will see an even greater number of closings."

Another proof of decreased consumption is the numerous failures of breweries and distilleries. Among them were the Hoster-Columbus Breweries company, which gave as the cause of bankruptcy "decreased demand for beer, adverse legislation, and the voting dry of many states and counties in the last eight years," and also made the following statement, "In 1914 the crowning blow came in the loss of West Virginia, where we did a business of nearly $500,000 a year, to say nothing of old Virginia's voting dry to go into effect in 1916," and the Ernst Tosetti Brewing company, whose treasurer said, "It is a matter of general knowledge among brewers that the liquor business in the United States has fallen off more than thirty-five per cent within the last year."

To the same effect is the following statement appearing in a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal:

"Production of whisky in Kentucky in January was 1,980,000 gallons, against 6,102,452 gallons in January, 1914; production in Pennsylvania was 1,073,808 gallons in January, against 1,552,445 a year ago, and in Maryland 506,919 gallons, against 918,582. Whisky bottled in bond in January was 691,508 gallons, as compared with 928,187 in January, 1914. The Kentucky decrease for one month was sixty-six and two-thirds per cent, the Pennsylvania decrease practically thirty-three per cent, and the Maryland dealers over forty per cent."

Nightmare! —New York World

Quite recently the New York State Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association put their fears into concrete form in the declaration that "the events of the last twelve months have created a situation more grave than has ever before confronted our trade. Formerly we were called upon to oppose town and county option. Today we must combat state and nationwide prohibition. Originally our opponents were few and scattered. Today they are many and united."

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC MUST GO

If there were an institution of any kind in our land that began deliberately to cut off the left hand of every man who came within its walls there would be a unanimous action by Congress in five minutes to imprison and punish its organizers. Such an atrocity would not be tolerated. But this could not be compared with the atrocities of the liquor organizations. The loss of a hand is not to be compared with the loss of the mind. For liquor steals the mind, weakens the will and so completely demoralizes a man and robs not only the pocketbook and the home, but also destroys the very temple of the soul. It destroys character, and that which destroys character will eventually destroy this Nation. If we wish to have a nation of strong men to carry out the ideals of the great founders of America there is only one action to take, and that is to abolish once and forever this great curse of the liquor traffic which is contrary to every fundamental principle of our government.

—U. S. Congressman Francis O. Lindquist.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Postoffice Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL,
Evanston, Illinois

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, April 22, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

AN ANTI-PROHIBITION SCHOOL.

A school for the training of anti-prohibition speakers is to be established in Cincinnati, Ohio, we are informed. The students are supposedly to be instructed in the latest and most approved methods of misrepresenting and distorting facts and figures. They will undoubtedly be taught how to prove beyond the peradventure of a doubt that prohibition is ruinous to any community and in the same breath to show that prohibition does not prohibit and never lessens the amount of liquor consumed. They will be trained in the art of hunting up statements of men who have long ago passed on to another world and of living men who have changed their views and are ashamed of their former opinions on the subject of prohibition.

In all seriousness, the existence of such educational (?) efforts on the part of the liquor interests should spur us to make use of every agency at our command along the same line. Not only our institutes, county conventions, Loyal Temperance Legions, and Young People's Branches should be training schools for the education of our workers to meet the attacks of our opponents, but the Bible classes in our Sunday schools, our women's clubs, missionary societies and young people's church societies should be working with the same end in view.

The Temperance Educational Quarterly should be ordered directly from the headquarters of the Bureau of Scientific Temperance Instruction, Hartford, Wis., rather than from National Headquarters. The price of the Quarterly is 50 cents a year.

THOSE KANSAS STATISTICS!!

The liquorites are spending sleepless nights working on the Kansas prohibition problem. They realize that unless they can successfully juggle statistics so as to confuse the voters of the United States and make a large proportion of them believe that prohibition is not the tremendous and overwhelming success it has been advertised to be, they might as well throw up their hands. They realize that the story of Prohibition Kansas is an argument so convincing that its circulation over the American continent is certain to ruin their ungodly traffic.

If they only knew it, their efforts are absurdly futile. They may be able to buy up a newspaper in every city from Florida to Alaska and from California to Maine and fill them with their falsified figures (every one of which can be explained away to the satisfaction of any intelligent and reasonable student of the situation), but they cannot close the mouths of the Kansans, and for one person who reads and believes their misleading statistics, a hundred will listen to the words of a live man or woman who tells out of his own experience the benefits of prohibition.

As long as Governor Capper, the Republican chief executive of Kansas, keeps on declaring with enthusiasm that prohibition is an unmitigated success; and ex-Governor Hodges, the late Democratic governor of the state, proclaims with all the force of his English vocabulary that it has made possible an era of unprecedented prosperity; and ex-Governors Hoch and Stubbs, former heads of the state, eloquently insist that it is the only policy for a commonwealth to pursue, the public are going to listen to them and to believe what they say.

In the long run that same public is not easily deceived, and it is going to weigh carefully in the balance of its judgment the evidence manufactured by the liquor interests, on the one hand, and on the other hand, the testimony of such witnesses as, for instance, the members of the state legislature of Kansas, the president of the state bankers' association, the president of the state medical association, the president of the state retailers' association, the 700 editors of the papers of the state and the 457,000 people who piled a majority on the avowed liquor candidate for governor at the last election, and thereby said that they gave their unreserved endorsement to the prohibition policy.

Trust the people to decide who represent the true facts in the case.

THE TRUE MERITS (?) OF BEER.

"It is my aim to win the American people over to our side, to make them all lovers of beer and teach them to have respect for the brewing industry and for the brewer," wrote a prominent brewer of the United States to a member of "the trade" not long since, in urging an educational campaign in the interests of the drink. "This work has got to be done systematically," he continued, "and the best interests of our country will have to lend their assistance. It may cost us a million of dollars and even more, but what of it, if thereby we elevate our position!"

With such determination of purpose are the brewery interests of the country pushing their product. Realizing that the whisky traffic is doomed they are hoping to save their own trade by fooling the people into believing that a low per cent alcoholic drink is not only harmless but healthful. These sophistries must be met with definite, scientific refutations.

Dr. Charles Gilbert Davis, an experienced physician of Chicago, gives it as his professional opinion after many years in the practice of medicine that beer is doing more harm to humanity than all other alcoholics. In support of this assertion he says that beer being widely advertised to contain less alcohol than other drinks appeals to men who would not touch whisky, brandy, etc. They will drink beer to such excess that in the end they will consume a large amount of alcohol.

Dr. Darnall of Atlantic City in emphatically denying the harmlessness of beer, states it as his belief that it is more prolific in producing certain organic diseases of the liver and kidneys than any other form of alcohol.

Dr. Winfield Scott Hall, the noted physiologist, says that the man who consumes a quart of beer daily, spends for it sufficient to purchase for his family three loaves of bread and by so doing takes into his system enough narcotic poison to lessen his efficiency, and render him more liable to suffer from toxins and infections.

Do not fail to read the statements by these medical authorities, given on page three.

These gentlemen voice the opinion of the majority of intelligent and conscientious physicians and their words should be given wide publicity. They should appear in the pages of newspapers in every city to counteract the influence of the numerous beer advertisements which are to be seen on every hand. Let the people everywhere know the truth as to the merits (?) of beer from the standpoint of science.

FORMER OPPONENT OF PROHIBITION ADMITS HIS MISTAKE.

The president of a West Virginia local union has been interviewing some of the business men of her home city as to their opinions on the benefits of prohibition to the community. Every one was enthusiastic over the improved conditions. One of the number visited—a man of large and varied interests, who has many workmen in his employ, confessed that he had quite changed his mind about prohibition. He had opposed the law, believing that a dry state would mean the emigration of his workmen (miners) to license territory, but he had discovered his mistake and says if prohibition were again submitted to a vote, he would cast his ballot for it. He added, "Now, I never have to worry as to whether I will have men on the job in the morning (especially after pay days)." In response to the question whether two men now were not able to accomplish as much as three men under the liquor regime, he replied with enthusiasm, "Their efficiency has increased even more than that."

A prominent lawyer for the liquor interests and one who is almost universally successful in the cases he undertakes, assured the white ribboner, "Conditions are better in every way, and even the town itself has a cleaner look."

Have you one of the revised prohibition maps of the United States showing the eighteen states? You will need it at your next local union meeting. Send to National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, for the 18 by 24 size, price, fifteen cents.

GOVERNOR STRONG SIGNS THE PROHIBITION BILL FOR ALASKA

Governor F. A. Strong on April 13 signed the bill passed by both houses of the territorial legislature, providing for submitting the question of territorial prohibition to the voters at the election November 4, 1916. If prohibition is approved by the voters of the territory, it will become effective January 1, 1918.

FLORIDA'S VICTORY DEFERRED

The lower house of the Florida legislature on April 13 passed a resolution for submission to the voters in 1916 of a constitutional amendment for state-wide prohibition. This measure was defeated in the senate on April 14.

MICHIGAN MAY INAUGURATE CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN THROUGH INITIATIVE

Not disheartened by the success of the enemy in the matter of the Straight state-wide prohibition bill, the advocates of prohibition in Michigan are planning to inaugurate a campaign to secure constitutional prohibition by the initiative.

The bill providing for the submission of the question to the voters passed the lower house of the legislature, but on April 16 was defeated in the senate. When it reached the senate through the efforts of its opponents several amendments were attached which, in the opinion of its friends, made it worthless, and it was voted down by both its friends and enemies.

LIQUORLESS CRUISE OF CHICAGO'S MAYOR-ELECT

"A party of politicians on a houseboat recuperating from a strenuous campaign and not a drop of liquor on board! That was the situation—unique in politics at least—when Mayor-elect William Hale Thompson of Chicago and a party of thirty friends boarded the good ship Kabekorna in Peoria for a cruise down the Illinois and Mississippi rivers," says the Chicago Herald. "All liquor was ordered thrown overboard by Commodore James A. Pugh, who is in charge of the voyage. Some of the mayor-elect's friends are said to have wanted something stronger than water, milk, coffee and tea on board, but a frown was the answer to their request."

GOVERNOR BYRNE ATTENDS DISTRICT CONVENTION

Several people of note attended the convention of the Seventh W. C. T. U. district of South Dakota held in Pierre April 5-7, among them the governor of the state, Hon. F. M. Byrne, Judges Polley and Whiting of the Supreme court, and influential business men of the city. Mrs. Anna R. Simmons, the state W. C. T. U. president, and Mrs. Alice M. Pickler, state vice-president, were in attendance, and during their stay had the honor and pleasure of being entertained in the homes of the governor and Judge Polley.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the Kentucky W. C. T. U., was a caller last week at National Headquarters. She reports progress along all lines in Kentucky, the addition of many new unions and general strengthening of the old organizations.

PROHIBITION MAPS FOR SCHOOL ROOMS

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia has hit upon the novel idea of utilizing in the school-rooms the prohibition map as a mighty maker of sentiment which shall aid in bringing in the millennium for temperance people—National Constitutional Prohibition. The plan will, at the same time, hasten the glad day of prohibition for the District. Permission to place the maps in the schools was secured from the superintendent of public instruction by Mrs. Emma S. Shelton, president of the District W. C. T. U. The distribution of sixty beautifully mounted maps costing fifty-five cents each marks the inauguration of the new plan.

RECEPTION TO NATIONAL PRESIDENT

A reception was tendered Miss Anna A. Gordon, National president of the W. C. T. U. on April 15, by the two local unions of Evanston, at the home of Mrs. H. B. Ridgaway. Over 150 Evanstonians and friends from Chicago enjoyed this opportunity of greeting Miss Gordon. In the receiving line with Miss Gordon were Mrs. Frances P. Parks, National corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. R. Thomas, president of the Evanston W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Ellen DeCoudres, president of the Marcy W. C. T. U.

BLOW TO "PERSONAL LIBERTY" IMMINENT IN GERMANY

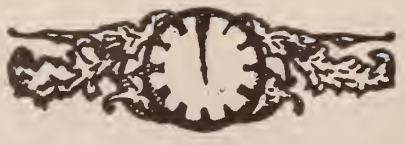
It has been learned from an authoritative source, says the Philadelphia North American, that the imperial government will shortly issue a decree prohibiting the sale of distilled liquors in saloons. "Schnapps," the traditional drink of the German working man, is to be unobtainable until the war is ended. The decree which is to enforce this proposed sweeping measure is being worked out now.

Fearing a possible shortage of potatoes, from which product most of the spirits are distilled in Germany, the government proposes to make the new order "work both ways." No opposition is looked for against the order when it comes up for the sanction of the reichstag at its next session.

BIG DROP IN CHICAGO'S RUM LICENSE VALUE

Evidence that the market value of Chicago's 7,152 saloon licenses has suffered a severe slump was shown when Federal Judge Landis undertook to dispose of the eighty-nine licenses that came into his possession with the bankruptcy of the Tosetti Brewing company. A year ago licenses brought from $2,500 to $2,800. Judge Landis received only one offer, and that for only $1,200. This he refused. Fear of successful anti-saloon legislation is the reason given, brewers, speculators and license brokers anticipating further dry activity. The law provides that no new licenses may be issued until the city is nearly double its present size.

President Poincare of France in declining to drink a glass of champagne with King George of England at their recent meeting, said he had made it a rule to drink no wine as long as the war lasts.



TIME OF PRAYER—NOONTIDE

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents
From shore to shore, somewhere
Our prayers are rising evermore."

NOTED SONG WRITER PROMOTED

Mrs. Kate Lunden Sunderlin, for many years an active W. C. T. U. worker and a valued contributor to THE UNION SIGNAL, passed away at Trenton, New Jersey, on April 2, after several years of invalidism. This beloved comrade's songs and poems, especially her "White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner," will long continue to inspire our blessed cause.

THE NEW PATRIOT

Who is the patriot? He who lights
The torch of war from hill to hill?
Or he who kindles on the heights
The beacon of a world's good-will?

Who is the patriot? It is he
Who knows no boundary, race or creed,
Whose nation is humanity,
Whose countrymen all souls that need.

Who is the patriot? Only he
Whose business is the general good,
Whose keenest sword is sympathy,
Whose dearest flag is brotherhood.

—Selected.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION HYMN

ROBERT L. SELLE, D. D.

(Tune, "America.")

The North and South agree,
Our nation shall be free
From rum's death reign;
The sons of blue and gray
Their country's call obey
And rush to arms to-day
Vict'ry to gain.

The curse that blights our race
Shall have no more a place
In our domain;
Our nation's flag shall wave
In triumph o'er the grave
Of alcohol, the knave,
Completely slain.

Long has this giant great
Wrought death within our gate,
But he must go;
United we will stand,
And under God's command
We'll banish from our land
The liquor foe.

King Alcohol, good-by;
Your thrones all crumbled lie
From sea to sea;
Our sons and daughters fair
May go forth anywhere,
From rum's destructive snare
Forever free.

THE SIN OF SILENCE

To sin by silence, when we should protest,
Makes cowards out of men.
The human race has climbed on protest;
Had no voice been raised against injustice, ignorance and lust,
The inquisition yet would serve the law,
And guillotines decide our least disputes.
The few who dare must speak and speak again
To right the wrongs of many.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday of Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION PLANS FOR MAY

1. At the institutes and county conventions that will be held during the month of May, plan for an address and a symposium or discussion on the subject of National Constitutional Prohibition.

2. Get your local papers to publish brief arguments in favor of nationwide prohibition by Senators, Members of Congress, Governors and other prominent people.

3. Bring to the attention of the citizens in your community the necessity of electing to Congress and to your state legislature men who are outspoken for National Constitutional Prohibition.

Send to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill., for the new Prohibition Map (price 15 cents each; two for 25 cents) to display at all public meetings as proof of the progress toward nationwide prohibition.

Envelopes for subscriptions to the Lillian Stevens Campaign fund have been prepared by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. These envelopes are to be furnished to the states at cost, to be sent by them free to every local union agreeing to place them in the hands of all members and as many others as possible, with the suggestion and hope that every local union will send a contribution to this Fund, averaging ten cents per member. This money should be sent through the regular W. C. T. U. channels.

Pledges should be paid to W. C. T. U. treasurer within thirty days. Contributors of one dollar or more will receive for one year the Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL, the price of the paper (25 cents) being deducted before funds are divided between the State and National W. C. T. U.

The revised leaflet descriptive of the Lillian Stevens Campaign Fund can be secured at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters and should be widely distributed.

NOTE. Send to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House for National Constitutional Prohibition Quiz for use in symposiums and discussions. Material for publication in local papers can be secured from back numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL.

TEMPERANCE HOTELS NEAR SAN FRANCISCO

For the convenience of white ribboners who will attend the Panama-Pacific Exposition the following list of temperance hotels in Oakland and Berkeley, sent by Mrs. Sara J. Dorr, president of the W. C. T. U of Northern California, is given:

Athens, 1556 Broadway, Oakland.
Crellin, 10th and Washington Sts., Oakland.
Harrison, 14th and Harrison Sts., Oakland.
Y. W. C. A., Oakland.
The Claremont, Berkeley.
The Berkeley, Berkeley.
Hotel Shattuck, Berkeley.
Lafayette Apartment, Berkeley.
Oxford Apartment, Berkeley.

For hotels in San Francisco see the list given by Mrs. Dorr in THE SIGNAL of April 1.

We record here the names of comrades and friends who have recently passed to the higher life:

MRS. E. V. SPENCER, Susanville, Calif., a life-long temperance worker and suffragist, and since its organization the president of the W. C. T. U. of Lassen county, in far northeastern California, so remote that it was almost impossible to maintain an organization, yet Mrs. Spencer kept the lights burning and wielded great influence for righteousness.

MRS. MARIA FREEMAN GRAY, for fifteen years the able and efficient superintendent of Peace and Arbitration of the Northern California W. C. T. U., and a vice-president of the international Alliance Universelles des Femmes pour la Paix. She was twice president of San Francisco county W. C. T. U., and active in every good work and reform movement.

MEDAL CONTEST DEPARTMENT PEACE CONTEST

MRS. A. E. CARMAN, National Superintendent

The local unions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, public schools, Sunday schools, and all societies that are interested in the department of Peace and Arbitration, are earnestly requested to co-operate in holding a declamatory medal contest on May 18, Peace Day. We have added to the book of declamations already in use a number of up-to-date readings. This seems to be the opportune time to push this department.

Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, the National superintendent of Peace and Arbitration, quotes the following from a letter received from the American Peace Society: "A first class collection of suitable Peace declamations and recitations has long been needed, but so far there has not been found the money to publish it or the individual with the time to get it up." Such a book is now being published and it is expected that it will be on sale by the twenty-fifth of April, thus giving ample time to procure the books and prepare the class for the contest. The price of it is ten cents. We have a special silver medal at the price of $1.25, and would suggest as souvenirs the Peace flag pins, price ten cents each.

As there is not time to supply superintendents with books and material all orders should be sent direct to Mrs. A. E. Carman, 5414 Broadway, Chicago.

PROGRAM

"America"—Audience
Invocation by Pastor
Chorus, "The Coming of Peace," air, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic;" (words fifty cents per hundred)
Recitation, Number One
Recitation, Number Two
Solo, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to be a Soldier." (Price 15 cents)
Recitation, Number Three
Recitation, Number Four
Solo, "Don't Take my Darling Boy Away." (Price 25 cents.)
Recitation, Number Five
Recitation, Number Six
Music, Mixed Quartet, "Let us Have Peace." (Price 25 cents.)
Judges' Decision
Patriotic Medley of National Airs, Organ or Piano Solo.
Presentation of Medal.
Benediction.

The forty-second annual session of the National Conference of Charities and Correction will be held in Baltimore, Md., May 12-19, 1915. The program already includes the names of more than two hundred speakers. The character of the discussions will be largely affected by social welfare legislation recently enacted in many states, by the reports of special state and municipal commissions during the winter, and by the recent emergence of many national issues of a social nature, such as have been disclosed in the investigations of the Federal Industrial Relations Commission.

PROHIBITION A BOON TO ANY COMMUNITY

OFFICIALS OF CITIES FROM MASSACHUSETTS TO CALIFORNIA TESTIFY TO ITS BENEFITS

During the recent spirited campaign in Madison, Wisconsin, the head of the Madison Dry League received from the city officials of many dry cities throughout the nation letters testifying to the benefits experienced by voting out the saloons. Some of these statements, published in the Madison State Journal, we quote:

"Pasadena never has had saloons," writes Mr. E. R. Sorver, secretary of the board of trade. "The city has had a wonderful growth, especially for a residential city. During the decade from 1900 to 1910 our population increased 232 per cent. Our laboring men are as a rule opposed to a wet town and we believe 90 per cent would oppose saloons. Pasadena is one of the richest cities per capita in this country. We have a population of 45,000 and bank deposits of about $17,000,000. Pasadena has never believed that it needed saloons to make it grow and in fact we believe that if we had saloons it would not be the city it is today."

Low Tax Rate in Massachusetts No-License Cities

William Littler, secretary of the Brockton (Mass.) chamber of commerce, points out some interesting facts in regard to that city, and the benefits it has secured after the closing of the saloons. He says in part:

"Brockton has not had a licensed saloon but one year for twenty-eight years. The tax rate for the license cities and towns of Massachusetts for five years averages $1.00 per annum more than the no-license cities and towns. There was no reduction in the taxes in Brockton the year we had the saloons because of the income from license fees.

"In a twenty-four year period: 1885 to 1909, manufactured products in the no-license cities increased 146 per cent; in license cities 126 per cent. This shows that the no-license cities enjoyed a growth in manufactured products 20 per cent greater than that of licensed cities. There being more rapid growth in manufactured products there must have been more work for the laboring men in the no-license cities. In this connection the following fact is interesting: A report of the United States census bureau shows that the average earnings in the no-license cities were $74.09 more per year for each worker than in the license cities.

"I am told that collections were much harder during the year we had license than they were in the preceding or following years of no-license.

"Comparisons have shown that deposits in the savings banks are greater in no-license cities and towns than in cities and towns having the saloon.

"I feel very sure that more laboring men own homes in no-license cities than in the saloon towns.

"A canvass made of the retail merchants of our city a few years ago has shown that they were unanimously in favor of the no-license policy. It is quite generally conceded that Brockton is one of the cleanest industrial cities in New England. The wages are the highest in the state with the exception of Beverly, where the plant of the United Shoe Machinery company is located."

For Commercial Reasons Kokomo Will Stay Dry

J. F. Lindsey, general secretary of the Kokomo (Ind.) chamber of commerce, declares that there has been a great increase in prosperity in that city since it has voted out the saloons. In part he says:

"The business men of our city nearly to a man, are unanimous in declaring that business has been noticeably better since the saloons were voted out. The laboring man has been benefited in that he has become more efficient in his work and has therefore been able to find employment more easily than during periods of drinking.

"As to the matter of collections on the part of merchants, there has been a general trend upwards in this phase of credit; business and business men have attributed this increase to the fact that the town has been dry. The banks have also profited because there has been an increase in savings deposits and also an increase of ownership of homes by laboring men. In fact we don't believe that it would be possible to vote this town wet again because the very men who were wet for commercial reasons are dry for the very same reasons at this time. They have had proven to them very forcibly that the driving of the saloon from the town does not bring about a depression in property values or a decrease in business, but has a tendency to make conditions better throughout every avenue of commercial and industrial endeavor."

Hotels and Restaurants Take the Place of Wheeling Saloons

"There are more restaurants in Wheeling than ever before," says the Wheeling (W. Va.) Telegraph. "There are eighty-four restaurants and fifteen hotels, and if they were all to be grouped together they would occupy every building from Eleventh street to Fifteenth street on Market, both sides of the street included. The establishment of so many new restaurants is an outgrowth of the closing of the saloons where thousands were fed every day at the lunch counters.

"There are twenty-two real estate firms doing business in the city and over 800 wagons are daily in use. In fact the demand for wagon licenses was so great that the city exhausted its supply of tags and is now issuing a substitute tag to teamsters. The number of autos in the city closely approaches six hundred and by spring it is expected that at least 700 license tags will have been issued. In fact since the first of July the city has issued approximately 1,800 licenses of all kinds against a total of 1,300 licenses last year, a decided gain for a single year. The amount of license revenue collected this year will surpass, by several thousands, collections for any former years."

Canton Makes Good Showing Without Saloon Revenue

One of the latest cities to demonstrate the benefits of prohibition is Canton, Ill. "For a year, under an anti-saloon administration, in anti-saloon territory, the city has tried getting along without liquor license revenues, and the success of the experiment has been a vindication of the claims of the supporters of the prohibition movement and a disappointment to the liquor calamity howlers, who predicted all sorts of dire evils as a result of the banishment of saloons last spring," says the Canton Ledger. "The city business has been conducted along lines of rigid economy, yet without hardship to anybody, and when the end of the fiscal year is reached its overdraft will not exceed the one handed down by the preceding administration. This means that for a year, without saloon revenues of many thousands of dollars, the finances of the city have been sufficient to meet current expenses. More than that, $4,000 worth of permanent improvements have been made."

Wichita Citizen Proclaims the Benefits of Prohibition

"Many years of absolute prohibition in Wichita, Kansas, have convinced us that the saloon is a constant source of waste of efficiency and manhood," testified Henry J. Allen, editor of the Wichita (Kan.) Daily Beacon in a speech in a local campaign. "Wichita has a population of 67,500, no saloons, no red light district and no gamblers. We have laid 125 miles of paving in eight years; constructed a $350,000 high school; a $200,000 city hall; laid $400,000 in sewers and our tax rate is no higher than it was and we are getting something for our money. Merchants report collections are better. The prominent business men who believed eight years ago the saloon was necessary, have changed. The fight is over, never to be renewed. The saloon as a treacherous waste of everything that is good in man has been shown up in Wichita and we will never experiment with it again."

Mr. Allen said many of the saloonmen are now in legitimate enterprises. Within six weeks after prohibition was assured the places vacated by the saloon were tenanted and the district denizens and the bartenders' union vanished.

A FOOD DRINK

Which Brings Daily Enjoyment

A lady doctor writes:

"Though busy hourly with my own affairs, I will not deny myself the pleasure of taking a few minutes to tell of the enjoyment obtained daily from my morning cup of Postum. It is a food beverage, not a stimulant like coffee.

"I began to use Postum 8 years ago; not because I wanted to, but because coffee, which I dearly loved, made my nights long, weary periods to be dreaded and unfitting me for business during the day.

"On advice of a friend, I first tried Postum, making it carefully as suggested on the package. As I had always used 'cream and no sugar,' I mixed my Postum so. It looked good, was clear and fragrant, and it was a pleasure to see the cream color it as my Kentucky friend always wanted her coffee to look, 'like a new saddle.'

"Then I tasted it critically, for I had tried many 'substitutes' for coffee. I was pleased, yes, satisfied with my Postum in taste and effect, and am yet, being a constant user of it all these years.

"I continually assure my friends and acquaintances that they will like Postum in place of coffee, and receive benefit from its use. I have gained weight, can sleep and am not nervous."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—Must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost per cup about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

HIS FELLOW GUESTS

SUSANNE ALICE RANLETT, Auburndale, Mass.

He had tramped all day over the dusty roads in the blazing sunshine and he was thirsty, but when at twilight he slouched through the streets of a busy little town and found no bar or bottled goods, he took a long drink of cold water from a bubble fountain, spent his dime at a grocery, and walked into the country, looking for a sleeping-place. A mile out of town, he saw a large seemingly vacant house with the blinds down and the door path grown with tall grass. As a cool night wind had risen, the hope of finding shelter here was pleasant.

He found the front door and windows securely fastened, but he succeeded in dragging up a bulk-head door into the cellar, through which he groped his way to the stairs and up these to a large kitchen. Yes, the house was unoccupied; the stove was cold, and empty dishes were arranged in order on the shelves.

"Some house all to myself!" he murmured with satisfaction, for George Heckman had not been long enough "on the road" to forget the comforts of home. Six months before, he had had a good position with promise of promotion and, with his brother, had made a generous living for his mother; but his occasional glass of beer had become more frequent and with faculties dulled he had misunderstood directions and bungled his work until, after several warnings, he had been discharged. Everybody in the small town knew why he had lost his job and no one would employ him; so, provided with scanty funds, he went to seek work elsewhere.

George's associates in the humble winter lodging-houses which he frequented sometimes treated him to the cheap poisonous drinks which they could afford and which deadened the young man's energy and ambition, until by spring he was content to loaf along the country roads, doing only an occasional odd job for necessary food and frequent supplies of bottled goods. But six months had not made a wholly hardened hobo of Heckman, and now he proceeded to avail himself of the conveniences of a house, pumped water at the sink, drew a cherished scrap of soap from his pocket, and "washed up" in honor of his free hotel. Setting a corner of the table with a few dishes, he brought out the cheese and crackers he had bought in town, regretfully thinking, as he ate, of his mother's neat, white-covered table and wholesome food.

"They'll likely be having tonight fried ham and eggs, hot biscuits, and green apple-sauce," he said.

After his supper Heckman explored the house, finding a dining-room with a long bare table and a living-room with a sewing-machine and parlor-organ. Upstairs were a number of bed-rooms, on the iron bedsteads of which lay mattresses and folded comfortables. He chose a room and made himself luxurious with two mattresses and plenty of coverings and soon fell asleep.

Heckman had not slept long when he started up at a strange sound as of rattling and clanking iron, mingled with sobs and muttered words. The sounds came nearer; his door flew open, and in a light shining from the hall, there appeared a haggard, bent old man, whose trembling hands vainly endeavored to pull off the chains dangling from his arms.

"I can't; I can't," he wailed. "It's too late now! There's nothing more for me but this, and I might have been living in my own house and driving my span."

Behind the old man and fastened to him by a connecting chain, crept a wan, crushed looking woman, her head drooping under a heavy weight, and her thin hands dragging two dull-eyed children.

"To be driven to this," she sighed, "after my happy home! O George, George, how could you?"

Heckman started on hearing his own name, but the woman, without regarding him, continued, "And my innocent little children—will they ever have a chance in life? And will they be like their father? George," she begged, lifting the older boy's face, "promise me that you'll never, never touch beer or strong drink! If your father had only been true to his promise!"

In Prohibition Kansas

Thirty-eight out of the 105 counties of the state have no paupers in their almshouses.

The poor-farms of 49 counties have been turned into experiment stations under the control of the State Agricultural College and are now called Prosperity Farms.

Next on the long dragging chain came a gibbering youth with a vacant, repulsive face. As he drew nearer to the woman, she trembled, looking at him with eyes of loathing. Then she murmured, "Yes, poor creature, you are not to blame. To think of a father and mother making their child that!"

An old woman, hobbling painfully on two crutches, now appeared in the light of the door, whispering, "My son, my son! Here am I and you in prison! I would gladly have died to spare you. But it was never you who did it; it was the drink."

Heckman thought of his own mother, and shuddered as he gazed at the dreary procession, for others were coming; yes, the chain was clanking in the hall, and he could hear sobs and groans. He leaped from bed to shut his door against the company, and instantly all was still and no one was to be seen and no sound to be heard. Heckman pulled a chest of drawers against the door and lay wondering fearfully if it were a reality or only a nightmare. When the sunlight streamed into the room he drew a sigh of relief. There was then no sign of any occupant beside himself in the house; even the dust on the stairway showed prints of no feet but his own, but he was glad to hurry from the scene of the night's strange visitation into the bright, cheerful open.

As he sat under a box-elder at some distance from his night's hotel, eating the remnant of his crackers and cheese and looking at the far-stretching acres before him of green, waving Indian corn, a farmer in his runabout came up the road and stopped.

"Promising crop, isn't it?" asked the newcomer. "Happen to want a job? I'd take you from now through harvest, and if you're a likely worker, I'd keep you on as a steady. Come along with me to the house and we'll talk it over."

As Heckman and the farmer in the car slipped away between the waving corn-fields, the young man pointed to the house where he had spent the night and asked, "What's that place?"

"That," replied the farmer, "is the old town poor-farm. No boarders there since we've had prohibition in the state. Rum filled it up and no rum cleared it out."

"You mean—did everybody there get back home again?" asked Heckman eagerly.

"Not everybody. Some of the old folks got through their course. Old Jim Paine—he was a steady drinker for years and there wasn't anything of him when he went to the farm, no energy and palsied and weak in his mind—he died.

"And Benjy Brown—the Lord in mercy took him. He was an idiot. Father and mother, both drunk, in a row, threw him downstairs and gave his head an awful hurt. And some others died there.

"But Mrs. Crane—her son hit her when he was crazy drunk and broke her hip. He went to prison and when he came out we had prohibition, and he couldn't get a drink, and he was made over into a steady, hard-working man and he has his mother living now, a fat, happy old lady in her own home.

"And Jennie Dane—as nice a girl as you ever saw when she married George Dane, and they had two pretty little children before he took to drink and deserted her. She wasn't real strong and didn't have any one to take care of her, so she and the kids had to go to the farm. But before she'd quite 'pined' away, George came back and the state being dry, he didn't have any temptation, and he pulled up and Jennie is rosy-cheeked now and the children are fine youngsters."

"Were—all those chained people—in the poor-house on account of drink?" asked Heckman.

"I never heard of any chaining," answered the farmer, "unless," and he looked thoughtfully at Heckman, "unless they were chained by rum, and I reckon that's about it. Fact, as far as I can remember, every soul in that old poor-house was there because he or she or some of their folks had taken to drink. And it's a sure thing there is nobody in town to board there now we've got prohibition. There are a good many other vacant poor-houses and some vacant jails in our state in these days. Never were before. Something to think of, isn't it, young man?"

"Yes, sir, it is," replied Heckman, adding, after a short silence, "I'll engage with you through the harvest, sir, and be thankful, but after that I'm going to try to get a job nearer my mother, and if you can wait, I'd like to take an hour before I begin work to write her a letter. She'll like to know my plans and what state I'm working in."

THE REHEARSAL

—Courtesy of Home and State

THE ORGANIST (Soliloquizing):

Never had to work so hard in my life. I've just got to practice up on the Swan Song. These folks will insist on that number next time I tour the state. But the loafer that pumps wind for me is drunk and the bellows is full of holes. I've got all the dollar-stops pulled out to the limit and the best I can get from this old organ is a wheeze like a circus calliope when the steam's down. (Listens.)

There come those women and children, nineteenth time this morning. It's enough to drive any booze booster crazy! Won't they ever get tired of singing that Tipperary thing?

(Kicks over his bench, throws his books at the dachshund and walks up and down, raving.)

CHILDREN IN THE STREET SING:

It's a bright day for prohibition,
It's a safe way to go;
It's the right time for prohibition
In the greatest state I know.
Farewell, Old Anheuser!
Goodbye, Rock and Rye!
We will win our fight for prohibition,
And you know just why.

THE ORGANIST:

Of course, I know why! But those fresh kids needn't butt in. The women put them up to it! They know we hate 'em. And we ought to. They've just about RUINED US! (Exit in the direction of the nearest bar.)

Each succeeding year shows a wider and wider spread of the prohibition movement, and the outcry of the agitated manufacturers and distillers indicates a panic of despair. The gentleman who once coined the te rs of women and the starving cries of children into a fat bank account is now tumultuous in his professions of determination never to allow drunkenness to be tolerated in his saloon. We have Model License Leagues organized to show the penitence of the modern bartender.—Boston Advertiser.

Trying times have searched out the weaknesses caused by the demon rum and the evil that it does stands apparent. From the ignorant Villa in Mexico to the king of England, from the president of the French republic to the czar of all the Russias, men of intelligence and concern for their fellow man have recognized the enemy of a sound body and a good mind.—The Chicago Tribune.

FORMER PRESIDENT AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION SPEAKS AT "MEDICAL TEMPERANCE" BANQUET

Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the Kentucky W. C. T. U., Dr. Charles A. Reed, former president of the American Medical Association, Dr. F. H. Clarke and Colonel George W. Bain were the speakers recently at a medical temperance banquet in Lexington, Kentucky. Dr. Reed, the guest of honor on this occasion, presented an able case against the use of alcohol as a beverage, declaring it to be always a poison, and that only a doubtful stimulative effect ever justified its use. He traced the effect of liquor on the stomach, stating that a stomach drenched in alcohol was unable to do its work, that the digestive juices were impaired by it, and that its effect on the intestines was no less marked. The nervous system, the brain and higher centers were dulled by alcohol, and he declared that its use could never be justified on the ground of efficiency. The kidneys and the liver, he said, were overworked and Bright's disease and cirrhosis of the liver were the almost inevitable results of continued indulgence in alcohol. "And all these things are for the moderate drinker," said Dr. Reed.

The speaker quoted figures taken from his own hospital, showing that less than one-one-hundredth as much alcohol was prescribed today in that hospital as compared with the amount prescribed in 1889. He quoted the history of the progeny of a single alcoholic couple who lived in New York in the eighteenth century, showing that there were in a total of 1,200 descendants of that couple only a handful of good citizens, and that the remainder were paupers and criminals, and that they have cost the state of New York $1,308,000.

Mrs. Beauchamp told of the persistent efforts of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which have resulted in writing on the statute books of every state in the union a scientific temperance instruction law, which requires the teaching in the public schools of the nature and effect of alcohol. She told of the important part taken in the West Virginia campaign by the medical association of the state, which more than any other one factor was responsible for the victory for prohibition.

Dr. F. H. Clarke spoke on "Some Effects of Alcohol Not Appreciated By the Laity." He branded alcohol as poison from start to finish. In every line of work a man's efficiency is impaired by the use of alcohol. Every laboratory has proven the uselessness of alcohol in medicine. He said that a physician would be considered insane today who prescribed alcohol for peritonitis. It breaks down the resistive forces of the body to every known disease, and one of the first questions asked by the modern physician as to the cause back of disease is, does the patient use alcohol? Dr. Clarke paid high tribute to the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, saying that every truth it has promulgated is now an established scientific fact.

The last speaker on the program was Colonel George W. Bain. Marks of progress were touched upon when he said that while twenty-three distilleries once were operated in Bourbon county, now not a single distillery exists there.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher, P. J Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

CAMPAIGN EXPERIENCES IN TWO MICHIGAN COUNTIES

All through the correspondence being received by THE UNION SIGNAL rings a note of jubilance over prohibition victories gained here, there and everywhere, and a strain of eagerness to point out to prospective campaigners the way of success. The methods given in the following letters from victorious Michigan counties may be suggestive to other communities in campaigns.—EDITOR.

How the Women Helped Make Emmet County Dry

ANNA LAMB BARNES

Emmet county has its share of brave spirits, but having met defeat once, we dreaded to enter the fight. Only a sense of duty and trust in God impelled us to the fray. At last two men, Rev. G. A. Weaver and H. S. Babcock, were found to lead the campaign. They left no stone unturned to bring victory. Much credit, too, is due the Anti-Saloon League speakers who called out large audiences.

The Emmet County Federation of Women, with headquarters at Petoskey and Harbor Springs, was organized, with Mrs. A. B. Backus in charge of the north townships. She is a whirlwind to work and is strongly backed by her husband whose time and services are ever at the command of the cause. There is a committee of reliable women in every township and village and in many school districts, who are ever ready to respond to suggestions. One plan was to hold in every school district a children's temperance entertainment, printed programs containing songs and recitations being furnished the committees. Data for prize essays on "Why the Saloons Should Be Voted Out of Emmet County," proved valuable as a weapon against the traffic. Public school teachers will generally train the children, and men who will not go to hear a temperance speaker are often eager to hear their own children speak and many times will help hunt arguments for the essays. John Barleycorn, a moving picture show provided by the Petoskey Federation of Clubs, proved a most effective vote-maker. About three thousand people witnessed the life-long struggle of Jack London for freedom from the everywhere-present saloon.

The crowning event of the women's work was the procession of lilies which took place in Petoskey on Easter morning. Groups of women, without knowing why, made over two thousand Easter lilies. Keeping the purpose a surprise added much to the interest in the occasion. In every Petoskey church at the close of the morning service the congregation was asked to march out to join other congregations. The procession, led by the city band and twelve young men bearing in their midst a white and gold banner inscribed, "For God and Home and Native Land," soon filled the streets. Every one wore or carried a lily and a group of little children carried tall, real lilies. In Federation Park a platform, draped in white and decorated with the beautiful, white blossoms awaited those who were to take special parts. Programs were provided so everyone could join in the service. "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," was sung, followed by prayer for victory on the morrow, a brief ritualistic service led by the federation, and a short speech which expressed hope for a clean city. A boy of ten, in a voice of remarkable clearness and carrying quality, told us why the boys did not want saloons in Emmet county, and a gifted lady singer, all in white, with her baby by her side, looking like a little human lily, sang with thrilling effect Mary T. Lathrap's beautiful poem. "Out From the Hearthstone the Children Go." The Easter spirit was in the air and a hush seemed to fall upon the great crowd. Many were in tears at the close of the unique service and hearts were uplifted and faith strengthened. Petoskey's new mayor, A. B. Klise, insists that the city is going to stay dry if it is possible to keep it in that happy condition, and that prohibition is going to prohibit in Petoskey.

How Genesee County Stayed Dry

Mrs. Cora Zach, vice-president of the W. C. T. U. of Genesee county, which retained prohibition by a 612 majority this year as compared with a vote of 84 when prohibition was won two years ago, tells of one effort of the W. C. T. U. in the recent campaign which was highly successful. About two months before election a meeting was held under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. federation of Flint to which the general officers of all the unions of the county were invited and plans for a flying squadron, the suggestion of a business man of the city, who is a staunch friend of the W. C. T. U., were carefully considered and perfected. The squadron, which was composed of W. C. T. U. workers, business men, lawyers, ministers and an ex-saloonkeeper (who was a most effective speaker), made its initial trip by automobile the last Saturday in February. Each succeeding week a different route was taken and on the final Saturday before election there were in use twenty automobiles, which branched out in all directions. In many cases communities were visited for the second time. The speaking was done from the automobiles and the local W. C. T. U. women, in addition to advertising the coming of the squadron, provided light refreshments for the crowd. In some instances they prepared banquets for the men of the community so that the speakers might have a better opportunity to present their message.

Winter is Play-Time for Healthy Childhood and is "cold-time" for delicate, puny children.

If mothers everywhere would fully appreciate the strength-building, blood-making nourishment in Scott's Emulsion they would give it to children after their meals.

Its cream-like Cod Liver Oil brings healthy flesh and rosy cheeks while it warms the body by enriching the blood and fortifies the lungs.

No Alcohol in SCOTT'S. Avoid Substitutes.

14-91 SCOTT & BOWNE, BLOOMFIELD N J

AMONG OUR WORKERS

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, National W. C. T. U. organizer and lecturer, is in the field in Tennessee speaking at institutes. She was recently the speaker at an institute at McMinnville, where a tri-county union, composed of White, Warren and Coffee counties, was organized, with Mrs. John Welch as president. The institute was most successful and helpful, a spirit of consecration pervading all the meetings.

Mrs. Linnie Carl, National field secretary for the Y. P. B., during the month of March did most satisfactory work in North Dakota. She organized a number of Y. P. B.'s and gained new members for the W. C. T. U., made her way financially and put a good sum in the state treasury. Mrs. Carl has a winsome personality and gives a strong address. As a reader she has marked ability. North Dakota heartily commends her to any state for Y. P. B. or general W. C. T. U. work.

The Rome (N. Y.) union entertained the teachers and board of education of the city at a reception where Mrs. Anna W. Obulander, state S. T. I. superintendent, gave a stirring address. Several new members were secured. This union has secured fifty-seven members since the first of the year, and a reception was given them on April 2.

Mrs. Obulander was also the speaker at a reception for the teachers and board of education given by the Oriskany Falls union, and made an excellent address for the Delta union under the auspices of the S. T. I. department. The Oneida county S. T. I. school of methods, addressed by Mrs. Obulander, which met recently with the Oriskany union, was most inspiring. Five new members were obtained. The L. T. L. meeting at New York Mills, under the direction of Miss Helen I. Root, state L. T. L. secretary, was well attended, and much enthusiasm was shown. Plans are under way for an all-day Y. P. B. meeting at Clinton May 1 and for a county institute at Sauquoit, May 19-20.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

WANTED—Several honest, industrious people to distribute religious literature; $60 a month sure. Nichols Co., Box 14, Naperville, Ill.

BECOME A NURSE

We have trained thousands of women in their own homes to earn $10 to $25 a week as nurses. Send for "How I Became a Nurse"—248 pages with actual experiences. 48 illustrated lesson pages free.

There is a Chautauqua nurse in your vicinity. Ask her about our training. Her address upon request.

The Chautauqua School of Nursing

513 Main St. Fourteenth Year Jamestown N. Y.

This pencil sharpening outfit is like no other. Its fine steel cutters won't get dull—won't break the pencil point—and two sets of them are now furnished, so that the machine may be kept in constant operation. A necessary tool—for every office, home, school. Handsomely nickeled. Four inches high. At your retailer's or from Stewart Mfg. Co., 320 Wells Street, Chicago. Order today. Price complete—with two sets of cutters and clamp—now only $2.00. No pencil sharpener is complete without two sets of cutters.

Insist on the Stewart

GERMAN TEMPERANCE LITERATURE.

The following German pamphlets are issued to help enlist as many as possible of the German-Americans in the fight against the drink habit and the liquor traffic. They appeal to them in their native tongue and on lines which will most easily influence them. Speed the cause of national prohibition by distributing these pamphlets widely.

1. "THE BIBLE AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE." 32 pages, 2d edition, ten thousand now issued. Price 5c each, 25c a doz., $1.59 a hundred, postpaid.
2. "THE GERMANS AND THE DRINK QUESTION." 8 pages, forty thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a dozen, 50c a hundred, postpaid, $4.00 a thousand by express.
3. "CHRISTIANITY AND PROHIBITION." 8 pages, twenty thousand now issued. Same price as No. 2.
4. "THE AIMS AND RESULTS OF PROHIBITION." 12 pages, 3d edition, thirty-five thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a doz., 65c a hundred, postpaid, $5.00 a thousand by express.

Of this last a new revised edition has just left the press. It also embodies the latest statistics and statements concerning prohibition in Kansas by the Governors, Stubbs, Hodges and Capper and by the legislature of the state. Send orders to

J. G. EVERT, BOX B, HILLSBORO, KANS.

PROHIBITION IN RUSSIA

"So far as the poorer classes are concerned, the increased savings in Russia are undoubtedly due to the absolute prohibition of the sale of vodka," is the statement made by Consul North Winship in his report, written at Petrograd, and appearing in the Commerce Reports issued by the United States Department of Commerce.

FLORIDA'S PROHIBITION DEMONSTRATION

Special Correspondence

The legislature convened in Florida April 6 and the temperance forces were on hand with well organized plans for prompt action. Wednesday morning, April 7, the first bill introduced was a resolution for the submission of an amendment for statewide prohibition by Senator J. S. Blitch of Montbrook, Levy county. Thursday morning, by the generous courtesy of Mr. J. C. Adkins of Gainesville in yielding first place to the representative from Jefferson county, the first bill introduced was our submission bill by Mr. Theo. T. Turnbull of Monticello. At two in the afternoon of the same day a joint meeting of the temperance committees of both houses was held, and after a half hour discussion it was voted to report the bill favorably, which was done on Friday morning, and in both houses the bills went on the calendar and plans were made by the temperance forces to bring them to a vote in a very few days. The general feeling is a desire to dispose of the matter very promptly. The legislature is strong for temperance, as many good men were elected for the one purpose of securing the submission of the prohibition amendment. Four-fifths of the house is known to be for prohibition; the senate is not so strong. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is represented at the capital by Miss Minnie E. Neal, state president, and Mrs. Nellie J. Doig, state treasurer. The Anti-Saloon League is working cordially with our organization.

On the day the bill was reported favorably by the committees a mammoth demonstration for prohibition occurred in Tallahassee. Thousands of men, women and children carrying appropriate banners, scores of beautifully decorated automobiles and floats and hundreds of prominent citizens and state and county officials in a line of march which extended a couple of miles, were greeted with prolonged applause by the great crowds of onlookers, many of them visitors from other cities. The line was headed by the Moultrie concert band of twenty-five musicians. In a beautifully decorated automobile immediately following rode Mayor Dexter M. Lowry, bearing the flag of the state of Florida, Miss Minnie E. Neal, president of the state W. C. T. U., Mrs. C. G. McCormick, president of the local union, and Hon. D. C. McMullen, president of the Florida Anti-Saloon League.

Other cars carried the city officials, county officials, the clergy of the city, the state railroad commission, the tax and game commissions, the hotel and shell fish commissions and assistants, Confederate veterans, secret order men and the local officials of the King's Daughters. In addition to the floats of the W. C. T. U. were those of the different departments of the city schools. Churches and other organizations of various kinds were represented in this procession both by floats and automobiles and by a large number of marchers. After completing the line of march the procession circled the Capitol and halted at the east entrance, where Governor Trammell took charge of the exercises which followed. One of the speakers was Howard H. Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon League of America, and in the evening Hon. Malcolm R. Patterson addressed a great company of Florida citizens and closed the demonstration of the day, the greatest celebration of the kind in the history of the state of Florida.

You Can Weigh Exactly What You Should

You can—I know you can, because I have reduced 32,000 women and have built up that many more — scientifically, naturally, without drugs, in the privacy of their own rooms.

You Can Be So Well!

—if you only knew how well! I build up your vitality—at the same time I strengthen your heart action; teach you how to breathe, to stand, walk and relieve such ailments as

Nervousness, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Indigestion, Etc.

One pupil writes: "I weigh 83 pounds less, and I have gained wonderfully in strength."

Another says: "Last May I weighed 100 pounds, this May I weigh 126 and oh I I feel SO WELL."

Won't you sit down and write now for my interesting booklet? You are welcome to it—it is FREE. Don't wait, you may forget it. I have had a wonderful experience and I should like to tell you about it.

Susanna Cocroft

Dept. 37, 624 Michigan Boulevard, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is a college bred woman. She is the recognized authority on the scientific care of the health and figure of women.

WHISKY AND AMMUNITION MIXED MAKE TROUBLE

"I knew from experience that whisky and ammunition mixed make trouble, so I wished to close the saloons," said ex-Governor Oswald West of Oregon on the witness stand in the state circuit court at Baker recently. The governor's utterance was in explanation of his action in closing the Copperfield saloons more than a year ago, which action has brought about a damage suit against him of $4,500. "I was advised by the district attorney," continued Mr. West, "that a large number of persons in Copperfield were going armed. I did not want to take any chances of anybody getting killed, so I put the town under martial law and confiscated the whisky."

All sections look alike when doors are closed.

Weis Sectional Music Room Furniture

For FILING Instead of PILING Sheet Music, Disc Records and Player Rolls

These handy sections meet the popular demand of owners of Talking Machines, Player Pianos, etc.

THINK OF THE CONVENIENCE of being able to refer instantly to any piece of sheet music, disc record or player roll without handling any except the one you want. These cabinets are practical because they are Sectional—Expansible to meet your needs. In them are incorporated the most approved filing methods. Buy a section at a time—as your Music Library grows.

No. 1680. Disc Record Section files 40-10 in. and 40-12 in. Records in individual, indexed pockets.

PRACTICAL FILES, HANDSOME CABINETS, beautifully finished to harmonize with other furnishings. Genuine Mahogany or handsomely flaked Quartered Oak in richly polished or dull finishes. Why not write us for descriptive booklet now, while you think of it?

SEE YOUR DEALER or write direct to

The Weis Manufacturing Company

196 Union Street :: Monroe, Mich.

New York Office - 75 John Street

No. 1646 holds 40 Rolls and about 2600 sheets of Music, 47 in. high.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Gift.

THE KEADMA COMPANY
ROGERS PARK, ILL.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

THE CAMPAIGN EDITION WILL ANSWER YOUR QUESTIONS

Have you carefully considered the value of the Campaign Edition? Have you thought that accurate and authentic facts with which to answer the many questions that are coming to you each day may be found within its pages?

Do you want to learn what the medical profession, always keenly alert along every line of scientific research, thinks of alcohol as a food or medicine? Read the statements by prominent physicians on page 3.

Are you hunting for first hand information from residents of prohibition territory as to the benefits of prohibition? You will find it on page 5.

If it is facts and figures to prove that prohibition is a paying proposition you are wishing for, the information on page 11 will be valuable.

Has somebody raised the question whether prohibition is really reducing the amount of liquor consumed and were you at a loss just what to reply? You will find the answer on page 7.

Have you wondered where the revenue is to come from to take the place of that supplied by the liquor traffic? Read Mr. Finley Hendrickson's solution of this governmental problem.

Has someone made light of prohibition in Russia? You will find in this number just what you need to prove that Russia is a transformed country and will never willingly go back to the sale of intoxicants.

Subscribe for the Campaign Edition—twelve numbers for twenty-five cents.

WHAT SOME PEOPLE ARE DOING AND SAYING

I read in THE SIGNAL "She Read It—She Took It," and I also read it and will take the 1,000 leaflets if you will send them to me at once. I am a leader of the L. T. L., the only one in the county, so we can make good use of the leaflets.

SANDUSKY, OHIO.

I take pleasure in renewing my subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL. The paper is always a welcome visitor. It is especially so now when it constantly brings to us such glad tidings of one victory after another. I would be sorry to miss a single issue. It seems to me no matter how "blue" one felt, to read THE SIGNAL with its good news would make one glad.

AN ILLINOIS SUBSCRIBER.

Connecticut has been informing her legislators along temperance lines by sending to each, seven consecutive numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL, containing "the most convincing, authentic and up-to-date information on the progress and status of the temperance work to be found."

POPULAR POSTERS

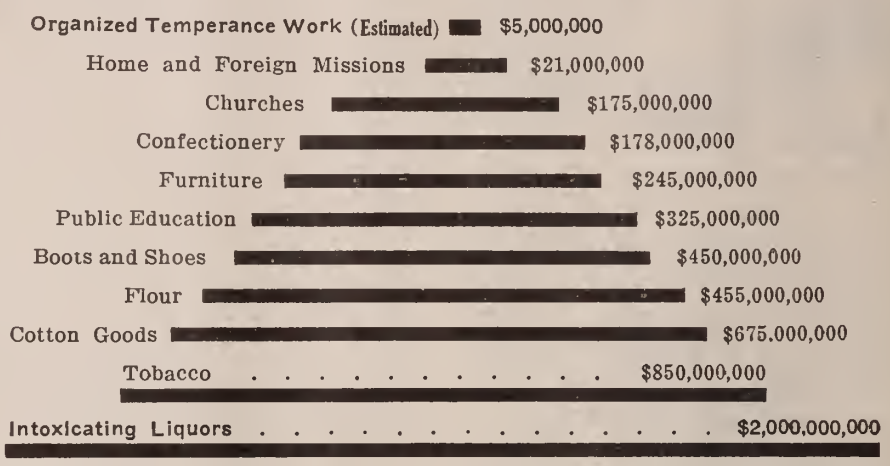
18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

FIGURES TELL

AMERICAN PEOPLE SPEND ANNUALLY FOR



BEER! BEER!

BEER
—is an unsafe and needless drink
—has no value as a food

Beer Drinking Shortens Life
Life Insurance Companies compute that beer drinkers' lives are shortened from 40 to 60%

MILK
—is a strength producer—beer is not
—contains from 3 to 4 per cent of fat—beer contains none
—contains none of the poison alcohol—beer contains from 4 to 7 per cent

BEER DRINKING CAUSES ACCIDENTS

The Western Electric Plant of Chicago forbids its workingmen bringing beer upon the grounds.

WHY?

Because it was noticed that a large number of accidents occurred uniformly after lunch, and in almost every case the victim of the accident had taken beer with his lunch.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE DEMANDED

Eighty-eight per cent of the Manufacturers of the United States Demand Total Abstinence of their workmen.

Sickness is always more fatal with beer drinkers and accidents are usually fatal to them.

About one million railroad men in this country have to be total abstainers from beer and all other intoxicating liquors.

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

UNIONS WISHING TO MAKE MONEY will find very liberal terms offered for selling Vacher-Balm. This is an excellent remedy for colds, sore throat and neuralgic pains, used internally and externally. Send for free samples for distribution, and for terms to
E. W. VACHER, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

WANTED—Several honest, industrious persons to distribute religious literature; $60 per month sure. Stanton Co., Law Building, Chicago, Ill.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI EVANSTON, ILL., APRIL 29, 1915 No. 18

The White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner

By KATE LUNDEN SUNDERLIN

Fling it out to the breeze; let it tell to the world
That the faith which has raised it will never surrender;
Let it tell that the love which our banner unfurled
Is the guard of the home and the nation's defender.
Let it gleam as a star, for the shipwrecked afar,
Like a beacon that warns of the treacherous bar;
Let the banner of freedom and purity wave,
Like a signal of hope 'midst the perils we brave.

Hold that banner aloft; let our colors be seen
From Siberian snow-fields to African valleys,
Lift it up for the truth; let the rays of its sheen
Drive the shadows of night from the byways and alleys.
Let it tell to the lost that we count not the cost,
That our bridges are burned and our Rubicon crossed;
That the banner of mother-love ever shall wave,
Till the paths are made straight for the sin-burdened slave.

Let it fly at the front; it is washed in our tears,
And the smoke of the battle increases its whiteness,
Though our hearts may be pierced by the enemy's spears,
Yet the flow from our wounds shall but add to its brightness,
And this ensign of light, it shall float o'er the fight,
Till our wrongs are avenged by the triumph of right;
And in radiant victory at last it shall wave
O'er the ramparts we've stormed, o'er King Alcohol's grave.

Swing it out from the staff, let it shadow the ground
Where the fathers of liberty sleep 'neath the mosses;
Run it up o'er the homes where the mothers are found
Who through watches of anguish are counting their losses.
In the tear-moistened sod that our martyrs have trod,
We are planting it deep for our land and our God;
And this banner of world-circling love e'er shall wave
In the name of our Christ, who is mighty to save.

NOTE: Kate Lunden Sunderlin a few weeks ago passed on to the other world. She left as a legacy to her white ribbon comrades the inspiring verses of "The White Star Spangled Banner," written many years ago.

SPECIAL ARTICLES IN THIS ISSUE

South Dakota's Governor an Enthusiastic Prohibitionist—Colonel Roosevelt Says No Jobs Will Be Lost By Closing Saloons—Sunday Closing Law Enforced in Chicago by Federal Judge—As Industry Sees Alcohol—West Virginia Satisfied with Prohibition—Goal for 1915, 50,000 New Members—Interstate Campaign Conference of the Northwest.

Illinois Increases Its No-License Territory

Eleven Towns Added to Dry List

As the result of elections on April 20 in twenty-six Illinois communities, eleven towns voted out the saloons, abolishing over eighty of them. All previously dry territory was retained. There are now fifty-five entirely dry counties and forty-six partially dry. The state has seventy saloonless county seats. The women played an heroic part in the local campaigns.

Fifteen South Dakota Cities Vote To Abolish Saloons

Press reports indicate many victories at the April 20 elections in South Dakota, fifteen of the larger cities and towns voting to outlaw the liquor traffic; among them the cities of Mitchell, Madison, Rapid City, Custer, Milbank, Platte, Farmer and Leola. In Aberdeen the vote was so close that it may be contested.

South Dakota's Governor an Enthusiastic Prohibitionist

"I want you to know I believe in the water wagon," declared Governor Byrne of South Dakota in a recent address in Mitchell, South Dakota.

"I never heard any one offer what seemed to me a single reason for a saloon. I know a good many reasons why we should not have it. We look upon the saloon as outside of legitimate business, an outlaw, that requires special regulations, and a permit which has come to be termed a license.

"During the time I have been governor I have given a great deal of attention to the unfortunate people who are in the penitentiary. I have discovered that only a few of those people have real criminal tendencies. Most of them are simply unfortunate. I say to you tonight that on my best judgment I believe three-fourths of the people in our penitentiary today are there because of liquor.

"Just the other day I granted a pardon to a young man who wrote a splendid letter, pathetic and earnest. He had had a position with a lumber company in one of the towns of our state and for a time held out, but he saw older men, men who seemed to be respectable, going to the saloon. He fell into their ways. Then came the attendant evil, gambling, and then taking a little of his employer's money, thinking he would win out and put it back. He finally lost all moral sense and ended with a term in the penitentiary.

"I am pleased to see the growing sentiment in this state. I believe the young people are coming to look on the question from a business standpoint. Today no young man who has any ambition to lead a successful life can take any chances with drink, it is too big a risk to run, too great a handicap to assume voluntarily.

"The state of South Dakota appropriates money to sustain the university and the agricultural college and other state schools, and the state of South Dakota wants to wake up to this—that it is wasteful to spend money to build schools and then permit saloons to be placed close to them to entice and attract the attention of the boys who go there for education and then to let the saloon undo the work of the school."

Colonel Roosevelt Says No Jobs To Be Lost by Closing Saloons

Evidently Colonel Roosevelt is not worrying over the problem that seems to vex the souls of the liquorites—what will become of the men thrown out of employment by the closing of the saloons. He is reported to have said recently:

"There is nothing more absurd than the belief that the closing of the saloon will cause workingmen to lose their jobs. There are few things more important to our social advancement than the loosening of the grip of the liquor interests upon the labor movement. The saloon represents economic loss. Of course, there may always be dislocation of a temporary kind in the labor world, because of any change, such as the closing of saloons; and this must be met by, among other things, the establishment of temporary labor exchanges to find work for those thus losing their jobs. At present the saloon does, although too often in vicious fashion, supply a real recreative and social want which is not met in any other fashion. Unless this want is met in the right kind of way, it will find gratification in the wrong kind of way."

Mayor Thompson of Chicago Said To Have Become a Total Abstainer

That Mayor Thompson of the city of Chicago has ascended the "water wagon" is vouched for by his brother-in-law, William N. Pelouze, according to the Chicago Tribune.

"He cut out all sorts of alcoholic drinks when the campaign started," asserted Mr. Pelouze. "While he never did drink to excess, he saw that he could not stand the strain of a campaign and then a hard administration if he handicapped himself by drinking."

When the former mayor, Carter Harrison, was asked his opinion of his successor's decision to abstain, he said he agreed with him that drinking and smoking were handicaps in a campaign. "I always get along better under the strain of speech-making without stimulants of any sort," said Mr. Harrison.

Brewery Bosses Order Saloons Closed on Sundays

The brewers of New York City have issued an edict that the saloons controlled by them shall close on Sunday. This does not, however, necessarily indicate a change of heart on the part of the manufacturers of beer. The explanation of the order is given in a brewer's circular which reads as follows: "The activity of the so-called religionists in a near-by city is attracting considerable attention, and the influence of that campaign for or against the liquor interests in this state depends on how you conduct your place on Sunday."

As a few leading brewers hold chattel mortgages on eighty-five per cent. of the saloons they control the majority of them.

Saloons of Terre Haute Center of Corruption, Declared Judge Anderson

In pronouncing sentence on over 100 men, including the mayor of Terre Haute, Ind., for conspiracy in election frauds, Judge Anderson of the United States District Court passed sentence as well on John Barleycorn. He said:

"My notion is that the saloon will have to go. I believe that the time will come when the people will rise up and smash the saloon, at least as we have it now. The evidence in this case showed that the saloons were the center of nearly all the corruption in the election at Terre Haute."

Sunday Closing Law Enforced in Chicago by Federal Judge

When the Tosetti Brewing Company of Chicago went into bankruptcy the eighty-six saloons practically owned by it came under the jurisdiction of Judge Kenesaw Landis of the Federal court. As long as the licenses which the saloons hold are in force the judge is compelled to keep the places running. The jurist, however, recalled what the mayor and state and county officials have tried hard to forget, that there is upon the statute books of the state of Illinois a Sunday closing law. He therefore publicly declared that each and every one of these saloons should close every Saturday night at midnight not to open until five o'clock Monday morning.

The action of the judge has encouraged the temperance forces to make another effort to revive interest in the law and secure its enforcement, and in this connection Mr. Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Law and Order league of the city of Chicago, has made the following statement:

"Sunday saloons in Chicago are going to be closed. We are in this fight to a finish. Every religious denomination and every law-abiding citizen is with us. We can't lose. The saloon-keepers realize it. It is now squarely up to Governor Dunne to enforce the laws. Mayor Harrison has refused to do it and the state's attorney takes a like position in having failed to proceed against the violators. The United States government will in all probability be called upon to enforce the Sunday-closing law, not only in Chicago and Illinois, but in other states. The government has already spoken through Judge Landis of the United States courts. Through him the government says the Sunday-closing law is in force in Chicago and Illinois and that it should be obeyed. The government will have to step in as a means of self-preservation."

In line with the action of Judge Landis is that of Judge Gemmill of the Chicago Municipal court who discharged two men arrested for not paying for drinks purchased on Sunday. "Any man who violates the law himself hasn't any right to accuse another. If these fellows ever forget to pay for drinks on week days you can bring them back," said the judge as he dismissed the prisoners.

AS INDUSTRY SEES ALCOHOL

WORK AND ALCOHOL DO NOT BELONG TOGETHER

THE UNIVERSAL SAFETY DEVICE

—The Mixer.

Far too large a proportion of the money which has in times past gone over the saloon bar has come from the pockets of laboring men and employes in mines and factories, a class of workers who can ill afford this drain upon their incomes. That their efficiency, as well as their income, has suffered through this use of liquor is a fact which is now universally recognized by captains of industry, and everywhere, to promote efficiency and as a "safety first" measure, steps are being taken to eliminate drinking on the part of employes. Interesting testimony to the bad effect of liquor drinking on efficiency has recently appeared in a somewhat unexpected place, namely in the last Brewers' Annual, in an article by Ulrik Quensel, which says:

"Kraepelin and his followers have nevertheless established that alcohol in comparatively small doses has a disadvantageous effect upon certain known expressions of psychic life, and the sum of the results may be comprehended in the general sentence that WORK AND ALCOHOL DO NOT BELONG TOGETHER, especially when the work demands wide-awakeness, attention, exactness and endurance."

Many manufacturers are carrying on an educational campaign on the subject of drinking among their employes. The Carnegie Steel company of Pittsburgh distributes among its thousands of workmen a pamphlet warning that the use of alcoholic drinks lessens the efficiency of the workingman and is the most prolific cause of accidents in its steel mills.

The Illinois Steel Works, located at Joliet, Ill., has for some time opposed drinking by its employes as a "safety first" measure. In a little monthly, The Mixer, issued by the employes of this steel company, many cartoons showing the detriment of strong drink to the laboring man have from time to time appeared. The cartoons given on this page are taken from this magazine.

HANDICAPPING HIS PROGRESS

—The Mixer.

Among the many recent blows dealt alcohol is the bulletin posted by the Anaconda Copper Mining company, which gives this warning:

"Never go to work after drinking liquor, and if you must drink, stay home. Experience has proved that a great many accidents are caused from drinking intoxicating liquors. It will be remembered that from September 1, 1914, to September 14, all saloons in Butte were closed; that from September 14 to September 24 they were open only from 8 o'clock in the morning to 7 o'clock at night, and that for the remainder of the month they were open only from 7 o'clock in the morning to 10 o'clock at night. The accident records of the Anaconda Copper Mining company show the following significant figures: Number of accidents per ten thousand shifts: July, 6.22; August, 11.25; September, 4.21; October, 7.58; November, 6.07."

Dr. W. Stewart Whittemore, factory inspector of the New England Confectionery Company, Boston, gives his testimony to the effect of alcohol in the following words:

"Small quantities of alcohol, such as would produce no visible signs of intoxication, are yet sufficient to interfere with mental alertness. The effect of these small doses on the consumer is that he is unable to concentrate his mind as closely on his work as when he is free from alcohol. He becomes careless, and is apt to take chances which he would not think of taking in his natural condition. The result is that the wage earner who has a drink or two on his way to work is making himself liable to injury."

"THE NIGHT SCHOOL THAT NEVER GETS YOU A PROMOTION"

—The Mixer.

STOP DEBAUCHING YOUTH!

Hon. Richmond P. Hobson

The continuation and expansion of drinking in the nation is the result of the systematic debauching of the youth by the liquor interests for the purpose of gain. The moment you stop the profits in the business by stopping the sale, the business must die and the systematic debauching of the youth of this country must cease. Therefore the youth would grow up sober and in two generations we would be a perfectly sober nation.

WEST VIRGINIA SATISFIED WITH PROHIBITION

TAX COMMISSIONER BLUE EXPLAINS WHY

The liquor interests are doing their best to make the public believe that West Virginia is regretting its vote, 92,000 strong, for statewide prohibition, and would abandon it. Fred O. Blue, tax commissioner of the state, who ought to know the situation better than any other individual, in an interview reported in the April 3 issue of the Washington Star, gave the actual facts in the case. Read the article and decide whom you will believe.

"West Virginia will never again permit the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages, and will never again enter into a partnership with the liquor business. Some people seem deluded with the idea that this state will go back to the liquor business for the purpose of raising revenue. Shame, twice shame, upon those who will permit themselves to be led away by such a delusion! To seriously suggest it is a reproach to the citizenship of the state and a sad reflection upon the intelligence of those who suggest the idea. The time is here when the people of the state put men and morals above the dollars.

"The people of the state knew, when they voted to ratify the prohibition amendment, that they were voting away the revenue from the liquor business. It is an insult to their intelligence to suggest turning again to the liquor business for revenue. They also knew that with the growth and advancement of the state came the natural increase in state expenditures for education, protection to the workingman and those dependent upon him, and aid to those stricken by disease as affecting not only themselves, but the public as well. And the people, when they voted upon prohibition, expected the legislature to make necessary provision to meet the changed conditions.

"Compare the $650,000 of annual revenue from the liquor business with a generation of boys and girls, men and women, that know not the saloon. Compare the $650,000 revenue that the state might receive from the liquor business with the sum of $15,000,000 that formerly went out of the state annually to purchase and bring liquor into the state—for what purpose? What good did it do when brought here? What can be said for it? Did it really make happiness? It might have made somebody feel good one day, but very bad the day after. It brought crime, even to the extent of murder. It, more than any other factor, is responsible for 1,999 men, most of them young, being today in the state penitentiary. It, more than any other factor, is responsible for 2,258 being in the state asylums today.

"The criminal court of McDowell county, from its creation until after July 1 last, never had a term without a murder case on its docket. That court, before the first of last July, sent, on an average, sixteen men to the penitentiary every term. That average, since July 1 last, has fallen fifty per cent. In the county of Berkeley, since July 1 last, the grand juries for two terms of court returned no indictments—something that had not occurred in the prior history of the county.

Law Can Be Enforced

"West Virginia has now experienced eight and a half months of statewide prohibition. It has been demonstrated that prohibition will prohibit, and that a prohibition law can be enforced.

"Some weeks ago a brewing company of Columbus, Ohio, capitalized at $12,000,000, filed its petition praying for the appointment of a receiver and the winding up of its affairs. One of the causes given for its unfortunate financial condition was that the state of West Virginia had gone dry! Only a few days ago a large bank at Pittsburgh suspended payment. The statement was given out that some connected with the management of the bank were connected with certain breweries; that the business of such breweries had been very much injured and curtailed by prohibition in West Virginia. And yet the brewers and the liquor people generally say that prohibition will not prohibit!

"Throughout the nation liquor people are seemingly spending large sums of money to make the impression that West Virginia is bankrupt, because she no longer collects revenue from the liquor business, and it is therefore quite apparent that the liquor interests throughout the country are trying to discredit prohibition in West Virginia.

"The state has a present deficit and will have a deficit of approximately $700,000 June 30 next—the end of the present fiscal year. It is also true, however, that the state had a deficit of $350,000 June 30, 1914, notwithstanding that in the fiscal year then ending the state had collected license money from those engaged in the liquor business. Back of this, however, the state had a deficit of $480,000 June 30, 1913, notwithstanding in the fiscal year then ending the state collected as much revenue from the liquor business as in any year that the state collected such revenue.

"Now, inasmuch as we had deficits for two succeeding years before prohibition came into effect, what shall the liquor people say, and their friends say, in their efforts to create the impression that the deficit in West Virginia exists solely today because she is a prohibition state?

Great Improvements Follow Prohibition

"Let us turn to some things and conditions in West Virginia to illustrate effects and experiences under prohibitory liquor laws. Some time ago I received a letter from one of the large coal operators in the state. His plant is located in a section where two or three years ago we had internecine war. He said: 'I never in my life saw such a great improvement, both in the way of behavior and moral conduct as on the passenger train of the Cabin Creek branch of the railway since whisky ceased to be a merchandising proposition in our state. Further, I notice with great pleasure that the large portion of our men who used to go out to get whisky are now spending their time with their families or at the Young Men's Christian Association at Decota, and a portion of the money which originally went for whisky is now going toward the entertainment of their families, which means untold pleasures for their children.'

"On the same day that the above letter was received the president of one of the labor unions, covering a large district of the state, expressed to me his pleasure because of the change that had come to the thousands of workingmen, members of his organization. He stated that he found them better contented and saving their earnings, and that their wives and children in the homes showed the beneficial effects of taking away from the men the opportunity to buy intoxicating liquors.

"Another letter comes from one of the state's best business men, who has been a large employer of labor for the past twenty years, and is connected with three of the largest mines in our state.

"'The efficiency of the men since the adoption of the prohibition law has materially increased. We are now getting more work per man than ever before. Notwithstanding the exceedingly light run, the overdrafts of our men have been less than we could expect to see, which is due to the fact that less script and money is being spent for liquor than previously. We have had less trouble than ever before in getting the men back to work after pay day. The number of brawls and fights in the camps has decreased very much, and the few that we do have have been due to liquor.'

"The great employers of labor in the state unite in the general statement that prohibition has worked very marvelous changes; changes for the better—better relations between employer and employe; instead of overdraft in the stores a balance to the credit of the laboring man; instead of bare feet, children in the mining and lumber camps who never had them before are wearing shoes and women are clothed in warm clothing who heretofore went through the winter in calico wrappers; men deposit money in the savings and other banks who never had accounts before. There is a general moral and financial uplift in all walks of life in the state."

GOAL FOR 1915---50,000 NEW MEMBERS

MEMBERSHIP PLANS OF DIFFERENT STATES

MISSOURI TO WIN MANY MEMORIAL MEMBERS

MRS. NELLE G. BURGER, President Missouri W. C. T. U.

Before the National W. C. T. U. set its standard of gain at 50,000, Missouri had determined to win 5,000 Lillian Stevens memorial members in 1915, and was hard at work at the task. It is a big undertaking, but our women are facing it enthusiastically.

Our special plan is this: Each union in the state has divided its membership into "pairs," or "teams," each of which is to bring in at least one new member. Each union is to hold all of its old membership and make an increase of at least one-half more. Each county must hold all of its old membership and increase it at least one-half. In this way the anticipated gain is justly apportioned, the burden on small unions being no heavier than on the large ones. Many unions in the state have gained their full quota and even more, and are still hard at work. Each union is urged to organize one new union and many are doing so. We always have a May membership crusade, at which time we make a special effort to enroll new members. At the close, the county having made the greatest gain in paid membership over and above what it had last year, receives $20 in gold and the county coming in second in gain receives $5 in gold. This plan has been in use in Missouri for several years and works well.

We also offer to the "banner county" at the state convention, a prize conditioned upon the greatest gain in membership over the last year.

May 16-22 will be made "visiting week." We expect to have every family in every town visited by the members of the local union and invited to join our ranks. We expect good results from this week of service.

At the close of May we "take stock," see where we are "short" and then make a "strong pull' to strengthen the weak spots.

We have secured many new members through revival meetings. We enlist the assistance of the revivalist and ask him to hold a special W. C. T. U. service which we make a membership harvest. The W. C. T. U. of Jackson (Cape Girardeau county), the home of Roena Shaner, assisted throughout the Burks and Hobbs revival, and at the W. C. T. U. service held by the evangelist secured sixty-four active and twenty-one honorary members, the Y. P. B. grew from twenty-five to 100, and still new members are being added! When the consciences of the people are quickened spiritually they respond to the call of duty toward the temperance reform.

It is easier to gain new members than to hold the old ones, but we are trying to give each woman something special to do and to keep her interested and busy. Our women think Missouri fairly "sprouts plans" as they receive so many. However, all plans do not suit every locality, but some plans will suit all places.

The home union of the state president —Clark—gave an "Old Song and Living Picture Entertainment," which was pronounced the most educational of anything of the kind ever enjoyed in the town and added greatly to the popularity of the union. A full synopsis of this program will be given in the May Missouri Counselor. Any union, even though in a small town, can give it. Try it.

MINNESOTA USES "WON ONE" BADGES

MISS ROZETTE HENDRIX, President Minnesota W. C. T. U.

This is a membership crusade year for Minnesota. We intend to add 8,000 to our enrollment. That will not only cover the apportionment given us by the National W. C. T. U. but "then some." Our plans for securing new members are not new, for we have been working along the same lines for the last two or three years and have found our methods spell success.

We use "Won One" badges which are made of white ribbon and show a star above the words, "Won One." Each year the color of the star and the printing is changed. These badges are given to each woman who secures a new member with dues paid to the state. Any woman who secures ten new paid-up members, any local union that pays dues on ten new members, any woman or local union that organizes a new union with ten or more paid-up members, receives two dollars. Each union that pays dues for two more members than last year is on the honor roll which is printed in the state paper and is also exhibited at the state convention. Each union that doubles its membership receives a special badge. Any district president having all the unions in her district on the honor roll, has half of her railroad fare to the state convention paid by the state. Local unions are urged to hold membership contests and to do house-to-house canvassing for members. The state treasurer keeps in touch with the local unions, telling them when they are nearing the honor roll line. Every effort is made to hold the old members as well as to gain new ones, for this is regarded as important.

YOUNG CAMPAIGNERS HELP TO WIN PARENTS IN SOUTH DAKOTA

RUBY R. JACKSON, Corresponding Secretary

In order to reach the apportionment of nearly 500 new members made to us by the National W. C. T. U., we apportioned our districts according to membership and are using the following methods with some success: First, we are conducting contests, dividing the local unions into two parts for a given time, the losing side to furnish to the winners an evening's entertainment and supper. Second, we are putting into use the "win one" plan. Third, we are preparing for a big temperance mass meeting to be held this fall, which we expect delegates from temperance societies, churches, Sunday schools, young people's societies, etc., will attend, and we know we shall win a large number of new members during the two days we are in session. Fourth, we are organizing the children into bands of Young Campaigners and through them interesting the parents and gaining the mothers as helpers and members. Fifth, through a systematic use of our posters, we are educating the people. When the women learn what we are trying to do, they will want to join us and help with this great work. Sixth, the state is offering the following prizes to be awarded at the state convention this fall: $1.00 to any member gaining five new members; $2.00 for ten new members; $3.00 for fifteen new members; $4.00 for twenty new members; $5.00 for twenty-five new members. We do all the personal work we possibly can, and as our cause is for God and Home and Every Land we believe our efforts will be blessed.

DUES AND MEMBERSHIP CONTESTS POPULAR IN TENNESSEE

MRS. SILENA M. HOLMAN, President Tennessee W. C. T. U.

Tennessee, like most of the other states, is working to make a substantial increase in membership this year. The goal we have set is 2,000, and we are hoping to secure that number.

Our plan is to have a contest conducted as follows: The union is divided into two sides, each with a chief captain. The membership of each side is then divided into groups with captains. These groups may have in them from five to ten persons according to the size of the union.

The contest is a triple one—for attendance, for dues, and for new members. We think if we can get the members to come to the meetings we can arouse their interest and hold it. Every year through non-payment of dues, the unions lose a number of members. The dues contest insures collection of all the dues and the membership contest is for new members.

For attendance at the meetings three points are given; for payment of dues seven points; for a new member ten points. The group captains get the members of their respective groups to attend the meetings of the union and look after the collection of dues. They also keep their group interested in the hunt for new members. When a union decides to serve refreshments, the groups unite instead of the hostess doing this. In the case of a public meeting the group captain is responsible for the presence at this meeting of as many as are in her group.

The contest is to last until our annual meeting in September when the losing side is to entertain the winners. The plan is to readjust the sides, draw again for members and continue this good-natured rivalry from year to year. Next year, I think I will add to the plan the giving to the group or side securing subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL and Young Crusader, ten points for every SIGNAL taken and three points for every Crusader or campaign edition of THE SIGNAL. It was all so new this year that it was thought best not to have too many things to contest for.

We offer fifty dollars towards the expenses to the National W. C. T. U. Convention of any president whose union makes a gain of one hundred members, and we will pay the expenses to the state W. C. T. U. convention of the president whose union gains fifty members. We give a card to every member gaining one member and red and blue ribbons of distinction to unions making gains of ten and twenty-five.

CALIFORNIA WINE NOT A TEMPERANCE DRINK

MRS. DORCAS J. SPENCER, Alameda, Cal.

Some years ago, when a W. C. T. U. organizer, I had occasion to take a freight train one Monday morning across a beautiful stretch of the Sacramento valley to meet an appointment for that evening. A freight train is not supposed to stop often, but the only passenger trains being through trains with inconvenient hours, this freight became an accommodation train and stopped with terrific jolts wherever flagged. This occurred many times and each time a drunken man, perhaps two or three, came aboard. Usually they at once fell asleep in their seats and with each jolt of the car were liable to roll off. Asking the conductor for an explanation I was told, "Oh, these are just Monday drunks, mostly farm hands from ranches who have been over at the winery on Sunday and were too drunk to get home last night. Half of them won't be fit for work before Wednesday.

I spent a month in Sonoma county before the present cross-country railroads were in use. I went back and forth like a shuttle over the stage roads, often with the same driver, of whom I asked so many questions that I afterwards learned he assumed that I was a widow looking for a home to purchase. His business was largely express, taking produce to market and bringing parcels from town. At every stopping place the courtesy of a glass of wine was offered. He sometimes accepted, extending the offer to his passengers. In declining it I asked, "Is this native wine intoxicating?" He repeated my question, "Is it intoxicating, ye say? Do ye moind that? There was a Sunday picnic from the city up here yesterday," and he pointed to the helpless figure of a well dressed young man lying hatless in the gutter under the broiling sun, adding, "They get drunk slower on this native wine, and it takes a deal longer to get 'em sober. He won't get to work for a day or two."

On my last day with this driver he volunteered some friendly advice, "Now, if it's a home you're looking for don't buy one of these pretty vineyards. They don't pay. I've been deputy sheriff of this county many years, and I know who gets sold out by the sheriff, for I serve the papers," and the good man drove out of his way to show the chicken ranches that paid better than vineyards. "And I know that too," said he, "for I take their chickens and eggs every week to the railroad and bring back their money."

MONTANA IN CAMPAIGN FOR PROHIBITION

MRS. MARY L. ALDERSON, President Montana W. C. T. U.

Montana is in a campaign for prohibition. The legislative enactment provides for a referendum vote November, 1916, on a prohibition law which goes into effect December 31, 1918. There is some talk of initiating a prohibition measure which shall banish the saloons before that date, but no steps in that direction have yet been taken. Some of the counties (among them Hill and Richland), are talking of campaigns for local option, but no definite movement toward that end has yet been launched. A notable advance has been made in the agreement of the commissioners of Ravalli county to issue no more saloon licenses in Corvallis, an unincorporated town, after the present two licenses expire, one on May 24 and the other on June 9. This action was taken on petition of citizens. Petitions will be circulated to put the saloons out of other communities.

The Montana Woman's Christian Temperance Union is in the line of progress. It is aiming to standardize its unions so as to conserve every effort made, and to secure that essential to successful endeavor—team work. With this purpose in view it has prepared an efficiency chart and is also working to secure county organization. The W. C. T. U. stands for the elimination of the liquor traffic from any area, large or small. It is working for prohibition in residence section, unincorporated and incorporated community, county, state, and nation. Prohibition is largely a matter of education and the Montana W. C. T. U. is aiming to "agitate, educate, organize."

Seed Sowing by Word of Mouth

Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh was with us in February. She did good work and organized four new unions. She is to give us another week as she passes through the state on her way to Pennsylvania. Montana was also favored with the presence of another great National lecturer—Mrs. Lulu Loveland Shepard. She has talked more eloquently than ever to overflowing houses and everywhere made red letter days for our people, who have engaged her to come again in the fall. Mrs. Hannon, the fine Oregon campaigner, is doing effective work among us. She organized three unions and a Y P. B. the first week she was in the state. Mrs. Linnie Carl, who is an elocutionary artist, has also come from the good state of Oregon to help our young people's work. She has organized a union and two Y. P. B.'s and some bands of Young Campaigners.

The state W. C. T. U. is arranging for a good citizenship chautauqua under the leadership of one of the greatest speakers in the state whom we call "our" Daniel Poling. He goes out to talk on "Clean Politics" and help to put Montana in the list of progressive patriotic states. The state officers are co-operating with other temperance organizations to effect a state temperance federation.

NEW W. C. T. U. WORKER IN SOUTH AMERICA

Miss Sara Mier, who has gone from New York City to South America, to assist Miss Hardynia K. Norville, World's W. C. T. U. representative, in temperance work in that country, is of Mexican birth, as are her father and mother, though the family is of German and Spanish descent. Miss Mier's father, General Jose M. Mier, was a general in the Mexican army under General Diaz, and from an early age his daughter accompanied him over many of the states of the Mexican republic.

At the age of five Sara Mier started school life in an American institute in San Luis Potosi and afterwards continued her education under Miss Norville at the Mary Keener Institute in Mexico City. From this school she was graduated in the year 1904, at the age of seventeen, receiving a B. A. degree. Later she studied with private teachers at home, French, oil painting, drawing, and instrumental music, making a specialty of the latter art.

Sara Mier.

At the end of General Diaz's last term in Mexico Miss Mier's father was appointed governor of the state of Nueso Leon in Northern Mexico. The daughter's last year in Mexico was spent in the capital of the state of Jalisco, Guadalajara, her father being governor until his death on the battlefield. After this bereavement and the loss of her home in Mexico, Miss Mier, with a brother and two sisters, made her first visit to the United States, locating in New York City.

The National Temperance Council of Scotland, at a quite recent meeting held in Glasgow, unanimously adopted strong resolutions congratulating the temperance societies of the United States "upon the distinguished prohibition triumphs recently attained, in securing the enactment of statewide prohibition in Colorado, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Virginia, Arkansas, Alabama, Iowa and Idaho." A copy of the resolutions in full has been received by the National W. C. T. U.

Interstate Campaign Conference of the Northwest

MRS. MATTIE CLAY SMITH, Vice-President Colorado W. C. T. U.

Monday, April 5, dawned gloriously, following a typical Colorado Easter day, when all nature resounded the glad anthem, "Christ, the Lord, is risen today." At 12:25 p. m. the U. P. train left Denver, carrying on board, the Colorado state president, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, and the writer, bound for the W. C. T. U. Interstate Campaign Conference of the Northwest, scheduled to be held in Boise, Idaho, April 7-9, 1915. At Cheyenne we were joined by Dr. Ellen J. Wetlaufer, president of the Wyoming W. C. T. U. A very pleasant but uneventful journey followed. The burden of conversation en route was: "How may we aid the women laboring in the great cause of prohibition to be more courageous, more helpful, of greater faith, of good works, of determination that the liquor traffic must go. How may we inspire them with a passion for the protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste arising from the liquor traffic?"

At Nampa Mrs. Sue Prescott, state treasurer of the Southern Idaho W. C. T. U. joined the party. At Boise a bevy of white ribboners, including representatives from Northern Idaho, Oregon, Utah, and Montana, greeted their W. C. T. U. comrades and most gracious hospitality abounded during the stay in the city. Mrs. Nettie R. Chipp, president of the Southern Idaho W. C. T. U., gave a white ribbon dinner which was perfect in all its appointments. Covers were laid for twelve. Hand-painted place-cards with white ribbon bows gave the finishing touch. A well-planned, well-attended reception was given on Wednesday evening, at which the mayor-elect, Mr. Robinson, a friend and champion of prohibition, was present. His wife donned the white ribbon that night. The governor of Idaho, Mr. Moses Alexander, gave a cordial address of welcome to the conference in which he paid a beautiful tribute to the energy, power, fortitude, and accomplishments of the W. C. T. U., and also pronounced it the best loser he ever knew. He feels sure of state-wide, nation-wide, world-wide prohibition within a decade. Mrs. Alexander has become a member of the union. Congressman-elect McCracken, who is a loyal campaigner, spoke words of encouragement, approval and conviction. We praise God for such men. His wife also is a member of the W. C. T. U.

The place of meeting, the Methodist church, was tastefully decorated with easter lilies, palms, peach blossoms, campaign pennants, charts, banners, posters, and pictures of our two promoted chieftains. The special music was of a high order and the devotional periods were very helpful. A spirit of comradeship and fellowship prevailed throughout the entire conference.

The Personnel

The presiding officer, who was also the National W. C. T. U. representative, the personality around whom all else revolved, was Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, Colorado's state president, that dauntless general who led the hosts to victory in their fight for state-wide prohibition. Well-poised, well-informed, full of deep convictions and the courage of them, she is an unswerving leader, inspiring confidence in her comrades. Full of fresh, rich, valuable experiences, Mrs. Jennie Kemp, state president of Oregon, was an invaluable instructor and guide. She surely went to Oregon a real Queen Esther, "for such a time" as she faced. Thoughtful Dr. Ellen J. Wetlaufer, Wyoming's state president, freely added her word of counsel. The state president of Northern Idaho, Mrs. Madge E. Fohl, a fresh, vigorous, studious young W. C. T. U. woman, of an inquiring mind and ready speech, gives promise of great things for the work.

Mrs. Nettie R. Chipp, state president of Southern Idaho, and the indefatigable hostess of the conference, spared herself in no way in her efforts to provide everything possible for the comfort and profit of her guests. She surely is spending every energy of her being for the cause which is dearer to her than life. She has an able coterie of choice women associated with her in authority.

Mrs. Nora R. Linville, state president of Nevada, is an heroic soul, brave and courageous in the face of great obstacles. Her hopefulness was very helpful.

The presidents of Utah and Montana were unable to be present, but they were ably represented by Mrs. C. A. Walker, president of the largest union in Salt Lake City, and Mrs. W. C. Dawes, state treasurer of Montana, respectively. These young women are full of desire to do everything they can for the advancement of the cause and furnished information and inspiration.

TERSE SAYINGS HEARD AT THE CONFERENCE

Strive for absolute harmony in the temperance ranks.

Throw away your hammer and buy a horn.

Great deeds depend upon great thinking.

Pray devoutly, hammer away stoutly.

Plan your work wisely, then faithfully work your plan.

Prohibition does prohibit, and is here to stay.

Elect temperance men even to minor offices.

The ballot is a power.

The work of the W. C. T. U. will be done only when every individual is converted to prohibition.

Be not over-confident.

Before legislative bodies a large W. C. T. U. membership counts.

Discouragement is a dangerous, contagious disease. Never say you are discouraged.

Do your best and leave the results with God.

Prayer and preparation will always make a good program.

Inoculate communities with medal contests and thereby eradicate ignorance and indifference.

By doing interest is created.

Catch the vision of service, of a large membership and of faithful stewardship.

Numbers are formidable to the foe.

"In all our efforts may we be as good natured as sunshine, as steadfast as gravitation, and as persistent as a Christian's faith."

Wear the little white ribbon bow always. It stands for all that is pure and good and right.

10,744 White Ribbon Voters Represented

The delegations in attendance at the conference represented 10,744 white ribbon voters. In this particular it was probably the most unique gathering of women on record. Liquor people, it is said, consider one white ribboner and her influence equal to seven votes.

The message of greeting and congratulation of Miss Anna A. Gordon, National W. C. T. U. President, was highly appreciated. She said, in part, "It is fitting that you should meet on campaign ground and in a state that has shown its wise foresight in putting the liquor traffic out of business by legislative enactment, while it makes its fight for a rock-ribbed constitutional prohibitory law." The other National officers also sent greetings, as did Mrs. Henrietta Brown, vice-president of the Oregon W. C. T. U.

The newspapers were loyal and generous with space in reporting the meeting. The atmosphere seemed impregnated with the sentiment, "The Liquor Traffic Must Go."

Educational Work Discussed

Almost every phase of the many-sided educational work needed was discussed. Emphasis was laid on the effects of alcohol on the human system as shown by scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, which teaching inspires the child and holds it to temperance endeavor. Stress was laid also on the value of co-operation with missionary and ladies' aid societies by means of temperance secretaries in each, who present the latest temperance news as a part of each program.

Co-operation with Sunday schools, by urging the faithful observance of temperance Sunday in all departments and the use of a temperance blackboard posted once a week by a wide-awake secretary, who diligently hunts the latest and best news, was advised, also the appointment of temperance secretaries in organized adult Bible classes and the pushing of pledge signing.

Work among the younger Sunday school children, by observing special days when they may march, wearing caps and carrying banners and pennants and flags, was urged. All departments of the church may be most effectively used.

Membership in Local Unions

What constitutes membership, who is counted, getting new members, who should wear the white ribbon (never to be worn as a compliment), what to do with members after they are secured (put each one to work at that for which she is best fitted), how win women, etc., were subjects exhaustively debated. The West promises her quota of the 50,000 new members desired for 1915.

Successful Programs

The following suggestions as to how to have successful programs were made: Secure the best place for meetings. Plan to use every member some time during the year. Some pray well, some read well, some write well, some sing well, some talk well. Every woman to her work. Begin on time, close on time. Use up-to-date material. Be accurately informed. The map of the world daily grows whiter. Try to make each meeting a banner meeting. Bring in good outside talent. Conduct strong appropriate devotional periods.

To secure attendance have good programs and be prompt. Run in something special, call up doubtful ones, do personal work, serve refreshments, announce the meetings in papers and church bulletins, and from pulpits. Social features are important. Follow up the meeting with a good write-up in the local papers.

Campaign Ammunition

The Union Signal. Why do we take it? For information, inspiration and the latest news and helps for programs. Send the Campaign Edition to editors, ministers, educators, business men, judges, etc. Send The Young Crusader to schools and primary Sunday school teachers.

Leaflets. Get as much as $20 worth of these at a time and sow them knee deep, using discretion, that is, do not send a miner's leaflet to a country voter.

Posters and Pennants. Place posters everywhere possible. Use both those to be bought and home-made ones fashioned by posting suitable pictures on durable paper. Colorado, during the 1914 campaign, used 8,000 posters, 75,000 buttons reading "I am for a Dry Colorado," and 289,000 leaflets, 10,400 of which were in foreign languages. It bought 123,000 of these leaflets and had 166,000 printed.

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Postoffice Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL,
Evanston, Illinois

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, April 29, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson, National treasurer, who has been spending a few weeks at the Hot Lake (Ore.) Sanitarium, has been obliged to change her plans, as she did not find there the hoped-for benefit to her health. She will defer her proposed visit to Seattle.

"The White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner," by Kate Lunden Sunderlin, which appears on the cover page this week, may be found in "The Temperance Songster," published by the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House. Its frequent use at local union meetings cannot fail to be an inspiration and help to the cause.

STATE MEMBERSHIP PLANS

We have heretofore published plans of a number of states for increasing their membership, and in this issue present additional articles on the subject by state officers. We hope from week to week to give valuable suggestions from other states as to practical methods of arousing interest and gaining new members. The gains reported in many communities have been most encouraging in both quantity and quality. Women of prominence in club and social life have not only welcomed the opportunity to accept an invitation to join the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but have taken the initiative and requested the privilege of becoming members of the organization.

WEST VIRGINIA SATISFIED WITH EXPERIMENT IN PROHIBITION

The opponents of prohibition the country over are declaring that West Virginia's statewide prohibition policy is ruining her financially. They point to the fact that there is a deficit in the state treasury and endeavor to make it appear that it has been caused entirely by the loss of the liquor revenue. Without doubt if the 92,000 people who voted out the liquor traffic at the November, 1912, election could be put upon the witness stand they would each and every one of them testify under oath that even though there were a deficit as a result of their action, the state could well afford to pay it, for when it disposed of the saloons it freed itself from the countless evils, crimes and nuisances that are the result and accompaniment of the liquor traffic.

As a matter of fact, however, West Virginia has had a deficit for two years. According to Tax Commissioner Fred O. Blue, a year before the law went into effect, June 30, 1913, there was a deficit of $480,000, and on June 30, 1914, when it became operative, the deficit was $350,000. It is stated by those best informed on the subject that the West Virginia legislature has been slow to enact measures to raise revenue to take care of the appropriations which it has made and to provide for the growing needs of educational institutions. Heretofore money has been borrowed from other state funds to provide for the deficit, but the present administration has refused to take care of the matter in that way and insists that the legislature enact revenue measures to provide funds for the purpose.

That West Virginia is eminently satisfied with the growing success of the law is shown by the statement of Commissioner Blue given on page 4 of this issue.

LIQUORITES' DEFINITION OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

The fact that not every woman possessing a vote at the April elections cast it against the saloons seems to be troubling some of the friends of the cause who had evidently hoped to see the women march to the polls in solid phalanx and exterminate the traffic.

However, the liquor interests, apparently, do not share in this feeling. They realize that the rapid increase of dry territory heretofore gained by the prohibition forces is largely due to the woman vote. Local conditions, a large foreign population and lack of proper campaigns of education account for the apparent neglect of the women in some cities to register their opposition to the saloon as emphatically as it was hoped they would do. However, when the women are thoroughly aroused and informed, as in the last year's statewide prohibition campaigns in Oregon, Washington, Colorado and Arizona, there is no question as to the result at the ballot box, and this the liquor interests have virtually acknowledged.

In each of the four states that are to vote this fall on a woman suffrage amendment the liquor interests are organized to oppose it. Immediately after the passage of the submission measure in the New Jersey legislature the rum dealers from every section of the state gathered in conference to discuss ways and means to prevent the adoption of the amendment by the people, and planned to raise a fund for that purpose. They realize that unless they defeat suffrage the death of the rum traffic in New Jersey will be materially hastened.

In Massachusetts a circular letter in the interests of license is being sent to members of "the trade" which reads: "We must and do know that if woman suffrage should by any possibility be confirmed at the referendum in November it will mean entire state prohibition. No one in the state can then secure a license, because the women will, in the majority, vote against it."

No intelligent student of the situation, and certainly not the liquor interests, doubts that woman suffrage means the success of statewide and nationwide prohibition.

WHY DELAY THE SENTENCE?

In sentencing to the Federal penitentiary the mayor of Terre Haute and a hundred of his fellow citizens for complicity in election frauds, Judge Anderson of the United States Circuit Court of Indiana in strong language condemned the saloon as the center from which the corruption sprang. But while he sentenced the accused men to long terms of imprisonment and to heavy fines, he left it to the people to sentence the saloon, the chief conspirator and criminal.

The evidence in the case showed that most of the fraudulent conspiracies to deprive the people of Terre Haute and of Indiana of an honest election had been worked out in saloons and that saloon-keepers had been participants. In every large city corrupt schemes of this character are concocted in the saloons, and, as in this case, they are condemned in no mild terms by the jurists, the press and the people. Of course, as Judge Anderson said in the case at Terre Haute, "the saloon will have to go," and, of course, "the time will come when the people will rise up and smash the saloon," but why must the "going" be so long delayed, while another lot of men are being corrupted, another community exploited, and another generation of boys ruined?

Had Judge Anderson after hearing the testimony mildly suggested that he believed on the evidence the prisoners at the bar were guilty and that some time he felt certain they would have to go to the Federal penitentiary as penalty for their crime, the people would have risen in their wrath and demanded that these men receive the punishment they deserved. In every license city of our land sufficient evidence has been given by reputable witnesses of the crimes committed by the legalized liquor traffic to condemn it to extinction. Why should the sentence against it be longer deferred?

One is reminded of the incident of the mother, who having expressed her regret at the lukewarmness of a certain preacher on the prohibition question, received the reply, "But, my dear woman, it is not necessary to urge it. It is right and is sure to come. It may be twenty or, perhaps, ten years, but what matters a few years, more or less?" "What matters a few years?" replied the mother with deep feeling. "If your boy or my boy are to be among those who will be ruined in the saloons in these ten or twenty years, it would seem a matter of infinite importance how soon the liquor traffic was exterminated."

The state board of education of California has passed favorably upon "John Barleycorn" as a text book, and it may be introduced in the schools throughout the state. The book is said to have been adopted as a part of the English course in the Oakland high school.

LIQUOR TACTICS IN THE FLORIDA LEGISLATURE

The failure of the senate of the Florida legislature to approve the action of the lower house and pass the statewide prohibition measure was a disappointment to its friends. While the senate was known not to be as favorable to the bill as was the house, yet everything indicated that it would receive in the upper house a majority of votes. The measure went through the house by a vote of 56 to 14, with very little discussion. "The next day," writes the president of the Florida W. C. T. U., "our forces were all on hand. While we knew that the vote in the senate would be close, as there are in it a number of avowed local optionists, we believed we had the necessary twenty votes. We had said that if our opponents did not succeed in getting a certain senator intoxicated we would be sure of his vote, but he came into his seat under the influence of liquor. Three times he went out during the discussion and each time assured our leader, Senator J. S. Blitch, that he would return and vote for us. Each time a man was sent after him. When the roll was called, this man voted 'aye—no', and when every one laughed, he said, 'record me no'. As one senator who would have voted for our measure was at home on account of serious illness, we had only 19 votes. The vote stood 19 to 12."

The temperance forces are now working for the passage of very drastic regulative measures which, if enacted, will almost wipe out Florida's saloons.

PENNSYLVANIA UNDISMAYED

The failure of the Pennsylvania legislature to pass the county option bill has not discouraged Governor Brumbaugh and the advocates of the measure. Voicing the sentiments of this large company the governor asserts:

"The local option fight is on. We are going into the next primaries with it. The organization effected here at the local option hearing will work for the nomination of men pledged to local option. That is all I have to say."

EDITOR NELSON'S MODERN FARM

A great "model farm" on which no liquor shall be sold, and where instruction in stock raising and farming shall be given for the benefit of the public, is provided for by the will of William R. Nelson, former editor and owner of the Kansas City Star. The clause relating to liquor reads, "No person shall, during the thirty-year period, sell on said lands any spirituous, malt or vinous liquors of any kind."

DANISH WOMEN WIN VOTE

The Danish diet adopted an amendment to the constitution to give the vote to women and to confer on them the right of election to the diet. This amendment must be adopted also by the new diet, to be elected next March, before it becomes effective. It is hoped King Christian will sign the new constitution June 5, the anniversary of the signing of the first constitution in 1849.

Kentucky's local option law was on April 20 upheld by the state court of appeals in a decision declaring valid elections held last year in four counties.

NEWS FROM ACROSS THE SEA

AGNES E. SLACK, Honorary Secretary of the World's W. C. T. U.

We are greatly rejoicing at the impetus given our cause by King George, Lord Kitchener and the members of our government in banishing from their homes all intoxicants during the war. Thus a great national crisis and national sorrow is showing the best in our people.

The Baroness de Laveleye is now in England, and I am hoping she will attend our National Council meeting in London this month. She writes, "I am grateful for the five interesting months passed with the English in their merciful work in the hospitals for my poor country." She intends to return to Liege on May 15, where her sister now is. Her two homes in Belgium have not been disturbed, beyond having the potatoes taken away.

I received a letter this morning from Countess Calabiana, informing me that she has organized a white ribbon union in Turin, Italy, with seventeen members. The South Africa W. C. T. U. has sent $395 to be used, at the discretion of Baroness de Laveleye, in aiding the families of our white ribbon union in Belgium.

On hearing of the King and Queen becoming teetotalers during the war, I wrote them a letter expressing my great pleasure in their action. I have just had a letter from my friend, Lord Ranksborough, (lord in waiting to the King), saying he will have much pleasure in personally presenting my letter to their majesties.

BATTLESHIP "ARIZONA" TO BE CHRISTENED WITH WATER

At the launching of the battleship "Arizona," on June 19, at the New York navy yard, water, not champagne, will be the christening fluid. This is said to be the decree of Governor Hunt, who declares that the water to be used will be taken from the first flow over the spillways of the great Roosevelt dam. The choice of the chief executive of prohibition Arizona will meet the approval of all temperance people.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD AGAINST LIQUOR

The Great Northern railroad has announced its intention of enforcing total abstinence among its employes. Even to take a glass of beer, if found out, means dismissal. Any employe who urges "no license," that the temptation to drink may be removed, also breaks a rule of the company and is liable to dismissal.

FARMERS FOR PROHIBITION

"Prohibition sentiment has now become so strong in Michigan that no power can turn back the tide and the people will elect a legislature which will listen to 'the voice of the people,' writes J. S. Daniells of the Michigan State Association of Farmers' Clubs in sending us the text of the resolutions for statewide prohibition recently passed by the association, which represents more than 10,000 of the reliable, progressive citizens of the state. A copy of these resolutions urging the passage of a statewide prohibitory law "to banish from the state the baneful effects and influences of the liquor traffic," was placed on the desk of each member of the legislature.

TIME OF PRAYER—NOONTIDE

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents
From shore to shore, somewhere
Our prayers are rising evermore."

A WHITE-RIBBON HYMN

Tune: Webb

ISABEL SINCLAIR

The battle-cry is ringing,
Is ringing from afar,
Is ringing right around us,
Where bannered armies are.
Is ringing to the echo
Where fearless we now stand,
A great white-ribboned army,
The mothers of the land.

Pray, listen! Have you heard it
And thought on what it saith?
"For God and Home and Country,"
Our fire-sides and our faith.
For all on earth that's holy,
For all that's high we stand,
A great white-ribboned army,
The mothers of the land.

Jehovah is our leader,
The Lord of Hosts is He,
His name upon our banners
Is pledge of victory.
Our trust is in His presence,
With steadfast hearts we stand,
A great white-ribboned army
The mothers of the land.

We record here the names of comrades and friends who have recently passed to the higher life:

MRS. JEAN LAMB, Elkhart, Indiana, a Crusader and a charter member of the local union. In a few weeks she would have celebrated her eightieth birthday.

JANE EDGERTON, after whom the St. Clairsville (O.) union was named. Of this union she was made a life member one month before her death.

AN OMNIBUS "THANK YOU" FROM FRANCES J. BARNES

On April 4 we had a snow storm making the park in front of our house perfectly white, but on April 14 we were nearly snowed under by the good wishes of the Young People's Branches of many states and counties, and of friends far and near. Altogether it is quite impossible to thank each one separately, but through this "letter from home," as Frances Willard called THE UNION SIGNAL, I send most hearty and loving thanks. Until these messages came I did not know how sweet it is to be so graciously remembered.

"Billy" Sunday has been invited to go to England to conduct a campaign against John Barleycorn.

Following King George's example, Major-General Sir Harry Barron, governor of Western Australia, will use no alcoholic liquor during the war nor permit its use in the government house.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday of Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

TREASURER'S REPORT

FRANCES E. WILLARD MEMORIAL FUND
LILLIAN STEVENS CAMPAIGN FUND

ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON

The following contributions to the Memorial Fund have been received since last report; in each case $2 unless otherwise stated:

Royalty, Temperance Songster, $49.67.

Collection, Jacksonville Conference, $15.00.

Cora Hebert, $0.60.

Nevada: Clover Valley.

Michigan: Dowagiac $3.45, Saranac $1. Total $4.45.

New Jersey: $123.

South Dakota: $52.95.

Delaware: $33.

Maine: Houlton.

Indiana: Decatur.

East Washington: Davenport $1.50.

Illinois: Evanston, Shannon. Total $4.

Oregon: Pleasant Home, Enterprise, Eugene, (Central), Canyonville $0.50. Total $6.50.

New Mexico: Sakona $1, Farmington, Albuquerque, Sante Fe. Total $7.

Ohio: Berea, Lorain, Bloomdale, Scio $5, Deshler, Bethel, New Guilford, Elizabeth, Mann, New Vienna, Kenmore, Toledo, (Willard), Amsden, Mt. Vernon, Portsmouth (Central), Cincinnati (Central), Willard (Shelby Co.), Sugar Grove Twp., Tiro Y. P. B. $2.31, Conneaut, Nellie, Wade Park Y. P. B., Short Creek, Storrs Y. P. B. $1, Oceola, North Hill, Mt. Union, Millersburg, Civic Union $1, Circleville, Perrysville, Mineral City $0.80, Montra, Washington C. H., Creston, Florence Twp. $1, Unionville, Highland, Le Roy, Belfast, Good Hope, Hill Top, Berlin Hts., Sumner, Minerva, West Williamsfield, Hardin, New Burmingham Y. P. B., Rodgers, Sycamore, Mechanicsburg, Bascom, Monroe, Schoenbrum, Perry, Hill Top Y. P. B., White Cottage, Sherwood, Carey, (Willard), Barnesville, Albany $1, Cleveland (East End), Mt. Blanchard, Columbus Grove, Fish Creek, McCutchenville, Macksburg, Pemberton, Mt. Cory, Greenville, Lorain, Massillon, Waynesfield $1, Bloomingburg, Xenia, Spencerville, Troy (Central), Oxford, Newport, East Portsmouth, Jersey, Cambridge, Hicksville, Milford Y. P. B. $0.50, Sharon Center, West Lafayette, South Akron, Zanesville, Strong, Tiffin, Rising Sun, Franklin Twp., A. C. Turrell, Effie Carter $1, Crusader $1.10, Alliance, Corey, Colerain, Van Wert (North Side), Ballville $1, Malverne, Andover, Attica. Total $197.11.

Wisconsin: Appleton, Antigo, Albany, Bloomington, Brandon, Chetek, Colonia, Clinton, Dodgeville, Elkhorn, Endeavor, Fond du Lac, Grandview, Green Lake, Hancock, Hayward, Iron River, Janesville, Lake Mills, Madison (Willard), Marshfield, Medina, Menominie, Mineral Point, Mondovi, Monroe, Mt. Hope, Oregon, Plainfield, Poynette, Rice Lake, Seymour, Sharon, Soldiers' Grove, Springfield, Stoughton, Superior, Viroqua, Waldo, Waukau, Whitehall, Whitewater, Windsor, Delavan $3.75, Kenosha $4, Loyal $1.60. Total $95.35.

Kansas: Alma, Athol, Atchison, Allen, Burr Oak, Beloit, Beloit (Pleasant View), Colby, Chanute, Chase $1.37, Derby, Douglass, Emporia, Frankfort, Glasco, Homer Creek, Hutchinson, Horace, Hoyt, Kansas City (London Heights, Willard, Wyandotte), Leavenworth, Lucas, Le Roy, Lost Springs, Lawrence, Mound Valley, Marion, Mahaska, Natoma, Norton, Norcatur, Ottawa, Ottawa (North), Oatville, Osawatomie, Oak Creek, Otego, Pleasant View, Stockton, Salina, Salina (Wesleyan Add), Topeka, Tescott, Varck, Wilsey, Whiting, Winfield, Westmoreland $1.15, Crandall, Logan (Anna Tracy) $3.06, Wellsville, Larned, Winona. Total $109.58.

California (Northern): (Am't previously reported: Hanford, Pacific Grove, Santa Cruz, Castroville, Campbell, Palermo, Hollister), Salinas, Prescott, Turlock, Stockton, Parlier, Willits, Madera $1, Orland, Oak Park, East Oakland, Alameda, Santa Clara, Los Gatos, Cupertino, Lindsay, Healdsburg, Petaluma Y. P. B., Santa Rosa, Wood Colony (F. E. Willard), San Francisco (Richmond, Lake Merced), Modesto, Oakdale, Luna Vista $1.75, Sanger, Tulare, Dunsmuir $1, Corralitos, Sacramento, San Leandro, Oakland (4th Ave.,-EE), Merced L. T. L. $1, Morganhill, San Jose, Porterville, Atlanta, Petaluma, Graton, Exeter, Ripon $1.80, San Francisco (Central). Total, $80.55.

Missouri: Auxvasse Un, Bynumville, Burlington Junct., Bowling Green, Bonne Terre, Bethany, Cainesville, Clarksville, Charleston, Columbia, Cameron, Carrington, Campbell, Caruthersville, Coffy, Camden Point, Downing, Dunlap, Dudenville, Dearborn, Eldon, Eldorado Springs, Fordland Y. P. B. $1.75, Gallatin, Gazette Y. P. B. $0.30, Grant City, Golden City, Hemple, Haseville, Hannibal (Central), Independence, Jullet, Kirkwood, Kahoka, Kennett, Ludlow, Liberal, Lamar, Luray, Lagonda, Louisiana, Bollinger (Minnie Steele), Miller, Mt. Vernon, Monroe City, Malta Bend, Mt. Leonard, Mt. Olive, Marshfield, Mt. Grove, Mansfield $1.35, N. Mt. Olive, Newberg, New Hartford, Orognogo, Proctor, Pleasant Grove, Providence, Perry Union, Puxico, Queen City, Radium, Boone, (Shaner) Stewartsville, St. Clair, Springfield (Frances Willard), Springfield (Pickwick), Springfield (Neva Thomas), Silex, Sikeston, St. Louis (La Fayette, West Side, Centenary, Carondelet), Tipton, Willard, Wright City, Weston, Pattonsburg. Total $153.40.

North Dakota: Belden.

Florida: Winter Haven.

Kentucky: Bowling Green, Henderson, Lancaster, Louisville (Sue Davis), Catlettsburg, Nicholasville, Georgetown, Smithfield, Calhoun, Madisonville, Moorefield, Hopkinsville, Hustonville, Harrodsburg, Stamping Ground, Carlisle, Louisville (Parkland), Morganfield, Grayson, Taylorsville, Dawson Springs, New Castle, Shelbyville $3.55, Ft. Thomas, Paint Lick. Total $51.55.

Southern California: El Segundo, Los Angeles (Peniel Hall $1, Vernon Ave.), Redondo Beach (Hattie C. Young W). Total $7.

Arkansas: Tuckerman, Newport, Walnut Ridge, Springdale, Tuckerman, Prescott, Camden, Batesville, Hope, Wilmar, Morrillton, Bentonville, Eureka Springs, Piggott, Paragould, Little Rock, Van Buren. Total $34.00.

New York: North Ilion, Berlin, Troy (Central), Alfred, Andover, Angelica, Belmont, Friendship, Little Genesee, Phillips Creek, Rushford $3, Wellsville, Eastwood, Jamesville $1, Onondaga Valley $2.05, Syracuse (Willard Memorial No. 2, South Side), Bainbridge, German $1, Greene, Luicklaen $1, Oxford, Norwich, Smyrna, Erin $1, So. Elmira, Blodgett's Mills, Cortland $5, Brewster $3, Brewster L. T. L., Carmel, Cold Spring, Patterson, Nyack, Spring Valley, Grahamsville, Liberty, Livingston Manor, Rockland, Brookton, Forest Home $2.10, Brooklyn (Central $5, Bethesda, Flatbush $5, Janes, Signal, Wardell), Lima, Livonia, Albany (Allen), Albany (Somerset), Cohoes, Guilderland Centre, Ravena, East Branch, Franklin, Hancock, Stamford, Walton, Youngs, Beacon (West Side), Clinton Corners, Fishkill, La Grange, Pine Plains, Schultzville, Stanford, Washington, Bay Shore, Bridgehampton, Coram, Coram L. T. L. $0.50, Eastport, Greenport, Mt. Sinai, Mt. Sinai L. T. L. $0.50, Northport, Patchogue, Port Jefferson, Riverhead, Riverhead (Sound Ave.), Sag Harbor, Sayville, Smithtown Branch, Southold, Wainscott, Brainardsville, Burke, Malone $10, Malone Y. P. B. $0.84, St. Regis Falls, Santa Clara $1, Saranac Lake, Broadalbin, Gloversville, Johnstown, Mayfield, Northville. Total $207.99.

Campaign Fund.

Board of Superintendents, $50.

A Friend, $5.

Mrs. L. S. Howe, $1.

Mrs. W. H. Getchell, $1.

Miss Lillian Chisholm, 50c.

Delaware: Sadie Phillips $1, Mrs. J. A. Frear $1, Mildred Johnson $1, Mrs. T. W. Hausen $1, Mrs. J. G. Brown $1. Total $5.00.

Ohio: Hardin $1, Walnut Twp. $1, Van Wert (N. Side) 54c., Mt. Cory $1. Total $3.54.

SUGGESTIONS WORTH PASSING ON

"By selecting short and striking items in your weekly issue and handing the same to the editors of our local papers, I have been able to spread the good news still further without cost, and in most instances the editors have thanked me for the clippings. Why can't all the subscribers do likewise?" Thus writes Mr. William S. Witham, a leading banker of Atlanta, Ga.

"I have just called up the editor of our home paper and asked if he had among his exchanges THE UNION SIGNAL," writes an Ohio correspondent. "Upon receiving a negative reply, I asked if he would use it if a copy were sent to him, and he replied, 'assuredly.' There is so much of interest in the paper and only the temperance people get the good of it, therefore I am going to send to the editor my copy of the SIGNAL, as soon as I have looked it over and have marked a few special items."

Lewisburg, Tenn., is being placarded from one end to the other by the W. C. T. U. women, who are enthusiastic prohibition "bill posters." Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, National organizer, and president of the local union, is the prime mover in the effort. The posters, framed in such a way that they can be changed each week, already occupy a conspicuous place in the post-office and other public buildings.

"Miss Columbia's Wash Day," arranged by Mrs. Emma P. Pratt, recording secretary of the Utah W. C. T. U., was a number on the program of the first federated meeting of the Salt Lake City unions and was given with fine effect. An address by the chief of police, a strong temperance man, was also much enjoyed.

Prizes to the amount of $170 have been offered by the W. C. T. U. of Toledo, Ohio, to the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of the forty schools of the city and to the English classes of the high schools for essays on the evil effects of alcohol. It is reported that a brewery owner has complained to the board of education that his children are being taught untruths and that his business is being injured by this work in the public schools. A member of the board assured him that if he could bring evidence of untruths being taught the matter would be thoroughly investigated. The brewer has not again been heard from.

The Frances E. Willard W. C. T. U. of Elmira, N. Y., which was organized five years ago with thirty members, has now an enrollment of 300. The union is the only one in the county whose dues are as much as one dollar. Each member receives a free copy of the state paper, and where there are two members in a family, the campaign edition of THE UNION SIGNAL is sent to one of them; where there are three white ribbon members in one household The Young Crusader goes to the third person. By means of this plan every member of the organization has a paper. Honorary members, too, receive the campaign edition of THE UNION SIGNAL. As the result of a two months' membership campaign the names of 130 new active and twenty-two honorary members grace the rosters of the union. Among those enlisted are the mayor and his wife, the wives of five of the pastors, several teachers and a host of good men and women. April 8 the defeated side, the "blues," gave a banquet for the winners, the "pinks."

AMONG OUR WORKERS

At a recent two days' conference under the auspices of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, held at Portland, Maine, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston made the opening address. There were in attendance over 1,100 young women, representing a movement of great power for good in the state. Mrs. Livingston is a member of the Northeastern Field Committee of the National Y. W. C. A. board.

Mrs. Nannie Webb Curtis, president of the Texas W. C. T. U., is to speak in June for the International School of Missions, which meets in the College of Industrial Arts, at Denton, Texas. She was also a speaker at the forty-first annual Sunday school convention held in Austin late in March, and will be on the program of the Lincoln Chautauqua this summer.

Mrs. Amy C. Weech of Alexandria, Va., has just finished a series of meetings in Franklin county, Ohio. She spoke in Columbus and other towns and made many friends for the W. C. T. U., and the prohibition cause in general. At the close of one of her addresses a saloon-keeper came forward, signed the pledge and expressed his determination to close up his business, saying, with tears in his eyes, that it had never occurred to him that he was taking food out of the mouths of the innocent children, for he loved them, having had one of his own that had died in its infancy. Many new members were secured as a result of Mrs. Weech's story of how Virginia went dry and her work will help materially in the campaign which is already on in Ohio. Mrs. Weech goes from Ohio to Missouri where she will be for some length of time, and with her go the best wishes of the Ohio women.

Mrs. Leila Owen Stratton, National organizer and lecturer, was the guest of the Blytheville (Ark.) W. C. T. U. for a week recently, during which time she did valuable work among the colored people and in the public schools. An evening meeting at the Methodist church and an informal reception were other occasions when Mrs. Stratton ably presented the aims of the W. C. T. U. Eight new members were secured.

Mrs. Emma S. Shelton, president of the District of Columbia W C. T. U., by personal work has added twenty-two to the membership of the District in two weeks, and prospective members will probably bring the number up to thirty.

Mrs. Fannie A. Drummond, state lecturer and organizer for the Ohio W. C. T. U., recently spent two busy weeks in Hamilton county, securing many new members and doing effective work along other lines. She also acted as leader of a very enjoyable and profitable spring institute held in the Linwood (Cincinnati) Baptist church, April 1. The week of prayer was quite generally observed by the unions of Hamilton county, as was also Frances Willard Memorial day. The first week in May will be devoted to a systematic canvass of the county for new members, and Mrs. H. H. Huntsman, the county president, is carefully planning definite work for the coming campaign.

MEN AND WOMEN OF PROMINENCE JOIN W. C. T. U.

The wife of Governor Frank M. Byrne of South Dakota recently joined the W. C. T. U. of Pierre, the capital city of the state. The white ribboners of the state have in Governor Byrne a staunch friend, as shown by the report of his recent address on page 2.

At a meeting of the Chapin union of Washington, D. C., Judge William H. De Lacy, formerly judge of the Juvenile court, became an honorary member of the W. C. T. U., and Mrs. J. N. Speel, wife of a navy officer and second vice-president of the Woman's Peace Party, gave her promise to join. Mrs. George T. Guernsey of Kansas, state regent of the D. A. R. of Kansas, who gave an address at this meeting on the success of prohibition in her home state of Kansas, became an honorary member.

The district of Columbia W. C. T. U., as heretofore noted in THE UNION SIGNAL, has placed seventy-five prohibition maps in the public schools of the city. A map committee has been appointed by the union to see that new prohibition gains as they are made are recorded on the maps by painting out black spots. Mrs. Emma S. Shelton, president of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U., has had the cordial co-operation of Professor Earnest Thurston, superintendent of public schools, in this effort to interest and instruct the children in prohibition.

The recent legislative victories in Iowa, credited largely to the many years of educational work of the W. C. T. U., have inspired the women with a greater vision of what persistent, consecrated effort of united womanhood can do. The "Win One" plan is bringing many new women into the ranks.

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

Some truly scientific physicians recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from New York—and as a last hope, sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in packages. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Holworth Day: Drunkard or Philanthropist

MRS. MARY P. SAYERS, Martin, Mich.

"Pity a man could fall so low!" remarked George Ostrom to a companion, as Holworth Day, commonly known as "old Hol Day," ambled shakily through the saloon door and paused at the bar for a drink. "Town's full of buildings be put up. Used to be the best contractor in the city."

"Case of no will power, eh? I never did have much use for a man who could not control his appetite," returned the other disgustedly.

"Neither do I—but you see Day got in with a crowd of contractors that carried a pretty high hand at their club meetings. If he knew he couldn't stand the pressure, he ought to have kept out of it. Anyway, he went from bad to worse until he hasn't had a day's work for more than three years. The boy's following the same road. Got a good job but he won't hold it long at the pace he's going. I s'pose it's the lad's money the old man's spending now," Ostrom observed, taking notice of Day's fawning manner as he begged for another glass of whisky. "Brugger's a little cautious, though, when a man's down and out," he continued.

"Not another one tonight, Hol," Brugger was saying when suddenly hilarious voices from an inner room caused Day to listen intently. Through his dazed, befogged brain there had crept a familiar inflection. He dropped his glass and staggered towards the door leading to the billiard room. Brugger tried to stop him, but with a frantic lurch Day threw the door wide open and almost fell into the room. Grasping wildly for some support his hand touched the shoulder of one of the players. The young fellow at first scarcely turned his head, but when Day dropped in a huddled heap at his feet, some sudden intuition made him throw his cards face downwards and reach to the man's assistance. The recognition was pitiful.

"Dad!"

"Dick!" blubbered Day, a glimmering ray of belated conscience awakening a momentary feeling of remorse for the influence he had exerted over the life of his boy. Then, in a moment, the torments of delirium were upon him. Someone brought a hot whisky and set it on the billiard table. His brain was on fire. He staggered to his feet and bent over Dick with an eager, persuasive desire gleaming from his watery, bloodshot eyes.

"Dickie, O Dickie, won't you get me just one more glass?" he whimpered. Dick got to his feet and with one swift stride took his father through the door.

"I'll finish this some other time, boys," he called over his shoulder. Suddenly someone blocked his way.

"What's the matter, Hol?" quizzed a half drunken creature.

"He won't get me anything to drink," whined Day.

"Here, Brugger, set up the booze!" commanded the fellow thickly, trying to wrest Day from Dick's grasp. "Hol's treated me too often to see him suffer when I've got money!" Day's hand reached out to take the proffered glass, when quick as thought, Dick's own hand shot forth and the sparkling temptation dashed to the floor. The man sprang at Dick's throat, but stepped back abruptly. A woman, gaunt-eyed and white, stood between them.

"Mother!" Dick took a step forward, still steadying his father. A realization of the situation came upon him: His father's condition was but the forecast of his own future life, his mother was the butt of many a rude jest and remark. "Come, mother," he whispered.

"Dick! Dick!" she breathed. Surprise and despair had shot their poisoned shaft into her soul. She sent one wild imploring glance towards the inmates of the bar-room, and, as if by common consent, every man, drunk or sober, fell back and a moment later the little group passed out into the street.

Time passed away, bringing the year to a close, but still there was no change for the better in the Day family. Dick was steadily going the down grade in spite of good resolutions he had made following the incident at Brugger's.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A STATE?

Not high-raised battlement or labored mound,
Thick wall or moated gate;
Not cities fair, with spires and turrets crowned;
No: Men, high-minded men,
With powers as far above dull brutes endued,
In forest, brake or den,
As beasts excel cold rocks and brambles rude—
Men who their duties know
Know, too, their rights, and knowing dare maintain;
Prevent the long-aimed blow,
And crush the tyrant, while they rend the chain.

—Louise Redfield.

"It's no use. I'm disgraced anyway," was the only reply he would make to his mother's pleadings. For two whole nights he had not been at home, and his mother was nearly crazed with apprehension. His usual haunts had been visited to no avail. Brugger declared he knew nothing of his whereabouts. To a certain extent the affair had sobered even Day himself. Sitting alone at the fireside, while his wife and daughter were out looking for Dick, conscience-stricken, yet wavering between duty and desire, he heard the purring of an auto outside. It halted at the walk. A loud peal of the knocker sent him flying to the door. Scarcely had he reached it, however, when it was flung violently open and two men entered, bearing Dick in their arms. He was conscious, but very ill. Later, when Mrs. Day and Meta returned, they found Day murmuring incoherent endearments over the boy whom he had put to bed as tenderly as any mother could have done.

Dick's illness proved to be a well developed case of pneumonia, from which the physician gave no hope of recovery. Although the craving for drink was at times exceedingly strong upon him, Day remained closely at home and scarcely left the lad's bedside from the moment of his coming home. Hour by hour he watched the waning life run its shortened course and knew that the blame was on his own soul. One night, about a week before Dick died, as he sat thus, the boy began to talk:

"It won't be long now, dad," he whispered, "but oh! how I'd like to live! Only twenty years—mostly wasted, too. I knew better, too. But, dad—" Day groaned. "The influence was too strong. That night at Brugger's I was acting so foolishly and so many were coming in, that Brugger opened the basement door and pushed me inside." He waited a moment, his breath coming hard. "I tried to get out, but the door was locked. Then I went down the stairs and threw myself on some blankets in the corner. I must have been there all night." Dick was growing weak and his mother raised his head tenderly and gave him a stimulant. "When Brugger came down after me—he said—he'd forgotten all about—me. Maybe—he had." The beads of perspiration stood out on the white, emaciated face. "But, daddy—keep away from—Brugger's." Day was weeping bitterly. Dick reached out and stroked his father's hand.

"Daddy, when I'm gone—" his face bore the calmness of a holy resignation—"when I'm gone, daddy, I want you to do the work that I must leave undone. Don't rest, daddy, till the saloons are rooted out of this town. You can do it. With God's help you can do it. God has pardoned my sins—and He will do the same for you. Oh, how clear it all looks to me, now that I can't stay." Dick's voice grew low and wistful. He bent his gaze upon his father's grief-stricken features.

"You'll do it, won't you, father?"

"If I only could! If I only could!" choked Day.

"But you can! You can! With God's help you can!" With painful effort Dick raised himself in bed, his pleading eyes shining with a grim determination. "Oh, daddy, think of the boys—yes, and girls too, that'll go down—down—ah!" Dick sank back trembling and exhausted on the pillows, his eyes closed, his lips moving in silent prayer. Mrs. Day was kneeling at his bedside. Day could feel the influence of their united supplication. It was the test moment of his life. Yet to Holworth Day, besotted being though he was, such a promise meant more than mere words to quiet a dying boy. Suddenly Dick opened his eyes and Day met the boy's look of terrible earnestness. The realization of the parental obligation which he had heretofore shamelessly shifted, surged over him with an overpowering swiftness. Could he keep the promise? That was the question. Instantly there flashed before his vision as though written in letters of gold: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name!" With one deep, indrawn breath he sprang to his feet. His breath came quickly. His spirit was on fire with the kindling ardor of a new freedom. Lovingly, yet with a fierce eagerness, he bent to meet Dick's uplifted, questioning gaze.

"I'll do it, Dick!"

"With God's help," breathed Dick, as he once more closed his eyes, a feverish, hectic glow upon his cheek.

A week later Day stood alone beside Dick's open casket. Up to the time of the lad's going Day's tremendous resolve had upborne him. Now, the burden of it all seemed greater than he could bear. With a pitiful, despondent sob he bent low:

"Dead! dead!" he groaned, "and his death lies at my door!" Then, slowly, with streaming eyes, he reached his hands heavenward and cried:

"God be merciful to me, a sinner!"

(To be Continued.)

From west to east, from south to north,
We boys and girls are marching forth
To lay the liquor traffic low.
With happy hearts we are afield,
We're boys and girls who never yield,
The liquor traffic now must go!

Chorus:
In Nineteen Twenty comes the day,
Comes the children's happy day;
In Nineteen Hundred Twenty
There'll be prohibition plenty
When Columbia drives the drink away.
—A. A. G.

JOHN'S BUILDING

SARAH N. McCREERY, Burlington, Iowa

When the letter came from Captain John Starr announcing that he would pay a visit to his sister, Mrs. Fielding, the whole family was delighted. John Starr Fielding, who was named for Captain Starr, could scarcely wait for the day of his uncle's arrival. He did not talk much about it, for he felt that too much enthusiasm was beneath the dignity of a seventeen year old high school student, but he made many trips to a picture on the piano that showed a tall, straight, clear-eyed, smooth-faced man in the uniform of a soldier.

"I hope Uncle John will think that I am like him," was John's mental comment whenever he looked at the picture. He had never seen his uncle, but he had heard much of his jolly disposition and noble character. Captain Starr had never been able before to visit his only sister, because as a soldier he could not come and go at will.

When Captain Starr finally arrived, he was as enthusiastic in his greetings as a boy. "So this is my namesake nephew, and the only boy in the family," he remarked as he spoke to John last of all. "I declare, Jane," turning to his sister, "this young man looks as I did at his age. Don't you remember the picture I had taken in my high school days? It would pass for this John. I must show it to you, for I have it with me," he said as he dropped the boy's hands which he had held affectionately.

"I think he has your ways, and I hope he will grow up to be as good a man as you are," replied Mrs. Fielding.

Captain Starr blushed modestly. "Better, Jane. I hope he will be a better man than I am."

"I am glad I look like you, Uncle John, and I may be a soldier like you, too. Who knows? I think I would like to be a soldier." John already felt that no higher compliment could be paid him than to say he looked like his uncle. He had quickly decided that Captain Starr was one of the finest, noblest-looking men he had ever met.

The uncle and nephew became fast friends and they had many good times together. The day before Captain Starr's visit was to end he asked John to go with him for a walk. "Let's take a look at this new house," he suggested, as they came to a street where a pretty bungalow was being built. "A new house always has a fascination for me," he added. "If I had not been a soldier I believe I would have been an architect."

The two went over the house and Captain Starr carefully examined everything. The owner courteously showed them every nook and corner.

"Won't that be a cozy little home, Uncle?" said John the moment they were on the street again.

"Yes, it is cozy, but I am sorry to see a man put such cheap material into it. The house is in a splendid location, it would sell well at any time, and it should be put up to stand the stress of time and storm, but all the material is of the cheapest kind."

"I think that is poor policy," responded John half-indignantly. "It always pays to put the best material into any building, doesn't it?"

"Yes, John, it does," and his uncle was silent for a moment. "I am inclined to think, however, that you are not putting the best material into your building." The tone was deep with earnestness.

"Why, Uncle John, I am not building anything," responded John Fielding, greatly mystified.

"Oh, yes you are. You are building something of much greater importance than a house—you are building a body."

"I—I had not thought of it in that way," faltered John.

"I have seen you smoking cigarets every day since I came. Now you know and I know that cigarets are injurious to the body. Cigaret smoking weakens the mental faculties, lowers the vitality, and affects the heart and nervous system. Cigaret smokers cannot hold their own long, either physically or mentally, with one who does not smoke. Then I saw you take a glass of beer with some companions the other day. Now beer drinking is the first step to becoming a drunkard. Do you honestly think, now, that you are putting good materials into your building?"

John Fielding's eyes were downcast. "I guess not," he acknowledged slowly.

"Your cigaret smoking gives your mother anxiety, for she has spoken to me about it. I don't think she suspects that you ever drink beer. These two things have been a great disappointment to me. I tell you, John, there is no prouder moment in a man's life than when he can face his mother or sisters, no matter where he has been, and say, 'I have kept myself clean and strong, with no bad habits to make you sorry or ashamed of me.' Now about your building, I would advise you to look more carefully to your materials so you will have a strong, sturdy structure."

They had reached home and there was no time for more words, for John went at once to his room. When supper time came he did not appear and Mrs. Fielding was anxious.

"I would not call him, Jane," advised Captain Starr. "He and I had a talk this afternoon, and I know he is doing some serious thinking on his own account," and his sister was satisfied.

At ten o'clock, Captain Starr was just putting the last things into his suitcase, for he was to start away early the next morning, when John came to his room for a quiet talk.

"I may not be able to overcome the effects of the bad material I have put into my building, Uncle John, but I can see to it that only good material goes into body building from today. This is my promise that I will do it," and he placed in his uncle's hands one full package of cigarets, a half empty one, a small bag of tobacco and a pipe. "I will sign the temperance pledge, too, the first time I have an opportunity."

Captain Starr put his hand into his inside pocket and drew out a card. "This is your first opportunity to sign the pledge. I always carry some temperance pledge cards with me in case of need," and he gave the card with his fountain pen to his nephew.

"Uncle John, I not only want to look like you, I want to be like you," he said as he placed the signed card in his uncle's hand. "I want to be as helpful to others and as strong in standing for right habits. I am so glad that you told me about body building just the way you did. I am going to tell my companions, and have them give up the bad habits they are forming and take the pledge."

"That is the best way to strengthen your own good resolutions," replied Captain Starr, as he took John's hand in a hearty handclasp.

"Horn of plenty" float of Apalachicola (Florida) W. C. T. U. at Mardi Gras parade. This float, made entirely of carnations, won the prize for beauty, and on the same occasion the union received a prize of a set of dishes for having the most attractive booth.

A WAVE OF PROHIBITION
Facts and Figures
ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new
PROHIBITION FAN
(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)
Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal
PROTECT OUR AMERICAN YOUTH
BY PROHIBITING THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.
These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is 36 FANS.....$1.00.

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

INTERSTATE CAMPAIGN CONFERENCE OF THE NORTHWEST

(Continued from Page Seven)

Pennants are fashionable. The large ones, "The Liquor Traffic Must Go," with emphasis on the must, are very sightly. Place them in the homes, business places, Sunday schools and on automobiles and carriages and use them as decorations at meetings.

Books. Place temperance books in public and school libraries.

Fairs and Open Air Meetings. These proved of great value in the Oregon campaign. Towns went dry as a result.

Good Influence of Parades. Use the children in these. One brewery employe lost his position because he inadvertently followed a temperance parade with a load of beer, his employers saying he thus made votes for the drys. (The ministers of the town secured employment for him.)

Rally Cries have their place.

Medal Contests. By means of them young people and children become rooted and grounded in temperance truth. They guide those who listen into new channels of thought. They help financially. Visible and invisible results follow.

Medical Temperance. That many good people believe in the use of whisky for medicine is a menace to the cause. Study medical temperance. Send leaflets to editors and whisky-prescribing doctors and nurses.

Music. Appropriate soul-stirring music is believed to be a mighty factor.

Importance of Polling List. Study it. Go after doubtful ones persistently. Personal work cannot be emphasized too much. Be wise, be tactful, be courageous. Oregon women visited 60,000 homes during the 1914 campaign.

Press Department Very Important. Give items of real news value; short, sharp and to the point. Study to make them catchy.

Campaign Speakers. Select carefully speakers with a local viewpoint and willing to follow existing plans. Avoid finding fault with them or antagonizing them. Use consecrated common sense in conserving physical strength. Where possible, use local talent, business men, professional men. Speakers able to make their own expenses are desirable.

Money an Important Factor. Gather it carefully, dispense it wisely. Montana attempted to collect a mile of dimes; $700 was secured in this way. Suppers and bazaars were not considered a wise method.

Attitude Toward Partisan Politics. "Never allow any political party to endorse your amendment," said Hon. John Marshall of Kansas. "Do not affiliate with any party." "Endorse no candidate officially." "Vote for men and measures, not for party." "If all parties endorse it, all right." An amendment or law belongs to the people.

In the last analysis, the object of campaign work is to win votes for prohibition. Therefore, be instant in season and out of season, persuading men and women to stand for the right.

The present movement is incorrectly called a temperance wave. It is a rising tide, a continuous force, extending throughout the world.

Did It Pay? A Thousand Fold

Did the conference pay? "Yes, a thousand times over," was the answer given by a number present. In enlarged vision, instruction, information, inspiration, and as a sentiment maker it paid.

The Wyoming and Colorado delegates made profitable stops in Pocatello, Rock Springs and Cheyenne. Campaign methods were studied in each place with apparent helpfulness. Pocatello's goal is 100 per cent gain in membership in 1915. Rock Springs took on new life. Cheyenne gave evidence of splendid vigor and aggressiveness. God bless the noble women one and all! May they steadily "go from strength to strength" until nationwide and worldwide victory is won!

ALABAMA STUDENTS HEAR S. T. I. LECTURER

Special Correspondence

By arrangement of the S. T. I. superintendent of the Alabama W. C. T. U. with the principals of six of our state normal schools, Miss Christine I. Tinling, National W. C. T. U. lecturer, was given three days in each school, and made so good an impression that she was asked to stay longer, and plans were made for a week or more in each school next year. She addressed the entire student body of our state university, the first time this privilege has been accorded a W. C. T. U. speaker, and also spoke at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, by special invitation of the president who heard her at the annual meeting of the Alabama Educational Association. Miss Tinling's addresses, whereby she reached more than 6,000 students not only in the Normal schools, but in the high schools, women's colleges and grammar schools, have been eminently satisfactory. Besides this she organized and re-organized eight unions, several of them officered by teachers whom she met on this trip.

TREASURER'S REPORT

(Continued from Page Ten)

Kansas: Kansas City (Willard W) $3.40.

New Mexico: Farmington $1.

Kentucky: Campbellsburg $1.75, Calhoun $2.50, Moorefield $1.50, Hopkinsville $1.60, Louisville (Parkland) $2.08. Total $9.43.

Colorado: $6.50, Kit Carson $1.05. Total $7.55.

Georgia: $4.17.

Virginia: $34.75.

Wisconsin: Milwaukee (Lillian Stevens W) $2, one half of total received from Ft. Atkinson $1, Juneau $1, Kenosha 50c, Waukau $1, Sister Bay $3, Madison (Central, Willard, 6th Ward) $2.32¼, Mrs. Carrie Wright $2.37½. Total $13.20.

Indiana: $12.40.

Connecticut: $4.

Oklahoma: $14.75.

West Virginia: $10.50.

Massachusetts: $50.

Iowa: $25.

New Jersey: $10.08.

Tennessee: $8.25.

Minnesota: $6.86.

Arkansas: $4.

Missouri: $11.15.

Northern California: 50c.

New York: $30.50, Keeseville $2. Total $32.50.

District of Columbia: $100.

MEMBERSHIP SNAP-SHOTS HERE AND THERE

Interest in the work in Georgia is increasing all over the state, and dues for new members are being constantly received. The prospects for a substantial membership gain are very bright.

Rhode Island is offering attractive premiums for gains in membership. The unions are carrying on membership contests with encouraging results.

New Jersey is making every effort to increase its membership. It has already had the services of Miss Christine I. Tinling and Mrs. Deborah Livingston, and will send other speakers into the field later on. The state president is entering unorganized territory with a view to the establishment of new unions.

From present indications, Minnesota will reach the increase in membership apportioned by "Mother National." Its plans for securing W. C. T. U. recruits are various and many.

Virginia is enthusiastically at work on increased membership and hopes and expects to meet its apportionment. It has paid for 1,000 more members than ever before at this time in the year.

Oklahoma is striving for five hundred new members this year and the present indications are good for achieving that gain.

Wyoming is aiming to add to its enrollment of white ribboners. The unions nearly all report new members secured.

Mississippi is working for a gain of 213 members; the Y. P. B. is growing rapidly.

Wisconsin's organizers find women responding more readily than ever before to invitations to join the W. C. T. U. County presidents are developing rapidly as member-getters. The unions every week report additions. One state worker is securing many state life and memorial members.

Connecticut is giving a year's subscription to the Campaign edition of THE UNION SIGNAL to any union gaining five new members. At the state convention gold stars (marked "H" for honor) were offered to the first five securing five or more new members. These were promptly won. The state hopes to show a large increase in membership.

East Washington means to do its share in helping the National W. C. T. U. to report a gain of 50,000 new members at the Seattle National Convention.

Tennessee is working for a 2,000 membership gain this year with good prospects of "winning out." The treasurers of the local unions are being urged oftener than usual to make early collections of dues.

The membership dues in Arkansas are coming in more promptly than they have done for fourteen years. The outlook for an unusually encouraging membership report is a good one.

Missouri expects to win 5,000 Lillian Stevens memorial members. It is planning wisely and well to that end.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?
A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON
of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. H. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

IOWA NEWS NOTES

Iowa believes in pushing the Medal Contest department. "Variety" expresses the month's effort. Woolson held a men's contest. A number of matrons' classes are reported, at one of which over thirty dollars was raised. The new union at Milo has held three of a series of six matrons' classes. Earlham held a cradle roll contest. Eagle Grove had a triple and Goldfield a quadruple L. T. L. contest. At Morning Sun each Sabbath school held a contest and "climaxed" with a gold medal class. At Newton each of the eight pastors will train one of his boys from the high school to enter a contest. Cedar Rapids is having a contest campaign. Conesville and Correctionville are repeating their large classes in surrounding territory. In commenting on the contest at West Branch the local paper says, "It was one of the best entertainments of the season. The exercises and music were fine; but the crowning part, the contest, was great!"

Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, National superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction, recently gave an excellent address at the chapel of Cornell college, Mt. Vernon, Ia. She also spoke at the high school and at Lisbon and gave a public address at Marion in the evening.

Mt. Vernon (Ia.) W. C. T. U., numbering more than one hundred members, held an institute April 13 with the state president, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, as speaker. She gave a masterly address.

Seventy new members already added to the list of the University Place union, Des Moines, Ia., is the latest cheering word from this union which last year [illegible] dues for 126. A contest for honorary members is in progress, the prize to be the "Life of Frances E. Willard." Other Des Moines unions are securing new recruits and the work goes merrily on. "Hurrah for Iowa. We seem to be walking on air," writes the correspondent.

THE BLANK SHOULD BE FILLED!

A Seattle barber came home drunk one night and beat and choked his eleven-months-old baby to death. The details are not going to be printed here—they are not essential. There are just three points that really matter: (a) The baby lies dead at the hands of its father; (b) the man was drunk at the time; and (c) —— made the whisky that the man had been drinking. That blank should contain the name of the person who manufactured the stuff that led the man to murder his own child. The booze manufacturer is entitled to know exactly how that dollar of blood money happened to come to him. He is entitled to realize that he is the true child killer. The public is entitled to the knowledge also.—Collier's.

ADMINISTERING THE ANTI-CIGARET TREATMENT

Dr. C. A. MAY on left, Miss FANNIE D. ROBB of W.C.T.U. on right.

The St. Louis W. C. T. U. has opened a cigaret-cure clinic for women only, by request of women and girls who have been attending the clinic for men and boys opened several months ago. A woman physician will administer the treatment.

RHODE ISLAND'S VARIED PROGRAM

W. C. T. U. Representative at Providence to Meet Immigrants

Special Correspondence

Rhode Island W. C. T. U. is very busy these days. It had a booth at a food fair held in the city of Providence. The booth was attractively decorated with posters, and literature was distributed. Spring water was provided for the convenience of visitors. Owing to increased work and need of more space another room has been added to the headquarters in Butler Exchange, Providence. As Providence is now a port of entry the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has secured a woman to meet all incoming and outgoing foreign passenger boats to assist the immigrants in finding friends, reaching their destination or caring for the ill. The woman suffrage bill presented to the general assembly was tabled by the senate committee after the hearing.

The semi-annual meeting of the state W. C. T. U. and annual thank offering service was held the last of March.

Recent speakers from out of the state have been Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Captain Richmond P. Hobson, Mrs. Katharine Lent Stevenson, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston and Miss Mary Frances Willard Anderson. The latter spent a week in Rhode Island speaking continuously and urging work among the young people. As a result of her visit increased activity is evident wherever she has spoken. The state has lately published a song book containing about twenty songs suitable for use at regular meetings or for campaign purposes. These songs are nearly all written by Rhode Island women to familiar tunes. Medal contest work has gone steadily on all winter under the leadership of the superintendent, Mrs. Harriet G. Perry.

W. C. T. U. ACTIVITIES

A most inspiring occasion was the W. C. T. U. institute held at Nashville, Mich., recently, Mrs. Maude Glassner, president of Barry county organization, presiding. Songs, papers, discussions and addresses followed each other in rapid succession throughout the day, the closing number being the address of Rev. Russell Brady at the evening meeting.

A series of medal contests organized by the Kendrick (Fla.) W. C. T. U. among the students of Fessenden Academy, colored, is arousing great interest. The first contest was held March 30 at the Academy, the second, April 4 at Mt. Tabor A. M. E. church; the third, Sunday afternoon, April 11, in one of the colored churches of Reddick. A grand gold medal contest will be held in the fall when school reopens. In the effort to make Marion county dry, there is great need of work among the colored people, who comprise four-fifths of the population of the county.

Enthusiastic commendation was everywhere expressed by those who attended the recent entertainment of the Forest City (Ark.) union, Mrs. George P. Walker, president. The address of the evening was made by Judge M. B. Norfleet, and other enjoyable numbers were furnished by local workers. A most satisfactory attendance of the Christian forces of the city encouraged the white ribboners. "We are ready to exclaim, God bless our ladies of the W. C. T. U.," writes a correspondent to one of the local papers of the city. "They are overcoming the moss-covered traditions that have kept them in the background for centuries and are solving problems before which men have stood helpless for countless numbers of years."

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

DO YOU KNOW?

DO YOU KNOW that if every subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL would secure one new subscriber we would have a 50,000 subscription list, making one-sixth of our membership subscribers to the official paper?

DO YOU KNOW that this is possible if each will constitute herself a committee to secure that ONE new subscriber?

DO YOU KNOW that in renewing your subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL it will help us to keep our lists correct if you will write your name (for instance) Mrs. (J. B.) Minnie Smith for if the name has been on our list as Mrs. J. B. Smith and you renew as Mrs. Minnie Smith we shall not recognize your subscription as a renewal and you will receive two papers, or else the name will be considered a new one and it may be two or three weeks before it appears on our list

DO YOU KNOW that in asking for a change of address for your paper it is necessary to give us the former address as well as the present one?

DO YOU KNOW that an expiration notice is enclosed in your paper three weeks before your subscription expires and that a renewal sent immediately upon receipt of this notice will save much work in the circulation office and cause no interruption in the receipt of your paper?

DO YOU KNOW that all letters for the CIRCULATION department should be addressed to THE UNION SIGNAL Circulation Department and not to individual names.

DO YOU KNOW that all remittances should be made either by New York draft, Chicago draft, or money order, and that these should be made payable to the National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.?

POPULAR POSTERS

18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

Successful Men

"The most successful men today," says Edward Bok, journalist, "are those who never lift a wineglass to their lips."

Read What Some of Them Say

I am a total abstainer from alcoholic liquors. I always felt that I had a better use for my head.

Thomas Edison.

—

To use liquor is to the nervous system like placing sand in a watch; it wears it out rapidly, making it a worthless, useless thing.

Luther Burbank.

—

My business depends upon my brain being clear, my muscles firm, my nerves steady. No one can take alcoholic liquor without blunting these physical powers. As a surgeon I must not drink.

Dr. Lorenz,
Famous Austrian Surgeon.

—

I am a prohibitionist in every sense of the word. Our success is largely attributable to prohibition. We have learned long since that alcohol breaks down the constitution and affects the brain, and health is an essential asset for every successful actor and actress.

Gustave Frohman,
One of the three Frohman Brothers, famous as theatrical capitalists.

—

To the man who is actively engaged in responsible work, who must have at his command the best that is in him at its best—to him I would, with all the emphasis I possess, advise and urge, leave drink alone absolutely.

William H. Taft,
Former President of the United States.

Saloons Increase Taxes

Wherever a saloon pays one dollar of taxes it makes necessary the levying of a considerably larger amount.

What causes the enormous expense of most of our criminal trials?
THE SALOON.

What fills poor-houses, reform schools, insane asylums?
THE SALOON.

The revenue from saloons does not diminish the burden of taxation; it increases it.

Saloons Lessen the Demand for Labor

Does anyone imagine that the millions of dollars spent annually for drink would not be spent for something else if the saloons were put out of business?

Would the owners of all this money destroy it because they could no longer spend it in saloons?

No. There would be a stimulation of trade in other lines.

One hundred dollars spent for drink gives far less employment to labor than does an equal sum spent for necessaries.

Of $100 spent for hardware, $24.17 goes to Labor.
Of $100 spent for furniture, $23.77 goes to Labor.
Of $100 spent for clothing, $17.42 goes to Labor.
Of $100 spent for liquor, $1.23 goes to Labor.

People who would be thrown out of employment by the shutting up of saloons would be engaged in making and selling the furniture, the clothing, the groceries, the houses, the barns, and other beneficial things that families are now deprived of through drink.

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House

EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

All sections look alike when doors are closed.

Weis Sectional Music Room Furniture

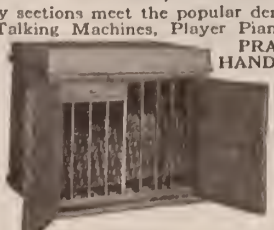
For FILING Instead of PILING Sheet Music, Disc Records and Player Rolls

These handy sections meet the popular demand of owners of Talking Machines, Player Pianos, etc.

THINK OF THE CONVENIENCE of being able to refer instantly to any piece of sheet music, disc record or player roll without handling any except the one you want.

These cabinets are practical because they are Sectional—Expansible to meet your needs. In them are incorporated the most approved filing methods.

Buy a section at a time—as your Music Library grows.



No. 1680. Disc Record Section files 40-10 in. and 40-12 in. Records in individual, indexed pockets.

PRACTICAL FILES, HANDSOME CABINETS, beautifully finished to harmonize with other furnishings.

Genuine Mahogany or handsomely flaked Quartered Oak in richly polished or dull finishes.

Why not write us for descriptive booklet now, while you think of it?

SEE YOUR DEALER or write direct to
The Weis Manufacturing Company
196 Union Street :: Monroe, Mich.
New York Office - 75 John Street

No. 1040 holds 40 Rolls and about 2000 sheets of Music, 47 in. high.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Gift.

THE KEADMA COMPANY
ROGERS PARK, ILL.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., MAY 6. 1915 | No. 19

LITTLE VICTIMS OF THE WAR Leopold Bracony

A Prayer for Peace

God of the warring nations,
God of the ways of peace,
Hark to the pleas of women
And bid the warfare cease!
Hark to the prayers of children,
Their small hands lifted up,
And from the world forever
Remove this bitter cup.

A wife stands all forsaken
And peers into the storm,
Above the smoke of battle
She marks the vultures swarm,
No loved one hears her pleading
And to her succor flies—
Beside where she stands weeping
A baby starves and dies.

God, lift the burden from them
Who bear the burden most!
God, touch the hearts of rulers!
God, turn each warring host
From ways that lead to slaughter
Back to the paths of peace!
God, hear the plaints of women
And bid this warring cease!

Judd Mortimer Lewis

SPECIAL ARTICLES IN THIS ISSUE

British Government Compromises on Drink Question—International Peace Conference Convenes—Drinking Versus Drunkenness—"For the Sake of Your Son"—We Welcome You—Commercial Equilibrium of Des Moines Unshaken—What John Barleycorn Costs Philadelphia—Substitutes for the Saloon.

ENGLISH WAR POSTER

GRAIN MADE INTO ALCOHOL IS WASTED

Every week the brewers and distillers destroy at least
73,000,000 pounds of barley and grain,
3,000,000 pounds of rice or maize,
9,500,000 pounds of sugar or sugar equivalents.

Every year the brewers and distillers destroy per man, woman, and child in the United Kingdom,
83 pounds of barley,
4 pounds of rice,
10½ pounds of sugar.

British Government Compromises on Drink Question

Announcing that the British government had decided "it was not justified" in instituting prohibition until it had tried everything else, Hon. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on April 29, introduced in the House of Commons the government's plan to restrict drinking during the war.

By a vote of 89 to 5, the House of Commons adopted the measure which doubles the duty on spirits, quadruples the duties on wines, and places a graduated surtax rising to $9 a barrel on beers containing more than seven per cent of proof spirits.

In areas producing materials of war, or in which transport work is performed, and in some camp areas, the government is to have complete control of the saloons. The new taxes go into effect at once, but are subject to confirmation by the House when the budget is introduced and the bill passed.

Speaking of the excessive drinking among workmen at this time, the Chancellor said:

"Everybody agreed on the existence of this evil until the remedies were foreshadowed. The facts show that the evil is so serious that nothing but strong action will enable the country to cope with it."

It is a cause for profound regret that the British government should have failed to deal heroically with so tremendously serious a problem. In the light of the experience of other countries with halfway measures, it is difficult to understand how English statesmen could resort to a compromise on this vital question. One must, however, in passing judgment on the action of the English government, take into account the strong influence, political and social, of the brewers. In the May number of the Century, James D. Whelpley, writing on "War and Drink," says:

"The political partiality to the brewers is easily explained. To many of the well-known names in the brewing world are now tacked titles of varying quality. Their services to their country have been no greater and no less than those of other wealthy and public-spirited Englishmen, but their contributions to party funds have been notoriously large and their influence with voters in certain constituencies is naturally formidable."

Other difficulties which Mr. Whelpley sees in the way of immediate drastic measures against the traffic in England are: The habits of the English people, who for centuries have been a drinking people, and the fact that the temperance movement lacks the support of the women. A large proportion of the women of the lower class drink as heavily as do the men. The long established and deep rooted idea of personal liberty, permitting one to take a drink when occasion demands, he considers one of the most serious obstacles.

INTERNATIONAL PEACE CONFERENCE CONVENES---JANE ADDAMS PRESIDING OFFICER

THE HAGUE THE MEETING PLACE OF TWO INTERNATIONAL CONGRESSES ON ALCOHOLISM

"The declaration of war was solely man's affair; let the bringing about of peace be woman's work," was the theme of the International Congress of Women which gathered at The Hague, April 28. After four days' delay off Dover, England, the American delegates arrived in time to listen to the messages of greeting from warring and neutral countries. There are present over one thousand representatives from sixteen countries. America is said to have the largest foreign delegation.

An earnestness so serious as to border on solemnity is noticeable in all the proceedings. Flags of many nations, usually so conspicuous at great international meetings, are not to be seen. The proceedings are conducted in four different languages: Dutch, English, German and French. Among the speakers are Mrs. Pethwick Lawrence of England, Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, president of the Hungarian Women's Suffrage Association, Dr. Lida Hermann of Germany, Miss Sophonisba P. Breckenridge of Chicago and Mrs. Emily Balch of Wellesley College.

The plan of the convention, as outlined by the presiding officer, Jane Addams, is to register the protest of the women against the war and discuss measures to

The Hague, the meeting place of the Peace conference, has on two occasions entertained the International Congress on Alcoholism. In 1893 and in 1911 these wonderful gatherings met in Holland's capital, and each proved a powerful impetus to the work of temperance reform in Holland. At the latter congress, more than 1,100 delegates attended, including representatives from every European country except Turkey; and the discussions on the social, scientific, and legislative aspects of the alcohol question by speakers of eminence, experience, and acknowledged authority, must perforce have left an impression not easily erased on the more educated and thoughtful of the populace who read the reports.

In various directions the progress made towards national sobriety in Holland is evident, despite the huge vested interests opposed, says a writer in the English White Ribbon. Several years ago a declaration affirming the use of strong drink as "ever unwholesome, even when the body is in a healthy state," was published in Holland, with 600 names of medical men appended. No sale of alcohol has been permitted for a considerable time to persons under sixteen years of age; and much interest in the dissemination of temperance truth amongst the Dutch Teachers' Association, the magazine issued under their auspices supplying valuable material for temperance instruction. In 1911, the University of Utrecht instituted a series of scientific lectures on "Alcohol and Political Economy," "Alcohol and Crime," and kindred temperance subjects by Dutch and foreign scholars of prominence. Railway employes are forbidden the use of spirits, and railway refreshment rooms are similarly restrained from the indiscriminate sale of these. Particularly, two facts attest the temperance progress achieved. In a number of localities a referendum has been arranged by temperance workers, on the license or non-license question, with the result that in most cases more than fifty per cent of the votes cast were in favor of local cessation of the drink systems, the lowest percentage even being forty-four per cent. Also the quantity per head of spirits consumed by the people of Holland has diminished during the last three decades nearly to one-half that formerly consumed.

An exceedingly helpful factor in the advance of temperance principles in Holland has been the patronage given by Queen Wilhelmina to anti-alcohol efforts, states the paper above quoted. Wholly sympathetic with the temperance movement, the queen sets the example herself of personal abstinence from intoxicants. While, it is said, not banishing wine from the royal table, the queen and her mother have definitely refused to permit alcoholic beverages to be served for themselves, so manifesting clearly to the Battle Creek (Mich.) Evening News

DRINKING VERSUS DRUNKENNESS

DAVID PAULSON, M. D., of Hinsdale (Ill.) Sanitarium

Public opinion no longer tolerates drunkenness, but there are some who are inclined to excuse drinking. But modern science has absolutely demonstrated that the drinker must be classified with the drunkard—for the same reason that the man who steals pennies belongs in the same class as the thief who steals dollars.

The most searching scientific tests demonstrate that the moderate drinker is never actually sober. Furthermore, the startling fact should not be overlooked that every one of the 68,000 drinkers, at the lowest estimate, who went into drunkards' graves last year, without an exception, began their careers as moderate drinkers.

The alcohol habit is a dangerous microbe; and from a physician's standpoint a colony of microscopic grippe germs may be more dangerous to a community than a whole herd of elephants. Modern warfare has taught us that a submarine of insignificant size may be quite as deadly as a monster dreadnaught. Formerly mosquitoes were considered a sort of innocent nuisance and more or less of a joke. But modern science now holds the mosquito responsible not only for the yellow fever scourge, but also for malarial infection.

This same science, and precisely the same sort of scientific inquiry, has laid at the door of just such moderate quantities of alcohol as are contained in beer, a train of most appalling events.

It Dulls Human Wits

Dr. Kraepelin, the eminent investigator in Heidelberg, Germany, has written an entirely new chapter on this subject. Working with instruments of precision that measure the rapidity of transmission of nerve impulses and mental operations, he found that as small a quantity as one-quarter of an ounce of alcohol produced paralyzing influences that could be detected for hours afterwards by such instruments.

These experiments demonstrated that it frequently takes a man under the influence of alcohol seven times as long to hear, to feel, to taste, to receive an impression of any sort, as a normal person. Such a man called upon to act in an emergency—an engineer, for instance—would require at least seven times as long to make up his mind what he ought to do as a healthy person would require.

At the meeting of the British Association for the Advance of Science it was the unanimous agreement that alcohol, even in the smallest amounts, is deleterious to the quality of mental work.

It is clear, in view of these new researches, that a moderate drinker is never actually sober.

Moderate Drinking Promotes Immoderate Diseases

Bodily defenses is the most important word in medicine. It is an interesting fact that as soon as the healthy body is invaded by disease germs, the white blood cells rise up in their might and endeavor to capture these germs and destroy them, or else the body manufactures antitoxins which neutralize the poisons which the microbes are producing; or other mysterious substances are produced which enable the body cells to triumph in their struggle against disease.

Now every scientific physician knows that alcohol, by crippling these bodily defenses and lowering physical resistance, deliberately lets down the bars and invites in these death-dealing diseases. For modern research has abundantly demonstrated that alcohol, instead of assisting the body in this struggle, is actually an enemy, to frustrate and cripple its efforts against the invasion of disease.

Beer and Morality

As has been already shown, moderate drinking produces paralytic effects upon the mind which can be readily demonstrated by instruments of precision. Unfortunately no method has yet been devised for demonstrating its similar anesthetic effects upon the soul; but ample experience has shown that it is precisely the higher sentiments of life that are blunted first of all. And as Jane Addams has well expressed it: "Even a slight exhilaration from alcohol throws a sentimental or adventurous glamor over an aspect of life from which a decent young man would ordinarily recoil."

A Food Delusion

The searchlight of modern science has exposed one fallacy after another of the moderate drinker's defenses until he has been compelled to shield himself behind the argument that beer is a food. But in reality it is a food only in the same sense that gunpowder is a fuel—which would ruin the stove while burning.

Dr. Frederick Peterson, the eminent New York neurologist, expressed the attitude of the most advanced medical men on this question when he said, "If alcohol is a food, it is a poison food."

But the suggestion is foolish, even from a food standpoint, as Harry S. Warner has well expressed in his admirable book, "Social Welfare and the Liquor Problem," where he shows that a nickel's worth of beer yields only ninety-four heat units, while five cents' worth of flour furnishes nearly three thousand food units.

A Cousin to Chloroform and Ether

An array of striking, stubborn and unanswerable facts that have been developed during the last few years proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that alcohol, instead of being a stimulant as was formerly supposed, is in any and all quantities an anesthetic and a narcotic; in other words, exactly what Divine Writ declared it to be thirty centuries ago: a mocker and a deceiver.

Why the Struggle is So Hard

In view of these facts, why is it the drink delusion dies so hard? Simply because it has back of it the supernatural power of Satan himself. Hence it will require in the last analysis the supernatural power of God to eradicate it. Human strength alone may kill the liquor traffic, but it will require something more than that to destroy the liquor evil.

But one thing is absolutely certain: that God is not in partnership with the liquor traffic; and, while it is always uphill work to fight the battles of the Lord, we must be on the right side, whether it is convenient or inconvenient, whether it pays or not; and we should never forget that the man who is right is always on the winning side.

A FEW HINTS FROM A GREAT SURGEON

"Life is getting to be too complicated for the use of narcotics," said Dr. S. P. Kramer, the noted surgeon, in a recent address at the Ricketts Research Laboratory, Cincinnati. "The time was when the farmer could drive to town and get tanked up and his friends would put him in the buggy and the sober horse would carry him home. But you can not do that now with automobiles. We know that most of the automobile accidents are after dinners where alcohol has been served, and that not always in excess."

After describing the effects of alcohol as similar to those of chloroform or ether, except for the fact that it works more slowly, he considered its effect upon efficiency in various fields of endeavor, keepers and soldiers after they have taken liquor.

"But a friend said to me," remarked Dr. Kramer, continuing the same line of argument, "'Doctor, you must know that Mr. Blank, the jury lawyer, is more eloquent in his cups, and that the celebrated actor was more impressive when drinking.'

"Then I asked this man if he would want his chauffeur, his locomotive engineer, his surgeon, to drink. He said he would not. Now the orator and the actor are in vocal pursuits. Alcohol makes them more passionate. But the judge on the bench knows that the lawyer is less capable of keen analysis when in his cups, and the trained dramatic critic will tell you that the drinking actor is not

"A shoemaker by hand could drink and not have an accident, but a shoemaker today that drinks gets hurt by the machine.

"Observing children in a public school a teacher noted that some fell behind, and on inquiry learned that their mothers gave them beer at noon. They were not bad mothers. No, they were good mothers, who mistakenly thought beer strengthened their children.

"There is no stage in the use of alcohol when there is no stimulation. The fact is that the higher centers are off the job. The governor is not acting and the engine runs wild. That is all.

"No one nowadays thinks drunkenness is well. What the public needs in-

THE END OF THE LANE

A POEM FOR MOTHER'S DAY

CHARLES M. SHEPHERD

Hung high on the walls of my memory.
There's a picture that I o'er and o'er see,
The break of a "lane" to a widening road,
Where the world-reaching streams of travel flowed;
The low bent roof of an old-fashioned home,
The porch, where the prairie queen roses roam.

In the open gateway a mother's form,
That never-quenched beacon in ev'ry storm;
The sun through the maples shone on her face,
As she waved good-by, with tenderest grace,
To a shrinking lad on his way to school,
To the hated task, and the irksome rule.

I could not be false to her loving trust;
So away I trudged through the roadway's dust.
What mattered the task, or the tears, or pain,
Ere twilight fell, I should see her again;
And in her dear eyes would meet the reward
For my holding on when the way was hard.

Frances Willard's Mother

Long years have gone since flow'rs so sweet,
Were scattered by love o'er her resting feet;
But still when the burdens are hard to bear,
I see her standing in sunlight there,
And the light that ne'er was on land or sea,
Streams adown through the years to hearten me.

When wrong enranked wheels forth its hosts of sin,
When wrath-timed feet their fateful march begin,
I hear again her blessed voice in prayer,
And know with her "our God is everywhere,"
That for the right, there comes no more defeat,
Nor for the true, one movement of retreat.

The "lane" is the way that's "narrow and straight."
But always leads back where our mothers wait;
And some day after the tasks here are done,
We shall see them again at setting sun,
With the welcome sweet from a loving heart,
Into the land where we never shall part.

What matter the problems in life's hard school?
We can solve them all by the golden rule,
Then out through the twilight our homeward way
Will lead us at last to eternal day;
And her "house without hands," on heaven's plain,
We cannot miss if we follow the "lane."

"FOR THE SAKE OF YOUR SON"

AN INCIDENT IN A PLEDGE SIGNING CAMPAIGN

"For the sake of your son" was the argument that sent conviction to the soul of at least one man of the 10,000 who rose and pledged themselves to the cause of total abstinence in response to the appeal of Secretary of State Bryan at the great Philadelphia meeting, March 15, in the "Billy" Sunday Tabernacle. In telling his story in a letter to Mr. Bryan, published in the April issue of The Commoner, he says:

"I sat with the University of Pennsylvania contingent, within a short distance of the rostrum. Beside me sat two professors representing two of the leading universities of the country. Pledge cards were passed around, and as I had no thought of signing, I passed mine on. I had never been even a moderate drinker, let alone an immoderate one, and therefore felt that there was no necessity for me to sign any pledge. Then again, I felt that it was somewhat undignified—an admission of weakness as it were, to sign any pledge. In the early part of your lecture, as you outlined your subject, I was more convinced than ever that it would be a foolish and unnecessary act for me to sign one of those cards, and later, when a dozen of them were passed to me at one time, I handed them to the man occupying the seat in front of me. I was with you in principle, however, and felt that my presence would indicate, at least, my moral support.

"Suddenly, like the crash of artillery, you hurled the appalling statistics of liquor full at your audience. Two and one-half billions spent annually in the United States on drink and only seven hundred and fifty millions on education! I was astonished, shocked, and I leaned forward from that moment to catch every word.

"You continued to present one astounding comparison after another, in such rapid sequence that the ghastly specter of drink seemed to spread its foul wings over the entire country, like some cursed influence presaging degeneration and degradation, vice and crime. You asked where the drunkards came from, and answered—'From the moderate drinkers, since they could never come from teetotalers.' Then you added—'If you are a moderate drinker, stop for the sake of the example to your son, and to those with whom you come in contact. If you are an immoderate drinker, then stop for your own sake.'

"I had a son at home, a big six-footer, just out of his prep-school. He had been captain of his track team, and had broken the record for the high jump and the broad jump. He had never tasted liquor in his life. You had struck home. 'For his sake,' I said to myself, and I asked the man in front of me to whom I had laughingly handed the dozen cards, if he had one left. He had and he gave it to me. I turned to both of the professors and asked if they would not unite in this great movement, to cut a broad swath of temperance from the Atlantic to the Pacific. They laughed derisively, but that did not affect me.

"'For the sake of your son.' The words were still ringing in my ears. I signed the card, and when you called for those to stand up who would pledge themselves that night, it was my happiness to be one of the first to reach his feet. It was an epoch in my life.

"On my way home to the suburbs where I live, I felt a new happiness suffuse my being, so pure and holy that I seemed to feel years younger, and as light on my feet as a school-boy. It was 11:30 when I reached home.

"All the liquor I had in the house was one bottle of 'cocktails,' which I kept in a little compartment in the sideboard under lock and key. I went straight to this compartment, unlocked it and took out the bottle, and carried it upstairs with me to the room in which my son slept. He had retired, but I woke him up to tell him the wonderful story.

"He saw me with the bottle of 'cocktails' in my hand and said—'Are you ill, father? Are you going to take a cocktail?' I answered—'My son, you see this bottle of cocktails. It is the last drop of liquor that shall ever come into this house, and the last drop of liquor which passed down my throat, and I do not know when that was, was the last drop that shall ever pass down it.' With that, I walked into the bathroom adjoining his bedroom and I said—'Listen, my boy,' and I emptied the bottle into the bathtub.

"He sat bolt upright in bed, and said to me—'Father, that is great! Count me in with you.' The thrill of joy which shot through me as I heard these words will more than compensate me for any loss which I may sustain by reason of this new resolve from now to eternity.

"I was so happy I had to go and wake my wife up and talk to her for an hour, and she was just as happy as I was."

WE WELCOME YOU!

A GREETING TO NEW-COMERS FROM OTHER LANDS

ANNA A. GORDON, President National Woman's Christian Temperance Union

We welcome you to our great Republic! We welcome you to its free public schools; its free libraries and reading rooms; to the free picture galleries and pleasant parks of our great cities; to the vast grain fields and rich farming lands of the golden west, to your new home—east, west, north or south! While you will always love the beautiful flag of your own land, we hope you will also love our red, white and blue flag with its forty-eight shining stars for the forty-eight states of this big Republic, which stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean. This flag floats over our free public schools, which are attended by thousands of boys and girls, who have come to us from other lands.

Perhaps you left your steamer feeling sad and lonely because you were a stranger in a strange land. If so, we hope it will comfort you to know and realize that every member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, a society organized in ten thousand cities, towns and villages of America, is your sincere friend. We hope some kind woman wearing the little white ribbon bow, the badge of our organization, was the first to greet you as you stepped upon our shores. We wish we might take from your heart all its homesick feeling. We hope you will soon find a pleasant home in our country. Among our members there are many women from other lands and we cordially invite you to join us, and to help us increase the prosperity of our country, and make it a safer and a happier nation. We should love to have the boys and girls unite with our temperance society for the children, called the Loyal Temperance Legion.

If you reached the United States through the port of New York, you rejoiced to see, as you entered the harbor, the Goddess of Liberty—the majestic figure of a woman holding aloft a flaming torch to enlighten the world. Yes, this is the land of true personal liberty; for each individual has the liberty to make the most of himself or herself and to become a useful, educated, upright man or woman. Some of the most prominent positions in business and government are filled by the children of parents who were born in other lands. They are the governing power in many of our large cities, and in some of our states. Thousands of Norwegians, Swedes, Germans, Italians, and men and women of other nationalities, now Americans, are enthusiastically aiding in our temperance work. When you have become an American citizen, we hope you will vote against the saloon and against the manufacture and sale of all alcoholic liquors. In many states, women, as well as men, are citizens and can vote.

The International Harvester Company of Chicago, with more than 35,000 employes, publishes in six different languages, such rules for good health as these: "Drink at least six glasses of pure water a day;" "Avoid whisky and other drinks; they weaken both mind and body." Archbishop Ireland says: "The Roman Catholic Church is absolutely and irrevocably opposed to drunkenness and to drunkard making. In vain do we boast of civilization and liberty if we do not labor to exterminate intemperance."

The headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are at Evanston, Illinois, but wherever you may make your home you will receive from those who wear the little white ribbon bow, a warm and true welcome.

Commercial Equilibrium of Des Moines Unshaken

For nearly three months Des Moines, Iowa, has been a dry city. Nearly three months ago by an act of the city council the liquor industry with its rating of nearly two million dollars annually ceased to exist. What has happened to the city in the meantime is a favorite theme with the liquor men who paint in gloomy colors its present condition and its ultimate fate. There is, however, another side to the question of the welfare of Des Moines without saloons, which the Des Moines Capital, after interviewing representative business men of the city, published. The Capital says:

Collections Improving

Des Moines has almost fully recovered from the reaction incident to the closing of the saloons. Commercial Des Moines does not need the saloon as a stimulus to trade. Money that formerly was spent in the saloon now purchases merchandise of a more lasting nature.

Collections are steadily improving, especially among the laboring class.

Empty storerooms, formerly the home of the saloons, are filling up more rapidly than was expected.

People thrown out of work when the saloons were closed are finding employment in other lines. In short, the close association which the saloons were said to have had with the business world appears to have been severed without any ill effects of a lasting nature exhibiting themselves.

The Credit Man's Viewpoint

"Our business is better than it was a year ago," said the credit man of one of the largest furniture stores in Des Moines. "Our collections were never so good. I can name at least a score of families among our customers who were considered poor pay before the saloon was closed that are paying promptly now and have been since the city became dry. People who formerly made weekly payments about once a month now pay us promptly each week. Of course we had a few accounts with persons employed by the saloon interests that fell behind when they were thrown out of employment, but nearly all of these are paying promptly now, indicating that employment in other lines has been found."

Banks Cashing Checks

"People bring their pay checks to the bank to cash who formerly cashed them in the saloon," declared a well known banker. "The fact that many saloons took out of the bank as much as $5,000 on pay days to cash checks with shows the amount of money that weekly came to us through the saloon and which now comes direct. People come to the bank regularly now that perhaps never were inside of a bank half a dozen times in their lives before. The weekly payroll of large employers of labor is steadily increasing. On the whole business in Des Moines is very good and the prospects are better than they have been for months."

Cigarmakers Suffer

Aside from those employed in the local saloons and brewery the business hardest hit by the dry wave was the local cigar manufacturing industry. Des Moines saloons handled almost exclusively local made cigars.

Few People Jobless

It has been pointed out that the number of unemployed in the city is a direct result of the closed bar-rooms. An investigation has shown that there are fewer people out of work at the present time than before the saloon ceased to exist locally. The saloons were closed at a time of year considered dullest in the business field. The blow also fell during a business depression that was general all over the country. And yet Des Moines seems to have retained her commercial equilibrium, if the opinion of local business men can be credited.

The City Finances

The city of Des Moines which lost an annual revenue of $133,000 already has taken steps to meet the deficit. Although it was necessary to issue bonds to the amount of $30,000 it is not at all certain that had the saloon been permitted to remain these bonds would not be necessary. The city is forced to issue bonds from time to time to cover emergencies not included or provided for in the regular budget. The deficit caused by the elimination of the saloon was almost wholly provided for by the municipal economy program.

The Grocer and Butcher

Collections in the staple lines are steadily improving, according to leading grocers and butchers of the city. People are buying—and paying—more liberally than before. Whether the closed saloon is the cause or not may be debated but the fact remains nevertheless.

The Chamberlain hotel since Des Moines went dry, is putting five additional stories on its six stories.

"Our business seems not to have been affected by the closing of the saloons," replied a department store manager. "In fact business has been very good so far this spring and is steadily improving."

Others declare that it is a bit early yet to say definitely what effect the closed saloon will have on Des Moines. Even they appear to be of an optimistic turn of mind when viewing the future.

What John Barleycorn Costs Philadelphia

GOVERNOR BRUMBAUGH HAS STATISTICS PREPARED SHOWING EXPENSE TO CITY

At the request of Governor Brumbaugh and with the sanction of the city authorities, there has been prepared by Dr. Walter Cornell, chief of the division of school medical inspection; Robert Harper of the mayor's office, and Dr. George Woodward, a set of statistics showing the enormous economic waste due to liquor in Philadelphia. The figures, which are rather conservative, are based on the last printed reports of 1913. In describing the methods by which these conclusions were drawn, the North-American says:

"After the estimate had been made of the number of cases in the hospitals, asylums, courts and prisons, due to alcoholism, the per capita cost of caring for each was estimated on the basis of the general appropriation for 1913 and the figures were worked out on this plan.

"In the coroner's office, for instance, it was found that 75 per cent. of the suicides are due to alcohol; that 50 per cent. of the murders are committed by persons under the influence of intoxicants, and that 75 per cent. of deaths supposed to be due to liver troubles are directly traceable to stimulants, while an unestimated number of heart cases are traced to the same cause."

It was estimated that of the amount required by the city for the maintenance of its paupers, at least 60 per cent. is used in caring for the victims of strong drink, and the Philadelphia General hospital spends 35 per cent. of its income on inebriates.

The warden of the Eastern penitentiary supplied figures tending to show that fully 80 per cent. of the money expended in that institution goes for the care of men and women brought there through some violation of the law while under the influence of intoxicants. The same conditions prevailed in the county prison, at an estimated cost to the taxpayer of $178,104 per year. At least eleven per cent., about $18,150, of the appropriation for Philadelphia judges' salaries paid by the state, is used for handling these cases, a further drain upon the taxpayer.

Figures were procured from the heads of two large child-saving institutions, and it was shown that fifty per cent. of the cases of the Children's Aid society were caused by parental alcoholism, and that 68 per cent. of the cases brought to the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, were caused by drunkenness.

In all, it was found that the liquor traffic and its fruits: suicide, murder, homicide, insanity, delinquency, pauperism, and many other social evils, cost the taxpayers of the city of Philadelphia $3,205,569, annually, and this is distinct from the millions spent by various private institutions and individuals in endeavoring to mitigate the miseries following in the wake of King Alcohol.

THE FOLLOWING TABLE SHOWS WHAT ALCOHOL COSTS PHILADELPHIA TAXPAYERS EACH YEAR

	Total Expense	Percentage of Expense Due to Alcohol	Expense Due to Alcohol
Department of public safety, bureau of police	$4,467,283	53	$2,267,660
Department of public safety, bureau of correction	194,013	29	56,264
Department of public health and charity, Home for Indigent	184,697	60	110,818
Department of public health and charity, Philadelphia General Hospital	413,954	35	144,884
Department of public health and charity, Philadelphia Hospital for Insane	393,511	11	43,286
Eastern Penitentiary—Care of Philadelphia prisoners	15,000	80	12,000
Philadelphia county prison	222,630	80	178,104
District attorney's office	72,000	80	57,600
Clerk of the court of quarter session	66,000	80	52,800
Philadelphia county courts	399,600	11	43,956
Salaries of Philadelphia judges (paid by state)	165,000	11	18,150
Coroner	62,790	12	7,535
State asylums, Norristown and Danville	159,200	11	17,512
Indigent and delinquent children through juvenile court	300,000	50	150,000
Indigent children cared for outside of city institutions	90,000	50	45,000
			$3,205,569

Temperance Popular in New York Women's Clubs

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Federation of Women's Clubs of New York City, which the chairmen of all committees had been invited to attend, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, vice-president-at-large of the National W. C. T. U., who for about three years has been chairman of the Temperance committee, suggested a plan of work which met with hearty approval. After Mrs. Boole's talk some of the chairmen who were not white ribboners, evinced a cordial spirit of cooperation by expressing a desire to appoint a member of their respective committees to serve on the Temperance committee, W. C. T. U. women, in turn, to have a place on their committees.

Mrs. Boole's recommendations, in substance, were as follows:

"The work of the Temperance committee is a little different from that of most of the committees in the Federation. The committee itself was appointed at the request of the temperance organizations, the members of which are already devoting their time to this work, and the temperance work is very closely associated with that of many other committees.

"It is impossible to consider the work of the committee on hygiene without noting the effects of alcohol on public health. The actuary of forty-three insurance companies stated not long ago that if Russia kept its prohibition for ten years, it would mean a saving of 500,000 lives.

"You cannot talk child welfare without acknowledging the fact that drink hurts the child, not only by robbing it of physical comforts, but by its effect on the unborn child.

"Rescue work for women is closely connected with the temperance work. The legislature of Wisconsin appointed a committee to consider the source of the social evil and after deliberating for fifteen months they brought in a report that the saloon was primarily the cause.

The department of women in industry cannot overlook the fact that many women are wage-earners because the money that ought to be used for the benefit of the home is spent for liquor.

"So far as legislation is concerned, the W. C. T. U. is deeply interested in many phases of legislative work. It helped in the Widows' Pension bill. Its representatives are often at Albany and many bills demand consideration.

"Prison reform is vital, but drink is responsible for the degeneracy which results in seventy-five per cent. of criminal cases.

"We are opposed to war, but the great war in Europe has demonstrated that it has become as necessary to provide against alcohol in order to promote efficiency as to provide proper food and clothing for the soldiers—and so with other departments.

"Accordingly, I recommend that the chairman of each of these departments be asked to appoint one member of her committee as a member of the Temperance committee whose business it shall be to study the effects of alcohol as the producing cause of the evils against which we are working and also to consider how to remove preventable cause. The committee will be called together once in three months to compare notes and consider methods and plans."

PROHIBITION BILL FOR NEWFOUNDLAND

The premier of Newfoundland has made recent announcement in the colonial legislature at St. Johns that a bill providing for a plebiscite next November on the question of prohibition, to become effective July 1, 1916, will soon be introduced by the government.

—Des Moines Register and Leader.

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE SALOON

MRS. MARGARET B. PLATT, President West Washington W. C. T. U.

With the onward march of prohibition there comes more or less discussion concerning substitutes for the saloon. Many good people feel that having decided to eliminate the saloon it is now the duty of the non-drinking public to provide a substitute therefor. However, the fact should be first recognized that the saloon is in no way a necessity. The establishment of an institution for the promiscuous sale of alcoholic poison to the general public can not be regarded as a necessity but should be classed in the same category as a similar establishment for the sale of opium, cocaine or other poisons. It is always a menace, an injury, an enemy to individual and social life. Again and again supreme courts have in decisions adverse to the liquor dealers arraigned the whole business in the most scathing terms. Regarding it the United States Supreme Court has declared,

"If the public safety or the public morals require the discontinuance of any manufacture or traffic, the hand of the legislature can not be stayed from providing for its discontinuance by any incidental inconvenience which individuals or corporations may suffer."

Vast sums of money are paid over the saloon bar, not for shelter, food or any necessity of life but for alcoholic drinks. It is for the sale of strong drink and the profit derived therefrom that the saloon exists. The impulses of those who make the sale of "liquid damnation" their life work are not such as to impel them to carry on their business for benevolent purposes. Whatever of shelter and comfort is offered by the saloon is an accompaniment as necessary to those who carry on the business as to its patrons, and is provided by force of circumstances, and used as the convenient basis of a plea for existence while the free lunch is but a bait for the expense of which "the house" is fully recompensed by the receipts from gambling and the vice privileges accorded its habitues.

In many sections of our country when the work season of various industries closes, the men thus relieved of employment crowd into the cities and larger towns. If without homes or permanent abiding places, they spend their time mostly in and about the saloons. Here they not only spend their money freely for drink but by means well known to the saloon fraternity are induced to otherwise part with it, and soon they are without means. In this condition they become a burden upon the benevolently inclined tax-paying public, and various makeshifts are employed in order to tide over until another work season those who have wasted in the saloon and its twin, the house of vice, the money which, had it been properly conserved, would have given shelter and food until the return of employment.

One substitute which will logically take the place of the saloon will be the decent, clean, comfortable lodging house, conducted on a large scale at a moderate profit and providing not only sleeping accommodations for men only, but bath privileges and lounging rooms where its patrons may read, write, play games or pass the time, as best suits them, in accord with the rules of the house. Such places are already being established in certain cities from which the saloons are soon to be ousted.

Connected with these places will be restaurants or coffee houses where plain nourishing palatable food will be provided at moderate prices. The money formerly wasted in drink and carousal will now support the saloon's former patrons in decency and comfort during the trying periods of non-employment, and when the working days return these laborers will go back to their toil with physical strength and vitality conserved rather than depleted, and with a sense of self-respect and independence impossible to the man who first wastes his substance and then becomes dependent upon the public for support.

But it is urged that many poor men possessed of families seek the saloon in order to secure the comfort which is impossible in small and crowded rooms devoid of the accessories which make a home restful or attractive, and filled perhaps with crying or wrangling children and where the husband is possibly subjected to the recriminations of an overworked, harrassed and sometimes untidy and unattractive wife.

What counter attraction one thus situated can find in a dirty foul-smelling saloon, reeking with profanity and moral smirch and filled with creatures in all stages of intoxication, is hard to be understood by one who has not been long accustomed to such an atmosphere of physical and moral degradation. To many such the saloon offers merely a temporary escape from the bodily discomfort for which they themselves are usually most largely responsible and for which possibly they feel a degree of remorse which impels them to seek the momentary forgetfulness induced by drink. But the saloon can be in no sense a substitute for the home, however humble that home may be. Remedies for the conditions herein suggested, or an amelioration of such circumstances, must be sought through the use of other means than those offered by the saloon and include a careful study of the causes which induce that degree of poverty which, perforce, compels its victims to shelter themselves in hovels instead of houses, and in pens rather than rooms.

How large a share the saloon has played in creating poverty and consequent discontent among millions of its patrons can only be rightly estimated after the sale of strong drink has been abolished and sufficient time has elapsed to allow its victims by sobriety and industry to demonstrate how much they can do to better their own condition. The whole problem offered by the caption of this article is one demanding our most careful study and will be further considered in a future article.

PRESIDENT OF INDIANA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WOULD DISPOSE OF SALOONS

William J. Hogan, president of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce, states it as his conviction that the time has come to clear the state of its rottenness, which, being interpreted, means to do away with the liquor traffic. In a recent letter to the Indianapolis News, Mr. Hogan says:

"Can any law-abiding citizen read from day to day the accounts of rottenness discovered throughout the state and say that the time for action is not at hand? I think we should congratulate Judge Anderson for the stand he has taken in the Terre Haute case.

"We all know that fully three-fourths of all crime, misery and poverty is traced directly to the influence of the saloon. Employer and employe could better solve their difficulties if it were not for the saloon, because every employer of unskilled labor knows where a great part of Saturday night's payroll goes. Without the saloon, many wives would not have to beg employers for the pay envelope in order to buy food and clothing. The home could be made more cheerful and healthful and sickness prevented, and half-starved and half-clothed children made happy. These and a hundred other good results would follow, and when men's brains were cooled, a great many would begin to think, read and reason. When such a day comes we shall have a better citizenship. But it will never come if we business men sit idly by in our clubs and simply talk. This means sacrifice for many business men, but duty must come first and the time to clean up is now."

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Postoffice Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL,
Evanston, Illinois

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, May 6, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

We are happy to state that the delay of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson in visiting Seattle was less than anticipated. She left Portland, Oregon, on April 28, for Seattle, to spend a few days in conference with our convention hostesses.

MOTHERHOOD ENTHRONED IN LAW

The observance of Mothers' Day this year ought to have in it a note of gratitude for the triumphs, during the past twelve months, of many of the ideals for which the mother-heart of society has labored and fought. It will be admitted, we believe, that the campaigns against the liquor traffic, vice child labor and kindred evils, have in their beginnings been "mothered" by the women for the sole purpose of protecting their children.

When in the seventies a band of Christian women began a crusade against the liquor traffic, their efforts were either ignored or ridiculed by a large part of the world, and even the church was not at all enthusiastic in their support. Today the cause for which they stood is preached from every pulpit, its popularity proclaimed through the press, and its practical value approved by the business and industrial world. Not only has what was once called the fanaticism of these women been justified in the eyes of society, but that for which they toiled has been embodied in the laws of the states. Every victory for a white state has been a triumph for the brave souls who initiated the crusade against the liquor evil.

One class of individuals—the legalized liquor traffic—still opposes incorporating in the laws of our land the principles for which motherhood stands. The mother vote threatens its very existence, and therefore it would defeat woman suffrage. At the present time in every community where the question is an issue, advocates of "personal liberty" are investing large sums of money to prevent its success at the next election. In Illinois they are trying, through their representatives in the legislature, to bring about a repeal of the suffrage law.

Someone has called Mothers' Day the "highest bit of practical sentiment that has ever taken hold of the hearts of men." In the states where woman suffrage is before the people there can be no more practical way for the sons to honor not only their own beloved mothers, but motherhood in general, than by using their influence in support of a measure which will enable the mothers to have an opportunity, at the ballot box, to protect the home.

"MY VOTE WILL MAKE NO DIFFERENCE"

Every election, city, county or state, demonstrates that victories for righteousness must be won by awakening to a sense of responsibility the indifferent citizen. "My vote will make no difference one way or the other," is the excuse too frequently heard by campaign workers. Occasionally there occurs a striking instance of the tremendous importance of the individual vote. An incident of this character took place at the recent April 20 election at Aberdeen, South Dakota. "Had one man of those who did not vote upon the license issue gone to the polls election day and cast his ballot he would have decided for the city whether it was to be wet or dry," says the Aberdeen American. "This illustrates the force which lies back of every ballot deposited by every voter, whether the town's biggest man or the newest naturalized citizen in the block." The vote in Aberdeen was so close that it is now being contested and the results are, of course, uncertain.

Where great moral issues are at stake the citizen who possesses the franchise and fails to exercise it is guilty of criminal negligence. The men who imagined they were too busy with their own affairs or who didn't care, or who for other reasons shirked their civic duty on April 20 at the Aberdeen election are as responsible for the defeat of a measure of incalculable value to their city as are the liquor men.

The secret of success in every campaign for righteousness is, by speech, poster and printed word, to so relate the ballot-box privileges to the personal needs and happiness of the voters that there shall sink deep in their souls the conviction that it is their business as men, as patriots and as Christians, to vote, and vote intelligently and conscientiously, on election day.

How about that prohibition map you intended to order? You will want it on the wall of the next meeting place of your local union. Its presence in the room, showing the eighteen white states and the large per cent. of white territory in addition, will render more effective everything that is said or done on that occasion. Write to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House for it. Price, 15 cents.

IN ACCOUNT WITH JOHN BARLEYCORN

The credit side of the account of a city with John Barleycorn is very widely advertised by the liquorites. They endeavor to make the public believe that there is no debit side and far too few communities take the trouble to investigate and discover what is paid out of their treasuries to offset the license money paid in by the saloons. At the instigation of Governor Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia's account with the liquor traffic has been carefully figured up and given to the public, and what does it show? It shows that John Barleycorn costs the city each year more than $3,000,000; that more than one-half of the expense of the police department of the great city is made necessary by the liquor traffic; that the per cent of expense of other departments of the city government, due to alcohol is suicides, 75 per cent; home for the indigent, 60 per cent; general hospital, 35 per cent; county prison, 80 per cent, district attorney's office, 80 per cent; clerk of the quarter sessions, 80 per cent; juvenile court, 50 per cent.

Such figures certainly reflect upon the common business sense of the men voters of Philadelphia, especially in view of the statement in the report, that "the sum of $3,000,000 is far in excess of the money paid into the treasury for liquor licenses."

A similar problem in civic economy ought to be presented to the voters of every city which still tolerates the liquor traffic. This is work that might well be initiated by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

APPEALING TO THE BEST IN MEN

The incident told on another page of the man who thought it undignified to sign a total abstinence pledge, but when urged by the speaker to do so "for the sake of your son" was persuaded, recalls to mind many similar instances. "For the sake of your son," is an argument few fathers can resist. Phillips Brooks, the noted divine, was wont to say, speaking out of his wide experience as a preacher and pastor, that thousands of people who cannot be reached by an appeal to change their course of life in order to save their own souls, will respond to a call to do it for the sake of their influence over others. This line of approach not only holds out more promise of success than any other, but is the distinctly scientific method. "A man may take chances with himself," says Captain Richmond P. Hobson, "but if he has a spark of nobility in his soul, he will take care how he tampers with a deadly poison that will affect his children."

The incident referred to is worth keeping in mind in the days to come when the whole nation is to engage in a mammoth pledge-signing campaign under the National Abstinence Union. In this enterprise the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union is heartily interested, and whenever the opportunity is offered the local unions to co-operate by circulating pledge cards they will gladly avail themselves of the privilege.

We call attention to the article, "We Welcome You," on page 5, that our friends may know it is issued in leaflet form, not only in English, but in German, Italian, Polish, Swedish, Norwegian and Spanish. These leaflets are attractively printed and illustrated with the American flag, in colors. Price, 25 cents per hundred.

THE BREWER'S PATRIOTISM

The dollar mark is always to be found on the patriotism of the brewer, whether he is a resident of this or some other country.

James Dunbar Whelpley in his article on "Drink and War" in the May Century gives an illustration of this mercenary patriotism. When Lloyd George came out with his war budget of two and half billion dollars and his scheme for raising new revenue which included doubling the income tax, an increased duty on tea and other luxuries and a raising of the tax on beer, not a voice except the brewer's was raised in protest. In fact a labor member of Parliament rose to express his opinion that now was the time to put a tax on wages so that the working people might carry their share of the burden, and his action was endorsed by the labor unions. "But did the brewers give thanks to the government for their share of what was to be done?" asks Mr. Whelpley. "Not a bit of it. They immediately met in solemn conclave and raised the price of beer in the barrel, not only by the amount of the tax, but with an extra charge to cover an estimated loss of business through early closing and through the barring of women from public bars during certain hours of the day, while retailers were authorized to charge an extra half-penny, or one cent, on every half-pint of beer, to cover the loss incurred through raising the wholesale price and shorter business hours. In addition to these measures, vigorous protest was made to the government against the tax."

BREWERS CHARY OF INVESTING MONEY

The Citizens Brewery of Joliet, Illinois, and the Anheuser-Busch Company of St. Louis, tried not long ago to secure a site alongside the Rock Island elevation in Joliet. The railroad refused to sell. The other day, however, it decided that the breweries could have the property, but when approached the brewers said they did not care to buy.

"We don't know what the future of the saloon business will be," the Joliet News says was the way they turned down the offer.

"We don't care to stick any money into more sites while conditions for the continuance of the American saloon are so in doubt. In a few years we may have to give up entirely. We want to keep what money we have."

FOLLOWING THE KING'S EXAMPLE

American Ambassador Walter Hines Page has followed the example of King George, and henceforth no liquor is to be served in his household in London.

A late announcement from Jesus college, Oxford, England, states that following the example of Oriel college, alcoholic beverages will be barred from the institution while the war continues. It is expected that other colleges will do likewise and that the entire university will soon be free from alcoholic drinks.

At the one hundred and forty-third annual banquet of the Society of the Sons of St. George, held in Philadelphia the latter part of April, no liquors were served, owing to the sympathy of the organization with the dry policy which is being urged in England.

PROHIBITION AS AN ANGEL OF DELIVERANCE

"We have all welcomed with profound gratitude," writes Mr. George B. Wilson, secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance, "the example so characteristically and so unselfishly set by our King and Queen, and followed by scores of thousands of our fellow-citizens, and if general abstinence could be induced by suasion alone it would be a glorious moral triumph; but, unfortunately, this is unattainable in the face of the abounding temptations on every hand. The drink appetite, created and fostered by a physical agent, is of so peculiar a nature as to be too often unapproachable through conscience, and Russia has therefore wisely sought the aid of the state to remove the physical temptation. The Angel of Prohibition has come to Russia as a veritable Angel of Deliverance, leading that great nation—to quote the Novoye Vremya's words, 'from the Empire of Drink into the Empire of Light.' Men and women, blinded by interest or habit, may think or speak of her as a stern and forbidding personality, holding—so they say—a pistol to their heads. Let them but clear their vision, and they will see that what she holds out to us at this supreme crisis is no pistol, but a key to open the door through which this nation, following in the footsteps of our great ally, may enter into a new world, wherein, even if it be only for these troublous times, there will be given to millions of our people the foretaste of a better day."

DIVORCE AND ALCOHOLISM

Dr. Ladame of Geneva recently read before the Societe Francaise d'Eugenique an interesting paper on the subject of "Divorce and Alcoholism," reference to which is made in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, in the following words:

"Thirty years ago he had mentioned the parallelism between suicide and divorce, which was noticed also by Bertillon and Durkheim. Ladame believes that there is a cause common to these two phenomena, that is, alcoholic intoxication. In the decrees of divorce given at Geneva between the years 1901 and 1910, it seems that, eliminating uncertain cases, out of 1,812 divorces 672, or 37.3 per cent., were caused by alcoholism or drunkenness. The comparative tables of these cases of divorce show that most frequently it was the husbands who drank and that naturally it was the wives who sought divorce. The parallel between the increase of alcoholism and that of divorce in the first part of the period mentioned is apparent; on the other hand, since a tax has been put on alcohol in Switzerland, the number of divorces has diminished.

WIFE DESERTION DECREASES UNDER PROHIBITION

A pronounced decrease in wife desertion and abuse in Des Moines is noticed since the closing of the saloons, according to Charles M. Young, secretary of the Iowa Humane Society. When he compiled his statistics for a period of three months to be incorporated in a report, he found that of the forty-six cases of wife beating reported to him during the three months, but eleven of the number occurred in March. There were twenty-seven cases of husbands abusing their wives during the month of January. During the month of March but seven husbands deserted their wives, while thirty-six cases were reported in January. The decrease in number of wife desertions and wife beatings is due directly to the inability of the men to obtain liquor, said Secretary Young.

TIME OF PRAYER—NOONTIDE

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents
From shore to shore, somewhere
Our prayers are rising evermore."

THE MOTHER HEART

There's a song in the heart whose sweet echoes will roll,
Forever and aye, in the depths of the soul;
For tho' we may wander and widely may roam,
As needle to polestar the heart turns to home.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home!
Wherever we wander, the heart yearns for home.

Far dearer than rubies, their price far above,
The deep mother heart with its well-spring of love:
No anguish can drain it, neglect cannot dry;
Nor want can consume it; for love cannot die.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home!
O priceless the love that wells up in the home.

The great, glowing sun in the dewdrop is caught,
And home mirrors heaven when with love it is fraught;
And thus as the whole is revealed in the part,
The love of God shines in the dear mother heart.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home!
A foretaste of heaven is the love in our home.

—Ella Gilbert Ives

LEADERS IN PROHIBITION CIRCLES PROMOTED

Mr. Malcolm Smith, husband of Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, president of the Iowa W. C. T. U., passed to the better land on May 2, after a brief illness. Mr. Smith was one of the pioneers in the prohibition movement, and was known and loved the nation over as a fearless, able, eloquent speaker and worker for the cause. Mrs. Smith has the sympathy of the white ribbon sisterhood of the nation in her great sorrow and bereavement.

Hon. Charles Edgar Littlefield, former Congressman from Maine, and one of the most valued friends of prohibition in the "pine tree" state and in the nation, passed to his reward on Sunday, May 2. Mr. Littlefield's wise counsel in matters relating to national legislation will be sorely missed.

Rev. George H. Vibbert, a widely known temperance lecturer, one of the original committee that formed the New England Woman Suffrage society, an intimate friend of William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, passed on April 29. In 1871 he led a temperance crusade in Great Britain and in 1871 he was elected a member of the Massachusetts legislature as a prohibitionist.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday of Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

Prizes for Best Temperance Posters

The department of Christian Citizenship of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union offers a prize of $25 for the best temperance poster designed by a college or university student and a prize of $10 for the second best.

The poster must be 28 by 42 inches in size. The phase of the liquor traffic to be portrayed will be left to the individual student.

All posters and cartoons submitted shall be the property of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. If reproduced, the name of the originator will appear on the poster.

If a state prize is offered, all competing should send posters to the state superintendent of Christian Citizenship, the ones receiving the prizes to be forwarded by her to the National superintendent.

The prizes will be awarded at the National W. C. T. U. convention.

All posters and cartoons submitted must be mailed to my address by September 9, 1915.

$25 FOR BEST CARTOON.

A prize of $25, to be known as the Frances E. Beauchamp Prize, will be awarded for the best cartoon, designed by students in the seventh and eighth grades of the public schools or high schools and grades corresponding to these in the rural schools.

A series of prizes should be offered by local, county, district and state unions, with three or more schools competing: The local or county prize to be $2.50; district $5.00; state $10.

The size of the cartoon should be about 5 by 7 inches; it may vary one inch either way.

The drawings must be in the hands of the judges in local contests, in May or June, and should then be sent immediately to state judges, and by them to Mrs. Emma L. Starrett, National superintendent Christian Citizenship, Central City, Neb.

EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT

PRAYER AWAKENING

REV. MARY E. KUHL, National Superintendent

It is ours to encircle the nation, yea the world, with prayer these days for the overthrow of the rum king and for peace. A little more strengthening of the forces and a tightening of our grip on God, with an unswerving faith and more earnest activities, will bring to the waiting thousands the crowning glory of prohibition with peace and purity and salvation. There needs to come the conscious feeling and sympathy for all suffering ones, then the weight of prayer for their redemption and deliverance.

"The prayer of the righteous availeth much." This promise applies to every Christian, to our National evangelists, to the state superintendents and to the nearly three hundred county and local evangelists enrolled as members of our prayer circle. In addition, the mighty host of white ribboners in the United States, linking with our round-the-world white ribboners their faith and prayer for our great cause and for the world's redemption, will help to bring the happy dawn.

God has honored the faith of his people in bringing about such splendid prohibition victories in European countries and in our own loved land. Now let our united prayer be for the complete consummation of these units into one great battery of power for world prohibition. "Awake, put on thy beautiful garments of salvation" while all things are ripe for the kingdom on earth.

The new life of Christ means more than a theory or a truth to be taught. It means a new, clean, pure life-flow, from the spirit of Christ into the soul which, in turn, prompts every force and energy to be used for humanity's needs and for Christ's glory on earth. Therefore, we urge every evangelist to be busy these golden days, to pray much, get close to God, feed on his promises, unite your thought with the great thought of the Christ, look deeper into his vision, get into line for more effective service, and seek for largeness of heart and clearness of purpose. Then will our Christ come in his glory to claim his own and will disperse the clouds of intemperance, impurity and all evils and cause the smoke of battles to clear away under the glorious shining sun of righteousness.

The official department letter will be sent out the last week of May.

92 E. 11th Ave., Columbus, Ohio

50,000 NEW MEMBERS FOR 1915

Indiana Offers Special Inducements

To encourage increase in membership among the unions of the state, Indiana is offering to the county bringing its membership up to 500 this year, the gift of one-half of the railroad fare of a delegate to the National W. C. T. U. Convention.

The unions are being paired and each pair of members is to gain one new member. The state officers are urging all day celebrations of anniversary days, with a big basket dinner, etc., on such occasions and a whirlwind campaign for new members. The women are being urged to follow up evangelistic campaigns throughout the state to secure as members of the W. C. T. U. these newly interested in Christian ideals.

Contests Accomplish Results in Oklahoma

When the National officers apportioned a certain number of new members to be gained by Oklahoma that the 50,000 goal might be reached in the nation, the state officers in turn apportioned the organized counties a certain per cent increase according to their paid membership, with the request that the county officers apportion the local unions in the same way This plan is working very satisfactorily. Some of the unions have adopted the membership contest plan with good results. With this plan the Central union of Oklahoma City has made a gain so far this year of forty new paid members, and the contest is still on. Tulsa union is a close second. We are using extensively throughout the state the leaflet, "How Can I Win New Members?" We believe Oklahoma will come up with her 300 gain and possibly more.

Franklin County, Ohio, Lined Up for New Recruits

The campaign for new members is on in every county in Ohio. Franklin county, the largest in the state as regards membership, has set for its goal this year the securing of five hundred new members. Mrs. Florence D. Richard, state president, recently spoke in Canal Winchester, Franklin county, at a union service of the Methodist and Brethren churches. She made a most powerful address and notwithstanding the fact that Canal Winchester is a dry town and most of the people are very indifferent on the question of temperance, feeling there is no need for teaching along that line, the meeting proved to be a most enthusiastic one. At the close of the service thirty-one joined the organization, and a most cordial invitation was extended to Mrs. Richard to return at some future date.

W. C. T. U. ACTIVITIES

Pennsylvania's W. C. T. U. colors are certainly flying in these days. The treasurer, Mrs. Marion, writes: "Pennsylvania is wonderfully stirred—members multiplying more rapidly than our ability to care for them."

Mrs. Carrie Lee Carter Stokes, National organizer and lecturer, spent eight days in April in Riverside county, Cal., conducting four W. C. T. U. institutes, lecturing each evening and twice on Sunday. This was followed by the county convention at Hemet where Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard, president of the Southern California W. C. T. U., were the speakers. Much regret was expressed at the removal from the county of the efficient president, Mrs. Allie Simmons Wheeler, who presided over the convention. Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, National W. C. T. U. superintendent of the Sunday School department, was chosen as Mrs. Wheeler's successor.

To raise money to carry on its local work the Pine Bluff (Ark.) W. C. T. U. has on sale several different photo postcards showing the destruction of liquor in Pine Bluff. White ribboners who may be interested in these cards should address Mrs. T. U. Murphy.

The spring institute of the Henry county (Ill.) W. C. T. U. held recently at Galva with Mrs. Etta Root Edwards, vice-president-at-large of the Illinois W. C. T. U., as leader and speaker, was a most successful meeting. Plans for a twenty per cent gain in membership in the unions of the county were discussed and perfected.

On April 8 the Los Angeles (Cal.) W. C. T. U. celebrated a special red letter day, the anniversary of the birthday of its president, Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard, who is also president of the southern California W. C. T. U. It was the regular weekly meeting day and the union surprised the president by taking the program out of her hands and installing her as guest of honor. She was made the recipient of a shower of flowers and gifts. In the evening Mrs. Celia Noll, state corresponding secretary, entertained at a dinner in her honor.

A CAROL FROM FLANDERS

In Flanders on the Christmas morn
The trenchéd foemen lay,
The German and the Briton born—
And it was Christmas Day.

The red sun rose on fields accurst,
The gray fog fled away;
But neither cared to fire the first,
For it was Christmas Day.

They called from each to each across
The hideous disarray
(For terrible had been their loss):
"O, this is Christmas Day!"

Their rifles all they set aside,
One impulse to obey;
'Twas just the men on either side,
Just men—and Christmas Day.

* * * * * * * * * * *

O ye who read this truthful rime
From Flanders, kneel and say:
God speed the time when every day
Shall be as Christmas Day

—Frederick Niven in The Literary Digest.

"A new Commandment I give unto you that ye love one another."

This can be obtained from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill., or at the office of the National Superintendent of Peace and International Arbitration, Winthrop Center, Maine.

Price, per 100, 15 cents.

The Jennings (La.) W. C. T. U., under the direction of Mrs. Kate E. Wilkins, was most successful in a demonstration of W. C. T. U. work given recently in the W. C. T. U. auditorium. A presentation in tableau form of the Crusade and the efforts of the women in securing the scientific temperance instruction law, demonstrations of the work among Soldiers and Sailors, Indians, in Sunday schools and colleges, and an exercise by the children of the L. T. L., with drills and music interwoven, were most enjoyable features of the evening's entertainment.

Mrs. W. H. Barr, state Evangelistic superintendent of the Colorado W. C. T. U., suggests a "glad" Bible reading which could be used at local union meetings to sound a triumphant note. Mrs. Barr gets the idea from the chapter in "Pollyanna," which tells of the child's conversation with a discouraged minister to whom she relates her father's experience in discovering in the Bible 800 rejoicing texts, such as "Be glad in the Lord," "Rejoice greatly," "Shout for joy." Mrs. Barr's idea is to use these texts in combination with our recent victories in this manner, "Rejoice greatly" for our eighteen white states; "I joy and rejoice with you all" that employers want sober workmen; "I rejoice, yea, and I will rejoice" for our laws requiring the teaching of scientific temperance in our schools. The following texts suggested by Mrs. Barr can be used in this manner and every worker will remember others: 1 Thess. 5:16; Phil. 4:4; 1 Peter 1:8; Zech. 9:9; Hab. 3:18; Psalm 100.

A victory for prohibition was gained in Berkeley April 3, when the people passed an ordinance to stop the nuisance popularly known as "saloons on wheels," or wagons from grocers and liquor dealers outside of Berkeley from bringing liquor into its territory. The state established a mile limit around the university many years ago, the city adopted a prohibition charter about eight years ago, and now in keeping with the same sentiment the people have once more chosen to stand for a clean city.

Hoopeston, Ill., has a novel sort of a dry administration. In an effort to make this a real dry town some interesting ordinances have been adopted. One provides that any member of the city council, mayor, superintendent of the water plant, police official, city clerk, city treasurer, or other city officials, who shall when in Hoopeston, drink intoxicants, shall be removed from office.

PLEASE REMEMBER

WHEN YOU SEND US MONEY

That a 25 cent book of stamps contains but 24 cents

That a 50 cent book of stamps contains but 48 cents

That foreign subscriptions are $1.52 not $1.50

That when you send us a personal or cashier's check or a local draft for $1. we receive but 90 cents

That a 15 cent check is worth but 10 cents to us

That no receipt is sent for amounts received for $1 or less.

USE THEM EVERYWHERE!

It would be an admirable plan to have at every large meeting banners giving the names of the eighteen dry states—Maine, Kansas, North Dakota, Georgia, Oklahoma, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, Virginia, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Alabama, Arkansas, Iowa, Idaho—and another one describing them as follows: "The Eighteen States Which Have Outlawed the Liquor Traffic." A placard bearing the words, "National Constitutional Prohibition" should also always be in evidence.

A NEW "LIBERTY BELL"

A second "liberty bell" whose ringing shall proclaim the political liberty of the women of Pennsylvania was cast recently at a foundry in Troy, N. Y., with appropriate ceremonies. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, was one of the speakers, as was also Mrs. Ruschenberger, the donator of the bell and the originator of the idea. The new bell will bear about its base a paraphrase of the inscription found upon the historic "liberty bell" and will remain mute until the Pennsylvania women get the ballot, when it will be rung for the first time.

We record here the name of a comrade and friend who has recently passed to the higher life:

MRS. HARRIETT A. BARRIER, Brockport, N. Y., a charter member of the local union and for thirty-five years Evangelistic superintendent and an active worker along other lines. Mrs. Barrier had passed her eightieth birthday.

IN A SHADOW

Tea Drinker Feared Paralysis.

Steady use of either tea or coffee often produces alarming symptoms, as the poison (caffeine) contained in these beverages acts with more potency in some persons than in others.

"I was never a coffee drinker," writes an Illinois woman, "but a tea drinker. I was very nervous, had frequent spells of sick headache and heart trouble, and was subject at times to severe attacks of bilious colic.

"No end of sleepless nights—would have spells at night when my right side would get numb and tingle like a thousand needles were pricking my flesh. At times I could hardly put my tongue out of my mouth and my right eye and ear were affected.

"The doctors told me to quit using tea, but I thought I could not live without it—that it was my only stay. I had been a tea drinker for twenty-five years; was under the doctor's care for fifteen.

"About six months ago, I finally quit tea and commenced to drink Postum.

"I have never had one spell of sick-headaches since and only one light attack of bilious colic. Have quit having those numb spells at night, sleep well and my heart is getting stronger all the time."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

Holworth Day: Drunkard or Philanthropist

MRS. MARY P. SAYERS, Martin, Mich.

(Continued from last week)

During a series of revival meetings, which occurred shortly after Dick Day's death in November, Holworth Day joined his home church. He was nobly upheld and given a hearty Christian welcome. Scoffers there were in plenty, but Day's faith was strong, and realizing his own deep responsibility, he passed many long, sleepless midnight hours, in which through great travail of soul a plan was thought out whereby he might accomplish that which Dick had so wanted to live to do.

Little by little Day resumed his old business relations, and as he grew stronger both physically and spiritually, liquor lost its once terrible power over him, and on his set, determined face "This one thing I do," was written in language that those who knew him could not misinterpret. Without ostentation, yet persistently and persuasively, he pressed home to his business associates, and all others with whom he came in daily contact, the dangers of the legalized saloon. Few could resist his pleading. The social drinker, the moderate drinker, the indifferent citizen, and even those who were actually opposed to the "no-license" movement, all listened respectfully to the words of the man whose countenance was chastened through suffering. Some heard his exhortations with moist eyes, others stoically, but none made sport of his earnestness. Men who had long buried the thought of personal responsibility in the matter of the liquor question, suddenly felt an awakened conscience that would not be lulled into forgetfulness. Gradually this concentration of purpose told, and ere the grass was green on Dick Day's grave the movement that was to be a living monument to his memory was launched.

Three years later this movement had grown into a recognized issue in the coming fall election. As his circle of influence enlarged, in spite of the fact that he shrank from publicity Day found himself thrust into the leadership of the cause he himself had promoted. His integrity and dogged determination were what had won for him this honor. Though in no way puffed up by popularity, he was yet fearless for the right. Where others grew tired, Day knew no weariness—where others were disheartened, Day admitted no discouragement. He simply set his lips more firmly and went courageously on. His own life he counted as nothing except as he might help those who needed his assistance. He lived only to do Dick's work.

As the rally cry of "no-license" gained in strength the liquor forces grew apprehensive. Their business was losing ground. Day began to be approached from their ranks with offers of wonderful business opportunities and great favoritism, if he would but once more come over to their side and work for their interests; or he need only to drop quietly out of the opposition organization and leave them to win their own victory. Their fear gave Day greater strength for his own labor.

One afternoon, for the first time since Dick's death, Day came face to face with Brugger on the street. Brugger was very cordial and made all manner of inquiries in regard to Day's prosperity; was glad, too, to see him looking so well. At last he led adroitly up to the "no-license" movement, talking as though Day himself were a disinterested party. But Day understood.

"It's sure to kill the business of the whole town," he exclaimed excitedly. "If it ain't stopped pretty—"

"Hold on, Brugger," interrupted Day, "that theory—"

"Oh, I know you're sore on account of the boy—"

"Brugger," broke in Day, and the sadness of his face seemed to penetrate even Brugger's stolid comprehension, "if that were all—that I was a little sore—your business might still prosper! Brugger, the poisonous canker has eaten its way into my soul so deep that nothing but the eradication of every liquor business in the whole universe, could ever heal its open wound. Neither of us are blameless of the ruination of Dick's bright young life, but God knows, I bear you no malice, and the worst I can wish for you is that you will come with us in this battle for the right." Day paused, and reached out his hand. For a moment Brugger stood as one petrified, then, slowly shaking his head without noticing Day's hand, he hurried down the street. Such magnanimity was no doubt beyond his understanding. Yet somehow Day felt that his words were not in vain.

As election time drew near it was evident that the "no-license" issue was to be closely contested. Having an abundance of money the saloon ranks had used it freely; nevertheless, there were men who could not be bought with their ungodly gains.

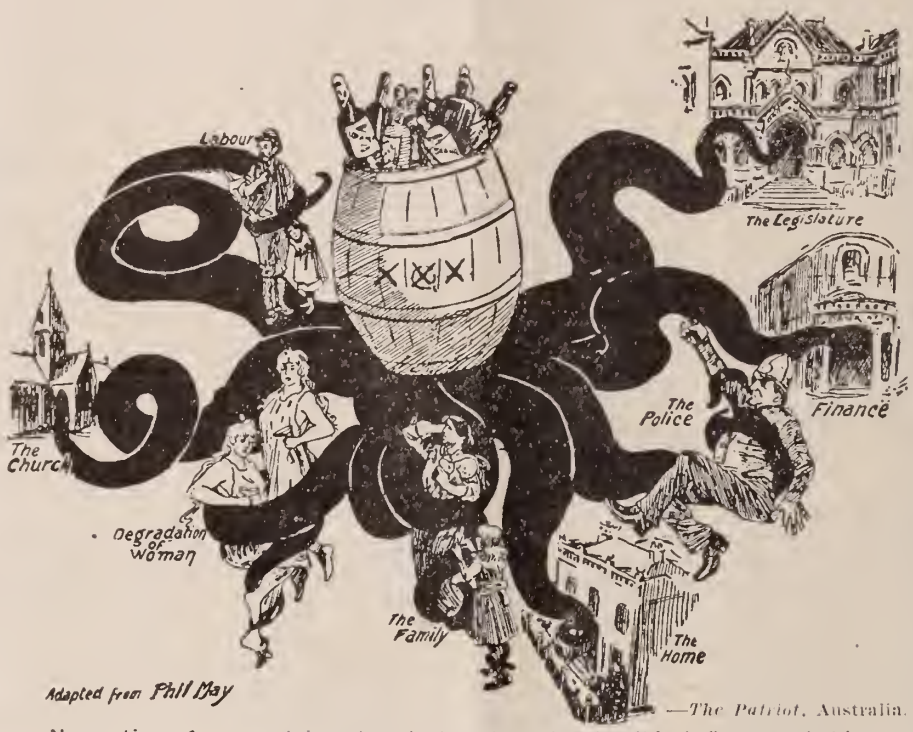
The night before election was to be a rounding up of forces—a summing up of evidence—and the temperance people were depending greatly on the eloquence of a prominent orator whose services they had secured for that occasion. On the night of the meeting when this well-known speaker arose, he looked out upon a sea of faces, for the hall was crowded to its full capacity. A large whisky delegation was massed at the rear of the hall. Day, who had been unavoidably detained, came in a little late. He was offered a seat, but, with a gesture of appreciation, he remained standing. They motioned to him from the platform, but he shook his head. His keen, though unobtrusive eye, noted the make-up of the assembled company of people, and he fully realized the dismay of his fellow workers as he observed the large numbers of determined liquor men in the audience. Well towards the front, however, sat George Ostrom and Brugger, and, strangely enough, their quiet, attentive presence filled Day with a growing sense of elation.

From time to time the eloquence of the speaker drew forth outbursts of applause. He gave statistics in a concise and entertaining manner; he pictured the crime, the misery and the degradation of the whisky curse, yet he did not seem to strike the right note to hold the attention of his hearers. There was a growing unrest in the crowd. Suddenly, as he was about to close, a low hiss came from the rear of the hall. It was joined by another and another until the speaker's voice was drowned in the clamorous confusion that ensued. The spirit of derision had begun to spread like wildfire among the heedless and indifferent, when like an electric shock came from the front of the hall, the cry, "Day! Day!" It was Ostrom's voice. Then this call came again voiced by Brugger—"Day! Day!" Others joined and Day went forward to the platform. For a moment he stood like a mountain encompassed with the angry fury of the elements. Then, with a face glorified with pity for the weakness of mankind, he stretched forth his hand towards the turbulent throng. His magnetic presence swayed the wavering multitude. The tumult ceased, and all eyes were turned expectantly in the direction of the man who had never before spoken in public.

"Friends," he began slowly and with impressive power, as he stepped backward and rested his hand on the speaker's desk, "I want to tell you why I am here tonight, if you will listen to my story. I was born of Christian parents, and later in life had a loving Christian wife, and beautiful children whom I idolized. I was prosperous in business and honored by my associates. There was every reason for me to live a life of happy usefulness. Why, then, did I fail? Because I thought I was strong! It was my constant boast that I could either take drink or let it alone. Friends, I thought

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

THE LIQUOR OCTOPUS



—The Patriot, Australia.

No section of our social system is free from the terrible influence of this "Octopus," the Liquor Traffic

From west to east, from south to north,
We boys and girls are marching forth
To lay the liquor traffic low.
With happy hearts we are afield,
We're boys and girls who never yield,
The liquor traffic now must go!

Chorus:
In Nineteen Twenty comes the day,
Comes the children's happy day;
In Nineteen Hundred Twenty
There'll be prohibition plenty
When Columbia drives the drink away.
—A. A. G.

BILLY'S UNCLE TOM

A. MARIA CRAWFORD, Knoxville, Tenn.

Nobody but Billy and Delia, the housegirl, knew that Billy's good-looking Uncle Tom kept a bottle of whisky on the top shelf of the closet in his room. Billy pondered over the matter for several days before he arrived at any definite plan of action. He would break the bottle and pour the whisky down the sewer! No, such a plan would not be quite honorable. The bottle of whisky was not his property; therefore, he had no right to destroy it.

"Let's smell your breath, Uncle Tom," he said, while they were wrestling together in the library that evening just before dinner.

The smile died out of Uncle Tom's fine grey eyes. "Why, Billy?" he asked suddenly.

"Well, Ben Brabson's Uncle Joe smells like whisky all the time, and last night he got mad at a fellow and cut him with a knife. Ben's mother said it never would have happened if Mr. Joe had been in his right mind. He was—drunk."

"Don't worry about your Uncle Tom, Billy. I never will cut anybody and have to go to jail. Gentlemen don't do such things."

"Mr. Joe used to be a gentleman until he drank. I heard father say so."

Tom Martin laughed. "Let's talk about something pleasant! Can you keep a secret?"

Billy was instantly excited. "Yes, sir," he returned proudly. "I knew what mother bought father for Christmas a whole month before and I never even mentioned it."

"Good! I can trust you. See here! This is for—guess whom, Billy?"

Billy crowded close to his Uncle Tom's knee where he sat before a big log fire and peeped into a purple velvet box, lined with white satin. What he saw there made his eyes shine.

"It's for Miss Margaret. You've got engaged," he cried joyously.

"Sure thing," laughed Uncle Tom. "Think she'll like it?"

"Yes," said Billy, happy over the news that his very best friend was going to marry Uncle Tom.

For several days after that, Billy watched the whisky bottle in Uncle Tom's closet but none of the poisonous stuff had been used and Billy felt grateful for that. Then when the excitement over the engagement had passed and things had settled down to the usual routine, Uncle Tom was sick one day with a bad headache and then, the day afterward, when he had gone to the office, Billy slipped upstairs and found that half of the whisky was gone.

Billy belonged to the L. T. L. and he felt that the time had come when he could no longer remain silent. When Uncle Tom came home from the office that afternoon, Billy followed him to his room.

"My Uncle Tom Doesn't Drink," Said Billy

"Run along and play, Billy, while I get dressed. I am going over to Margaret's to a family dinner tonight. I'll have to boost myself up a little, too," he said more to himself than to Billy, "for I don't feel very well."

"Where has my Uncle Tom gone?" demanded Billy. "He was the best friend I had except mother and father and Miss Margaret."

"What's the joke?" asked his uncle, lifting his dress suit off of a hook in the closet.

"It's no joke," answered Billy suddenly in a very, very serious tone. "It's that!" Billy pointed to the whisky bottle, partly hidden by an old straw hat. "My Uncle Tom doesn't drink."

"See here, young man, you mind your own business and don't go prying around in other fellows' closets. Do you hear?"

"You can get mad at me if you want to," said Billy courageously, "but I wouldn't be doing right if I didn't tell you that drinking whisky is wrong. Miss Margaret wouldn't wear your ring if she knew about you for she is the president of a temperance society."

For one awful minute Billy thought that Uncle Tom was going to slap him. Then the most unbelievable thing happened. Uncle Tom took the bottle down from the shelf, opened the window and threw it over in an empty field. Afterward he sat down on a chair by the bed and laid his head on his arms. "I wasn't playing fair, was I, Billy? I'm just a cheat."

"Never mind, Uncle Tom!" Billy slipped between his knees and put his arms around the young man's neck. "Never mind," he said again. "We'll begin again and not count this."

"If only God will let me begin again and not count this," said Tom Martin reverently.

"Well, He will," whispered Billy comfortingly, "'cause you know God is better than me and I'll forgive you and forget it, too. Mother says that when we slip, God is always right there to help us stand up again."

"She's right," said Uncle Tom, squeezing Billy's hand. "Mother's always right."

And Billy's Uncle Tom never slipped again.

HOLWORTH DAY: DRUNKARD OR PHILANTHROPIST

(Continued from Page Twelve)

I could until I tried! But I could not cope with a legalized saloon on every corner of our down-town business district! And—so—I fell!" Day, with pale face and brilliant eyes, leaned slightly forward. A man from the liquor ranks went quietly out, and the people waited breathlessly for Day's next words.

"Yes, I fell—and my parents went broken-hearted to their long home! My children were disgraced. My wife was committed to the daily companionship of a—sot! Oh, my heart must have been callous indeed not to have realized the misery I had caused. But—I was fast in the clutches of the whisky curse! It took a tragedy to break my thralldom—the tragedy of a young life — wrecked! Through all my coming life I must bear the punishment of knowing that the ruination of my boy's life rests on me, his father. The pathos of his death-bed is dreams." He paused, and looked searchingly through the audience.

"Friends," he resumed, and his body shook with the tremor of a strong emotion, "if my boy had not died in the faith of a Savior's forgiveness—I think I must have gone mad! And in the deep love for humanity born of that forgiveness, he begged me on his dying bed to save the boys and girls of this little city. Don't say, 'It is not my boy—it is not my girl!'" His voice was tense with feeling. "Some of them are your boys—and your girls!

"I wish I could make you understand what a load of guilt fell upon me as I watched my boy wasting away, and listened to his wistful, broken pleading. How he prayed for my repentance. Think of it! the boy whom I had forsaken. Well he knew that nothing but the saving grace of God would do for such as I.

"Many of you were the friends of my old, care-free days; some the associates of my pitiful days of degradation. Knowing what you know now—is there one of stepped down from the platform and put forth his arms entreatingly:

"And that is why I am here tonight—to beg of you to come with us in this battle for manhood and womanhood. We need you. Don't wait. Make no mistake: This is your cause as well as mine. For as God is your judge, as well as mine, you will be called to account for your decision in the great crisis now upon us." He sat down and buried his face in his hands. There was no applause. There had been none throughout his simple story. The chairman dismissed the meeting and people quietly left the hall.

It developed that Ostrom and Brugger had learned of the intended disturbance of the saloon men and had come to the meeting to see fair play. Mr. Day's story had banished the lingering opposition of both men. The news of Day's speech spread throughout the town and at the polls next day men discussed it—and because of its power many voted for "no-license." When the ballots were counted

Prosperity Post Cards in Foreign Languages

What Every Merchant Knows (Spanish)
Prosperity Statistics (German)
Of Interest to Taxpayers (Italian)
Of Interest to Bankers (Swedish)
Of Interest to Wage-Earners (Norwegian)

Price, per dozen, 15 cents;
per hundred, $1.00

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House,
Evanston, Illinois

GROUPS OF BOOKS
FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARIES
at
SPECIAL PRICES

We suggest that these be placed before Anti-Cigaret Sunday, June 20.

Group No. 1, $5.00. Value, $6.50.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. A new book whose key-note is love and service. A book that should find its way into every home, and one that will do much in freeing our country from drink and kindred vices.

A Tyrant in White, Henry Herman. (Anti-Cigaret Story).

A Fight Against Odds, Kate Anderson. (Anti-Cigaret Story).

Nineteen Beautiful Years, Frances E. Willard.

Two (a story), Edith Smith Davis.

John Barleycorn, Jack London. One of the most popular temperance stories.

Toots (short temperance stories), Anna Adams Gordon.

The Cost of a Boy, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.

Group No. 2, $4.00. Value, $5.00.

Little Sir Galahad
A Tyrant in White
A Fight Against Odds
The Cost of a Boy
Toots
Nineteen Beautiful Years

Group No. 3, $3.00. Value, $4.00.

Little Sir Galahad
A Fight Against Odds
The Cost of a Boy
John Barleycorn
A Break in Schedule Time
(Carriage prepaid)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Illinois

THE LITTLE CLUB HOUSE

MRS. CARL BILBY

When any obstacle gets in the way of business, business usually finds a speedy and effective way of combating or removing that obstacle. This is the way the new vice-president of one of the big steel companies, who has a reputation for the successful handling of help, met and overcame the drink habit—one of the most serious obstacles to progress in his institution:

"One of the greatest problems that confronted me in my new position was the fact that our employes of all kinds were losing much time and efficiency on account of intemperance. The saloons had obtained a tremendous hold on our force and it was plain that drastic measures were required. After doing all I could to curtail the rapaciousness of those saloons it occurred to me that there was also work to be done with the men in an individual way. Immediately I put up a sightly little structure that had every appearance of being a cozy and comfortable clubhouse. Not one of my subordinates knew the purpose it was to serve; and it was a mystery to everyone connected with the work until one morning after it had been completed and fully equipped I called in three of the men who were the most notable offenders in the way of intemperance and said to them, 'Boys, you are all good workers when you let drink alone, and I should hate to lose you from the organization; but that is just what is going to happen unless you stop drinking. Now, because I have realized that this is much easier said than done, and that the habit gets a powerful hold on a man who has indulged in it for a good many years I have built this little clubhouse you have been wondering about, and have installed in it a physician who is an expert in administering the most successful treatment for alcoholism of which I can learn. It is a pleasant, comfortable place, and you can go there and take the treatment without any expense and your pay will go right on the same as though you were working, or you can quit right now. As man to man, I think you will see that this is a fair proposition. The choice is up to you. And the same choice is going to be put up to all the employes. I am now having printed a notice to this effect and copies of it will immediately be posted throughout the works.

"Every man in the little group agreed that the proposition was a fair one, and they immediately placed themselves under the treatment of the specialist I had provided. We put a good many of the men through the little clubhouse, as they called it, and practically wiped out our troubles on the score of intemperance; but the whole point of this experience is that it demonstrated the effectiveness of what I call a man to man method; of that attitude on the part of an employer which recognizes every man in his employ as a human being made of the same stuff as himself and responsive to the personal appeal which carries with it the conviction of just consideration and fair play for the individual. This policy cannot be carried out with distinct success, however, unless particular care is taken to respect the individuality of every man, and to impress each employe with the fact that there is no disposition on the part of the management to meddle with his or her private affairs."

BECOME A NURSE

We have trained thousands of women in their own homes to earn $10 to $25 a week as nurses. Send for "How I Became a Nurse"—248 pages with actual experiences. 48 illustrated lesson pages free.

There is a Chautauqua nurse in your vicinity. Ask her about our training. Her address upon request.

The Chautauqua School of Nursing

513 Main St. Fourteenth Year Jamestown N. Y.

THE OLD BLACK BOTTLE

WALT MASON

"But there at the poorhouse the paupers, in sorrow, are sighing and moaning and swatting the flies; no pride in the past and no hope in the morrow, for all are remote from humanity's ties. Yet once they had pride and a wholesome ambition, they looked to the future as bravely as you; what guided their feet to this present condition? Just search for the bottle, and you'll have a clue."—Collier's.

"What made you vote for prohibition?"

"Well," replied Col. Stillwell, "I always had a good deal of artistic feeling. I kind of thought it would help the color scheme out our way to see more women and children with red cheeks and fewer men with red noses."—Washington Star.

GERMAN TEMPERANCE LITERATURE.

The following German pamphlets are issued to help enlist as many as possible of the German-Americans in the fight against the drink habit and the liquor traffic. They appeal to them in their native tongue and on lines which will most easily influence them. Speed the cause of national prohibition by distributing these pamphlets widely.

1. "THE BIBLE AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE." 32 pages, 2d edition, ten thousand now issued. Price 5c each, 25c a doz., $1.59 a hundred, postpaid.
2. "THE GERMANS AND THE DRINK QUESTION." 8 pages, forty thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a dozen, 50c a hundred, postpaid, $4.00 a thousand by express.
3. "CHRISTIANITY AND PROHIBITION." 8 pages, twenty thousand now issued. Same price as No. 2.
4. "THE AIMS AND RESULTS OF PROHIBITION." 12 pages, 3d edition, thirty-five thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a doz., 65c a hundred, postpaid, $5.00 a thousand by express.

Of this last a new revised edition has just left the press. It also embodies the latest statistics and statements concerning prohibition in Kansas by the Governors, Stubbs, Hodges and Capper and by the legislature of the state. Send orders to

J. G. EVERT, BOX B, HILLSBORO, KANS.

All sections look alike when doors are closed

Weis Sectional Music Room Furniture

For FILING Instead of PILING Sheet Music, Disc Records and Player Rolls

These handy sections meet the popular demand of owners of Talking Machines, Player Pianos, etc.

THINK OF THE CONVENIENCE of being able to refer instantly to any piece of sheet music, disc record or player roll without handling any except the one you want.

These cabinets are practical because they are Sectional—Expansible to meet your needs. In them are incorporated the most approved filing methods.

Buy a section at a time—as your Music Library grows.

No. 1680. Disc Record Section files 40-10 in. and 40-12 in. Records in individual, indexed pockets.

PRACTICAL FILES, HANDSOME CABINETS, beautifully finished to harmonize with other furnishings.

Genuine Mahogany or handsomely flaked Quartered Oak in richly polished or dull finishes.

Why not write us for descriptive booklet now, while you think of it?

SEE YOUR DEALER or write direct to

The Weis Manufacturing Company
196 Union Street :: Monroe, Mich.
New York Office - 75 John Street

No. 1646 holds 40 Rolls and about 2000 sheets of Music, 47 in. high.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Gift.

THE KEADMA COMPANY
ROGERS PARK, ILL.

Your Foot Comfort
IS GUARANTEED IN $3
EZ WEAR Shoes

We guarantee to fit your feet perfectly; if we fail or for any reason you are not satisfied, we will refund your money

By Mail Prepaid

Simon's EZ WEAR Shoes

For Men, Women, Children

Scientifically made of soft pliable vici kid on Simon's Special Ezwear last, requiring no breaking in. Have flexible soles, steel arch supports and new, live rubber heels and are cut low to tip; unlined, no linings to wrinkle and hurt the feet, and laced to conform to shape of your foot.

Style, Service and Comfort Guaranteed

Catalog of 495 EZWEAR Shoe Styles and measurement blanks. Write today. It's Free

THE F. SIMON SHOE, 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y.

LANSING WET VS. LANSING DRY

The problem of whether or not it pays a community to outlaw the saloons has been satisfactorily worked out in Lansing, Michigan. In the "Keep Posted" column of Everybody's for May is given the following interesting statement of conditions in that city with and without saloons. By the way, a significant fact noted in the article is that the leader of the opponents of the saloon is R. H. Scott, the general manager of the Reo Motor Car Company.

In the dry-versus-wet campaign in 1910 in Lansing, Mr. Scott fought for morals and economics. Nevertheless the campaign did not please all of Lansing's business men. They thought that a dry town would lose business to wet towns nearby. So, two years later, Lansing went wet again.

This gave everybody a wonderful chance to compare a dry Lansing with the wet Lansing, commercially.

First, as to paying the cost of running the government, it was soon found out that a wet Lansing had to spend a good deal of money supporting wet citizens. One of many proofs was this: The cost of feeding the prisoners in the county jail during the two years while Lansing was dry was $5,600, while during the two ensuing years of wetness the cost of feeding them (at the same rate per person) was $11,300. Quite a difference for a town of 40,000.

Second, as for business itself, scores of merchants were converted to the proposition that the competition of saloons in near-by wet towns would not be half so injurious to them as the competition of saloons on Lansing's own streets. Their experiences may be summarized in the statement of a butcher, who remarked merely that when the town was dry he could collect his back bills, and when it was wet he couldn't.

In the last dry-versus-wet campaign in Lansing, the merchants did not rally to the support of the flowing bowl at all. They turned to the over-flowing pay envelope and the paid-up accounts. The issue discussed was prosperity, and the majority for going to it sober was 1,200.

The efficiency of the factory of the Reo Motor Car Company is at least ten per cent higher dry than wet, according to Mr. Scott.

And a similar result is shown in the cost figures furnished to Everybody's Magazine by Mr. C. E. Bement, general manager of the Novo Engine Company. In a dry Lansing—and for no other reason except dryness and greater sobriety and energy—the cost of making engines in the Novo shops has gone down seventy [illegible] hundreds.—Topeka Capital

PROHIBITION INEVITABLE

Prohibition is inevitable in this country. With practically the whole world conceding that the use of alcohol is a bad handicap to any nation, and that the abolition of its use means a healthy —not an artificial—increase in the efficiency of the average producer, public sentiment in this country is going to wipe out the saloon, just as it has wiped out such nuisances as the polluted public or private water supply, or the manufacture of poisoned foods or embalmed meatstuffs. They were abolished because they were a danger to national safety and efficiency. And the saloon is certain to be abolished in precisely the same way and for precisely the same reason.—Boston (Mass.) Advertiser.

AN UNPROFITABLE BUSINESS

Two young men who have been engaged in business in Chicago for a number of years met recently at the home of a mutual friend, their first meeting since their school days. After a discussion of old times the talk turned to their present occupations. One of the young men said he had always wanted to make literature his profession and that he was now editing a paper. The other man replied that he clung to his boyhood ambition of being a salesman. "I started out with saloon fixtures," he explained, "but business was far from brisk and I changed to another line of goods. I am doing well now, and I consider it very fortunate that I made the change just when I did, for I hear that there has not been a new saloon opened in Chicago in the last two years."

THE ESSENTIALS OF HEALTH

At this season the booze and drug fakers go for their victims with redoubled zeal. They scatter broadcast their manufactured endorsements and blazon the billboards with their steam siren pronouncements that health is to be had by getting a temporary kick from alcohol or some other stimulant. There is money in it, and their victims get the experience. These campaigns of fraud are such an outrage on common sense that only the hired support of unscrupulous newspapers keeps them going. The truth of the matter is stated by the New York Board of Health:

"This is the time of year to avoid excesses of any kind with special care. Overwork and worry sap the vitality and prepare the way for disease. Alcohol is perhaps the most important of all factors in bringing on pneumonia and the other diseases of late life. Chancellor Lloyd George estimates that the abolition of vodka will increase the efficiency of the Russian people from thirty to fifty per cent., and physicians agree that he is right."

—Collier's, May 1, 1915.

AS GOOD IN PEACE AS IN WAR

When the Czar by his third mandate last summer decreed absolute prohibition over his empire, he was quoted as stating that it was forever, that alcohol was not to be let in again after peace had been won back. But Lloyd George seems to think that prohibition for Britain is only a war measure.

The inference is that in time of peace England can afford to waste some of her energies and resources. Let alcohol have its sway then, England can stand it. Prohibition is as great a good in peace as in war, but to English conservatism too drastic. This seems to be the argument. The greatest single curse of civilization is King Alcohol. It slays its ten thousands while war slays its hun-

A Wave of Prohibition
FACTS AND FIGURES
ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN
(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth
by
Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

"There is no truce asked for in this war. It is war to the knife and the knife to the hilt."—Mida's Criterion (a liquor paper)

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

WANTED—Several honest, industrious people to distribute religious literature; $60 a month sure. Nichols Co., Box 14, Naperville, Ill.

UNIONS WISHING TO MAKE MONEY will find very liberal terms offered for selling Vacher-Balm. This is an excellent remedy for colds, sore throat and neuralgic pains, used internally and externally. Send for free samples for distribution, and for terms to

E. W. VACHER, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Ex-Congressman Dietrick of Massachusetts, has announced that he will be a candidate for governor of Massachusetts on a statewide prohibition and woman suffrage platform.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?
A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

AGGRESSIVE WORK FOR OFFICIAL PAPER

State Plans

We shall from time to time print in this column state plans for the increased circulation of our official paper and are sure that all will welcome suggestions or methods that have been carefully and successfully worked out, knowing that an increased circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL means increased efficiency among our workers.

Missouri

Article XII of the by-laws of the Missouri W. C. T. U. provides: Section 1. No woman shall be eligible to serve as a state superintendent unless she is a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Section 2. No woman shall be eligible to election as district president, who is not a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Section 3. No woman shall be eligible to election as president of a local union unless she is a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Section 4. No woman shall be elected as a delegate to the National Convention who is not a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL.

The president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, writes as follows: "We are also giving each county president the privilege of sending the Campaign Edition to two parties in her county at the expense of the state. We are doing everything we can to stimulate the circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL.

Virginia

"We have offered a premium copy of THE SIGNAL to every local union that will have dues paid by July 1 showing an increase in membership of twenty-five per cent, and fourteen unions have already sent in dues," writes Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, president of the Virginia W. C. T. U. "A few of the subscriptions I have sent and am waiting to get the addresses of others to whom they are to go. Then we have offered five free subscriptions to each county showing a twenty-five per cent gain in paid up membership by August 1. This, of course, is not new or original with us, but is copied after the Pennsylvania plan of last year."

Tennessee

"Through letters and through our state paper, we constantly urge our women to take THE UNION SIGNAL," writes Mrs. Silena M. Holman, president of the Tennessee W. C. T. U. "This year we are trying to get our unions to hold triple contests with a credit of ten points for each new member, three points for attendance at meetings and seven points for payment of dues. Next year we hope to add to these contests the securing of subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL, with a credit of ten points for each yearly subscription."

POPULAR POSTERS

18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

Boys and Girls

are deprived of High School Education by the saloons

The following figures refer to the State of Massachusetts in 1910:

Total population of all No-license Cities and Towns....	1,497,722
Total number of High School Pupils in all No-license Cities and Towns.....	34,633
Number of Pupils in High Schools of No-License places, for each 1,000 population..	23.12
Total population of all License Cities and Towns.....	1,883,924
Total number of High School Pupils in all License Cities and Towns	31,707
Number of Pupils in High Schools of License places, for each 1,000 population..	16.83
Greater number of Pupils in No-license places, for each 1,000 population	6.29

Difference in favor of No-license, 37 per cent.

Keep the boys and girls in school by keeping out the saloon.

In these days of increasing competition, your boy or girl will need the advantage that a High School training gives.

—The Massachusetts No-License League.

In Prohibition Kansas

When Kansas adopted Prohibition in 1880 her population was 996,000, and there were 724 prisoners in the penitentiary.

In 1913 the population had increased nearly 100 per cent and the number of convicts had increased only 3 per cent.

Kansas has 14 counties in which no jury has been called in ten years to try a criminal case.

In 1913, twenty-eight out of the 105 counties of the state had no paupers in their almshouses.

The poor farms of 49 counties have been turned into experiment stations under the control of the State Agricultural College and are now called PROSPERITY FARMS.

In 1913, eighty-seven counties did not send an insane patient to the asylum.

The assessed valuation of the state is $2,750,000,000, or $1,750 per capita, which exceeds all other states.

The bank deposits have increased from $100,000,000 to more than $200,000,000 in ten years.

In 1880, under license, the tax rate was 5.5 mills on the dollar; in 1914 it had been reduced to 1.2 mills.

Kansas has decreased its state debt faster than any other state.

Thirty-three years of Prohibition has reduced illiteracy to 2 per cent, the lowest in the United States.

"PROHIBITION IS THE BEST BUSINESS ASSET OF KANSAS"

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House

EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

"The education of the public by means of literature ready for distribution broadcast, as well as a steady fire kept up in the press, even if space has to be paid for, should be a part of our work."

—Mida's Criterion (liquor paper)

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., MAY 13, 1915 | No. 20

W. C. T. U. FLOAT IN CIVIC PARADE AT COLUMBUS, GEORGIA.

Christ, the King, commanding, every weapon
burnished bright;
Peaceful war we're waging; "Comrades, help us win the fight;"
Christian votes must conquer in this battle for the right,
Under the Star Spangled Banner.

—Antoinette Arnold Hawley

SPECIAL ARTICLES IN THIS ISSUE

One Hundred Saloons Close in Chicago — A Chapter of Legislative History — A New Study in Economics — Minnesota's Whitening Map — Prophetic Words of Chicago Saloonkeeper — Work of the Young People's Branch.

ONE HUNDRED SALOONS CLOSE IN CHICAGO

LIQUOR DEALERS DECLARE THE SITUATION SERIOUS

On May 1, one hundred saloons are said to have gone out of business. The combined causes for the failure of the liquor dealers to continue are poor trade, high rents, big expense for free lunch, and the fact that Chicago may go dry inside of five years. Most of the places which closed were operated by breweries, that is, the licenses were owned by breweries.

In explaining one of the chief reasons for the discontinuance, a brewery agent said to a Chicago Tribune reporter:

"The saloon business in Chicago is getting worse. The sales of our brewery —one of the largest in the city—are twenty-five per cent. less for the first four months of this year as compared with the first four months of last year.

"Times are hard, and that is one reason for the falling off in the consumption of beer. Another factor is the anti-saloon feeling that is sweeping over the country. The handwriting is on the wall, and it wouldn't surprise me if Chicago went dry before many years.

"The saloon situation in Chicago is serious—more so than most saloonkeepers will admit. I can count on the fingers of one hand the saloons in the loop district that are making any money. Most of them are lucky if they break even."

A CHAPTER OF LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

DESPERATE LIQUORITES IN ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE SLAUGHTER ALL MEASURES RELATING TO LIQUOR

It is generally conceded that the sole hope the liquorites have of prolonging their existence is to make some pretensions to decency and at least to feign to meet the demands of the respectable element of society. Wherever they have persisted in utterly ignoring demands for law enforcement, stricter regulation, etc., public sentiment against them has been aroused, and the hour of their defeat has been hastened.

The so-called liberal element in the Illinois legislature, in desperation over the result of recent elections in the state and the general decrease in their business, failures of breweries, closing of saloons, etc., with reckless disregard of public opinion last week voted down every dry bill presented in the legislature, and by so doing undoubtedly antagonized the voters of the state and shortened the period of their activity.

The story of the wholesale slaughter, in one day, of a half dozen meritorious bills by these liquor-controlled solons of the state of Illinois might not of itself be worth recording, did it not throw light upon the political methods of "the trade" in every law-making body in the land.

The lines on the liquor question in the Illinois legislature are very closely drawn. This was illustrated most strikingly at the beginning of the present session when an effort was made to elect a speaker. Only after a deadlock of six long weeks (at great expense to the tax-paying public) was a speaker finally chosen. The highhanded insolence of the liquor men in attempting to control the situation called forth from one of Chicago's leading newspapers, the Chicago Tribune, the following well-merited rebuke:

"Rum, the Gentle Despot"

"The wets are in the legislature to prevent legislation against liquor. The drys are as intensely interested as the wets and not much more compromising, if any more; but there is this difference. The drys merely want a square deal. The wets want no deal at all. Rum wants a legislature so sewed up in advance that no local option bill, no anti-liquor bill of any description, whether it be to prevent a beer wagon from driving into a churchyard or a bill to prevent school children from frequenting bar rooms, shall be considered in committee, referred to either house, or voted upon in any manner. The drys merely ask that a liquor bill shall be treated as any other important bill; that it shall have its hearings in committee, reach the calendar, be called up and debated, and receive a vote. If it gets this treatment and is defeated the drys have no complaint to make. They do not ask that their opponents be gagged and deprived of their votes. Rum is a gentle despot. It desires merely that the legislature be made incapable of taking any action of any sort whatsoever, and then it will be entirely satisfied, good natured and amiable. If the wets could have their way the constitution would prohibit any discussion of the liquor question in the legislature."

Possibly the action of the liquor element on May 5 was what might have been expected in view of its attitude as explained by the Tribune. Six measures relating to the liquor traffic having passed the third reading in the house came up for consideration and vote. They were the residence district bill, search and seizure bill, anti-treating bill, bill creating a five-mile zone around Lake Bluff Naval Training station, bill imposing a penitentiary sentence for violations of the Sunday closing law, bill making third offense for bootlegging a penitentiary offense.

These measures were ably presented and eloquently argued by Representative George B. Wilson and his confreres of the temperance forces. The response of the leader of the liberal element was pitifully weak. It consisted of a stereotyped speech, varied slightly to suit the different bills, to the effect that the measure before the house was the most vicious in character ever presented to that body, that it was a menace to personal liberty, and home rule—the two threadbare shibboleths of "the trade." The commercial stamp upon every one of the so-called arguments of the liberals was in striking contrast to the broad-minded, human interest pleas of the temperance leaders, in their appeals for protection of society, the home, and the youth of their communities. Especially impressive was the presentation by members from a large number of the districts of bulky petitions signed by over 50,000 children of the Sunday schools of the state, praying the members to protect them by voting for all the dry measures.

Five-Mile Dry Zone Bill

The bill which called forth the most spirited discussion on both sides was the one providing for a five-mile dry zone around the Lake Bluff Naval Training station. In explaining this measure and recommending it to the members of the house, Mr. Shurtleff, former speaker of the house, presented and read an interesting and forceful communication from Secretary of the Navy Daniels to the commandant of the Naval school, urging the passage of the bill. Among other things Secretary Daniels said:

"I take this opportunity to reiterate my belief that the enactment of a law extending the present limited zone to the five mile area is for the best interests of the 1,200 young men under your command, and to request you to state to the senate committee that the department earnestly advocates the passage of a bill framed with that object in view."

There was also presented the testimony of Commandant W. A. Moffett, of the training school, giving experiences with the young men under his charge, which demonstrated the great need of a zone of protection for the more than 1,000 young men at the school. He stated that the saloons in the vicinity of the school were of the vilest kind and that assaults of the most outrageous nature had been perpetrated by hangers-on of these places. Captain Moffett said: "It is pitiful the number of letters I receive from parents in all parts of the central west states concerning their sons who are apprentices at the naval station, asking me to look after their boys, and it has been frequently my duty to write these parents telling them I have been obliged to discharge their boys for drunkenness. We desire a five-mile dry zone, so that the atmosphere of drink will not pervade our training school. The fate of the nation may some day depend upon the fitness of these lads. The unsteady hand of a drinker, who formed the habit here, may misdirect a shot that should win a battle."

No Longer an Academic Proposition

Representative Wilson of the temperance forces characterized the situation well when he declared that the liquor question in the legislature at the present time is no longer an academic proposition but a proposition affecting those who are in the drink business. He called attention to the fact that not many years ago men of standing in the legislative body were often heard to ably defend liquor legislation on academic grounds, but that now men of that class were strangely silent and left the discussion to the men whose pocket-books are directly affected.

Among the measures under discussion were two that had to do solely with a better enforcement of the law in prohibition territory and afforded an opportunity to the liquor members to prove to the public the truth of what they so frequently assert—that they are desirous of conducting their business in a lawful and respectable manner and deprecate all law violation.

Needless to say they argued as earnestly against a law enforcement measure as an invasion of personal liberty, as if they were actively identified with the "bootlegging" and "blind pig" business!

"There are few states that will tolerate control of legislation by special interests very long," remarked the Chicago Tribune in commenting on the situation, "and we are quite sure Illinois is not one of them and that the liquor business is not one for which an exception will be made."

A careful study of the apparent defeat of last week leads one to believe that it may presage a period of unprecedented victories for prohibition in Illinois and in Chicago. Even the people who are not enthusiastically in favor of the anti-liquor movement resent being dictated to by liquor politicians and are seriously considering throwing their influence with the forces that are engaged in a campaign forever to abolish the saloon from the state of Frances Willard and Abraham Lincoln.

A NEW STUDY IN ECONOMICS

SECRETARY OF STATE PRESENTS STARTLING STATISTICS TO NEW YORK AUDIENCE

"THE AMOUNT SPENT FOR LIQUOR EACH EAR WOULD FURNISH THE CAPITAL AND RPLUS FOR MORE THAN 19,000 BANKS, ND LEAVE A BALANCE OF $400,000,000," as the startling statement with which ecretary of State William J. Bryan elecified an audience that filled Carnegie all, New York, on the occasion of the cent meeting under the auspices of e National Abstainers' Union.

Mr. Bryan presented four sets of stastics, which showed how the amount money spent for alcoholic beverages ompares with the sums spent on varius industries.

iquor Bill Fifty Per Cent More Than Corn Crop

"According to the statistics compiled y the department of commerce," Mr. ryan said, "the value of three of the reat agricultural crops of December 1 st was as follows: Cotton, $520,000,000; heat, $878,000,000; corn, $1,700,000,000. onsider the land employed in the raisng of cotton, the amount of labor reuired and the number of persons intersted and then remember that we spend or liquor each year more than four coton crops. Survey the broad wheat fields f our land, estimate the number of perons engaged in the production of this taple of life, and then remember that e spend almost three wheat crops a ear for intoxicating liquors. The corn rop is the largest single source of ealth; it yields more than the wheat nd cotton crops combined, and yet we nnually spend for liquor fifty per cent. ore than the value of the entire corn rop.

Liquor Bill and Wages

"Statistics show that 268,000 manufacturing establishments in this country employ over 6,500,000 wage earners, and that these wage earners add $8,500,000,000 to the value of the material used in industries in which they are employed. It gives some idea of the amount spent for liquor to know that during the year we spend for drink more than one-fourth as much as these 6,500,000 wage earners produce. Would not national prosperity be largely increased if the amount spent for drink was expended for food and clothing and homes?

Liquor Bill and Good Roads

"As we are all interested in good roads, I have made a computation to ascertain how far the amount spent for liquor would go toward the building of good roads in the United States. I find that the average cost of a macadam road sixteen feet wide and seven inches thick is about $6,500 per mile. This is the estimate furnished by the office of public roads in the department of agriculture; but to be sure that we are liberal in our estimate, let us put it at $8,333 per mile —or three miles for $25,000. This enables us to make our computation in round numbers. If $25,000 will build three miles of macadam road, then $2,500,000,000 will build 300,000 miles. If we count the distance from ocean to ocean at 3,000 miles, the annual amount spent for drink would build 100 macadam highways across the continent; and these, counting the width of the country north and south at 1,200 miles, would give us a highway every twelve miles.

"In other words, the amount now spent annually for drink would in two years, duplicate all the banks of the country, state and national, furnish them with capital and surplus equal to that which they now have, and leave a billion dollars for other investments.

"Is it not worth while to give some attention to the liquor question? Imagine, if you can, the effect upon the home life of the country if the amount invested in drink were invested in bank stock, and what do you think would be the effect upon business if the capital and surplus of the banks were doubled in two years?"

Highway Every Twelve Miles

"If in the second year we build 300,000 miles of highways running north and south we could in two years have the United States gridironed with macadamized roads twelve miles apart, so that every citizen would be within six miles of a good road, which would put him into communication with every other part of the United States. In less than eight years' time every mile of public road in the United States could be macadamized with the amount spent for alcoholic liquors. The amount now expended in paving the road to perdition would, if spent for good roads, soon lift the mud embargo from the entire country. Calculate, if you will, the change that would follow the investment of the nation's drink money in paved highways, the increase in comfort to the farmer and his family, the increased attractiveness of country life, and the commercial value of these good roads to the towns and cities of the land.

Liquor Bill and Railway Employes' Earnings

"Now, let us proceed to the third comparison: According to the statistics furnished by the interstate commerce commission the railroads pay out each year to their employes $1,373,422,472—or only a little more than one-half the amount expended for alcoholic liquor. Take a railroad map of the United States, trace the lines east and west, north and south, and the diagonal lines, and then estimate the number of men required to operate them—the engineers who keep faithful vigil while the passengers sleep; the conductors who, ever alert, direct the trains; the men who, at the switch, on the road and in the stations, are required for the traffic, passenger and freight. This great army receives for this work, indispensable to the nation's prosperity, but a little more than one-half of the amount that is paid for the drink which unfits men for any responsible position.

Liquor Bill and Capital Invested in Railroads

"The railroads of the country are capitalized at $20,247,301,257, of which $8,680,759,704 represents capital stock, and $11,566,541,553 represents bonded indebtedness. A considerable portion of this capitalization is water, and does not represent actual value; the commission is now at work collecting information as to the physical value of these roads, and we shall know in a few years what it would cost to reproduce them, but taking them at their book value, it would only require eight years to duplicate these railroads if the annual amount spent for liquor was devoted to railroad building. Does not this comparison give you some idea of the importance of the liquor question to the nation?

Liquor Bill and Capital of 19,000 Banks

"As New York is the financial center of the country and is destined to be the clearing house of the world, you may be more interested in the fourth comparison: The statistics compiled by the treasury department show that there are 7,581 national banks in the United States with a capital stock of $1,065,951,505, and a surplus of $726,935,755—or a total capital and surplus of a little less than $1,800,000,000. Is it not appalling to think that the amount spent for drink each year would duplicate all the national banks in the country, supply them with their present capital and surplus, and then leave a balance of $700,000,000 to be invested in other ways?

"There are in the United States 19,240 banks, other than national—that is, state and private banks—having a total capitalization of $1,073,881,738, and a total surplus of $991,147,876; or a total of capital and surplus of a little less than $2,100,000,000. The amount spent for liquor each year would furnish the capital and surplus for these more than nineteen thousand banks, and leave a balance of $400,000,000.

"In some of the belligerent countries it has been found that loyalty to Bacchus, Gambrinus and Barleycorn is greater than loyalty to King, Kaiser or Czar."

"The aeroplane that drops its bombs above and the submarine that shoots from below are less to be feared than the schooner that crosses the bar."

PROPHETIC WORDS OF CHICAGO SALOONKEEPER

"Yes, I'm getting out of the saloon business after twenty years of it," remarked Barney Grogan, a well known Chicago liquor dealer to a reporter for the Chicago American the other day. "There's no profit in it. Why stand the abuse and lose money at the same time? Not one saloonkeeper in one hundred in Chicago is making money. If the saloonkeepers of Chicago had to pay their debts tomorrow they'd be broke."

Referring to the prohibition wave Mr. Grogan said:

"If they voted the 'wet-dry' question in Chicago some Sunday morning the whole city would go dry. It's the men and women who are wet personally who will finally decide the issue. They are flopping about and will try it as an experiment. Maybe they will go back—maybe not. They don't know exactly where they are at—especially the morning after pay day. But the prohibition wave is getting bigger every day."

NEBRASKA ORGANIZATIONS FORM PROHIBITION FEDERATION

Special Correspondence

In the "red room" of the Y. M. C. A. in Lincoln, Neb., there assembled in conference April 28 a group of men and women called together by a joint appeal sent out by the representatives of two of the largest organizations having for their sole and definite purpose the prohibition of the liquor traffic—the Anti-Saloon League, H. F. Carson, superintendent, and the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mamie M. Claflin, president. Because of the universal desire that the dry forces of the state present a solid front to the enemy in the approaching prohibition campaign the appeal asked that two representatives from the following Nebraska organizations be appointed to attend the meeting: The Presbyterian church temperance committee; Methodist Temperance Society; State Sunday School Association; Young Men's Christian Association; Gideons; Intercollegiate Prohibition Association; Christian Endeavor; Epworth League; Anti-Saloon League; and Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

There was a very representative response. Men and women were present from Omaha, Tecumseh, Pawnee City, Crete, Osceola and Lincoln. Charles Strader called the meeting together and was elected chairman, and Mrs. Frances B. Heald was chosen secretary.

A discussion of the conditions that prevail in the state led up to a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five who should be empowered to appoint a federation committee composed of one hundred persons prominent in business, civic, social and moral organizations of the state. This committee will be named in the near future and will be asked to call a delegated convention some time in September, the place to be designated by the committee.

On motion a committee was appointed consisting of Hon. A. G. Wolfenbarger, ex-Chief Justice Reese, ex-Attorney-General Grant Martin, H. H. Wilson and Elmer E. Thomas, to prepare a draft of the petition to be submitted to the voters of the state.

On motion, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was placed in charge of the petition work, with all other organizations co-operating.

There was manifested a fine spirit of harmony and hopefulness and a number of men and women who are in closest touch with conditions in the field declare that the prospects are bright for complete victory in 1916.

Minnesota's Whitening Map

Five Counties Outlaw Liquor Traffic

Minnesota prohibition forces have lost no time in taking advantage of the county unit bill passed at the recent session of the legislature, and as a result five counties have already voted out their saloons, Lyon and Kanabec, at an election on April 26, and Lac Qui Parle, Chisago and Isanti one week later. Beginning on May 17, for six consecutive Mondays other county option elections will be held which will decide the fate of saloons in all except the southeastern part of the state. In addition to the recent gains Minnesota has eight entirely dry counties, four dry by the terms of Indian treaties and four by piecemeal local option elections

FOUNDRY WORKERS DRINK MILK INSTEAD OF BEER

The Baker Stove Company of Belleville, Ill., not long ago issued an order that its 400 employes no longer will be permitted to drink intoxicants while at work. In an effort to increase the efficiency of the men and decrease the number of accidents, the foundry managers are encouraging the men to drink milk in place of beer, and are providing ice with which to cool the milk.

The managers of the sixteen other foundries in Belleville are said to be watching the experiment and may issue similar orders concerning drinking to their workmen.

"We are not posing as prohibitionists," said George Baker, superintendent of the Baker Stove Company, "but we believe we can increase the efficiency of our men and reduce the number of accidents in the shop if the men are not allowed to drink when at work.

"Statistics gathered by the Illinois Manufacturers' Association and the American Foundrymen's Association show that liquor and good work in foundries are enemies. Under the new Illinois Workmen's Compensation act the employer is liable for all accidents that occur in his plant and we wish to reduce the number of accidents in our place to a minimum."

Charles L. Huston, vice-president of a large steel company at Coatesville, Pa., has stated the decrease in accidents in his mills was fifty-four per cent. in six months, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He attributed the reduction in the number of accidents to the removal of the saloons from the town. Wallace H. Rowe, president of the Pittsburg Steel Company, in a letter to the license judges of Westmoreland county, Pa., said, "We have experienced a growing inefficiency in the service of our men in the mills resulting in accidents and death, largely attributed to the heavy use of beer and whisky." He said that eighty-five per cent. of the accidents in his mills were due directly or indirectly to liquor.

In an effort to find something to take the place of beer for the men during working hours, William H. Barr, president of the National Founders' Association of Buffalo, N. Y., had a large ice box built and finally persuaded his men to buy milk and keep it in the ice box until ready for consumption.

It was after studying the reports of these men high in the foundry world that the Baker plant at Belleville decided to prohibit beer drinking in their plant. "Our men never drank to excess," said Superintendent Baker, "but the fact that they did drink increased the danger of accidents. I called them together one day and explained the whole situation to them. I told them it would be a move for safety first, and they finally saw the thing the way I did. Now there is no objection to the rule at all. Some of the men bring milk with them and keep it on ice, while others buy milk during the day, instead of beer."

CITY COUNCIL MAKES DANVILLE (ILL.) DRY

Although Danville (Ill.) voted for the retention of saloons at the recent election to determine the policy of the city toward the liquor traffic, the city council at a special meeting refused to renew the seventy-three saloon licenses which expired April 30, thus making Danville dry for the next twelve months. It is claimed that the temperance people, fearing the result of the election, used extreme care in the selection of aldermen who favored prohibition, and that the liquor interests in their eagerness to defeat prohibition at the polls gave little heed to the aldermanic election. The liquor men threaten mandamus proceedings against the city, and the question of the right of the council to refuse to issue saloon licenses under the circumstances may be tested in the courts.

RUM IN THE BRITISH ARMY

Sir Victor Horsley Condemns Serving Liquor to Soldiers

An interesting discussion has been going on in the British Medical Journal. Sir Victor Horsley, condemning the custom of serving rum to men on duty in the trenches, asserted that alcohol, even in small quantities, caused a loss of heat, a fall of body temperature, and a dulling of the special senses, and not only was of no assistance to the soldier in resisting the effects of fatigue, strain, exposure to cold and weather, but actually decreased his effectiveness. Horsley reviews the history of rum in the British army from the time of Marlborough to the present day and sums up the scientific evidence against it, as well as the history of its use in armies in India, Egypt, the Crimea, our American Civil War, and in South Africa. He affirms that alcohol is not a safeguard to health, but is on the contrary a positive detriment. He states that the army authorities have contracted for a supply of 500,000 gallons of rum and urges substitution of warm and nourishing drinks such as hot soup, milk, coffee, chocolate, etc., in place of rum, "seeing that warm nourishment enables a man to shoot better and encourages him to go forward, whereas rum makes him shoot badly and inclines him to sit still or even go back."

The statement on the part of Horsley's critics that a small ration of rum does not impair the effectiveness of the soldier, he replied to by reference to experiments made by the Swedish army authorities who discovered that one-half the British rum ration caused a deterioration of fifty per cent. in accuracy of rifle shooting, and to the practical experience which has led the British naval officers to take their squadrons out of harbor for at least twenty-four hours before target practice and gun trials, in order to secure the highest possible scores.

The Journal of the American Medical Association, commenting on this discussion, is of the opinion that Sir Victor Horsley's presentation of the case contains demonstrable facts that will require something more than personal attacks and general statements of denial to refute.

—Adapted from De Mar, in Philadelphia Record

HOW ABOUT IT, UNCLE SAM?

PRESIDENT OF W. C. T. U. OPENS ALASKA'S PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN

SPEAKS TO LARGE AUDIENCES EN ROUTE TO TERRITORIAL CONVENTION AT SKAGWAY

MRS. LUCY SPAETH, Corresponding Secretary Alaska W. C. T. U.

Great enthusiasm has been aroused in a number of the cities of Alaska by the visits of Mrs. Cornelia T. Hatcher, president of the Alaska W. C. T. U., on her way to the territorial convention at Skagway. Mrs. Hatcher arrived in Ketchikan, April 16, and the day was devoted to making plans for the coming campaign. From there she went to Metlakahtla. Mr. C. D. Jones, the government teacher at that place, was very eager to have her make them a visit and came over for her with a boat. That evening she addressed about seventy-five natives through an interpreter; afterwards speaking to them directly. About fifty of them signed the total abstinence pledge and twenty-five women expressed their willingness to be organized into a union, but it was decided that it might be wise to wait a short time before doing this. Literature was ordered sent to Mrs. Jones, who will give them instruction, and the organization will probably be effected after the fishing season. Literature was also sent to Mrs. Marsden, the wife of a native Presbyterian minister, who it is expected will be president of the new union.

On Sunday evening in Ketchikan, Mrs. Hatcher spoke to a full house and only those who know the indifferent not to say antagonistic spirit on the subject of temperance of most of the people in the place, can realize what this fine attendance meant to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The collection was nearly $18. Monday afternoon, Mrs. Hatcher addressed the Draper (Mothers') club and in the evening gave her illustrated lecture, "The Temperance Movement in Picture, Story and Song," to probably the largest audience ever gathered in Alaska to hear a temperance lecture. There were assembled approximately 250 people and one hears nothing but praise for Mrs. Hatcher.

On the following day there was held an all-day institute, luncheon being served in the Methodist church. At the close of the profitable meeting fifty-eight Young Campaigners were enrolled. That evening Mrs. Hatcher addressed the ladies of the Civic Club and during her stay spoke to the high school students. Wednesday she left for Wrangell. She will stop in Ketchikan after the convention at Skagway, May 13-14.

Altogether the white ribboners are feeling greatly enthused at the interest shown and because, since the passage of the prohibition bill by the legislature, there is a definite end toward which to work.

SCOTTISH CITIES FAVOR ABSTINENCE AND PROHIBITION

The great wave of temperance reform which is passing over Europe is proving of interest to the citizens of Scotland and the possibility of the prohibition of intoxicants during the period of the war, is greeted with satisfaction. Following a large public meeting in Glasgow in the interests of prohibition, circulars were sent out to leaders of industry, commerce and agriculture all over the country asking their opinion. With only four negative replies, fully a thousand favored prohibition. Similar meetings have been held in Rotheskay and many other Scottish towns, asking for prohibition or, if that seemed too drastic, for a substantial reduction in the sale of intoxicants. At these meetings prominent citizens have announced that they would follow the example of King George in abolishing liquor from their households during the war. The attitude of the workers in shipyards and engineering shops is of special interest. The city of Inverness has taken a plebiscite on this question, resulting in 8,647 votes for prohibition and only 629 against. In view of the fact that distilling is one of the chief industries of Inverness, these figures are significant.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

"It is glorious to man a Lifeboat, but better to build a Lighthouse"

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER, National General Secretary Young People's Branch, Evanston, Ill.

KEEP A QUICK STEP ALL THE YEAR

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER

The month of April has come and gone and we are now awaiting the "returns." Already many "Birthday Post Cards," telling of the splendid efforts put forth by as many loyal members of the branch have reached my desk—all giving evidence of the onward march of our young people. At the conference of state Y. P. B. secretaries in Atlanta last fall the only question which arose in regard to a special campaign and membership month was this: "Will it be apt to confine all efforts to that one month, dampen the enthusiasm for the months that follow and thwart the efforts of the preceding months?" This question was discussed pro and con and April, by a majority vote, was again declared the Y. P. B. campaign month, because all concerned had sufficient confidence in the rank and file of the Young People's Branch to believe that their enthusiasm for our cause was too great to be limited and that they could be trusted to make an extraordinary effort during April without detriment to the other months of the year.

Surely the splendid reinforcement of our ranks and the work done in the name of National Constitutional Prohibition during the past thirty days will prove a mighty impetus to press on and on even during the heated term. Let me urge here and now that if any Branch contemplates a vacation during the summer months (I say "vacation," as, of course, none will want to disband) that it be not a complete cessation from effort but merely a change of plan. Instead of working collectively as during the winter, work individually. In other words, secure the pledge of members that they will adopt a definite plan of activity for themselves during vacation days and carry it out; that wherever they go they will carry the gospel of temperance, seek to interest others in our organization, distribute literature and aim to further equip themselves by reading and studying the latest findings concerning alcohol and tobacco and the world-wide advance toward prohibition. This would enable every Branch to have a real harvest home gathering in the fall where each member could report the results of his or her individual summer campaign. Let us work while we play and play while we work for the next few months. I give you again the words of our National W. C. T. U. president in her recent "Call to Fearless and Faithful Service": "Talk, sing, pray, toil, shout and play for total abstinence and prohibition"—and what a glorious summer it will be! The liquor traffic will not rest and neither should we. One young man while on a boat trip last year secured the signature to our pledge of a number of young men who promised to join the Y. P. B. when they returned home. Surely that outing held a double blessing for them.

There are many phases of the campaign against John Barleycorn, but none more interesting than the college phase. The associated press wires throb almost daily with the news of some new action taken by 'varsity students, many of whom we are glad to note are not passively but actively and aggressively interested in prohibition. If, as Capt. Richmond P. Hobson asserts, "To the colleges we must look for our leaders in our great war against the Great Destroyer," we know now that there are those who will not be found wanting. Read the college news on this month's pages and you will hear the tramp, tramp of our great student body in the "March to the White House." As members of the Young People's Branch helping to amalgamate the forces of young people everywhere for the last great stand against John Barleycorn, let us "keep up" in the march even though it must be a quick step much of the way. April is past but the future is all before us. Let us use it to the edification of ourselves, the hastening of National Constitutional Prohibition and the glory of God.

LARGE COLLEGE VOTE AT BELOIT

It was the statement of the Beloit (Wis.) college students who were interested in the recent dry campaign that a greater number of college students, in proportion to the number in the city, voted at the April 6 election than at any previous one. Forty-eight college students voted. About thirty students eligible to vote were out of the city on the Glee club and baseball trips and so were unavailable for the temperance forces.

The liquor faction sprang a surprise during the election by allowing all college students to vote without a challenge.

It was the contention of those in favor of the saloon that they would poll as great a vote from the college students as the dry forces would.

This was denied by the college men who were interested in getting a full college vote at the polls.

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE PLANS DRY REUNION

Dartmouth men will join the prohibition movement and hold dry class reunions in the future, if the plans made at the reunion of the class of 1912, held recently, meet with favor from the other classes at Hanover. The plans came as the result of a letter from Conrad E. Snow, Dartmouth, '12, who is now a Rhodes scholar, studying at Oxford, England. In his letter he spoke of the prohibition movement recently started by King George in England, and suggested that the class of 1912 innovate a prohibition class reunion at Dartmouth, which will set an example for both the graduates and undergraduates of the college.

The fifty members of the class of 1912 who were present at the reunion voted to adopt the suggestion and put the prohibition idea up to the other classes. It is expected that the first dry class reunion under the new scheme will take place at Hanover in the near future.

SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM FOR MAY

World Evening

Song—"Throw Out the Life-Line," page 63, "Y. P. B. Chorus Book."

Roll Call—Scripture texts, relating to "Missions."

The Story of the World's W. C. T. U.

The Life, Needs and Work of our Foreign Brothers and Sisters.
(Send to Miss Mary F. W. Anderson, 541 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, assistant World's secretary, for helps and ask any local person well informed on these points, to speak.)

Song—"White Ribbon Rally Song," page 61, "Y. P. B. Chorus Book."

Why We Should Contribute to a Y. P. B. Missionary Fund. (Based on the W. C. T. U. leaflet, "Why? How? When?")

Song—No. 46 in "Chorus Book" as arranged.

STUDENTS DESIRE DRY CITY

The wet and dry question has spread to the students of the Aberdeen (S. D.) Normal. President Johnson, in a recent talk to the male students of the school, announced they were entitled to a vote if they declared Aberdeen their residence, and many registered.

Another indication of the interest the students are taking in the question is the announcement of a debate to be held in the near future, the subject to be, "Resolved, That the city of Aberdeen would be further benefited by going dry."

ANOTHER WAY TO SECURE MEMBERS

"The Jericho Plan"

Another way to increase membershi is the "Jericho plan." A list is made o the young people it is desired to inter est. Give one name privately to seve Y. P. B. members. On Monday the firs of these will speak to the prospectiv member regarding the Y. P. B., on Tues day the second will talk of our work— and so on through the week. Each ask the person to join the Branch, and show how by so doing he can help to forwar the cause. If he does not accept th first invitation to membership, he ma the seventh.

Another good way to secure member is to entertain, in succession, the youn people's societies of the local churche preparing a special program for the var ous occasions. Those present should b invited to join the Y. P. B. and the s ciety entertained should be asked to a point a temperance secretary (if it h none), and to subscribe for the Campaig Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL, the secr tary to give regularly to her socie the latest news of the campaign. Appe to the society to take a definite stand the fight.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

HEED THE CALL!

YOUNG PEOPLE IN CAMPAIGNS FOR PROHIBITION AND LAW ENFORCEMENT

MRS. LINNIE CARL, Y. P. B. Western Field Secretary

The words, "Victory! Victory! Yes, it will surely come!" as sung by Mrs Graham at the National W. C. T. U. conventions, ring in my ears. When first that song was heard, in the eyes of even the most stalwart white ribboners, National Prohibition doubtless seemed a dim, hazy vision of the future. Now it is almost a reality. That seed so faithfully and prayerfully sown is reaping a bountiful harvest!

By the time this letter reaches you, April, our Y. P. B. month, will have become a part of history. We, as a Young People's Branch, should feel proud that we have been honored by having set aside an especial month in which all temperance "folks" are asked to push Y. P. B. plans. Dear Mrs. Frances J. Barnes through many years toiled in faith and now she has the privilege of seeing many young gleaners in the field.

North Dakota Experiences

North Dakota, one of our oldest prohibition states, has not had easy sailing by any means, but by the perseverance, prayers and "push" of the faithful few, it has proven to its sister states what prohibition can accomplish even though a state is continually hounded on all sides by wet territory. In North Dakota one notices a higher mark of intelligence on the countenance of the average youth. A few have their drink, but the open temptation is gone, never to return.

At Towner the wide awake union was in a membership contest. It had introduced quite a novel feature—that of having two of its honorary members act as captains. The plan was proving a success, and it was gaining members thick and fast. The principal of the high school, together with the basket ball team, had gone in a body to sign the total abstinence pledge and become honorary members of the W. C. T. U.

The Y. P. B. of seventy-six members at the State University last fall got up a petition asking the faculty to teach scientific temperance. As a result this is being done this year at the "U." and next year the subject will be given a regular place in the university curriculum.

At Bowden, a small country town, the union, although only a few months old, had organized the young people into a Y. P. B., which is forging right ahead, and has twice as many members as the W. Of its own volition the Branch had prepared special music for an evening meeting at which I was one of the speakers, and all wearing their little white ribbon bows, came in a body and occupied front seats, and afterwards gathered around me to talk over Y. P. B. plans.

At Jamestown, the home of our beloved National W. C. T. U. recording secretary, we organized a Y. P. B. At every place I visited in North Dakota I was most graciously received, and succeeded in organizing five Y. P. B's and securing leaders for four more points. At public schools, high schools, colleges and normals I was given a cordial welcome, and found the young people willing and anxious to receive the help given by our workers.

Montana Needs Statewide Prohibition

People of Montana are now beginning to speak favorably of statewide prohibition. With its snow-capped peaks, its wooded hills and fertile valleys; its clear sparkling streams, soft water, and sunny skies the state affords many attractions for the young nature lover. But many of its boys, instead of being free to appreciate the beauties and opportunities of this "gem" state, are being wrecked mind, body and soul by evil environments and associates. Little towns unincorporated, with no police protection, yet have saloons which do a thriving business. They are the rendezvous and social club-house for the men and boys of the community. Many a young fellow goes into one of them to spend a social evening with the "boys," making his brag that "no one could hire him to take a drink," but after spending his evenings in that atmosphere, it is only a few months, or even weeks, until he is brought reeling home. The little children, too, early become accustomed to its influence, the saloon-keepers buying from them old bottles picked up in the streets and alleys. They also find ready sale for their daily papers in and around the saloon.

Mrs. Linnie Carl

But Montana is awakening, victory is already knocking at her doors, and her women are now citizens. Many a Christian man has told me that the hope of prohibition lies in the women's vote, and verily I believe it. Their influence is already being felt in politics in Montana. They have recently demonstrated in their city elections that they are anxious to assert their opinions. This influence is being felt among the girls, who are eagerly looking forward to the time when they, too, shall voice their sentiments at the polls. The young people, our great sentiment makers, are rallying to the call of service. Wherever I have had the opportunity of meeting with them, a Y. P. B. or campaign club has been the result.

The Y. P. B. at Drummond, organized a few weeks ago, is up and doing. It arranged for my evening meeting, took charge of the devotions, and furnished special music. After the service we discussed plans and received new members. The next evening a crowd of the Y. P. B's came six miles to my meeting at Hall, and they do not forget to wear their little white ribbon emblem.

The president of the Montana W. C. T. U., a courageous woman, is eager to push the Y. P. B., and with so much to accomplish, we are expecting the young people to be a great factor in the campaign.

Much remains to be done, and in order that we may be equal to the great task that is before us, let us "put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

The numberless daily press items and the thousands of people in our ranks who are constantly proclaiming the gospel of temperance truth to the multitude are bearing fruit, and bearing it fast. This great tidal wave will soon have reached such a height as to sweep the liquor traffic and all its attendant evils into oblivion, where they will be but wrecks on the sands of time.

One night a few months ago, while speeding along on the train, all at once we felt a terrific jolt. Looking out of my window I saw freight cars upturned, and splintered and apples scattered over the tracks. In a moment we were told there had been a wreck. No passengers were seriously injured, but when the engine left the track the engineer was thrown underneath. The fireman lived but a few hours, but before he died he told the men that when they saw the wreck was inevitable, the engineer had said, "I will save the lives of these people, if this train has to go over my dead bleeding body to do it." That man, by staying at his post, saved the lives of his passengers. Although having a wife and children he gave his life as a ransom for many. When they removed his mangled body, which was torn to atoms, they found his hand, although severed from the body, still tightly clasping the throttle. He had died, a hero at his post. Shall we not each stand like heroes at our posts, and save from death or a life that is worse than death, the souls of our young people?

"Let us never lose sight of the fact that God is in the forefront of every holy conflict, leading the host against the citadels of wrong. The call comes to us to-day, with renewed emphasis, that WE GO FORWARD."

The fiftieth anniversary of the National Temperance Society will be celebrated Sunday, May 16, by meetings in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and a number of other cities. Rev. Duncan C. Milner, vice-president, will preside at the Chicago meeting, and addresses will be made by Bishop Fallows, Rev. Cleland B. McAffee, D. D., and Rev. Dr. William C. Covert. Bishop John H. Vincent will conduct the devotional services.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, May 13, 1915

Peace, a Tribute to Motherhood

The hallowed calm of "Mothers' Day" has this year been so sadly disturbed by the world's most cruel war, that its primary idea of each honoring by grateful tribute and loving deed, his own mother, has widened to a profound sympathy for the mothers of all the world.

Thousands of wounded and dying boys on the blood-stained battlefields of Europe are pitifully moaning for "mother." In many countries can be heard the grief-stricken cries of countless young "war-mothers" in their pain and desolation. Remembering that war tramples upon the holiest ideals of home and of womanhood, and that women are the greatest sufferers from its revolting ravages, let us demand and help bring a "Mothers' Day" radiant with international peace—nay—crowned with international justice for the mothers of the race.

Anna A. Gordon

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

OUR NATIONAL TREASURER

We are glad to report that Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson is steadily improving in health under the treatment received at one of the prominent hospitals in Portland, Oregon. The physicians give her every encouragement to hope for an early and complete recovery.

STATISTICS AS A TONIC

An article plentifully sprinkled with statistics does not attract the average reader. And it must be admitted that figures and financial calculations as a rule are a trifle tiresome and tend to promote drowsiness. Some, however, are very far from being of the nature of a sedative and indeed are most decidedly tonic in their effect. If taken at night by one possessed of a sensitive conscience they are almost sure to keep him awake in an effort to decide what his own personal responsibility may be in the matter. Of such a character were the statistics given by Mr. Bryan in his speech in New York, reported on page 3. They are almost certain to startle the sluggish thinker and self-satisfied citizen into a realization of the extent of the liquor evil and its effect upon society. Their use for this purpose is perfectly legitimate and is recommended by Dr. Wells Andrews in the Chicago Daily News as one of the most effective ways to arrest the attention of indifferent people. His scheme for getting the best tonic effects from statistics is worth thoughtful consideration. He suggests careful specialized treatment for each class of individuals, as for instance, that the lumber men of Michigan be told how many thousands of drinking farmers of the state could afford to shingle their homes and barns or build new ones if they would give up liquor and put the money into lumber; that the shoe manufacturers of Massachusetts be informed that prohibition would be the means of putting shoes on hundreds of children's feet made bare by drink; that the iron men of Pennsylvania have their attention called to the fact that new stoves will be needed in 100,000 homes when the saloonkeeper ceases to get the money, and that the miners be apprised that they will have to work all winter to get coal enough to fill those stoves; that the wool growers of Ohio be made to realize that when we have National Prohibition thousands of people in this country can sleep under woolen blankets when the blizzards rage He suggests that we tell the cattle raisers of the west and the stockyards men of Chicago that there will be beef on countless tables where now are only a few cold potatoes after the waste from liquor drinking is stopped; the grocer that he can sell for cash and say goodby to bad debts when the dimes no longer go into the saloon till, and the farmer that in the happy day when "with votes a plenty in 1920 a saloonless nation we shall be," there is going to be an unheard of demand for flour and meal, butter, cheese and eggs.

The prescription of the Chicago doctor appeals to us as an excellent one. Try the effect of this statistical treatment and watch how it tones up the consciences and intellects of your fellow citizens.

SIDELIGHTS ON LIQUOR POLITICIANS' PATRIOTISM

The test of true patriotism is the extent to which a man is willing to sacrifice personal comfort and profit for the sake of his country. Judged by this rule, the patriotism of the liquor men on many occasions, scarcely measures up to the standard. For instance, very recently in the Illinois legislature, there was under consideration a measure providing for a five-mile dry zone around a naval training school where over 1,000 young men are stationed. An appeal for the passage of the bill was made by its advocates not only for the sake of the young men but in behalf of the country which these prospective soldiers are being trained to defend. "The fate of the nation may some day depend upon the fitness of these lads," pleaded the commandant in urging the measure, and to the same effect and tenor was the appeal of Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

What was the response of the liquor politicians to this prayer? To all intents and purposes it was that their country could take care of itself; what they were looking after was the business of selling alcoholic liquors, and a little matter of keeping the future defenders of their country fit and efficient was not worth considering in comparison with the loss of the patronage by these same young men of the saloons in the five-mile zone proposed to be made dry.

There may be a question as to the necessity of more dreadnoughts and battleships for the protection of our nation from invasion of foreign powers. There can be no difference of opinion as to the danger to which we subject ourselves by harboring within our boundaries an institution which poisons the very wells of patriotism by its commercial and self-seeking spirit.

HOW DOES YOUR ACCOUNT STAND?

An interesting problem in historical mathematics was recently presented to an audience by a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church. In an address dealing with the debt this generation owes to the past, he urged that every member of his congregation in the quiet of his own home make out an itemized account with society. On one side of the page should be listed all he owed to the world: the wealth of learning, scientific investigation, invention, Christian civilization, to which he has fallen heir by virtue of being born in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifteen. Then when wearied with the futile attempt to enumerate the inexhaustible store of riches bequeathed to him by past ages he should turn to the opposite side of the account and note what he has given in return. The bishop prophesied that whoever conscientiously and intelligently attempted to balance this one-sided account would be self-convicted of bankruptcy in his relation to society.

The exercise might be a profitable one for every young man or young woman who at times has a feeling that the world owes him a life of prosperity and happiness and that if he fails to receive these things he has been defrauded of his just rights. Contemplation of such a subject cannot fail to awaken in him a desire immediately to invest his talents in some enterprise which will, to a degree at least, liquidate his obligation to the world.

In no way could he more effectively and directly accomplish this than by throwing himself, heart and soul, into a campaign against the giant evil of the present age—the liquor evil—and help to emancipate his state and nation from slavery to John Barleycorn.

NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION PLANS FOR JUNE

Many influential organizations hold their conventions in June. At meetings of this character occurring in your vicinity, urge the passage of a resolution in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition. Also make use of the opportunity to distribute literature giving arguments in favor of a Federal Constitutional Amendment.

At the institutes and county conventions that will be held during the month of June, plan for an address and a discussion on the subject of National Constitutional Prohibition, and urge the wider circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL.

Get your local papers to publish brief arguments in favor of nationwide prohibition, by Senators, Members of Congress, Governors and other prominent people.

Bring to the attention of the citizens in your community the necessity of electing to Congress and to your state legislature men who are outspoken for National Constitutional Prohibition.

Interest students in high schools and colleges to use as the theme of their graduating essays or orations, "National Constitutional Prohibition."

Send to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill., for the new Prohibition Map (price 15 cents each; two for 25 cents) to display at all public meetings as proof of the progress toward nationwide prohibition.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT MAY PASS PROHIBITION MEASURE

The Petit Parisien says it has been informed that the French government will introduce a bill prohibiting absolutely the manufacture, sale and transportation of all alcoholic drinks during the progress of the war. Even beverages containing a slight proportion of alcohol, it is understood, will be prohibited.

KANSAS W. C. T. U. TO RECEIVE BEQUEST UNDER WISNER WILL

The Kansas supreme court has declared valid the will of Dr. Henry Wisner, the late wealthy Barber county land owner, under the provisions of which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Kansas will receive property valued at from $20,000 to $40,000. It is stipulated that the bequest to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is "for the purpose of carrying on a fight against the liquor traffic." Experiences in his own family are said to have made Dr. Wisner a strong opponent of the liquor traffic.

20,000 MEN AT PATERSON, N. J., AT "BILLY" SUNDAY MEETING PLEDGE THEIR WORD TO FIGHT RUM

"How many of you men will stand with me and say, 'If I ever get the chance I'll cast my vote against the saloon and do all in my power otherwise to spell its death warrant?'" was the challenge offered the men of Paterson, N. J., who gathered, May 2, to hear "Billy" Sunday, the noted evangelist, preach his famous "Booze" sermon. The response morning and evening was immediate and enthusiastic and it is estimated that at least 20,000 men gave their promise to "show God He can count on me in the fight against his greatest enemy," to use the words of the evangelist.

"I am told the people of Paterson pour $3,000,000 every year into the whisky hole," he cried. "What a terrible waste when you think of it. Quit giving your money to the saloonkeeper, men, and spend that three millions on the things that will make you and your families happier and more comfortable, and your homes brighter. Don't be a 'rube' and give your money to the fellow who's your worst enemy."

GREAT BRITAIN DROPS TAX ON LIQUOR

Reports from London indicate that all new taxes on beer and spirits have been withdrawn; the government proposing to substitute in place of the taxing proposition complete prohibition of the sale of spirits less than three years old. Comment on the above action is unnecessary; it speaks for itself.

AMONG THE STATES

Arkansas

Ft. Smith, Ark., now the only wet spot between Monett, Mo., and Dallas, Tex., will be without saloons after August 1, in accordance with a decision of Judge Paul Little of the circuit court. The dry forces had appealed from the action of the county court in granting saloon licenses, and Judge Little ruled that the saloonists' petition did not bear signatures of a majority of the white adults as required by the Going Law. As the statewide prohibition law which goes into effect January 1, forbids the granting of any further saloon licenses after the date of its passage there is no chance that the saloons will be re-opened.

Indiana

Attica (Ind.) voted dry by a majority of 144. The women were active in the work at the polls.

Texas

A resolution asking the attorney general of Texas to rule on the legislature's right to enact equal suffrage by statute has been introduced in the state legislature.

Florida

The Davis package bill prohibiting the sale of liquor in other than sealed packages in a licensed barroom, thus cutting off the sale of beer and other liquors by the glass, has passed both houses of the Florida legislature. The measure also prohibits the sale of beer or other liquors in clubs and hotels except under the same regulations as those governing saloons.

Michigan

April 30 was the last day for the three hundred and forty-two saloons of the ten Michigan counties which voted dry at the April 6 election. More than half of the area of the state is now without open saloons, but the population of the wet area exceeds that of the dry section by more than 1,000,000 because two of the most populous counties, Wayne and Kent, still have saloons.

TIME OF PRAYER—NOONTIDE

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents
From shore to shore, somewhere
Our prayers are rising evermore."

PEACE

What was the first prophetic word that rang
When down the starry sky the angels sang,
That night they came as envoys of the Birth—
What Word but peace, "Peace and good will on earth?"

And what was the last word the Master said
That parting night when they broke brother-bread,
That night he knew men would not let him live—
Oh, what but "peace I leave" and "peace I give?"

And yet behold; near twice a thousand years
And still the battle-wrath, the grief, the tears.
Let mercy speed the hour when swords shall cease,
And men cry back to God, "There shall be peace!"
—Edward Markham in Nautilus.

MAYOR OF FRANKLIN, PA., THREATENS "PERSONAL LIBERTY" OF CITY EMPLOYES

City employes of Franklin, Pa., who spend their money for liquor will be dropped from the pay roll as a result of a warning by Mayor F. W. Brown. The edict against the use of rum applies to all departments of the city administration, according to the Philadelphia North American.

"We do not intend that the money paid out by the city shall be spent for liquor when so many persons have a hard time earning enough to obtain bread," the mayor is reported to have said. "And off will come the head of any city employe who pursues this course. Now please don't misunderstand me. I am not turning prohibitionist. I simply wish to guard against the spending of the city's money for liquor, when it ought to be used for bread and other necessities of life."

PERSONAL MENTION

Among the recent callers at National Headquarters were Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, National superintendent of the department of Peace, her secretary, Miss Alice Clough, and Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh, National W. C. T. U. organizer. Mrs. Bailey and Miss Clough were returning to their Maine home after spending the winter in California, and Mrs. Unruh was on her way to Pennsylvania to speak in the suffrage campaign.

ONE VOTE DELAYS PROHIBITION FOR HALIFAX

By the narrow margin of one vote, that of the speaker cast to decide a tie, prohibition in the city of Halifax was defeated recently in the House of Assembly. The province of Nova Scotia, with the exception of Halifax, is under provincial prohibition.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday of Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

DEAR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS:

The date of the next quarterly temperance lesson of the uniform lesson series is June 20. As this is the second Temperance Sunday of the year, it is, by appointment, Anti-Cigaret Sunday or Anti-Tobacco Sunday, as we are wont to call it, as we are working against all forms of tobacco. The temperance lesson is a prayer for the tempted and is the one hundred and forty-first Psalm. The golden text is the ninth verse of the Psalm, "Keep me from the snare which they have laid for me."

This lesson furnishes an opportunity for a practical talk on "The Body God's Temple, how Defiled?" The temptations which come through the "door" of the temple and through the "eye-gate" and the "ear-gate" may be listed.

We should begin at once to plan for special anti-cigaret and anti-tobacco work for June 20. We should aid the Sunday schools in this work by furnishing them sample helps, such as a program for the Sunday school hour, anti-cigaret exercises, songs, recitations, blackboard exercises, helps for teachers and everything necessary to make a splendid anti-cigaret program. Suitable material should also be furnished each department. Many unions are now providing the Quarterly Budget for the schools as it contains the sample material necessary and the latest publications of the National superintendent, and the cost is trifling (15 cents or 50 cents per year in advance.) The Budget for this quarter includes the new exercise entitled, "Prohibition Geography" to be used with the up-to-date Prohibition Map published by the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill., Price 15 cents. If the exercise is used as a class exercise the small prohibition map (revised) found in the Budget will answer. This will form quite an educational feature of the day.

The anti-cigaret and anti-tobacco pledge should be circulated on June 20, and also the regular temperance pledge. Our department should be a very helpful factor in the new national pledge-signing campaign. Every Sunday school should have a pledge flag made of the red, white and blue pledge cards signed by the members of the school. We now have leaflets giving instructions for making the flag of the triple pledge cards and also for the flag made of the new pledge cards which contain the international Sunday school pledge (single), with star pledge cards for teachers and officers of the school. Church officials may also be asked to sign the star cards which are placed on the field of blue. When completed, a flag-raising exercise with a flag salute would be an interesting exercise to hold in connection with the first appearance of the pledge-flag.

Hold an anti-cigaret Sunday school rally on June 20. Invite the co-operation of the Anti-Narcotic department workers, the Y. P. B. and the Loyal Temperance Legion. Have a good program, either of your own planning or by making use of one of our anti-cigaret programs. The one entitled, "Old Glory in Peril" has been revised and is picturesque and impressive. It is found among samples contained in the Budget for this quarter.

This is our first opportunity to make a general announcement of the gift of the National to the Sunday schools of the United States. At the last convention it was voted to supply the schools with a program for World's Temperance Sunday, free of charge.

This program is to be prepared by the National superintendent of this department, under the direction of the National Officers, and will be out in season for all who may desire to use it at an earlier date than the date of World's Temperance Sunday, November 14. Further mention of the program will be made later by the National W. C. T. U. as the program will be published by it and sent out from our National W. C. T. U. Publishing House.

Our department has long desired to inaugurate some plans in the interest of National Constitutional Prohibition. We now purpose to secure the signatures of the boys and girls, the young men and women under twenty-one years of age, to a petition to Congress pleading for protection from the blighting curse of the liquor traffic and asking for National Constitutional Prohibition. The form of the petition is practically the same as that used by some of the states in petitioning the legislatures.

Petition blanks will be furnished by your National superintendent for the postage at the rate of twelve cents per 100 postpaid. We earnestly ask that every white ribboner will aid this department in this effort, by working in her respective Sunday school to the end that we may, at the opportune time, let Congress hear from the Sunday schools of the United States. Send to me at once for a supply of blanks and inaugurate the work on June 20. Follow it up with a "whirlwind" campaign for signatures and accomplish the work speedily. This can be done if our workers will organize and systematize the effort. The Sunday school department has accomplished great things in the past by reason of its consecrated workers and we are confident that all will "fall into line" in this new movement and make it a great success. Now, to the work! Make June 20 a great Anti-Cigaret and Anti-Tobacco Day. Plan to reach every Sunday school boy and girl, young man and woman, and secure their signatures to our petition in the interest of National Constitutional Prohibition.

Yours in loyal service,

STELLA B. IRVINE.

115 Walnut St., Riverside, Cal.

PEACE AND ARBITRATION

MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY

We hope a large number of medal contests will be held in the interests of peace on the eighteenth day of May, the anniversary of the convening of the first Peace conference held at The Hague in Holland, in 1899. But if some unions find it inconvenient to prepare for such a contest to be held on that date, we trust that they will have one some other time during the year. Mrs. A. E. Carman, World's and National W. C. T. U. superintendent of the department of Medal Contests, 5414 Broadway, Chicago, has just published a newly prepared collection of pieces for recitations, costing only ten cents. These and pretty Peace medals may be obtained from her.

State superintendents will please note that in our last Annual Report a gold medal was offered to the superintendent who reports the largest number of Peace contests held during the year ending October 1, 1915.

We record here the names of comrades and friends who have recently passed to the higher life:

DR. J. T. BOLTON, Wharton, Tex., husband of Mrs. M. R. Bolton, president of the local union. Dr. Bolton was an advocate of temperance and a loyal friend of the W. C. T. U.

MRS. SARAH PETERSON BEACH, Seneca Falls, N. Y., the president of the local union and actively engaged in the work of the organization until with a few days of her home-going.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

HERE AND THERE WITH THE Y. P. B.

Mrs. Maude A. Pratt, Y. P. B. secretary of Tompkins county, New York, reports the organization of a Branch of fifteen members at Ithaca, of which Mr. Henry Russell is the president.

A new Branch at Vienna, Georgia, and one at Pembroke, both organized the latter part of March, are reported by the state secretary as doing active work.

Miss Esther E. Winchester, state secretary for Maine, writes that Maine, new in Y. P. B. work, is slow but certainly sure. Miss Winchester on a recent trip through the state organized a number of new Branches, secured many new members for old Branches and aroused much enthusiasm through the schools and colleges for National Prohibition.

Dr. Ellen J. Wetlaufer, state president of the Wyoming W. C. T. U., sends word of a promising Branch at Slater, Wyoming, with Mr. Earl Fry as president. Wyoming is soon to enjoy an extended visit from our western field secretary, Mrs. Linnie Carl, who will tour the state.

Danville, Virginia, the home of the state Y. P. B. secretary, boasts of two wide awake Branches, both of which were in active campaign for new members during April.

A most excellent meeting which enlisted more than three hundred young people from four counties was arranged by Mrs. Jennie Crawford of Portville, Alleghany county, New York. The Rev. I. H. Crocker in his address on National Prohibition complimented the young people on their work and said that he had known many societies but none that accomplished the work being done by the Y. P. B.

"Have You a Son? A Daughter? Do you know twenty-one Whitestone saloons want them for victims? Do you want to know what you can do about it? Send name and address to the Whitestone (Long Island) W. C. T. U., care the Whitestone Herald." The above was placed in the Herald by a young man of the Y. P. B. The saloon men are said to be very angry.

Miss Mary Dobbs, state corresponding secretary of the Kansas W. C. T. U., and an ardent friend of the Y. P. B., in the April number of the Kansas state paper, which was a Y. P. B. issue, said: "No question today is so alive as prohibition. No organization should be more alive than the Young People's Branch in your community. Will you pledge your God to make it so? Pray, talk, work, plan. Then expect results and you will get them. No class of people are so responsive as the young people and children. Do not rest until you have an L. T. L. and a Y. P. B." The Kansas state plan of an advisory board for the Y. P. B. has been adopted locally also and, judging from all reports, it works well.

It was with regret that we learned recently of the death of Colonel James B. Atchison, the father of Miss J. Zoe Atchison, state secretary for Kansas. Miss Atchison is again in the field and doing splendid organizing work.

Rhode Island recently profited exceedingly by the visit of Miss Mary F. W. Anderson, eastern field secretary for the Y. P. B. An enthusiastic colored Branch of eleven members was organized in Providence by Miss Anderson, as well as a W. C. T. U. of eighteen members. At a rally of all Providence Branches, at which Miss Anderson spoke, many new members were gained through the novel plan of the state Y. P. B. secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Farwell. Members of all the young people's societies of the city were invited to attend and as they entered the church the respective presidents pinned on each a different colored pennant with a bow of white ribbon. The secretary had previously prepared large pennants of corresponding colors, bearing the Y. P. B. monogram in gold, and these were hung in different parts of the room. At the close of the address the young people were requested to gather around the pennant of the color they were wearing, and the Y. P. B. presidents then took charge of the group wearing her color, pledge cards were distributed and every one present was thus given a personal invitation to join. The report is that every one present not already a member became one. So much for handpicking! To the president securing the greatest number of members was presented a copy of Mrs. Davis' "Compendium of Temperance Truth" for use in her Branch.

Illinois is especially blessed at this time in that Miss Kathryn Sawyer, the able state Y. P. B. secretary, who for two years has been greatly handicapped by ill health, is again able to be in the field, and a goodly number of new Branches are the result. These are organized: at Evanston, Miss Mary De Coudres, president; Rio, Knox county, Miss Mabel Crosby, president; Victoria, Miss Florence Rice, president. Miss Sawyer also reports interesting and helpful local and county institutes visited and others yet to come, besides addresses delivered before more than seven hundred students at Galesburg, who comprised a most interesting and interested audience. A Y. P. B. day is being planned for the state W. C. T. U. convention to be held in Waukegan.

The annual conference of the Young People's Branch of Massachusetts was held at the Massachusetts state headquarters April 17. While a full report of the meeting has not been received, we know that the coming together could but result in an uplift.

A conference of the Young People's Branch of New Jersey—the second of the year—will be held in Beverly, Burlington county, May 13. A most interesting program bids fair to result in a helpful meeting.

The latest good news from Ohio is that Mrs. Mary Stewart Powers, the busy state secretary, during twenty-one days in Highland county, organized twelve new Branches, and reached some 2,000 pupils in eighty-two grades of the public schools with her cigaret and tobacco charts.

The very active Branch of Liberty, Mo., recently held its regular meeting in William Jewel College of that city, and was assisted on the program by a number of college students. The Branch set its goal at fifty new members during April.

A comprehensive supply of Y. P. B. literature has, at the request of Mrs. Lizzie Owens Middleton, National associate in the department of Scientific Temperance Instruction, been sent to Macon, Georgia, to be displayed and distributed at the meeting of the Educational Association. We are hoping that much enthusiasm along this line will be aroused as a result.

April 5 was Y. P. B. day at the meeting of the St. Louis Federated Unions. The program was in charge of Mrs. Gorrell Clinger, general secretary, and an address was made by Mrs. Ross Hayes Schachner, National secretary. The Y. P. B. work in the city, the state and the nation was reviewed by members of the local Branches and by Mr. Gus O. Nations, acting president of the Missouri Y. P. B. The discussion, "How Can the W. C. T. U. Best Aid the Y. P. B. in the Observance of Its Red Letter Day and Campaign Month," brought out many helpful suggestions.

A most interesting Y. W. C. A. temperance service is reported to have been held recently in the Georgia Normal Institute, the general subject being, "Is the World Growing Better?"—presented from a temperance standpoint. It brought out a practical study of the situation. Two other most practical subjects were also handled—"The Influence of the Seniors as They Go Out Into the State as Teachers," and the "Ways and Means of Bringing the Work Before the People."

Miss Edna Larson, state Y. P. B. secretary for Minnesota, writes that there are more Y. P. B.'s on the state honor roll at this early date than ever before, and that nine new Branches are just beginning work. The Nelson Y. P. B., which gained thirty-five members during the month of January, held a banquet in celebration of the gain. Nelson is not a large place, but undoubtedly the Y. P. B. is an important feature there, since it now numbers 114 and is still gaining.

NOTICE

The above items are gleaned from the letters of state Y. P. B. secretaries, from state papers, and from reports received from local Branches. If nothing appears concerning YOUR Branch it is because YOU have not reported.

PRACTICAL HEALTH COURSE OFFERED TO BRANCHES

Mrs. Frances Waite Leiter writes the general secretary of her willingness to prepare five lessons of brief practice work (no theory) which can be covered in ten or fifteen minutes at any regular meeting, and are suitable for both young men and young women. The lessons would without doubt be most helpful and would prove a delightful feature of any program—the five lessons to be furnished to the local Branch for $1.00, all mailed at the same time but in five separate sealed envelopes each to be opened just previous to the meeting at which it is to be used. Mrs. Leiter states that if 20 local Branches apply to her (220 West Park avenue, Mansfield, O.), the course will at once be prepared. The cost is merely a nominal one and within the reach of any Branch interested.

FIND OUT

The Kind Of Food That Will Keep You Well.

The true way is to find out what is best to eat and drink, and then cultivate a taste for those things instead of poisoning ourselves with improper, indigestible food, etc.

A conservative Massachusetts woman writes:

"I have used Grape-Nuts five years for the young and for the aged; in sickness and in health; at first following directions carefully, later in a variety of ways as my taste and judgment suggested.

"But its most special, personal benefit has been as a substitute for meat, and served dry with cream when rheumatic troubles made it important for me to change diet.

"Served in this way with the addition of a cup of hot Postum and a little fruit it has been used at my morning meal for six months, during which time my health has much improved, nerves have grown steadier, and a gradual decrease in my excessive weight adds greatly to my comfort."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ESTELLE'S CHOICE

ALICE WALKER JENISON, Jacksonville, Fla.

Estelle was sitting before the grate in her cozy room. A new magazine, the reading-light and a box of candy, a gift from Ralph the evening before, were at her elbow on a table. Everything seemed in readiness for Estelle's great delight, a quiet hour of reading, but the girl was idle. In her hand she held a note, which had just been brought to her by the maid, and she was gazing into the glowing coals, a half-smile on her lips, and a look of dreamy retrospection upon her expressive face. The letter read:

"My Dearest Girl:—

"You must know that I love you, Estelle. I am going to talk it over with your father, and then I want you to come down and let me tell you how I feel. You know you have been the only girl for me, Estelle, ever since I pulled off your red hair-ribbon the first day you came to grammar school. Wish me luck, dearest.

"Your own Ralph."

"Luck with daddy," the girl mused. "He seems very sure of luck with me." Her lips curved in a tender smile as pictures connected with their long friendship began to flash before her mind's eye. How well she remembered the day to which Ralph referred. She recalled that he always objected when she wore any but a red ribbon, and once, when they were high school students, he had laughingly demanded that she always wear a touch of red when she expected to see him. She smiled to herself as she touched the sleeve of her red silk waist which she had put on this evening especially for him.

Ralph had been her trusted schoolmate, friend, comrade and chum, and lately she had recognized the deeper feeling that had its culmination in this confident little note. "If only his father's business had been more respectable, I think I should have cared for him long ago," she told herself. "I've always been secretly sorry that my best friend is a liquor dealer's son and I don't believe I can marry him if he follows in his father's footsteps. I should hate to imagine that everyone felt toward me as I feel toward his mother, a liquor-dealer's wife."

Down-stairs, Mr. Dean looked up from his paper when Ralph entered the room, and after greeting him, listened with deference to the young man's request for his permission to marry his daughter. After a moment's deliberation, he replied:

"I think I have been expecting something like this, my boy, but I confess I am surprised and pleased that you have shown me the courtesy of speaking to me about it first."

Ralph's face reflected his confusion, as he said: "I am sure Estelle knows my feelings for her; in fact, Maggie has just taken a note to her, in which I have told her what I am now telling you."

"I thought as much," Mr. Dean answered smiling. "Still, I am very glad that you have come to me before you have her answer." He turned to the maid, directing her to replenish the fire, then to close the door and see that they were not disturbed. Ralph noted these preparations with uneasiness. When they were alone, Mr. Dean began:

"My boy, I like you. I know nothing about you personally to keep me from entrusting Estelle's happiness to you, if she reciprocates your feeling for her."

The young man eagerly sprang to his feet, extending his hand. He was relieved at this easy and wished for termination of the dreaded interview. But Mr. Dean motioned him back to his seat, and said,

"Wait, Ralph, I am not through. I said 'personally' I knew nothing against you. I felt I had the right to investigate your standing, in view of your friendship with Estelle, and I have found that you are a boy of clean habits, upright character and good morals, but, Ralph, I do not like the business you and your father are engaged in. You say you love my daughter and will do your best to make her happy. You can never make her happy under the circumstances."

"But, Mr. Dean, I am sure I can. She shall have every comfort she has been accustomed to, and many that she has never had. She shall be mistress of a home of wealth and refinement and luxury."

"If I know my little girl, I do not think luxuries purchased at such a price could make her happy."

"I do not know what you mean, sir." Ralph's voice, in spite of efforts at control showed irritation.

"You think you love Estelle?" her father queried. "Boy, ever since she was laid in my arms a poor little motherless girlie, my love has encircled her in a way your love could never understand. She is the center of my existence. I have been both father and mother to her. I have held every motive and act of my life before her pure judgment, that I might keep myself worthy the gift of her love and devotion, which, thank God, she has always given me in unstinted measure. Estelle is the most precious possession I have, and I would not like to run the risk of having her life blackened and ruined as a drunkard's wife."

Ralph sprang to his feet, his eyes blazing. "You are very unjust, Mr. Dean!" he exclaimed. "I do not even drink!"

"Glad to hear it. Sit down and keep cool, boy. We are not nearly through, and we must not quarrel, but for the sake of the girl whom we both love we must try to find some common ground upon which we may stand. It is possible that Estelle may choose to go with you, and in that case I wish to make her way as smooth as possible. Your father's business is a menace to everyone, and you and he are no more immune to its harmful influence than are others who, though strong in their strength to resist the insidious appetite, have been ruined."

"Father has always warned me against drinking, saying that we keep the liquor to sell, and not to drink. He says, the only way to carry on such a business successfully is to leave it alone one's self."

"Today I went to see your father," Mr. Dean continued after a moment. "I represented myself as speaking for a client who wished to buy an interest in his Palm Beach saloon, if it were paying well. He told me his equipment and the population of the town would point to a ten thousand dollar business. I pinned him down to facts, and he admitted that each year the receipts have been growing less, and that last year they netted but six thousand dollars. I told him my client would only buy in a place where he would not be likely to be disturbed by prohibition legislation for some years. Convinced that he could not make the sale, he assured me that the business was a losing one everywhere now, and that the menace of national prohibition is growing greater with every day that passes."

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

—N. J. Collier in Chicago Journal

From west to east, from south to north,
We boys and girls are marching forth
To lay the liquor traffic low.
With happy hearts we are afield,
We're boys and girls who never yield,
The liquor traffic now must go!

Chorus:
In Nineteen Twenty comes the day,
Comes the children's happy day;
In Nineteen Hundred Twenty
There'll be prohibition plenty
When Columbia drives the drink away.
—A. A. G.

BENNY'S TEMPERANCE LESSONS

Little Benny, on a day
Saw the gentlemen gay
Sipping wine together so cheery,
And he thought it would be
Very funny to see
The chickens get drunk and be merry.

So he poured out a glass
Of the red wine, alas!
And hastened to find his pet chickens;
And he laughed as he thought
How they'd reel all about,
And caper and act like "the dickens."

A fine brood he soon found,
Busy picking around
Whose mother was out in the garden,
"Now," said Benny, "drink, do!"
But the chickens said, "No;
Peep! peep! no, we can't, beg your pardon."

But the hen saw it all,
And she gave a great squall,
And fairly flew in from her scratching.
"Cut, cut, cut," said the hen,
"Don't you do that again;
No wine have they had since their hatching."

"You're a very bad boy
To come here and annoy
My darlings, cut, cut, cut-ca-da-ket!"
And she swelled up so stout,

And so blustered about,
He ran just to get from her racket.

"I've had very bad luck;
I will try Mrs. Duck;
I am sure she will drink," muttered Benny.
But the duck said, "Quack quack!
You would better run back,
For, please you, I never take any!"

Then he happened to spy
The black pig in his sty,
With feet in his trough,—little sinner!
And he said, "When you dine
Take a drink of this wine;
It's just what you want with your dinner."

But the pig gave a shrug,
As he answered, "Ugh! ugh!
I wouldn't taste that for a dollar.
Do you take yourself off,
And away from my trough,
And do it at once, or I'll holler."

Then the turkey's bald head,
Looking angry and red,
Appeared on the scene; the geese hissed him.
So quick as a mouse
Benny ran to the house,
Before his dear mother had missed him.

As he drew near he heard
This sweet song from his bird:
"I'm only a little canary,
But I sing the day long;
'Chirp, chirp, tril-l', is my song;
Cold water I drink and am merry."

"Little Benny, my dear,"
Sang the bird, soft and clear,
"The wine, though it sparkles so ruddy,
Will just send the red rose
From your cheeks to your nose,
And make your brain addled and muddy."

Benny hung down his head
For a moment, then said:
"Cold water shall be my drink ever.
And a promise I'll make,
That the pledge I will take,
And never will break it; no never."
—Journal of Education.

HAZEL'S REWARD

CECILE L. HOUGHTON, Elkhorn, Wis.

The contest was over. The hour for which Hazel had worked so long and so faithfully had arrived and passed and Hazel had lost. When she was at last alone in her room she resolved that no one should know her disappointment, at any rate. She had done well—as well as she ever did at a rehearsal. Miss Traver, the elocution teacher, said so. There was a wee bit of satisfaction in that. There were many who thought she deserved the medal. Prof. Brown was quite indignant over the decision of the judges and Prof. Brown everybody recognized as a splendid critic.

How long that lawyer had stood there talking and telling stories before he announced the decision. It seemed like ages! And then the medal was awarded to Lilian Lee! No one knew the queer feeling that went over Hazel at the news. Of course she had not planned on surely winning, and yet—she had worked so hard. The exercises to develop her voice and make her speech distinct, the gestures—all had received daily attention. Lilian gay, careless Lilian, had hardly worked at all. Why, only last week she did not even have her selection memorized. But she had the advantage of a naturally attractive voice and manner. Hazel buried her sobs in her pillow and faithfully tried to forget her disappointment.

School began and during the days that followed she studied with unusual earnestness, and took especial pains to be nice to the wearer of the shining medal, succeeding in creating the general impression that she really did not care so very much about the result of the contest.

"Here is a letter for you," said her mother one day when she came home to dinner. "The writing and the postmark are not familiar."

Hazel eagerly opened the envelope and read its contents:

"Dear Stranger:

"This note is from one whom you never saw and probably never will see. I was in your town the night of the contest and, having nothing else to do, I went to the entertainment. Your story interested me especially and made me look at some things in a different way. I want you to know that because of your recitation one person, at least, is going to live a better life. Under separate cover I send you a little token of my appreciation.

"Yours gratefully,
"A Wanderer."

In the next mail a package for Hazel arrived.

Hastily undoing it the girl drew forth a book of poems beautifully bound.

"O see, mother! Isn't it lovely?" she exclaimed. "I believe I'm going to enjoy it even more than a medal."

THE CHILDREN SPURNED THE MONEY

The result of the election in Hayward, Wisconsin, last month, at which the town voted to remain in the dry list, brings to mind an interesting incident which occurred in Hayward two or three years ago just before a wet and dry election. The temperance people of the town had arranged for a prohibition parade in which a large company of children were to participate. The affair was to take place in the afternoon and just at noon word came to the white ribboners that an agent of a big brewing company had arrived in town and with the intention of causing a stampede, was planning to distribute a large quantity of coin to the children as they passed a certain point in the parade. The leaders of the movement immediately called together the boys and girls and told them of the plans of the liquor men.

As the parade turned a certain corner, the agent of the brewery threw nickles and dimes under the feet of the marching children. Turning neither to right nor left, but looking straight ahead, they passed indifferently along, paying not the slightest heed to the efforts of the agent to attract their attention.

THE RED FLAG

An engineer gave his little girl a small red flag to play with, and explained that on the road the red flag signifies danger. "Would you stop your train if you saw a red flag on the track?" she asked. "Yes," he said "or there might be an accident." After her papa had left, the little girl thought of what she might do to help, and at last she thought of the red flag, and what her papa had told her it stands for. Going to the sideboard, she firmly fastened the flag to the decanter, and then went to bed satisfied. The father came home, went to the sideboard for the usual nightcap, but saw the flag and understood and heeded the warning.
—Selected.

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS

56 & 58 Park Place NEW YORK

ESTELLE'S CHOICE

(Continued from Page Twelve)

Ralph smiled knowingly. "That's father, all over," he said. "If he couldn't land the customer himself he would discourage him so that he would not buy elsewhere and so become a competitor. He is too sharp a business man to be driven out of a paying business by a set of agitators for prohibition."

"I regret to see that you have no conscience in the matter, Ralph. I had hoped that you might wish to give up this way of making a living, and engage in a respectable business. With your brains and business ability you should be able to make good in any line you might choose."

"Thank you, sir, for your flattering opinion of me. However, I intend to help build up our present business, strengthen the Palm Beach branch, and establish other branches from time to time."

The older man smiled a little sadly as he turned the conversation in another direction. "Strictly speaking, liquor selling is not a business at all. You men exhibit in your windows various brands of liquor, but they do not represent your finished product. You kick him out in the alley. Imagine one of your victims occupying a large glass case at the Panama exposition, labelled, 'Finished product of Duffy's malt whisky.'"

"I did not know you were a prohibition crank, Mr. Dean."

"I wasn't until I began to talk with the men who are in the business and realized the full enormity of the evils it brings. The thought is with me continually that the best of our manhood is being ruined by strong drink. It is a menace in every way, and the sooner the national government puts a stop to it the better. That is the only way to make prohibition effective. Why don't you give it up, Ralph, and get into some legitimate business before you are forced by law to close up?"

"There is much agitation, it is true, but it will never amount to anything."

"Let me give you a few facts that have come to my notice within the last few days. I have talked quite freely with saloonkeepers and I have found that it has become necessary for the liquor dealers to advertise special bargains to keep up their sales. Several are offering premiums with purchases. For instance, Brown advertises a safety-razor, or a fountain pen with each quart of whisky purchased. Dawkins offers a fried oyster with each drink, hoping to get half a dozen drinks into his victim along with the fry! Simpson told me he would be glad to see national prohibition win for he says he is making no money now, and the agitation is so great and the restrictions so many that he will be glad to take up some other business, though he refuses to get out of it until forced to do so. In view of all this, if for no other consideration I could not consent to my daughter marrying you unless you entered a safer business, for she would marry a man who would soon be a bankrupt unable to provide a good home. But first of all, I do not regard yours as an honorable business."

Ralph rose, wounded dignity and mortification showing on his face. As he turned he faced Estelle. She had noiselessly opened the door and entered the room. Her brown eyes were wet with tears and her lips trembled.

"Ought I to apologize for listening when my happiness was the subject of discussion," she said. "I waited up-stairs until I just had to come down to see what was the matter with you both. I have been outside here most of the time, and I must say that I agree with you, dad. I couldn't be a liquor dealer's wife, Ralph." She flushed adorably as she met his eyes for the first time since he had told her that he loved her.

"You are both of you turning up your noses at a good business," Ralph said quickly, though his voice trembled. "You are very shortsighted, too, Estelle, for I could give you such style, luxury and clothes as your straight-laced father could never afford."

Estelle passed swiftly to her father's side, and he put his arm around her waist. "I think you would better go at once, Ralph, after that!" she said proudly. "I find no temptation in the luxuries you offer me, when the money to pay for them must come from a saloon till. I'll stay with daddy. I couldn't fail him after I heard him tell you that he had kept himself true and clean for me, while you, professing to love me, prefer to continue in your horrible business. Please go, Ralph."

After the young man had left them, Mr. Dean drew his daughter down into his arms, and they sat long together, gazing into the fire. Smoothing her dark hair, he asked tenderly: "What made you come down-stairs, Estelle?"

"I think I was led to do it, dad. I knew it wasn't the proper thing, but I am so glad I came for I had begun to feel upstairs, when I was reading his note over and over, that I loved him. I have always been sorry that he was a liquor dealer's son, and I had made up my mind tonight that I would coax him to set up our home in some other town, where he would not be known, and where he could engage in some respectable business. When I saw how determined he was to stay in it, and worst of all heard him sneer at my sweet old daddy, I realized that I was a very foolish girl, who had mistaken the feeling of gratified vanity for the awakening of love."

"I'm glad that you came, honey, for I could hardly have reported the conversation to you in a way to convey the correct import. I was just about to invite him to go when we discovered you. So you think you'll stay with daddy a bit longer?"

Her arms tightened around his neck. "I'm going to stay with the dearest daddy in the world till I find as fine a man as he is," she declared. "I don't think you will ever get rid of me!"

A Wave of Prohibition

FACTS AND FIGURES

ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN

(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth by Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

All sections look alike when doors are closed.

Weis Sectional Music Room Furniture

For FILING Instead of PILING Sheet Music, Disc Records and Player Rolls

These handy sections meet the popular demand of owners of Talking Machines, Player Pianos, etc.

THINK OF THE CONVENIENCE of being able to refer instantly to any piece of sheet music, disc record or player roll without handling any except the one you want. These cabinets are practical because they are Sectional—Expansible to meet your needs. In them are incorporated the most approved filing methods. Buy a section at a time—as your Music Library grows.

No. 1680. Disc Record Section files 40-10 in. and 40-12 in. Records in individual, indexed pockets.

PRACTICAL FILES, HANDSOME CABINETS, beautifully finished to harmonize with other furnishings. Genuine Mahogany or handsomely flaked Quartered Oak In richly polished or dull finishes. Why not write us for descriptive booklet now, while you think of it?

SEE YOUR DEALER or write direct to
The Weis Manufacturing Company
196 Union Street :: Monroe, Mich.
New York Office - 75 John Street

No. 1640 holds 40 Rolls and about 2500 sheets of Music, 47 in. high.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Gift.

THE KEADMA COMPANY
ROGERS PARK, ILL.

GROUPS OF BOOKS

FOR

Sunday School Libraries

at

SPECIAL PRICES

We suggest that these be placed before Anti-Cigaret Sunday, June 20.

Group No. 1, $5.00. Value, $6.50.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. A new book whose key-note is love and service. A book that should find its way into every home, and one that will do much in freeing our country from drink and kindred vices.

A Tyrant In White, Henry Herman. (Anti-Cigaret Story).

A Fight Against Odds, Kate Anderson. (Anti-Cigaret Story).

Nineteen Beautiful Years, Frances E. Willard.

Two (a story), Edith Smith Davis.

John Barleycorn, Jack London. One of the most popular temperance stories.

Toots (short temperance stories), Anna Adams Gordon.

The Cost of a Boy, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.

Group No. 2, $4.00. Value, $5.00.

Little Sir Galahad
A Tyrant In White
A Fight Against Odds
The Cost of a Boy
Toots
Nineteen Beautiful Years

Group No. 3, $3.00. Value, $4.00.

Little Sir Galahad
A Fight Against Odds
The Cost of a Boy
John Barleycorn
A Break In Schedule Time

(Carriage prepaid)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Illinois

Prosperity Post Cards in Foreign Languages

What Every Merchant Knows (Spanish)
Prosperity Statistics (German)
Of Interest to Taxpayers (Italian)
Of Interest to Bankers (Swedish)
Of Interest to Wage-Earners (Norwegian)

Price, per dozen, 15 cents; per hundred, $1.00

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

FIRST ITALIAN Y. P. B.

KATHERINE M. WARNER

In connection with the Italian Methodist mission at Jamestown, N. Y., in charge of Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Riggio, there has been organized an Italian Y. P. B. under the auspices of the Fanny O. Bailey W. C. T. U. of that city. It is, so far as we have been able to ascertain, the only one of its kind in this country. The twenty-five pledged members, mostly young men, are full of enthusiasm and interest in the new work they have undertaken, and are eagerly pursuing the regular Y. P. B. study course, which has been translated into Italian by Rev. and Mrs. Riggio. The officers are bright young men, who preside with dignity and ease. At one of the meetings two young men arose, produced cigarets from their pockets, handed them to Mrs. Riggio and promised God before the entire company that they would never again smoke, nor would they drink so long as they lived. Although these young Italians speak very little English it is a rare treat to hear them sing with real enjoyment in our tongue, "Some Glad Day." They liked that song so well they asked for others and through the kindness of a friend twenty-four "Temperance Songsters" have been presented to them. Another friend made it possible to furnish them with Y. P. B. pins, and no more loyal hearts ever wore the colors. At a Y. P. B. county rally held at Falconer recently the Branch was represented by six or eight members and Mr. Tissicanti, the secretary, gave an able impromptu speech. Although it was in broken English, the principal of the Falconer high school pronounced it the most eloquent temperance address he had ever heard. These young men have thanked our women over and over again for their help and Mrs. Riggio says it would be impossible for us to estimate what it has all meant to them. May many more of our unions feel the joy of service to these strangers within our own borders, who are hungering for the kindly word and sympathetic hand.

ICELAND'S TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT BEGUN BY STUDENTS

In these days of wholesale prohibition edicts covering large territories and strictly enforced as war measures of the first importance, it is interesting to remember that to Iceland belongs the credit of being the first nation to outlaw the liquor traffic, and its prohibition bill was passed during a time of peace and to increase efficiency and prosperity. On January 1, 1915, the measure passed by the Parliament in 1913 became effective, and for more than four months there has been no manufacture, importation or sale of intoxicants in this far northern country. Mr. James L. Nisbet, representative of the Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen in Iceland, in writing of the long struggle which resulted in this happy state of affairs, gives 1842 as the date of the first organized opposition to the use of intoxicants, stating that the movement began among university and high school students. During the more than seventy years intervening, the issue has been kept constantly before the people, and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been one of the forces responsible for the final triumph of prohibition. Among the many loyal workers the name of Miss Olafia Johannsdottir, World's white ribbon missionary, is mentioned as one who by tireless devotion to the cause helped to win the fight for national prohibition.

You Can Weigh Exactly What You Should

You can—I know you can, because I have reduced 32,000 women and have built up that many more — scientifically, naturally, without drugs, in the privacy of their own rooms.

You Can Be So Well!

—if you only knew how well! I build up your vitality—at the same time I strengthen your heart action; teach you how to breathe, to stand, walk and relieve such ailments as

Nervousness, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Indigestion, Etc.

One pupil writes: "I weigh 83 pounds less, and I have gained wonderfully in strength."

Another says: "Last May I weighed 100 pounds, this May I weigh 126 and oh ! I feel SO WELL."

Won't you sit down and write now for my interesting booklet? You are welcome to it—it is FREE. Don't wait, you may forget it. I have had a wonderful experience and I should like to tell you about it.

Susanna Cocroft

Dept. 37, 624 Michigan Boulevard, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is a college bred woman. She is the recognized authority on the scientific care of the health and figure of women.

DEMONSTRATIONS FOR THE Y. P. B.

Not long ago at a meeting in Columbus, Georgia, an effective Y. P. B. demonstration took place which brought the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. As the speaker of the occasion, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, ascended to the platform to deliver an address, she was met at the top step by a company of young men and women, members of the Y. P. B., carrying eighteen banners inscribed with the names of the dry states, and a nineteenth banner reading, "Eighteen States Have Outlawed the Liquor Traffic." The meeting was held in the large court-room at the Muscogee county court-house, by permission of the commissioners. Over the judge's desk, to give emphasis to the smaller banners, hung an immense white ensign bearing the slogan, "National Constitutional Prohibition," and underneath it the words, "We Shall Win." As Mrs. Armor came forward the banner-bearers fell in line behind her and one after the other placed their placards high up on either side of the desk until they were all in plain view of the audience.

The plan described above can easily be adapted and is a tiptop one for Y. P. B.'s to try.

Another method intended to show the growth of prohibition was used with good effect before a Rhode Island audience, and is worthy of trial by the Branches. A globe entwined with white ribbon, and held in position by a Young Campaigner, was the central feature of the display. From it went out eighteen streamers of white which ended in white ribbon bows fastened to the shoulders of individuals whose identification as dry states was clearly shown by means of cards bearing the name of each. The prohibition progress of the world was represented by a placard marked "Russia." This was placed at the foot of the globe.

UNIONS WISHING TO MAKE MONEY

will find very liberal terms offered for selling Vacher-Balm. It is a remedy for summer as well as winter; will promptly relieve headache, sunburn, sprains and most aches, pains and skin troubles. Every jar guaranteed if used according to directions. Send for samples for free trial and distribution and for terms to.

E. W. VACHER, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

AGGRESSIVE WORK FOR OFFICIAL PAPER

State Plans

We shall from time to time print in this column state plans for the increased circulation of our official paper and are sure that all will welcome suggestions or methods that have been carefully and successfully worked out, knowing that an increased circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL means increased efficiency among our workers.

Montana

"We have had in mind pushing subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL and I have asked the presidents to try to have their unions get new subscribers," is the message from Mrs. Mary L. Alderson, president of the Montana W. C. T. U. "In my 'standard of efficiency' I have given a point for each subscriber. This efficiency chart I made out hoping to get the unions standardized. I am going to suggest also that each union send a certain number of subscriptions to the business and professional men of the place; and the state has a pledge of subscriptions with which it has been trying to get the unions to help. I am endeavoring to have my speakers emphasize the necessity of all members taking THE UNION SIGNAL. I am also seeking contributions for state and National work and am going to give subscriptions to the Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL to those contributing a dollar toward National work and a subscription to the weekly UNION SIGNAL to those contributing five dollars."

Northern California

"We consider THE UNION SIGNAL in the home the best foundation for a prohibition campaign," Mrs. Sara J. Dorr, the president of the W. C. T. U. of Northern California, assures us. "A gentleman recently handed me ten dollars to put prohibition papers into homes and I know of no better prohibition paper than THE UNION SIGNAL. It is presented at county conventions, institutes, through our state paper, and at local union meetings."

Florida

"We are working for 500 new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL this year," is the cheering message of the treasurer of the Florida W. C. T. U., Mrs. Nellie J. Doig. "The work is done largely by the president and state agent, but we try, of course, in every possible way to interest our women in the local unions to secure subscriptions for the paper. I can say this much for our state, every officer, with the exception of one superintendent, who is a very young woman, is a subscriber to THE SIGNAL."

POPULAR POSTERS

18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

The Factory and Alcoholic Liquor

Why Factory Managers Do and Must Prohibit the Use of Alcoholic Liquor by Their Employees

Alcoholic Liquors—Beer, Wine, Cider, as well as Whisky and Brandy, are among the chief causes of Accidents. The Employer is RESPONSIBLE FOR ACCIDENTS

——TO THE MEN EMPLOYED——

Even a moderate use of Alcoholic Liquor affects the judgment and interferes with Steadiness of Nerve. The Muscles which depend upon the Nerves are weakened

The Largest Number of Accidents

IN MILLS AND FACTORIES OCCUR ON MONDAY

WHY?—BECAUSE of the Alcoholic Liquor DRUNK on Sunday

A Study of the Building Trades proves that there are THREE ACCIDENTS on Monday to TWO on other days of the week

TOTAL ABSTINENCE INSURES CLEAR BRAINS

Factory Workers MUST be TOTAL Abstainers

THE TROUBLE MANUFACTURING COMPANY

——Unlimited——

CHARTER: THE SALOON LICENSE

President, Mr. Brewer
Vice-President, Mr. Distiller
Treasurer, Mr. Saloonkeeper
Promoter, Mr. Deceiver (Prov. 20:1)
Secretary and Business Manager, The Prince of Evil

——Patrons——

Mr. Good Fellow	Mr. Easily Led
Mr. Just-For-Fun	Mr. Afraid-of-a-Laugh
Mr. Society Tippler	Mr. Jail-Bird
Mr. Drunkard	Mr. Outcast

Branches in all parts of the world. Stock obtained in any saloon. All stock non-transferable.

Investments by young men and boys especially solicited. Stock sold on easy terms. Health, usefulness, happiness, comfort, purity, honor, liberty, life, taken in exchange. Dividends 1,000 per cent, paid in poverty, woe, foolishness, diseased bodies, destroyed minds.

Prospectus: Isaiah, 5:11-23; Prov. 23:21, 29-35; I Corinthians 6:10.

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House

EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

W. C. T. U. comrades in South Australia are rejoicing in the new law in force throughout the state providing for six o'clock closing of all bars in public houses.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., MAY 20, 1915 | No. 21

W. C. T. U. BOOTH AT PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

Displaying Ammunition for Total Abstinence and Prohibition Campaigns

Hundreds of visitors have been welcomed at the booth, and day by day the exhibit is making converts to the great cause of National Constitutional Prohibition

CAMPAIGN EDITION

SPECIAL ARTICLES IN THIS ISSUE

Prohibition as Related to Public Health in Russia—Total Abstinence a Natural Result of the War, Says Colonel Maus—West Virginia Citizens on the Witness Stand—History of Alaska's Prohibition Bill—Beer Drinker Poor Life Insurance Risk—Prohibition an Undisguised Blessing in North Dakota—Prohibition and Crime Prevention—Severe Blow to Florida Saloons—Socialist Party To Combat Liquor Evil.

Prohibition As Related To Public Health In Russia

On March 29, before the Russian Society for the Preservation of National Health, says a correspondent in The Times, Russian Supplement, of April 26, Dr. A. L. Mendelson read a report on the results of the compulsory temperance introduced since the war. In the opinion of the speaker, the beneficial consequences of compulsory temperance were not open to the smallest doubt, and in proof of this conclusion he cited the reduction of alcoholic sickness in Petrograd and of the attendance at the anti-alcoholic ambulatories; the decline in the number of cases of insanity among the dipsomaniacs of the Obukhovsky Hospital, and also of the general cases of mental affection in the capital; the reduction of the indirect manifestations of alcoholic sickness, of traumatic injuries and suicides, and of the cases received at the Obukhovsky Hospital—by 70.90 per cent.

For example, from July to December there were recorded in Petrograd in 1913 ninety-seven suicides, but in 1914 only fourteen. The same phenomenon was observed in Warsaw, where during the first half of 1914 there were recorded 419 suicides, and during the second half only 205.

The reduction of the number of small loans made by the pawnshops, and the increase of the deposits in the savings banks, were among the further gratifying results of temperance. For the first two months of 1915 the savings banks of Petrograd received deposits exceeding the figures for the corresponding months of 1914 by one-and-a-half million roubles (£150,000), while throughout Russia the quantity of deposits increased by a hundred million roubles (£10,000,000).

Attitude of the Peasants

The peasant, denied his vodka, readily sacrificed his personal feelings, continues the correspondent. He knew it was for the general welfare, and at the time privation was only temporary. A few weeks passed. The vast majority found that life without vodka was endurable. Then followed the order to keep the spirit shops closed till the end of the war. During all this time there was no lack of employment, but only a lack of labor. This meant advanced wages. Money earned was spent in clothing, in boots and shoes, on better food. Then people began to understand that life without vodka was not only endurable but better, brighter, and happier. Today throughout the whole empire, not one peasant wants to see the vodka shops reopened. Peasants have told the writer over and over again, "As long as there is no vodka we don't want it, but once reopen the monopolkas (vodka shops) and we will drink as much as ever." This is the new attitude of the Russian muzhik towards the drink question.

If vodka is finally abolished the road to national greatness and prosperity is wide and straight. The conquest of self will bring untold blessings in its wake. With strengthened individual character, decreased crime, and increased productive capacity of the people, Russia can serenely regard the future.

The above is given on the authority of the Alliance Press Agency of Manchester, England.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE A NATURAL RESULT OF THE WAR, SAYS COLONEL MAUS

"Even if the war in Europe costs ten billion dollars," says Colonel L. Mervin Maus, of the Medical Corps of the United States army, "if it destroys five million human lives and devastates the fairest countries of the world, it will be a small price to pay compared with the value of total abstinence among those nations for succeeding generations, and I feel that it will come to that in the national results of the war. This is not only a war of men against men, but a war against the greatest evil the world has ever known. The world has never awakened to this evil, but the war is bringing to the understanding of society the effects of alcohol upon the human mind."

In an interview in Washington, reported in the Portland (Me.) Evening Express, Colonel Maus told of conditions forty years ago and compared them with those of today. He said almost every officer drank then and so did the men. "It was customary for company commanders to give non-commissioned officers passes of from one to three days to go on a spree every payday. The post-traders and the canteens were centers of drunkenness. The best law ever passed concerning the army was the act of February 1, 1901, that barred alcohol from army reservations. We have now the least number of cases of inebriety and they are decreasing all the time. The probabilities are that 50 per cent of the army officers are now total abstainers, 45 per cent very moderate drinkers and not 5 per cent are considered heavy drinkers. Forty years ago 75 per cent were heavy drinkers, 22½ per cent moderate drinkers and 2½ per cent total abstainers.

"I have advocated to the department that the men in the military, naval and civil services of the United States should be compelled by law to be total abstainers," said the colonel. "Government employes should not be allowed to drink during active service. I have advocated this for a long time and I hope that the day is not far distant when every officer's commission will bear a temperance clause. The experience of Russia, England, Germany, France and Austria has taught the heads of the governments that the use of alcohol and intelligent campaigning are incompatible. It is my belief that any man has as much right to take a hypodermic injection of morphine or cocaine as a drink of whisky."

Colonel Maus, who is said to have to his credit a longer term than any other man in the army, is about to retire at the age of sixty-four years. He has rendered invaluable service, not only in the army, but in the temperance work. His fearless, outspoken advocacy of total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the nation has had much to do with the changed conditions regarding the use of alcohol in army circles.

CZAR OF RUSSIA OFFERS $362,500 IN PRIZES FOR NEW USES OF ALCOHOL

That the Russian government is sincere in its avowed intention of abolishing the sale of vodka is indicated by the recent announcement of $362,500 in prizes offered by the Russian minister of finance for the discovery of new ways to utilize alcohol.

The announcement states that three prizes totaling $25,000 will be given for the discovery of new denaturizing substances for improving the existing methods of denaturizing. The improvement must be such as will guarantee a general use and will make alcohol absolutely unfit for use as a beverage.

Twenty-one prizes, totaling $337,500 are offered for suggestions for adding to and improving the uses of spirits for heating, lighting, motive power and in the industrial branches of chemical technology. The largest single prize of $37,000 (supplemented by two other prizes totaling $50,000) is offered for an invention relating to the utilization of spirits in internal combustion engines; the production of such substances as vinegar, ether, chloroform, dissolving agents, fuel, lighting, etc.

PATRONAGE OF JOHN BARLEYCORN GOING OUT OF STYLE

"The saloon business in this town isn't what it was ten years ago," said a veteran bartender of St. Joseph, Mo., to a newspaper reporter recently. "For that matter, it isn't what it was a year ago. I can name five of the best bars we have, all in the business district, catering to the better class of trade, that are going down hill.

"Up to a year or so ago the proprietors of these bars never thought of 'standing watch' themselves. Each had two or more bartenders, and the proprietors did the gentleman act; but now in each case the force of bartenders has been reduced, and the proprietor takes his turn behind the bar. They had to do this to reduce expenses, because they weren't doing the business they had done formerly.

"I don't know how it is with the saloons that cater more especially to the laboring classes, but from what I can learn second hand they're not doing as well as they once did. A significant fact is that we have only 174 saloons in St. Joseph now, although our limit under the law is 176 saloons. A year ago we were up to the limit, and there was a long waiting list.

"The fact is, people are not drinking as much as they used to. It's not considered good form any more; it's going out of style."

ANOTHER LIQUOR FALSEHOOD NAILED

A liquor publicity article entitled "[illegible]vines Condemn Prohibition," has been going the rounds of the purchasable papers of the country, and among the ministers quoted is the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D., of New York City. Upon being questioned by a member of the W. C. T. U. as to the authenticity of the statement credited to him, Dr. Cadman replied:

"I thank you for sending me the extract which has been sent to me from nearly every state in the Union. As a matter of fact I am opposed to the liquor interests and strongly in favor of temperance, and have already received many scurrilous letters because of my stand."

West Virginia Citizens on the Witness Stand

TESTIMONY AS TO MORAL, SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC VALUE OF PROHIBITION BY BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL MEN OF BLUEFIELD

For the following significant statements by the business and professional men of a West Virginia city, located in the mining section of the state, we are indebted to Mrs. C. E. Fisher, president of the Bluefield W. C. T. U. Mrs. Fisher writes that every citizen upon whom she called spoke enthusiastically of the working of the prohibition law. Even some who formerly opposed it expressed themselves as now convinced of its benefits.
EDITOR

REAL ESTATE VALUES STEADILY INCREASE

F. R. CHRISTIE, Secretary-Treasurer Virginia Realty Loan Co.

The effect of the prohibition amendment has been most gratifying in various lines of business, especially real estate. Values have steadily increased ever since the amendment became effective, and many who we personally knew were spending most of their earnings at the saloon, have been making inquiries from us with a view to purchasing homes, and quite a few of these parties have saved enough funds since the dry period to make cash payment on their properties.

Another very noticeable feature is the increase in the demand for and the value of business properties. While twelve of the best houses in the city were made vacant by the closing of the saloons last July, this class of property now comes at a higher premium, both as to rent and sale values, than twelve months ago, although these places were promptly filled by other lines of retail trade.

The good results from the amendment in our lines of business are too evident for discussion.

SANE "PAY-DAYS" UNDER PROHIBITION

H. G. STEELE, M. D.

For twenty-five years I lived in Keystone, a town of 2,300 inhabitants, located in the midst of wonderful coal fields, in which there were from ten to fourteen saloons and many other evil places usually associated with saloons.

For several years my associate and I did not consider that there was much of a "pay-day" unless we had an opportunity to sew or dress wounds inflicted on from four to six intoxicated men and women who, during the time from Saturday evening until Monday night, had been cut or shot.

On these "pay-days"—Fourth of July, Christmas and Emancipation Day—it was a common occurrence to see from fifty to two hundred intoxicated men and women on the street, many of them unruly and profane of speech. In fact, it was not safe for a respectable woman to be about on such occasions.

If you visited seventy-five per cent of the homes of the people who tampered with the liquor viper frequently, you would no doubt find them living in a little two to four-room hut with scarcely clothes enough to cover themselves or their little ones, who sometimes numbered as many as eight; and hundreds would not have food enough to last more than three days ahead.

These drinking men made from $60 to $150 per month and had nothing to show for this money until the West Virginia prohibition law went into effect in July of last year.

Owing to the general business depression throughout the United States, the coal companies have been employing men but two to four days a week for the past six months and yet these workers are making a living, and some of them have even started small bank accounts. Now, what would be the result if the times were as prosperous as they were eighteen months to two years ago?

I am told by people who live in Keystone now, that there has been a great reformation in that town in the last six months. Some otherwise good men who were more or less opposed to prohibition have emphatically informed me that intoxicating liquors have gone out of West Virginia to stay.

That Bluefield has benefited morally by having the saloons driven from its midst is plainly seen by conditions on our streets and in our jail. Though we are only twelve miles from a wet town in Virginia, seldom is a drunken man seen staggering along, and when I visited the jail the other day, it was empty.

Since the first of the year, revival services have been conducted in our little home city and many hundreds, yes, several thousands, have been converted. It is evident that the devil has not the hold on people he had before the saloon was driven out.

MARKED IMPROVEMENT ALONG EVERY LINE

J. T. AKERS, City Auditor

Briefly stating my views and observations as city auditor as to the effects of statewide prohibition upon this city, I may say that its influence morally has been so agreeably surprising that it would be impossible for me to attempt to make a comparison with the conditions prevailing last year when spirituous liquors were sold. Police court fines have been reduced to less than one-half, and save for the lamentable fact that whisky is being sold at Pocahontas, Va., twelve miles distant, one would feel that our people, as a whole, are members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

There have been a few lawless persons who have tried the bootlegging business, but they have been promptly arrested, and have served, or are now serving on the road at hard labor, to which they were sentenced, in addition to meeting the imposition of a heavy fine, which fact should prove conclusively that when the city or county authorities are not in league with the whisky interests the illegal sale of liquor can be suppressed.

As to the financial side of the question, it is true we lost considerable revenue, but this deficit was promptly met and taken care of, and the business side of the city is being run as before, and with a cleaner city and a happier people. I pray God that not only other states, but the nation as well, will emulate the example of West Virginia, when, with men like Fred O. Blue, state tax commissioner, at the helm, they could not fail to be able to say with the "little mountain state" that prohibition does prohibit.

The improvement since prohibition went into effect has been so marked along all lines that no sensible person would claim that conditions are otherwise.

THEY PAY THEIR BILLS PROMPTLY NOW

T. J. PHELPS, President Phelps Furniture Co., and Traveling Representative Brand Shoe Co.

Business has been better in Bluefield and collections much more satisfactory since prohibition went into effect. An incident which occurred in our store before the enactment of the beneficent law illustrates the difference between the conditions governing the collection of debts then and now:

A laborer came in one pay day and stated that he could only pay seven dollars on a thirteen dollar bill which had been standing for some time, and asked our indulgence until the next pay day for the remainder of the amount. A short time after he had gone my brother had occasion to go to the front of the store and noticed a piece of paper lying on the floor. He picked it up and found it to be a receipt in full for a twelve dollar bar-room bill which the laborer had evidently paid the saloonkeeper next door, only a few moments before. He could pay his saloon bill in full, but the furniture, grocery, dry goods, drug and other men must be content with only a part of their money.

In the coal fields disorder has been reduced to a minimum. Men are working more steadily, supporting their families better, and are more reliable in every respect.

Were it not for Pocahontas, just over the border, where liquor in unlimited quantities can be obtained, there would be no evidence of the degrading and demoralizing effects of drunkenness anywhere in this section.

APPLICATIONS FOR CREDIT LESSEN

PHILIP T. LILLY, Manager Lilly Clothing Co.

Although we have passed through a very severe financial depression since our state went into the dry column, I have noticed marked improvement in the condition of the workingmen, our cash sales have increased, and we have fewer applications for credit. Men who formerly squandered their money for drink now have ready money to buy the necessities of life. I understand that deposits in all three of our banks have steadily increased since the saloons closed. Savings accounts and deposits in general are much larger than ever before in the history of Bluefield. There is noticeable among workingmen an increased demand for small homes, which they buy on the installment plan. I have known of several houses being sold before they were completed. I have lived in Bluefield twenty-three years and I have seen less drinking and fewer drunken men this year than ever before. There is no illegal selling or bootlegging of whisky carried on to my knowledge. When business conditions become normal and when the saloons close in Virginia, then Bluefield will be the "garden spot" of the earth.

(Continued on Page Five)

Governor Strong of Alaska Signing the Prohibition Bill

Reading from left to right the persons in the group are: Representative C. K. Snow, author of the bill; Governor J. F. A. Strong (seated); Senator B. F. Millard, chairman of Senate committee on Elections which reported the bill favorably in that body; Representatives A. G. Shoup and W. T. Burns, who, among others, ably supported the bill in the House; W. W. Shorthill, secretary to the governor.

HISTORY OF ALASKA'S PROHIBITION BILL

Special Correspondence

The bill providing for a vote on prohibition throughout Alaska at the general election to be held in November, 1916, was passed by the house of representatives of the Alaska territorial legislature on April 5 by a vote of 14 to 2, and by the senate unanimously on April 9. The vote of the entire membership of the legislature was, therefore, 22 in favor of the bill and 2 against it. There was practically no opposition to the measure, the only criticism being as to the time when it should become effective; and this objection was met by the provision that should the vote at the general election in 1916 be in favor of a dry territory, it should not become effective until January 1, 1918. This was done to afford time for the liquor people to get ready to go out of business after the vote is taken, and also to give the next session of the legislature, which will convene in March, 1917, opportunity to provide means of raising revenue to take the place of that now derived from liquor licenses, a sum amounting to something like $175,000 each year, all of which, outside of incorporated towns, goes toward the expenses of the municipalities and for roads and schools. The incorporated towns receive all of the liquor (and other) business and trade license moneys paid in from businesses conducted within them. The license moneys collected outside of the incorporated towns go into a fund in the United States Treasury known as the "Alaska fund" and are by law distributed as follows: 65% for construction and maintenance of roads and trails in the territory, 25% for the maintenance of white schools outside of incorporated towns, and 10% for the relief of indigent persons in the territory. In many of the incorporated towns the saloon license money alone is sufficient to support the schools, and hence the remark is frequently heard that we support our schools with liquor license money. It is argued, therefore, by not a few that if we close the saloons we will also close the schools. There is a rapidly growing sentiment against this condition of affairs, and the vote in 1916 will, many believe, sound the death-knell of the liquor traffic in Alaska.

Mr. C. K. Snow of Ruby, representative from the fourth judicial division, was the author of the bill above referred to. Mr. Snow, who is a young man about forty years old, has lived in Alaska for more than fifteen years. He is editor of the Ruby Record-Citizen, one of the leading papers of the territory. He was ably supported in the house by Representatives Arthur G. Shoup of Sitka, W. T. Burns of Little Eldorado, near Fairbanks, and Thomas H. Holland of Chitina; also by Representative Martin F. Moran of Shungnak, who is the "farthest north" legislator in Alaska, coming from a point approximately at the junction of longitude 158 and latitude 67. He traveled 2,216 miles over the winter trails to attend the session, and will travel 4,376 miles by the summer routes in returning home.

The bill was referred to the senate committee on elections, of which Senator B. F. Millard of Valdez (Division No. 3) was chairman. The committee reported the bill favorably, and, as above stated, it passed the senate by unanimous vote after only about five minutes' discussion.

Alaska is progressing toward a higher civilization, as well as toward greater material prosperity, and she will no doubt have gone dry before some of the states reach that stage. The present law regulating the liquor traffic is practically a local option measure, and very unsatisfactory; and the belief is rapidly becoming general that prohibition of the traffic throughout the entire territory is the only solution. Many people believe that with proper aid and support from the prohibition organizations in the states, the territory can be put into the dry column in 1916. Already local organizations are being formed to work to that end, but undoubtedly outside help will be necessary.

The passage of the bill in question will no doubt compel the political parties in the territory to take cognizance of it and to insert planks in their platforms for or against prohibition, so that the matter will be directly before the people in the campaign for the election of members of the legislature in the summer and fall of 1916.

One of the two pens used by the governor in signing the prohibition bill was sent by him to Mrs. T. A. Shorthill of Tacoma, Washington, who, in 1900, organized at Skagway the first W. C. T. U. in Alaska.

In and for the future it will be known that no nation can afford to drink. Every molecule of the poison alcohol means a smashed and lost molecule of sugar, the superlative food and fuel for energy, work and warmth. Nations that choose this slow suicide will go down like their predecessors, in the night of time.

Dr. C. W. Saleeby in the London Chronicle.

WHEN WILL UNCLE SAM WAKE UP?

West Virginia Citizens On the Witness Stand

(Continued from Page Three)

BANK DEPOSITS INCREASE

HUGH I. SHOTT, Editor Bluefield Daily Telegraph

An ordinary observer cannot estimate the improvement in conditions that have taken place since West Virginia went dry. In this city, although located near the state line and within twelve miles of where liquor is sold, the difference is marked. People do not "get it anyway," as the saloon advocates say, at least not to the extent that is claimed. A few people do send for intoxicants and some go after them, but usually they are confirmed imbibers. The temptations that social drinking offers are removed from the occasional drinker and from young men who have not acquired the habit, as well as from the boys. The business of the city has been benefited. Since there is no liquor to spend their money for, men who made small salaries and who spent a part of it for liquor and would not be allowed credit by the merchants, have reinstated themselves and pay their bills. Children are better dressed and, in some instances, saving accounts have been started by men who were regarded as worthless a year ago.

The banks show an increase in deposits, rents are as high as they have ever been, business houses are well rented and every room in which a saloon was conducted has been made over and now contains a business that is prosperous. Taxable values increased a million and a half in the county last year. People did not stop coming to the city, the fact being that another hotel has been built since the saloons went out, and a large amount of money invested in it, to take care of the trade that is attracted here. It was said during the campaign that the traveling men who had "made" this city to spend Sunday would seek another in which liquor was sold. The hotel registers show that this class is coming to Bluefield in decidedly increased numbers. The violations of the law in every line except one have decreased, and the police records show this. Illicit liquor sellers are numerous, but are promptly arrested and put to work on the roads, and it is only a question of time when the number who are willing to sell liquor and take the consequences will be exhausted. The prohibition law is being enforced in Bluefield. The cry that it could not be done has been demonstrated as without foundation. West Virginia is enforcing prohibition.

SALOON PROPERTY TRANSFORMED

REYNOLDS & THORNHILL, Brokers

To compare figures now with figures of a year ago does the prohibition cause an injustice, as the awful war being waged in foreign countries has brought about an unforeseen condition in the meantime that has stopped the wheels of commerce, and has cast a gloom over our nation's business.

Under no conditions would the better element of Bluefield want the return of whisky license. So far as the revenue from the licensed saloon goes, it is not missed. Properties formerly occupied by saloons in town have, with the exception of two instances, been remodeled and are today the show places of the city. Three have been turned into handsome drug-stores, one into a beautiful restaurant, one into as handsome a hotel as could be found anywhere. One, and only one, is being used for a barber shop and pool-room, and two are awaiting repairs, that they may be occupied for the purpose of conducting a more honorable business than that of selling whisky.

We doubt exceedingly whether a former saloon man in town could, under any consideration, be induced to return to the whisky business. It is useless to think about conditions from a business standpoint. Any sane, sober, thinking man knows that no town, large or small, can be benefited, directly or indirectly, morally or financially, by saloons.

Ask the opinion of the business people of the neighboring town, Pocahontas, Va., the only wet spot within over one hundred miles, north, east, south or west. They will say, "Away with whisky. It is ruining our business. It is turning over the better element of business to non-licensed towns." Pocahontas is the only black spot on the map of southwest Virginia. It would naturally be thought that the saloons there were doing a land office business. One of them, however, a short while ago went into bankruptcy.

There is no argument in favor of liquor. Our business people are too well satisfied with present conditions to ever think of returning to the open saloon. It is a thing of the past in Bluefield.

Beer Drinker Poor Life Insurance Risk—Poor Surgical Subject

BEER NOT A FOOD

A. B. COOKE, M. D., Los Angeles, Cal.

Beer is a stimulant, not a food. Whatever variable amount of nutritive element it may contain is so small as to be negligible in comparison with its alcoholic content. I have long had the conviction that alcoholic drinks of all kinds should be classed with the poisons. Certainly they serve no purpose in medicine which is not better served by other less dangerous remedies.

BEER MOST HARMFUL OF INTOXICANTS

DR. D. H. KRESS, M. D., New England Sanitarium, Melrose, Mass.

Beer is never taken because of the nutritive properties it contains. It is used solely because it is an intoxicant. Take the alcohol out of beer and its sale is at an end. One glass of beer contains sufficient alcohol to cause intoxication. I do not mean that it will cause a wobble in the gait, but it will cause the mind to wobble. The man under the influence of one glass of beer is not altogether himself. He has lost, in a measure, his power of self-control. His judgment is less reliable. He is not so safe a man in society. By that one drink he has placed himself morally on a lower plane. Immoral acts are committed, not by drunkards, as a rule, but by these moderate drinkers of beer.

The claim is made that "one quart of beer contains one-tenth of a pound of solid food." Let us admit that this is so. One pound of solid food taken in the form of beer would, according to this estimate, cost the consumer not less than one dollar. The same amount of nutrition may be obtained in the form of beans or bread at a cost of less than five cents. Even this small amount of nutrition found in beer is questionable, since it has associated with it, in addition to alcohol, other undesirable properties.

Beer brings about a more rapid degeneracy than whisky. The beer drinker has an abundance of flesh, but it is of an inferior quality. He dies at an age when under normal conditions he should be at his best.

The beer drinker is recognized as a poor life insurance risk and a poor surgical subject.

No—beer is not consumed because it is a food, but always because it is an intoxicant. And, instead of being the least harmful intoxicant, I consider it the most harmful of all intoxicants.

A GREAT SURGEON'S OPINION

DR. HOWARD A. KELLY of Medical School of Johns Hopkins University

The alcoholic always does badly under surgery. In the first place it takes a great deal more anesthetic to get him ready for the operation, and that adds to his risk. In the second place, he is much more likely to have diseased kidneys and liver, and that adds yet more to his risk, and thirdly, the risk of insanity and of pneumonia after an operation is greater. The abstinent man and woman stand operations best.

Prohibition An Undisguised Blessing In North Dakota

M. F. MURPHY, Ex-Mayor of Grand Forks, N. D.

I came to North Dakota a little over thirty-six years ago and have lived here continuously since that time. When I became a resident of the state there were about 7,000 people in what is now North Dakota, but which then was a part of the territory of Dakota. Today it is estimated by the government that the state has a population of something over 700,000. Fargo, then a small village, had several saloons and gambling houses and the moral conditions were as bad as they could be. The saloons multiplied as the population in the state increased, and ten years afterward, when the territory was divided and we organized as North Dakota, there were several thousand saloons in existence. Every little village had one or more, although very few had but one. At that time I was traveling over practically all the state. It was a common occurrence to have farmers come into town and stay until the saloons were closed along about midnight, their wives meantime often having to stay out in the street when the thermometer was twenty to twenty-five degrees below zero. During those ten years of saloons our farmers, particularly those who were patrons of the saloons, and the large majority of them were, made very little financial progress.

Since the saloons went out of existence our state has made most wonderful strides in population and wealth. Although one of the newest and youngest states in the Union, we are rated among those having the highest per capita wealth, and have as low a percentage of crime as any. Our schools and university, too, have as good a standing as those of any of the older states. A large percentage of our progress in every line is due to the fact that we have prohibition.

It is true that some liquor is still shipped into our state, and being shipped in, is used, but there are a great many communities where no liquor is shipped in and the law is being better and better enforced.

Although we had a very small majority for the adoption of prohibition at the time we adopted our state constitution, I am convinced that if a vote were taken at the present time on the issue, prohibition would carry by a very great majority.

North Dakota will never again license the sale of liquor, and our people will gladly do their share in bringing about National Prohibition, knowing that it is best for the people financially, morally and physically.

I pray God to speed the day when liquor of all kinds will be banished from the earth.

PROHIBITION AND CRIME PREVENTION

WORKER WITH RELEASED PRISONERS TRACES CRIME TO DRINKING

Mr. F. Emory Lyon, superintendent of the Central Howard Association of Chicago, an organization which gives assistance to and secures employment for released prisoners, in an article published recently in the Chicago Herald traces the downfall of most of the men helped by the association, to drink. Writing on the "Dry Chicago" movement, he makes the following statements:

A dry Chicago would do more to cure and prevent crime than any other one factor involved in the problem.

It has been said that 90 per cent of the inmates of our prisons have been users of intoxicating liquors and that 50 per cent of their fathers and 20 per cent of their mothers have used it. An eminent prison physician has stated: "At least 70 per cent of crimes are directly or indirectly attributable to alcohol."

During the last fifteen years more than 12,000 released prisoners have come to the Central Howard Association for assistance. Our records show that more than one-third of these men give drink as the direct cause of their downfall. Doubtless two-thirds would be a conservative estimate of the indirect influence apparent in our beneficiaries.

In the meantime I have interviewed many other thousands of prisoners, including life men, whose stories would add volumes to the unending tale of tragedy and woe produced by the bondage of intemperance.

It is a generally known fact that in addition to the large number of felonies committed as the result of drink, millions of minor offenders each year are sent repeatedly to jails and workhouses for no other reason than that the open saloon constantly thrusts before them a temptation they are unable to resist.

It is folly to say this is only because of their weakness, for which society is not responsible. In many instances the weakness is the product of inherited tendencies from inebriate parentage. In many men it is the result of continued fostering of a habit, to which every inducement is made by the licensed public bar.

The percentage of men who are either socially or mentally so abnormal as to commit crime while in their sober senses is small. There are many, however, who immediately lose self-control, or the power of inhibition, under the influence of drink.

No less an authority than William A. Pinkerton has said that all of us are more or less potentially criminal. This innate tendency is kept submerged by most men through habits of temperate self-control.

That the city and state are responsible for deliberately breaking down the resisting power of their citizens there no longer can be any question.

In other words, the problem of crime is not merely a matter of individual responsibility. Its prevention is a question of social and civic obligation.

This fact is constantly impressed upon the Central Howard Association in its endeavor to undo the damage wrought by booze.

WHY NATIONAL PROHIBITION?

REV. CHARLES SHELDON, Topeka, Kansas

(Excerpt from address at Springfield, Ill.)

There are five reasons for the existence of the liquor traffic:

First, the drinking habit of humanity.

Second, the abnormal profit from the manufacture and sale of liquor.

Third, the falsehood, which has been accepted as a truth, that alcohol is good as a medicine, a beverage, and even a food.

Fourth, the falsehood, also accepted as a truth, that the liquor traffic is a necessary evil, and therefore a revenue should be derived from it.

Fifth, the connection of the liquor traffic with politics.

A worldwide sentiment, amounting to a revolution, against the liquor traffic is due to three great facts:

1. The world has discovered the truth about alcohol as a medicine, a beverage and a food. It is neither of these things; but a dangerous, narcotic drug. Science so now declares, getting its results from exhaustive experiments with animals and men.

2. The industrial world is placing the ban on liquor because it robs working men of efficiency. Great corporations are refusing to employ drinking men.

3. The business world has discovered that there is no revenue in a saloon license. The United States government does not receive any real revenue from the liquor traffic. When the people of a nation spend $2,000,000,000 annually for liquor and the government collects $222,000,000, that cannot be called revenue. Nor does this take into account the great army of defectives, insane, idiotic, crippled, paupers and criminals of which the state has to take care.

—Chicago Tribune

The next step in dealing with the liquor traffic is National Prohibition, and the reasons for it are these:

First, it is a national issue because the government draws revenue from the traffic and protects it.

Second, the people are demanding National Prohibition because the liquor states do not protect their humanity from the evil of the liquor traffic. Cities like New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago have so far taken no steps to remove the saloons with all their crime-producing and evil results. Humanity is worth more than property. Humanity is being destroyed by the saloon. If the buildings in these cities were being destroyed by gangs of lawless men, the people would be very indignant and do everything in their power to arrest and punish these men. Liquor is destroying that which is worth more than all the property in these cities. If the liquor states will not protect their humanity, the United States government ought to do it for them. This is not an invasion of state rights, but a protection of them.

Third, the prohibition states themselves demand National Prohibition to protect their state rights.

Fourth, National Prohibition is demanded in the interest of uniformity of legislation. What is a crime in eighteen states ought to be a crime in every other state. If a man makes and sells liquor in Kansas, we put him in jail. If he makes and sells liquor in New York and Pennsylvania, the people send him to the legislature. Such a condition of things is a legal absurdity.

Fifth, our greatest need of National Prohibition is the need of humanity. If people are worth more than property, the liquor traffic ought to be abolished. By the common consent of intelligent mankind alcohol is now known to be the common destroyer. As long as it is made some one will want to sell it, and others will want to drink it.

The only real remedy for the world is the complete annihilation of the traffic by forbidding the manufacture of alcohol as a beverage and medicine.

TWO FAMILIAR ARGUMENTS ANSWERED

(Published by courtesy of the National Editorial Service)

GEORGE H. HODGES, Ex-Governor of Kansas

That prohibition does not prohibit and that Federal prohibition is contrary to the established doctrine of state's rights are the master arguments of the interests who are fighting a losing fight to maintain their license privilege in wet states.

The failure of the German National Bank of Pittsburgh, Pa., whose officers and directors were identified with the Pittsburgh Brewing Company, was attributed by the bank officials to the acute decline of the brewing company's stock. The enactment of prohibitory laws in Virginia and West Virginia and the extension of local option laws in eastern Ohio decreased the demand for brewers' products and financial disaster followed. The assignment of a brewing company in Cincinnati and a large distributing company in Kentucky, whose consuming territory was going dry, is another commercial argument that prohibition does prohibit.

A record of the shipments of liquor into Kansas is filed monthly with our county clerks by the express companies and the common carriers. A Kansas statute compels it. This gives us an accurate method of ascertaining the total quantity of liquors consumed. The amount of the average consumption last year was less than $1.45 for every man, woman and child in our state. The average individual consumption of liquor in Missouri is $24 per capita, although half of the population live under local option laws.

A small mathematical effort proves that prohibition prohibits to the extent of $37,500,000 yearly in Kansas as compared with the consumption by the same number of people, during the same period of time, who live in Missouri. It is $81,000,000 less than the same number of New York citizens use in the same length of time. The New Yorkers use $50 per capita worth of liquor a year or thirty-five times as much as a Kansan uses.

The state's right argument as applied to prohibition is the same ancient argument clothed in a different garb. Some object to Federal enactments, basing their objections upon state's rights. The same objection was offered when the problem of slavery was being solved. The proposition that National Prohibition is contrary to the letter and spirit of our government sounds like the old slavery arguments. Human rights and the welfare of humanity must be given preference in settling all moral questions. State's rights was the only excuse urged against giving the colored race their freedom from bondage. State's rights at that time was a stumbling block that prevented recognition of the rights of man and added years of untold suffering and servitude to human lives. State's rights must not be permitted to interfere with moral rights, of constructive citizenship. State's rights is a weak contention when balanced against the rights of the mother, the rights of the family and against an endeavor that can only bring a better condition to the human race.

A man who has been a Democrat in Kansas all his life has rigid ideas of Democracy. I am a thorough believer in the doctrine of state's rights, but the most sacred right that a state can enjoy is the privilege of changing its constitution when a majority of its electorate so desires. Every voter is an individual living part of the constitution of his state. When the voters desire to change that historic state document—their constitution—it is their privilege so to do. Proper precautions have been provided to safeguard our constitutional commonwealth: legislative restrictions have been provided, but when a constitution cannot be interpreted to meet the present day needs and requirements of the public, then it is the duty, as well as the privilege, of a citizenship to change that constitution so that it may conform to the present day needs and requirements of the public.

The representatives of the southern states splendidly acquitted themselves during the great debate on National Prohibition in the halls of Congress. The

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, May 20, 1915

National Constitutional Prohibition Plans for June

Many influential organizations hold their conventions in June. At meetings of this character occurring in your vicinity, urge the passage of a resolution in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition. Also make use of the opportunity to distribute literature giving arguments in favor of a Federal Constitutional Amendment.

At the institutes and county conventions that will be held during the month of June, plan for an address and a discussion on the subject of National Constitutional Prohibition, and urge the wider circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL.

Get your local papers to publish brief arguments in favor of nationwide prohibition, by Senators, Members of Congress, Governors and other prominent people.

Bring to the attention of the citizens in your community the necessity of electing to Congress and to your state legislature men who are outspoken for National Constitutional Prohibition.

Interest students in high schools and colleges to use as the theme of their graduating essays or orations, "National Constitutional Prohibition."

Send to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill., for the new Prohibition Map (price 15 cents each; two for 25 cents) to display at all public meetings as proof of the progress toward nationwide prohibition.

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

OUR NATIONAL TREASURER

We are glad to report a slight change for the better in the condition of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson, who is seriously ill in one of the hospitals of Portland, Oregon. She is being lovingly remembered in the prayers of all white ribboners. Mrs. Charles W. Roberts, Mrs. Hutchinson's only daughter, is with her.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED

The liquor interests have unwittingly given prohibition in West Virginia much valuable publicity. Their frantic efforts to prove that a deficit in the state treasury is due to the loss of liquor revenue has called forth from loyal citizens of the "little mountain state" strong testimonials on the subject. In the light of the moral, social and economic benefits derived from the prohibitory law, testified to by men of every class, a deficiency of a few thousand dollars seems of comparatively little importance. One is reminded of the words of an English journalist who, in commenting on the contemplated action of the British government, declared it his conviction that "the gain in economic efficiency and in all the true elements of social welfare resulting from prohibition were out of all proportion to the loss of any amount of liquor revenue." "Loss and gain," says the writer, "in such a case are really incommensurate. You cannot measure moral well-being in terms of money."

As a matter of fact the loss of the $600,000 a year in revenue to West Virginia as a result of the adoption of the constitutional prohibition amendment does not impose upon the individual tax-payer any burden worth considering. In a letter written by J. S. Darst, state auditor, which has recently been made public, he shows that five cents additional state taxes on the hundred-dollar valuation will take care of the money loss on liquor licenses. This would cost a man whose property was assessed at $1,000, fifty cents; if he has $2,000 worth, he would have to pay one dollar, and if he had $10,000, he would be obliged to expend five dollars. So much for the enormous load of taxation being thrust upon the property owners of the state because of prohibition! The payment of such insignificant amounts would certainly appeal to a level-headed business man as a mighty good investment, and as the state auditor aptly says:

"If a man is not willing to pay that much that great good may come to the people of his state, that crime may be lessened, that children may be educated, clothed and fed, and their lives prolonged, then he is not in favor of bringing a great moral reform to the people."

A slight temporary increase in taxes is not an argument against prohibition that has force with any except the thoroughly commercialized citizen, who measures all the values of life by a dollars and cents standard.

AN OFFENSE AGAINST IMPRESSIONABLE SOCIETY

Not long ago one of the leading Chicago papers severely criticized an ex-mayor of the city for advertising, in an interview, his enjoyment of alcoholic liquors and describing with some detail the preparation of the popular drink, mint julep. The paper argued that a man of his position, who would naturally be looked up to by young men, has no right to stand for such reprehensible habits of life, and characterized his action as "an offense against impressionable society."

We certainly agree with the journal in its criticism and heartily wish that it would be as outspoken against other flagrant offenses against impressionable society, even more far-reaching in their effects. Chief among these there comes to mind the toleration in every license city of miles of saloons along the public highway which must be traveled day after day by the boys and girls, the young men and women of the impressionable age. The diabolical accessibility, nay the almost omnipresence, of the places for the sale of liquor in many cities, cannot fail to place upon the minds and characters of their future citizens, a stamp for evil. Familiarity with vice and impurity make it seem less repulsive. Young people living in a saloon-tainted atmosphere cannot fail to think saloon thoughts, harbor saloon ideals, become possessed by saloon ambitions. It is fearfully significant of the way in which the people who make their fortunes from the manufacture of liquor regard the environment created by the saloon, that they frequently select as their places of residence, in which to raise their families, prohibition territory.

Not a trifling sin is this offense against impressionable society, but one that shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generations. We owe it to the men and women who are to make the history of the next hundred years to give them in their formative years a wholesome, elevating environment. The abolition of the liquor traffic from every city, town and village of the United States will go a long way towards making this possible.

"IT'S SUCH A BOTHER"

"I never drink liquor except to take a glass of wine when I am at dinner, because it's such a bother explaining that I never drink," remarked the other day a man who prided himself upon his exemplary habits of life. What a wealth of opportunity this man and his class are losing. "Such a bother" to explain that he would not drink because he has discovered that alcohol injures his health, when, perhaps, across the table from him was a young fellow just starting out in life who was debating with himself whether or not to turn down his glass. "Such a bother" when among his fellow guests there may have been a man cursed with an inherited appetite, who was trying with all his power to resist the temptation to indulge, and needed a reassuring word from some stronger-willed brother. "Such a bother," but the man who quietly and courteously declines to drink and explains his attitude on the question will rise in the esteem of all whose opinions are of value.

It is trite to say that nowadays the man who does not consider it "a bother" to explain that he does not drink will find it an asset of no inconsiderable value from a business point of view. Whatever may be the personal habits of men of affairs and leaders in the industrial world they not only respect but look with favor upon an individual who possesses the good sense and the moral courage to refrain from drink, and other things being equal, rate him as one who can be trusted in matters of great moment in the commercial world.

MEMORIAL FOUNTAIN TO MRS. STEVENS

A fountain in memory of Lillian M. N. Stevens is to grace the streets of Portland, Maine, the city which for so many years was her home. The fountain is to be a replica of the Frances E. Willard drinking fountain in Chicago, executed by George E. Wade of London. The design represents a child holding a cup of water. The basin at the base, intended for dogs and birds, is to be made of Maine granite, and the fountain itself is to be of bronze. The idea of this memorial originated with Miss Anua A. Gordon, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and met with a hearty response from the Maine white ribboners. A committee was appointed to take the matter in charge, and at the April meetings of the various unions in the state, offerings were made which form the nucleus of the fund to be used for the fountain. Contributions are to be voluntary, and it is expected that the children of the "pine-tree" state, who were so beloved by Mrs. Stevens and for whom she did so much, will be largely represented among the donors.

While no location has as yet been decided upon for the fountain, it is very probable that some spot near the center of the city of Portland, and in the vicinity of the state W. C. T. U. headquarters, will be selected. The committee in charge of the plan consists of Mrs. George S. Hunt and Mrs. Whitman Sawyer of Portland, and Mrs. Edna Rowan Harvey of Milo, Maine.

A TRIBUTE TO THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

DANIEL A. POLING

President's Associate of the United Society of Christian Endeavor and President of the National Temperance Council. (As delivered by Mr. Poling in an address with the Flying Squadron of America)

It is prophetic of reform, even as it is a fact of religion, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

At this strategic point, let the whole world say, "Thank God for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union." For the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in public schools and private, in Sunday schools and in the home, here a little and there a little, with all the winsomeness of mother love and with the unanswerable data of exact science, has told the truth about alcohol and the liquor traffic.

More than any other organization of the great reform, this organization has appreciated the vital place of the educational program. Without neglecting to promote political action against the saloon, it has made the whole earth its school-room and taught rising generations to understand and hate beverage alcohol.

My mother wore over her heart a bow of white, and at her knee was shaped my first sword for this fight.

Today, a thoroughly equipped and irresistible army of sons and daughters born of the womb, taught of the mind, and inspired of the soul of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is carrying the war for world-wide prohibition to the last battlements of King Alcohol.

It is my profound conviction that, in the final day, when prohibition has become a fact of world government, when the pages are brought together and the books made up, more pages will be devoted to chronicling the consecrated activities of the "White Ribbon Army" of the world than are given over to telling the story of any other movement of this stupendous conflict.

AMONG THE STATES

The friends and admirers of Oswald West, former governor of Oregon, rejoice over the outcome of the damage suit against him vindicating his action in the famous raid of the saloons of Copperfield, conducted by Fern Hobbs, the governor's private secretary, under his orders. The court, after seven hours' deliberation, delivered a verdict that ex-Governor West was entirely within his rights in declaring martial law and taking possession of the stock of liquors.

Claude Kitchin, United States Congressman from North Carolina, who has been elected to succeed Oscar W. Underwood as Democratic floor leader in the House of Representatives, is reported to have predicted that National Prohibition will go into effect inside of ten years. Mr. Kitchin is well known as a believer in prohibition, statewide and nationwide. Coming from the saloonless state of North Carolina, he speaks from experimental knowledge of the value of prohibition.

Plans are under way by the Michigan temperance forces to secure a popular vote on a prohibition amendment to the state constitution at the 1916 election. While only 50,000 signatures to the petition are necessary to secure an election, it is said the temperance forces will work for 100,000 names.

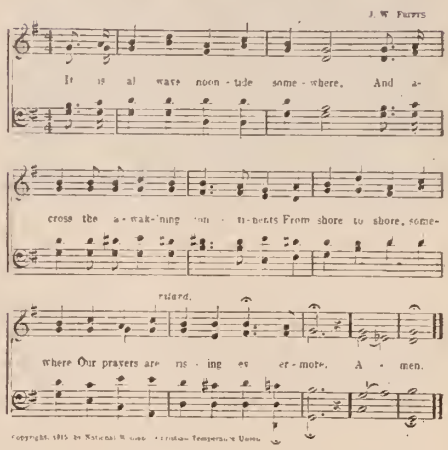
The Alabama supreme court has upheld the law, passed at the last session of the legislature, which bars liquor advertising from all newspapers in the state, and also prohibits the circulation in the state of outside papers carrying liquor advertisements.

As a result of the May election in Hartford City, Ind., its fifteen saloons will cease to exist within ninety days. The vote was the heaviest ever cast in a city election, and the credit for the victory is in large measure due to Evangelist Bob Jones who conducted a four weeks' revival in the city during the winter.

"The courts of this state will take judicial notice that the word 'beer,' unqualified and standing alone, means a malt, intoxicating liquor, without further proof." This sentence in a decision handed down by the Supreme Court of Colorado recently destroyed for all time any hopes that the liquor dealers may have cherished of a possibility of selling "3 per cent beer" in the state of Colorado as a soft drink.

Every distillery in the second collection district of Virginia closed its doors April 30 as a result, according to report, of the successful operation of the North Carolina prohibition law and because statewide prohibition will be effective in Virginia before many months.

Time of Prayer—Noontide



WHEN LOVE GOES MARCHING ON

Tune: "Battle Hymn of the Republic"
Annie Nuttall

Do you hear the distant tramping of the army of the Lord;
Love's great army of the faithful who believe his promised word;
Who still will claim his victory wherever hearts are stirred
To help his cause along.

Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Our cause is marching on!

'Tis a conqu'ring army surely! See the banners they have won!
Hear the joyous song they're singing of the bloodless battle done!
For their conquest means for captured hosts new life and health begun, Means Goodness marching on.

Ah, it's coming nearer, nearer, God be praised 'tis almost here,
When deliv'rance will be certain from our country's direst fear,
When drinkdom's overturned at last, God's kingdom may draw near,
And Love go marching on.

If love has ever proved to you its power to dare and do,
Oh, pay the debt you owe to love, its pledges here renew.
Oh, hasten now your laggard feet and boldly make it true
That Love goes marching on.

Loud and clear love's bugle calleth. Know you not it calls for YOU?
Quick! obey your highest instincts, bind to rectitude anew!
Seize your chance for noblest living, all love's foes to death pursue,
And know Love marches on.

PERSONAL MENTION

Among recent visitors at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters were Miss Jennie Vail and Miss Catherine M. Osborn, of Tokyo, Japan, both of whom are members of the W. C. T. U. and especially interested in the work in the "Sunrise" Kingdom. They brought greetings from Madame Yajima, president of the Japan W. C. T. U., to Miss Anna A. Gordon, and spoke enthusiastically of the progress of the temperance movement in Tokyo.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday of Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

MEDICAL TEMPERANCE

MRS. MARTHA M. ALLEN

Will all local unions in places where physicians have given addresses or written articles against alcohol please send me the names and addresses of such physicians soon? If they are osteopaths, please say so, as I want an exact list of medical men and women who are aiding in the great anti-alcohol fight. Do not neglect this request.

Nine hundred physicians of Philadelphia recently signed a petition to the state legislature asking for a local option law.

At the recent annual gathering of the Ohio Medical Society some of the leading physicians and surgeons of the state organized a state Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics. The W. C. T. U. superintendent of Medical Temperance for Ohio, Mrs. Emma C. Quayle, worked heroically for the formation of this society.

An unfortunate error was recently published in a temperance journal stating that a small quantity of alcohol can be utilized by the body as food and that alcohol is "digested" and "assimilated" in the body. Professor Atwater, himself, never made such a claim as this for alcohol. He states that small quantities of alcohol are burned (oxidized) in the body, and he said this oxidation proved that alcohol is a food. His claim was opposed by many of the best authorities on alcohol who show that morphia and other poisonous substances never classed as foods are burned (chemically changed) in the body. Let no one be misled by the erroneous statement of Dr. David Starr Jordan. Alcohol is not digested and assimilated. It is burned quickly in the body in small quantity as is gunpowder in a stove, and the human "stove" is likely to suffer from the effects of the combustion.

The Minneapolis W. C. T. U. has secured consent from the city superintendent of schools and from the board of education to have the two leaflets for young men, "Alcohol the Young Man's Greatest Enemy," and "Alcohol Hinders Business Success," given to 4,000 boys in high schools and in the eighth grades of that city. This is a grand work which the W. C. T. U. in other cities might well imitate.

Summer Work

The time is now here when the leaflet, "Save the Babies," will be useful to many mothers. It will make friends for the W. C. T. U. as it is helpful where help is likely to be appreciated. Scatter the leaflets, "What is in Soft Drinks?" and "Opinions of Medical Experts on Coca Cola." Use "A Medical Temperance Quiz," and "A Patent Medicine Quiz," at W. C. T. U. picnics, in Sunday schools and elsewhere to help on programs. The "Safe Remedies" leaflet is still a standby to give to new members, and indeed it should be in every home, as dear Mrs. Stevens once said she wished it could be.

This department has leaflets covering almost every phase of the medical temperance question. Among these are "Do Weak Hearts Need Alcohol?" "Do Alcoholic Liquors Aid Digestion?" "Beer Drinking Injures Health" "Alcohol Injures Children," "Medical Opinions of Alcohol," etc. These helpful leaflets do no good on my shelves or on the shelves of our National W. C. T. U. Publishing House at Evanston. It is only as you use them that the Heavenly Father can bless the truths contained in them to the help of human lives. Use them prayerfully and they will be a powerful influence for the prohibition of the liquor curse. A sample package of fifty leaflets will be sent for 30 cents.

Ohio is the only state that seems to be making any particular effort to win the prize offered for the study course on alcohol in the local unions, yet even that state has not nearly come up to the required number of unions studying in order that a prize may be awarded. Forty unions is the required number. This study adds greatly to the interest of the meetings of the local unions pursuing it, and it takes only a short time at the beginning of each meeting—time usually wasted in chat. As the battle for prohibition gains in intensity there is increased need for knowledge of the facts against alcohol. This study is upon the two books, "Alcohol and the Human Body," by Sir Victor Horsley, and "Alcohol, a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine," by Mrs. Allen. At present no copies of the former book are to be had, so, until a new edition comes from England, the study can be pursued on the second book. These books can be purchased from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House or from me; the questions for study and directions for carrying it on can be obtained from me. The Horsley book costs 50 cents; the other, a much larger book, is $1.25. Questions on each 5 cents a copy.

Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y.

HERE AND THERE

Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, National W. C. T. U. superintendent of Franchise, recently visited Buffalo, N. Y., in connection with work on behalf of suffrage. While in the city she gave a talk of twenty minutes to the office force of the great Larkin Company, her audience consisting of about 1,300 girls and between 200 and 300 men. It was a significant fact that the time was taken from the working hours, Mrs. Livingston speaking from 11:40 to 12 o'clock. Her theme was National Constitutional Prohibition. This was the second time Mrs. Livingston had been asked to address the employes of the company, a previous engagement preventing acceptance of the first invitation.

It speaks well for the future of a state when its young people evince a keen interest in prohibition. Mrs. V. E. Mohler, writing of her home city, St. Albans, West Virginia, says that over 146 essays on temperance and prohibition have been handed in by students of the seventh and eighth grades and the first year high school. The superintendent of schools informs her that hereafter the study of the subject will be compulsory, as he has added it to the requirements for graduation.

Mansfield (O.) W. C. T. U. has just completed a house to house canvass of the city under the direction of Mrs. Mary Jennings, which resulted in a gain of 229 new active members, twenty-seven sustaining members and the organization of two L. T. L.'s. This enterprising union now has a membership of more than 300 regular members.

Allen county, Indiana, Mrs. Martha J. Ridenour, president, considers itself fortunate in having had the services of Mrs. Lora S. LaMance for a campaign of a week, April 22-29, inclusive. She visited eight towns and gave fifteen addresses. The city of Fort Wayne (Allen county) enjoyed a treat when the "Flying Squadron" came to the city, April 30 to May 2. Dr. Charles Sheldon, Mr. Daniel A. Poling, Ira Landrith, Dr. Carolyn E. Geisel, Hon. J. Frank Hanly and Oliver Wayne Stewart were among the speakers.

FIGHT THE TRAFFIC—NOT THE MAN

LORA S. LA MANCE

Poor saloon man! He is Ichabod. "The glory hath departed." He is soon to step down and out, and he knows it.

These three things are true of the liquor man: (1) He is in the business solely to make money. (2) He respects the Christianity that fights him. (3) He fears the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but he honors it. To illustrate, let me mention several incidents, using fictitious names in connection therewith:

In the wild and woolly days of the wild and woolly west a certain Dick Walton opened a saloon in a small border town. Dick swore like a trooper; he drank, played poker and prided himself on his lurid ways. For three months he did a flourishing business. One morning his customers found the door locked. He stubbornly refused to unlock it and at last cried out: "Dick Walton may be a blankety-blank of a feller, but he ain't bad enough to run a saloon!" In other words, this wild, harum-scarum, but big-hearted saloon-keeper found that his business was turning him into a cool, base, hard, calculating and unprincipled man, ready to prey on defenseless women and children, and he gave up his business.

No Real Defense

Liquor men with good impulses are to be pitied. Their business is as demoralizing to them as it is to their customers. Rarely do they defend their business per se. They say, "I am in for the money there is in it." "If I do not sell liquor, someone else will." "It is legitimate because I have a license." "I would not be running a saloon today if the names of church members had not been signed to my petition." "Some one is going to sell liquor, and I might as well be that one." "If the saloon were gone, the whisky drug-store and bootlegger would come in." Liquor men have not a word of praise for the business in which they are engaged. They offer excuse upon excuse for it, but no real defense.

They may blaspheme, and they may scoff at religion, but in their hearts they have a real respect for the Christians who straightforwardly oppose them.

"Send for Mrs. Smith"

In the Southland a plucky little woman actively made war on the saloons in her town. A saloon-keeper openly threatened to ruin her family financially. Nothing was too mean for him to say or do. One day there was a shooting scrape in his saloon. Standing by a pool of blood, the saloon-keeper with scared white face said, "Send for Mrs. Smith." He did not ask for the services of timid Deacon Praywell, who was afraid to open his mouth on the liquor question, nor did he desire the presence of Minister Softly, who was lukewarm on the subject, but he wanted the brave little woman who had fought his business year in and year out. Mrs. Smith came. She took the injured man's head in her lap, and there, with kegs and bottles all around her, and with blood smearing her dress, she lifted her voice in prayer.

At one time there was a hot local option fight on in a harbor town on the Pacific Coast. A noted prohibition speaker made an address on the streets, in which he said something that stirred the wrath of the stevedores and wharf-rats. A riot ensued, the police clubbed their way in and eight men were arrested. The next night, very much against my friends' wishes, I spoke from an automobile at the very same place and to the very same crowd. They listened respectfully. I said, "We must protect the boys for whom Jesus Christ died. You know about Jesus. He chose to come to the earth as a poor man. He worked at the carpenter's bench to support his mother. He cared for the poor, the down-cast, the sick and the afflicted. He was ready to forgive the sinner, ready to help the weak. He went about doing good. With His precious blood he paid the debt for you and for me." A bull-necked bartender, standing there with his white apron on, lifted his hat. Instantly the gang of rowdies, street loafers, bartenders and toughs bared their heads and stood in as reverential an attitude as would any congregation in church or cathedral. Hardened as they were, in their heart of hearts they believed the gospel message.

Liquor people hate the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. They fear it. They dread its power. Yet they have a respect, even an admiration for the organization that opposes them relentlessly, persistently, continually, yet with Christian charity.

During a bitter city campaign a band of devoted white ribboners was stationed in a certain slum precinct, where there was a gang of liquor men with several saloon-keepers at their head. These ward-heelers bullied and browbeat the women. When their insults became too flagrant, one of the saloon-keepers pushed his blackguard companions back and said sternly, "You can't talk to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union like that! Stand back and behave yourselves!"

"We Like You"

In another town thugs and dead-beats were sent out to run women from the polls. They mockingly saluted white-haired women as "Aunt Sukie" and "Aunt Tilda." They laughed and mocked as the women prayed. They had a band that played its loudest whenever the temperance people tried to sing. They went so far as to push women headlong from the steps and to throw them out of the doors of buildings, where they had mounted guard to stop liquor being carried out into alley or back street. I was thrown out bodily with the others. This gang swore at the women, slurred them, openly ridiculed them. Nevertheless, when the polls closed, the leader of the gang, who looked every inch the tough that he was, came up to me and frankly said, "Us boys want to shake hands with you. You fought us hard, but you are the right stuff, and we like you." They respect those who are not afraid to stand for the right.

He Knew She Was Right

In a Missouri town a desperate character, intoxicated, attempted to run white ribboners from their post at the entrance to the polls. He absolutely threatened them and it appeared for a moment as if the W. C. T. U. leader might be shot. She looked the infuriated brute straight in the eye and refused to withdraw her women. Her very quickness disconcerted him and he failed to discharge his weapon. She talked to him, calmly but firmly, and at last he went away and left her holding the fort. The next day he said, "I like that woman. She isn't afraid to stand her ground. She was right and she knew I knew it."

Twice in liquor-polluted towns I have had timid bankers and merchants refuse to place prohibition posters in their windows, fearing it would hurt their business. Each time I appealed to the chief saloon-keepers, who agreed to put the tabooed posters in their own windows. It proved most effective advertising. Last year when my foot was so injured in the Oregon campaign that I could not step on it, and no vehicle could be found to take me to my appointment, a saloon-keeper himself brought his automobile and himself assisted me into the church. One can but think these men are too good for their business!

My policy is this: Fight the liquor traffic and fight it hard. Fight the business, but not the man who runs it. He is a man gone wrong, but nevertheless a man. Do not hate him. Hate the traffic. Get him out of this bad business and the day will come when, if he has a particle of manhood about him, he will rejoice that this sinful traffic no longer has a hold on him, and he is free to look the world in the face.

A DRAWING CAMPAIGN

A small girl went home from school at Ketchikan, Alaska, after a talk to the children by Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Hatcher, president of the territorial W. C. T. U., and excitedly announced to her mother that she was "going to sign the mustard roll." Mrs. Hatcher repeated the information to her audience that night and told them that the temperance forces intended to put considerable ginger into the campaign for prohibition and the children would supply a "right smart of mustard." The combination would make a plaster that would draw every dry voter to the polls on November 4, 1916.

INSOMNIA

Leads to Madness, If Not Remedied

"Experiments satisfied me, some 5 years ago," writes a Topeka woman, "that coffee was the direct cause of the insomnia from which I suffered terribly, as well as extreme nervousness and acute dyspepsia.

"I had been a coffee drinker since childhood, and did not like to think that the beverage was doing me all this harm. But it was, and the time came when I had to face the fact, and protect myself. I therefore gave up coffee abruptly and absolutely, and adopted Postum for my hot drink at meals.

"I began to note improvement in my condition very soon after I took on Postum. The change proceeded gradually, but surely, and it was a matter of only a few weeks before I found myself entirely relieved—the nervousness passed away, my digestive apparatus was restored to normal efficiency, and I began to sleep restfully and peacefully.

"These happy conditions have continued during all of the 5 years, and I am safe in saying that I owe them entirely to Postum, for when I began to drink it I ceased to use medicines."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage Instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

REVEILLE

GUY FITCH PHELPS

Like the watcher on the tower
  Who beheld the Polish king,
While a wronged and famished people prayed below;
  We have set our temperance warders,
We have heard their clarion ring
  That the Sons of Honor march upon the foe.
They are coming! They are coming!
  Like the gathering of the clans,
They are coming like the billows of the sea;
  For their bugles sound reveille
In the midst of all the lands,
  With the battle cry, "Saloons shall cease to be!"

Where the spring a robe is weaving
  For the shoulders of the hill
On the far-off rugged slopes of glorious
    Maine;
  To the dreamy land of Sunset
Does the gathering shout instil
  The awakened hearts of valley, shore and plain.
For the Teuton like the glacier
  Melting in a summer flood,
Speaks in Anglo-Saxon courage hot and high:
  And Semitic teachers rally
To the honor of one God
  Who has trailed the proclamation on the sky.

God has phonographed the moaning,
  He has photographed the want,
He has bottled up the streams of woman's tears;
  In the breast of retribution
He will open up a fount
  That will wash away the drunkenness of years.
For the Christ goes forth to battle
  With his garments rolled in red,
And a flaming sword of fire in his hand;
  And the triumphs of his kingdom
Are the crowns upon his head,
  While the marching of his legions shakes the land.

On the snowy hills of promise
  Breaks a brighter, better day,
Soon the reeking night of Bacchus shall be gone;
  For corruption's shades are stealing
Like detested things away,
  And the morning stars are singing of the dawn.
They are coming! They are coming!
  Like the gathering of the clans,
They are coming like the billows of the
    sea;
  For their bugles sound reveille
In the midst of all the lands,
  With the battle cry, "Saloons shall cease to be!"

Philomath, Oregon.

HOW THE LOGGERS SAVED GEM CITY

W. D. BROWNING, Seabright, Cal.

Gem City was a nice quiet little prohibition town near that part of California where the big redwood trees grow. There are many logging camps in that part of the country and sometimes we loggers would go to Gem City to do our trading and again to some burg where liquor was sold.

I noticed when one of the boys visited a drinking town he was pretty apt to come home without much to show for his month's wages, and that after a trip or two of that kind, when he had become downright ragged and out at the heel, he would generally pull himself together and go to Gem City to get his outfit. You see when any of us went to the prohibition burg we would make out a list of things that we wanted to buy and be reasonably sure of coming home with the goods, but when we struck out for one of those booze towns—well, a chap would have with him when he went fifty or seventy-five dollars and return to the camp in two or three days with a pair of new socks and a headache. Sometimes he didn't even have the socks, and he would come sulking back home looking as ornery as a sheep-killing dog and feeling still worse.

Well, naturally, most of us were glad that there was one place where we could buy our boots, clothes and similar things and be reasonably sure that we were going to get what we went after, and when one of the boys brought the word that, on account of the trade they were losing, the merchants of Gem City were going to hold a meeting to consider re-submitting the prohibition question to the people, most of the boys, even the hardest drinking ones, didn't like the idea a bit. We wanted at least one town we could go to without spending all our money for booze, and the more we talked it over the more positive we became that we didn't want Gem City to sell liquor again.

Finally it was settled that Cal Peters, Link Ewing, and myself should go to the meeting and put in a word as to our wishes in the matter. We arrived in Gem City a little before noon and took dinner at a sort of coffee club eating house that some of the ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union had started during Gem City's drinking days. It was a nice homey sort of a little place with books and newspapers to read and checkers, chess and several other kinds of games for any one who wanted to play them.

I left Cal and Link playing a game of checkers while I went over to the desk to explain to the motherly little woman in charge what we had come for. Say, but she was glad all over. She shook hands with me and then went over and shook hands with the boys at the checker board, and then came back and shook hands with me again, and patted me on the shoulder just as if I had been her own boy. Somehow that patting got me for a minute and my eyes grew sort of misty. You see my own mother died when I was a wee mite of a kid and chaps like me get little enough mothering in our rough life. That is what makes it so sweet, but rather upsetting when it does come.

The other boys finished their game of checkers and the little lady got them to come over to the desk, too, and between the four of us we planned what we would do and say at the meeting that night. After we had talked the matter over for fifteen or twenty minutes the three of us went and sat down at one of the tables and ordered our dinners. I guess the little mother-woman had passed the word back into the kitchen that we were to have a little extra, for we certainly did get a fine dinner, and at supper time, too, the best was none too good for us, and I never ate better food before or since than those two meals I ate at that little temperance restaurant.

After supper we were introduced to quite a few folks. They were ladies mostly and though some of them were right pretty and so good to look at I couldn't help wondering why the men who were in favor of temperance didn't show up. I finally said something about this to the little mother-woman. "Oh, quite a few of them help us in a quiet way," she explained, "but they say that it will hurt their business to be too active."

"I admire their spunk—not at all." I said. "The other side doesn't seem a bit bashful about hurting business or human beings either!"

"I know," she said a little sadly, "they are always bold and aggressive, and there are mostly only the women to fight the evil that they defend, but——" and here she brightened up and patted me on the shoulder again—"tonight we have you boys to help us."

Now, I had been getting a little weak-kneed as the time for the meeting drew near, but that last pat on the shoulder and the confidence the little woman seemed to have that we boys could help save the day for temperance put new spunk into me, and when we went to the meeting I led our little bunch of temperance folks right to a seat in the front of the hall near the speaker's desk as bravely as did even David going up against Goliath.

I soon sized up the audience and felt sure that most of the crowd was against us. The chairman—well, he'll be dealt with later. When the meeting was called to order the chairman and two or three others spoke in favor of re-submitting the prohibition question. Each one professed to be in favor of a dry town, but protested that we loggers went to the wet towns to do our trading and that business was growing so poor that it was very near a question of having a wet town or no town at all. Oh, it made our ears burn a little to hear these remarks. You see we had on our best clothes and nobody knew that we three were loggers. The chairman went on to say that he had figured up that each time a logger went to some other town because he was not able to buy whisky in Gem City, the merchants lost thirty dollars worth of trade. That reference to money made me think of something, and I was on my feet instantly.

"Mr. Chairman," I said, "perhaps the merchants of Gem City would gain their thirty pieces of silver by selling their fellow men to the saloons, but did it ever occur to you that we boys might object to being thus sold?"

"Who are you, and what have you got to do with this meeting?" blustered the chairman.

"Oh, I am just one of the loggers who helps pay your son-in-law's saloon license over at Black Point, Mr. Morrison," I came back at him. "I can perfectly well understand your motive in wanting saloons to be allowed to open in Gem City. Your son-in-law has made Black Point

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

From west to east, from south to north,
We boys and girls are marching forth
To lay the liquor traffic low.
With happy hearts we are afield,
We're boys and girls who never yield,
The liquor traffic now must go!

Chorus:
In Nineteen Twenty comes the day,
Comes the children's happy day;
In Nineteen Hundred Twenty
There'll be prohibition plenty
When Columbia drives the drink away.
—A. A. G.

The Patriotism of Highland Grove School

SARAH N. McCREERY, Burlington, Iowa

When Howard Vance came to the Highland Grove school he proved a different kind of teacher from any one who had ever before held the position. Real flowers, plants, animals and bugs served as his nature studies and he used a great many objects in teaching arithmetic, saying, "What goes in through the eyes sticks, for there are no eyes in the back of the head through which a fact may escape." He listened to the conversation of his pupils and taught grammar outside of school hours as well as during them.

United States history was the subject that aroused the interest of the older boys. Mr. Vance taught it by use of maps and clay models. He told many interesting personal incidents of great men that appealed to all the class and he showed by models just how battles are fought.

"I used to think history was the driest study," Hugh Gennings declared one morning to his parents, "but Mr. Vance has taught me that instead of being just a lot of dry facts and dates to be memorized it shows the growth and development of the United States from the very beginning."

"I feel as if I knew all the men who helped to found the United States, Mr. Vance has told us so much about them," added Joe Frances, who had stopped for Hugh on his way to school. These boys expressed the feeling of the others about their teacher.

That very day in the history class Mr. Vance talked of men who had done much for their country and who had shown their patriotism by their willingness to sacrifice for it by going to war for liberty and the right.

"I would go to battle if the call should ever come," declared Orville James stoutly.

"So would I," agreed George Webster. "I would be willing to give up everything to show how much I love the flag," and he pointed to the American colors draped above the door.

One boy after another told what he would be willing to do to show his patriotism. At last all had spoken but Grant Williams, who was a very studious boy and the least talkative one in the class.

"Well, Grant, what do you think about it? How would you show your patriotism?" asked Mr. Vance. Grant started as he heard his name called. He had been so deep in thought that he had scarcely heard what the others had said.

"I think we can show our patriotism every day by being good citizens," he said slowly. "I am going to be honest in my dealings; going to try to live a clean life and not to injure my body by smoking cigarets, cigars or a pipe or waste my money on such things. With God's help I do not intend to drink, and I will endeavor to do right and to keep others from doing wrong. If I am just the best kind of citizen I know how to be, I think I will be showing the right kind of patriotism. Father says I will." Grant looked a little scared because he had said so much.

"Good for you, Grant!" exclaimed Mr. Vance. "If you live up to those resolutions you will indeed be a patriotic man. Have you ever signed the temperance pledge?" Grant shook his head. Mr. Vance opened his desk. "I always have some pledge cards with me," he said. "I wonder if you wouldn't sign one today?" Grant went quickly forward to the desk and did as Mr. Vance requested.

"How many others, just as Grant has done, would like to show their patriotism right now by enlisting in the war against liquor? It is truly as great a war as has ever been fought."

One after another came forward until all the boys and girls in the history class had signed the pledge.

"Now wouldn't some of the other scholars like to sign?" asked Mr. Vance, reading the pledge aloud.

Arthur Rice took the lead and before long every scholar had taken a stand for prohibition.

"Some of you have, perhaps, missed a lesson," said Mr. Vance as the clock announced the noon hour, "but you have done something which is very important. You have been laying a foundation for character and setting a high standard for the future scholars of Highland Grove school. I am glad that Grant said what he did, for it gave you all an opportunity to show your patriotism right now." Orville James led the school in three cheers for Mr. Vance.

KOREANS ON THE WATER WAGON

"Just the other day," writes Methodist Missionary John Z. Moore in the Central Christian Advocate, "I visited a busy little Korean village, not far from Pyeng Yang. Eight years ago it had twenty-five houses and eight saloons. Now it has sixty houses and no saloon. Only three or four drinking men are to be found in the whole place. Many entire families have been converted, and there is said to be at least one Christian in every home. A thriving school work is another hopeful sign. Much credit for all this advance is due to the wideawake native pastor."

OBJECT OF LIQUOR ADVERTISING DEFEATED

The words, "Vote wet," may look well to the liquor people, but when painted in large letters on city sidewalks and everywhere in the form of posters, confronting voters, they may sometimes have an unexpected effect. This was possibly the case in the city of Poynette, Wis., which was so posted and painted before the recent election. For twenty years Poynette has been kept in the dry column through the unrelenting efforts of the temperance people, and this year, although the liquor interests felt confident of victory, the vote was for a continuation of the previous dry policy.

HOW THE LOGGERS SAVED GEM CITY

(Continued from Page Twelve)

such a hole with the dive that he runs there that nobody but we wicked loggers dares to go to the place, so now he wants to come to Gem City and do the same thing."

I ran my eye over the crowd. "Some of you have been over to Black Point," I continued. "Did you notice the handsome paved streets built from the license money received from its dozen or more saloons? You did not. There isn't a foot of paved street in the place nor a decent piece of sidewalk. I have been around drinking towns enough to know that it takes all the money that comes from drink to pay for the wear and tear that drink makes, and we three loggers are here tonight to tell you that we don't want Gem City to go wet. We would like to have one town that we can come to for our outfits without any danger of spending all of our money for booze. I have a paper here signed by a hundred and seventeen of the boys," I went on, pulling out the document as I spoke, "that runs to the effect that if Gem City goes wet again we will send to a Chicago mail-order house for our goods. That's our ultimatum." I sat down. For a moment you could have heard a pin drop. I guess

It's a short way to prohibition
It's the right way to go.
It's a sure way to bring salvation
To the greatest land I know.
Let's all stick together
Let this be our cry
It's a short, short way to prohibition
And our Nation will go dry.

some of those merchants were as surprised at our protest as if a fish had stepped out of the river and objected to the fashion of fishing. Finally, however, a chap in the back of the hall arose and with a sort of a dry grin said: "Our wet friends seem to have run up against the ultimate consumer and as the victims don't seem to want Gem City to go wet, I move that this meeting adjourn sine die."

And so that was the end of the movement against prohibition in Gem City, and we loggers still have a decent town to go to. We think the merchants of that little burg are beginning to find out that in the long run a dry town pays when it comes to a question of who gets the trade.

Hints

for

Commencement Gifts

BOOKS—

LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, $1.50.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS, Frances E. Willard. Price, 60 cents.

HOW I LEARNED TO RIDE THE BICYCLE, Frances E. Willard. Price, 40 cents.

WHAT FRANCES E. WILLARD SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 75 cents.

WHAT LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 50 cents.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC, William E. Johnson. Price, $1.00.

COMPENDIUM OF TEMPERANCE TRUTH, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO GIRLS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO BOYS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TELL STORIES TO CHILDREN, Sarah Cone Bryant. Price, $1.10.

THE TYRANT IN WHITE, (Anti-Cigaret story). Price, $1.00.

A SINGULAR LIFE, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. Price, $1.25.

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. Price, $1.37.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. Price, $1.47.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, Jack London. Price, $1.42.

A MODERN MADONNA, Caroline A Stanley. Price, $1.50.

JEAN MITCHELL'S SCHOOL, Angeline Ray. Price, $1.00.

LOIS MORTON'S INVESTMENT, Eva Murphy. Price, $1.35.

TWO, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 40 cents.

FRECKLES, Gene Stratton Porter. Price 60 cents.

All books cloth bound. Prices include prepaid carriage.

SOUVENIR SPOONS

W. C. T. U. TEASPOON, showing Crusade Church on bowl.

REST COTTAGE TEASPOON, Rest Cottage in bowl.

Spoons made of sterling silver. Price, $1.50 each.

REST COTTAGE SOUVENIR

A TERRA COTTA PLAQUE, cottage in bas relief, hand carved and hand tinted. Price $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Returns from 350 cities and towns of Massachusetts, just compiled by Mr. Robert H. Magwood, show a shrinkage in the total vote for license of 13,042, or 6 per cent, and an increase in the vote for no-license of 7,847, or 3.6 per cent.

SEVERE BLOW TO FLORIDA SALOONS

Governor Park Trammell of Florida closed a bitter legislative struggle between the wet and dry forces of the state when on May 5 he signed the Davis package bill, a measure that was passed by both the senate and the house after the statewide prohibition bill had been voted down. This bill provides that liquor can be sold only in original packages and will abolish the sale of liquor by the glass in clubs and hotels as well as saloons. After September 30, when the measure becomes effective, the saloon as now known in the state will cease to exist. In addition to the package feature, the bill provides that saloons shall be closed between the hours of seven o'clock p. m. and seven o'clock a. m., and on Sundays and election days; that liquor shall not be sold to any one of intemperate habits after the saloonkeeper has been notified in writing by members of drinker's family, nor to any intoxicated person; that places where liquor is sold shall have no connection with any other building, that no blinds, screens, chairs, settees, benches, or tables shall be set up in such place. Lights shall be kept burning all night so that from the street passersby may be able to see the interior at night as well as in the day time. Rooms where liquor is sold shall not be higher than three feet above the sidewalk or ground level. No music or entertainment of any kind shall be permitted, nor any meals or food of any kind be sold or given to patrons. Credit shall not be allowed for any kind of intoxicating liquors. For violation of any of the provisions of this law, the dealer shall lose his license and shall be subject to a maximum fine of one thousand dollars or twelve months' imprisonment.

Miss Minnie E. Neal, president of the Florida W. C. T. U., was one of the interested group which watched the Governor sign the bill, as was also President Davis of the senate, the framer of the bill, and a number of others, including both members of the legislature and representatives of temperance organizations.

SOCIALIST PARTY TO COMBAT LIQUOR EVIL

SPECIAL COMMITTEE REPORTS CONCLUSIONS

At a session of the Socialist national committee in Chicago, May 13, Carl D. Thompson, secretary of a special committee appointed a year ago to gather arguments on both sides of the liquor question, presented a report embodying these conclusions:

"Alcohol is a narcotic poison like opium, arsenic, morphine, cocaine, etc.

"Alcohol weakens the intellectual powers. The very inhibitory, soothing, or deadening influence which alcohol exercises upon both mind and body, by which it enables the user to forget hunger, worry, sorrow, and pain constitute its danger.

Total Abstinence Urged

"It is universally agreed that excessive drinking of alcoholic liquors is disastrous. Total abstinence is the only absolutely safe and wise course to pursue.

"Although the wages in the liquor industry are among the best, yet the degree of exploitation is greater than in any other phase of the capitalist system. The exploitation in all the industries of the United States averages 48.83 per cent; in the liquor business it goes up to 70 per cent.

"In addition to the exploitation of labor in the production of alcoholic liquors, which is the highest of all capitalist industries, the liquor traffic still further exploits labor in excessive charge (compared to the cost of production) when the liquor is retailed to the consumer, and, what is worst of all, exploits the working class through the evil effects resulting from the use and abuse of alcoholic drinks.

"The Socialist party cannot remain indifferent or inactive, but should take a definite position and active part in combating the evils of alcoholism."

What of Personal Liberty?

In reference to "personal liberty," the report says:

"In regard to the restriction of personal liberty, the committee cannot wholly approve of the opinion held by those who use this argument. For while there are certain personal rights that should be inviolate, yet there are others that must give way if the common interest requires it."

Many of the authorities quoted in the report in condemnation of beer are German. Among alcohol's recorded opponents are 800 German and Austrian doctors. One statement is that "beer is not the harmless beverage many of the German people think it is."

The committee urged that the question finally be referred to the entire party for decision.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

POPULAR BOOKS
Every
WHITE RIBBONER
SHOULD READ

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. The story of a man's fight for National Prohibition told most cleverly—a book destined to arouse the reader to his responsibility—a book with a definite purpose.

Price, $1.25. Postage 12 cents.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. The story of a little cripple boy, who by serenity and triumphant faith, not only finds his way to sturdy young manhood, but casts about himself a beautiful influence for good. A wealth of humor, pathos, romance, skillfully blended with a great moral lesson.

Price, $1.35. Postage 12 cents.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, the life story of Jack London.

Price, $1.30. Postage 12 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Ill.

BECOME A NURSE

We have trained thousands of women in their own homes to earn $10 to $25 a week as nurses. Send for "How I Became a Nurse"—248 pages with actual experiences, 48 illustrated lesson pages free. There is a Chautauqua nurse in your vicinity. Ask her about our training. Her address upon request.

The Chautauqua School of Nursing
513 Main St. Fourteenth Year Jamestown N. Y.

FOR DISPLAY
AT
Chautauquas and Open Air Meetings

The Proclamation for
NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION

Lillian M. N. Stevens
President National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Portland, Maine, September 10, 1911

The Proclamation has been prepared in permanent form, ready for framing—to be used in exhibits, state headquarters, churches and Sunday Schools.

Set in gothic type, mounted on heavy plaster board, beveled. Size 30x40 in.
Price, postpaid, $2.00.
Printed on heavy glazed paper.
Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Ill.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:
A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Gift.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

TWO FAMILIAR ARGUMENTS

(Continued from Page Seven)

state's rights arguments came from the North and not from the South. This was evidenced by the entire delegations of Arkansas, Florida, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Tennessee voting solidly for National Prohibition. The states of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina and Virginia, gave a majority of their votes for National Prohibition. The states that voted solidly against National Prohibition were the northern "standpat" states of Connecticut, Delaware, Nevada, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Utah and Indiana.

The southern representatives gave a magnificent demonstration of the right of their states to defend themselves against the liquor oligarchy in any way that the states saw fit. The state's rights doctrine as applied to prohibition was only a means to accomplish a desired end and urged almost wholly by those who were interested in sounding the death-knell of National Prohibition.

ANNUAL GATHERING OF TEXAS WORKERS

Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher a Speaker—Unique Newsboy Demonstration

Special Correspondence

The state convention in Houston, which adjourned April 30, was not the largest on record, owing to high water and washouts on the road, but it was the best in many respects. Mrs. Nannie W. Curtis, state president, was in the chair the greater part of the time; Mrs. Brewer, vice-president, taking her place when she was unavoidably absent. The state officers were re-elected, Mrs. Curtis receiving every vote except her own. One item of special interest was the dedication of fifteen children to the temperance cause.

The reports were unusually good. Those who have traveled in Texas will appreciate what it meant to have a delegate from El Paso and one from San Angelo. More invitations for the next convention than ever before were received. There were welcome addresses from all classes of society, the churches, schools, business men, Y. W. C. A., Missionary Federation, Rotary Club, T. W. P. A. and district and federated W. C. T. U., to all of which Mrs. P. A. Smith of Port Arthur responded happily.

The consecration services conducted by the state superintendent, Mrs. Caster, were uplifting. The music in charge of Mrs. Gatchell of Austin was unusually fine. The meetings were held in the First Presbyterian church, the pastor, Rev. Jacobs, showing a most hospitable spirit to the white ribboners.

Among the delightful features of the meeting was a visit from our National superintendent of Soldiers and Sailors, Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, of Washington, D. C., who spoke gracious words to the convention, complimented Galveston on the good work at its port, and gave an evening address. Mrs. Megrail, a new member, read a fine paper on scientific temperance instruction in the public schools. This addition to our ranks is gladly welcomed. The official and executive boards held several meetings and discussed and planned the work for the coming year. Mrs. E. S. Tracy, probably the oldest member in Texas, was present, calling the convention to order when we became too hilarious. She has for many years been parliamentarian for the W. C. T. U. There was presented to her a large bouquet of red lilies, while the state Press reporter, Miss Fanny Armstrong, received from the Methodist women a huge bouquet of roses.

The Press banner was sent to its old home, Austin, where it has been for about seven years. The last night of the convention a grand gold medal contest, with five contestants, in charge of Miss Gilbert, was held at the city auditorium. Miss Samuels of Hempstead received the medal. The cantata, "A Saloonless Nation in 1920," participated in by many children, in charge of Mrs. N. J. Ackerman of Houston, was greatly enjoyed.

Even the condition of the finances was unusually good. There was money in the treasury and never in Texas have pledges for our work been made more rapidly. THE UNION SIGNAL was not forgotten, by any means, Mrs. Phipps, UNION SIGNAL superintendent, being on hand all the time, with pencil, paper and open purse ready to catch the unwary. Of course she thinks the circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL the salvation of the nation, and of course the writer agrees with her.

On the last night there was a sudden and most startling cry of "Extra! Extra! Extra! Colorado dry! Mississippi dry! Mississippi River dry! Houston dry! Texas dry!" This commotion was caused by a dozen or more newsboys tearing through the audience scattering UNION SIGNALS, Young Crusaders, Texas White Ribbons and leaflets in every direction. How the boys did enjoy it!

The Houston Post and the Houston Chronicle, the former "anti," the latter "pro," gave excellent reports of the convention. A delightful auto drive was tendered by the chamber of commerce.

This pencil sharpening outfit is like no other. Its fine steel cutters won't get dull—won't break the pencil point—and two sets of them are now furnished, so that the machine may be kept in constant operation. A necessary tool—for every office, home, school. Handsomely nickeled. Four inches high. At your retailer's or from Stewart Mfg. Co., 320 Wells Street, Chicago. Order today. Price complete—with two sets of cutters and clamp—now only $2.00. No pencil sharpener is complete without two sets of cutters.

Insist on the Stewart

FIFTH DISTRICT (MICH.) CONVENTION

An unusually large delegation was present at the forty-first annual convention of the Fifth District (Michigan) W. C. T. U. held at Plainwell, April 22-23. A splendid feature of the program was the annual address of the president of the district, Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, in which she presented recommendations for the ensuing year's work. Miss Margaret J. Bilz's paper on the "Past Work and Future Outlook" was received with most hearty applause. Mrs. Nettie Corser, Rev. Etta E. Shaw, National evangelist, and Mrs. C. K. Godfrey, all of Grand Rapids, gave inspiring talks on the outlook for 1915 and 1916. An address by Mrs. Rachel Bailey, who is an earnest, wholesome, enthusiastic speaker, was received with great applause. A silver medal contest was held in which six students of Hope College gave original orations on "The Temperance Question at the Present time." Other interesting features were "Many Helps for Mothers," by Miss Clara A. Wheeler, head of the Kindergarten Training School at Grand Rapids; "A Child's Reading," by Mrs. Post; "Best Paying Business in the World," by Mrs. Eva Allgeo, with interesting suggestions from various county presidents, among them Mrs. Mary Bodwell, Mrs. Fred Vos and Mrs. Nellie Wicks.

At the memorial service Mrs. Louise A. Payne, district treasurer; Mrs. Anna Russell, county treasurer, and Mrs. Aloys Bilz, mother of the district corresponding secretary, were tenderly mentioned. All these women were of large intellect and influence.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Mrs. L. Alberta Dann, president; Miss Margaret Bilz, corresponding secretary; Dr. Belle Masters, recording secretary, and Mrs. Julia R. Lillie, treasurer.

Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, the beloved district president for thirty-five years, was presented with as many beautiful white roses, accompanied by an expression of great regret at her determination to retire from office. She retains the love, admiration and esteem of the women of her district.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

WANTED—Several honest, industrious people to distribute religious literature; $60 a month sure. Nichols Co., Box 14, Naperville, Ill.

As the result of an election on the liquor question May 3, Goshen, Ind., was added to the dry territory of the state, its eleven saloons to discontinue business after July 31.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

AGGRESSIVE WORK FOR OFFICIAL PAPER

State Plans

We shall from time to time print in this column state plans for the increased circulation of our official paper and are sure that all will welcome suggestions or methods that have been carefully and successfully worked out, knowing that an increased circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL means increased efficiency among our workers.

New York

"In New York state we have an efficiency plan," writes Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the New York W. C. T. U., "in which we place as our ideal a subscription list to THE UNION SIGNAL equal to one-fourth of the membership, and not less than five subscriptions to The Young Crusader. We push THE UNION SIGNAL at all institutes and consider it a necessity if our work is to be carried on efficiently."

Ohio

"Our plan for THE UNION SIGNAL is that each local union shall subscribe for the paper for its president," is the statement from the office of the state president, Mrs. Florence D. Richard. "At our annual convention some time ago we passed a resolution to this effect: That no one should be elected a delegate to our state convention who is not a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL, as well as our own state paper. While these rules are not always rigidly enforced we feel that they ought to be, because, as we urge, no woman can make a successful president of a local union nor be intelligent enough to vote on the great questions which sometimes arise in our conventions without reading these papers." Ohio's state president has been in the habit, personally, of pledging a number of subscriptions each year.

Southern California

"Southern California has adopted, or rather follows, as far as possible, the four-to-one plan," Mrs. Celia Noll, corresponding secretary of the state W. C. T. U., writes. "It has always been understood that any woman holding any office in county or local union was not equipped for the work without the official paper. She needs it to keep informed of the work of the organization and to be qualified for her office."

Arkansas

"We always send copies of THE UNION SIGNAL to new unions," says Mrs. Minnie U. Rutherford, president of the Arkansas W. C. T. U. "Our Press superintendent continually stresses the importance of taking the paper and it is always given a prominent place in our exhibits and on our programs on every occasion."

POPULAR POSTERS

18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

STATE PROHIBITION versus
LOCAL OPTION

During three years under Prohibition in Vermont there were 545 cases of intoxication in the courts.

In three years under local option there were 1,642.

An increase of over 200 per cent

License New Jersey, with about the same population as prohibition Maine and prohibition Kansas combined, paid the United States in liquor taxes $3,470,644.

Maine and Kansas together paid $102,508.

During five years in prohibition Maine there were 33 murders.

During five years in high license local option Massachusetts there were 424.

In proportion to population, 145 MURDERS IN MASSACHUSETTS TO 33 IN MAINE.

Prohibition is accompanied by financial prosperity.

There is steady increase in Maine's valuation at the rate of more than $20,000,000.

The amount in the savings institutions of Maine, counting women and children, is now $225 PER CAPITA.

MOTHERS WANT protection for their boys in the cities as well as in the towns.

They want PROTECTION wherever the boys are, and the boys are in every part of the State.

Vote for State Wide Prohibition

NOT BY MY VOTE!

Men will have strong drink, and men will sell liquor, but

Not by MY Vote!

Saloons may go on like the brook, forever, and men may die by the thousands in them, but

Not by MY Vote!

Truth may be wrecked and character dismantled, homes may be destroyed and women and children beggared, but

Not by MY Vote!

Children may be caught in the saloon snare, the victims of alcohol may fill our jails, almshouses and insane asylums, but

Not by MY Vote!

The saloon may impoverish and degrade the people; may produce idleness, disease and pauperism; may breed anarchy and crime, but

Not by MY Vote!

The government may license the drink traffic and for a consideration take "a reward against the innocent," and bargain away the public health and the public morals, but

Not by MY Vote!

The liquor traffic may corrupt the social and political life of the nation; it may worm its way into all business and even into the sacred precincts of the home and the church, but

Not by MY Vote!

The bells may toll the death knell of a human being slain by Rum every five minutes of the day, but

Not by MY Vote!

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

ALCOHOL AND THE MACHINE

Those who are charged with the conduct of great commercial and industrial enterprises must seriously consider the degenerating part which alcohol plays. For example, managers of railways are insisting on total abstinence. Intemperate railway employes have been found unable to recognize green and red, the two colors most used in operating trains. So hidden might their fault in vision be that only an accident, with loss of human life, would reveal the engineer's inability to recognize signals. Such "toxic amblyopia" (which comes also from the excessive use of tobacco) varies in degree from dimness of vision, to seeing everything gray and thence to total blindness. Those who are every day responsible for the lives of thousands of passengers would themselves be most perverse were they to take the risk of engaging such men.

Among 138 cases of "visual defects," 64 individuals were found to be hard drinkers, 45 used both alcohol and tobacco to excess, and 23 were inveterate smokers—leaving but six cases due to diabetes and other causes. It is the nerve cell and its fibers (the telegraph wire transmitting its signals to all the tissues, organs, and muscles of the body) which is the most affected of all the bodily parts by alcoholism and especially by the drinking of fusel-oil or wood-alcohol whisky that sells at five cents the glass—about the only kind which poor men get. Then the nerve cell, progressively shrinking, becomes in time a mere shell, with degenerate debris, in place of a once virile servant of the body and soul.—Collier's.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., MAY 27, 1915 | No. 22

"A heaven-sent mission surely,
To cheer the sick and poor
With bounties that the bounteous God
Has strewn beside your door.
To gladden little children,
To comfort dying hours,
To bear to wretched hearts and homes
The Gospel of the Flowers."

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION SIDE-LIGHTS

In the Palace of Education of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, at which are displayed exhibits showing the progress of civilization, the liquor traffic has no place. The manager of the exhibits, although not a believer in total abstinence, tells with pride of his refusal of several liquor exhibits which the owners desired to have entered.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union exhibit is deservedly popular. All day long and every day since its installation, visitors and students who stop and tarry and oftentimes spend hours in study testify to its value. The majority are frankly interested and are free to so express themselves. Others if they are noticed turn to the Japanese curios across the way and a little later, when they fancy they are unobserved, return. An immense amount of tact is needed to deal successfully with exposition crowds and prevent those who most need instruction from being frightened away. Miss Mary E. Brown, National W. C. T. U. superintendent, who is in charge of the exhibit, has shown rare wisdom and skill in this respect.

Many Nationalities See Exhibit

On the register at the W. C. T. U. booth are to be found the names of men and women of many nationalities. Visitors from the Orient, the Islands of the Sea, Australia and Europe frequently are to be seen examining the posters and literature.

The commissioner of education from Argentine Republic, a member of the jury which will pass upon the W. C. T. U. exhibit, has expressed much interest, asking for copies of all publications. He remarked that he had sometimes come to the exhibit at night to study the display. On one occasion he brought with him a famous German scientist, who pronounced the whole thing nonsense. The commissioner was not discouraged, however, but declared that he would bring the gentleman again and try to convince him of some scientific temperance truths.

Polyglot Petition Interests Missionary to Burma

Rev. Mr. Vinton, for seventeen years a missionary in Burma (his grandfather having established the mission which was later carried on by his mother and father), evinced great interest in the Polyglot petition, the massive rolls of which are a conspicuous part of the exhibit. On the outside was the roll from Burma, and removing it, he examined to the last name the Burmese signatures that Frances Willard said "looked like bunches of 'tangled worms.'" He found the names of his mother and many friends. Later he brought his wife and children to see the petition and they spent nearly an hour reading the signatures, among which Mrs. Vinton discovered those of the old nurse who cared for her as a baby and the nurse who was with them in the booth taking care of the children.

Many German visitors have expressed interest in posters giving the verdict of prominent people of other countries on the liquor question.

Exposition Guards Read Literature

Literature has been disappearing from the booth at night, and in an endeavor to learn where it had gone one of the men in charge of the Palace of Education said he had no doubt the guards had taken it and had read and argued over the subject matter for hours at their quarters.

On a recent afternoon an elderly man visited the booth and quietly studied the entire exhibit, even to the departments of work. He said later that it was the finest thing of its kind he had ever seen, and he believed it ought to be more widely known, as many people who have not time to gather up temperance facts for themselves would be glad to have them in concise form. He asked if it would not be possible to have the whole thing put in leaflet or booklet form, illustrated with pictures of the panels and articles on exhibition. He said he was a San Francisco lumber man who had employed men all his business life and that he gave up wine, beer and tobacco for the sake of the men who worked for him.

Brewers and Liquor Men Among Visitors

A traveling man, after an interested survey of the displays, remarked that he used to be in the liquor business and knew the whole awful traffic.

A man, evidently a brewer, stopped to examine the booth and gave the lady in charge to understand that he thought the brewers ought to be remunerated instead of having their property confiscated. He was very courteous and remarked that he would come in again.

A woman visitor, after looking about a little, asked if there is any alcohol in beer. She was referred to the cabinet with its bottles. Then she asked if an occasional glass of beer would hurt her. The information given her about alcohol harming the brain cells, etc., did not seem to reach her case. At last her attention was called to an article by a prominent physician in THE UNION SIGNAL which told of the harmfulness of beer drinking. After hastily scanning the article she re-read it and announced as she was ready to leave the booth that she would never drink another glass of beer.

Two young girls recently examined the literature and asked for something on narcotics, one of them explaining that she wanted literature for a composition she was writing. She received the leaflets and went away, promising to let Miss Brown read the composition when it was written.

Two young men were earnestly discussing the cartoon, "Seven Ages of the Cigaret User," in just what spirit it was impossible for a spectator to determine. Presently, however, they asked if they might have a copy of the cartoon as they wanted it for a friend who smoked cigarets.

Wear Your White Ribbon

Wear your white ribbon everywhere and wear it when you come to San Francisco, urges Miss Brown. She explains that she has used two whole bolts of white ribbon in bows for W. C. T. U. women who were not wearing the badge. On the Exposition grounds among the crowds of sightseers the little white bow is an eloquent tribute to a righteous cause.

The Wisconsin and Kansas barrels, showing so strikingly the difference in the per capita consumption of liquor in the respective states, create much comment. Wisconsin citizens discuss it with other visitors from their state and urge them to see the booth. Many of them are writing back home concerning it. One man, not a total abstainer himself, expressed the intention of writing to the state officials about it.

High school principals have at various times visited the booth and carried away helps for their pupils.

Miss Brown, as a representative of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, attended a luncheon recently given by the Woman's Board of the Exposition to the women who are in charge of Exposition exhibits.

IS ALCOHOL A STIMULANT?

W. H. BEST, M. D.

A great asset attributed to alcohol is its stimulating effect. Is alcohol a stimulant? There is some evidence that in small doses alcohol temporarily stimulates the heart muscle; but in large doses its action is quite the opposite—it is a depressant. The feeling of warmth produced when on a cold day a drink of liquor is taken is not due to any stimulating effect of the alcohol, but rather to a paralyzing effect producing a relaxation and widening of the blood vessels of the skin. This increases the amount of warm blood brought to the surface of the body with its subjective sensation of warmth. Do not let us deceive ourselves, however, that we have procured an advantageous condition with our "toddy," for when this increased quantity of warm blood comes into contact with the surrounding colder air a good deal of body heat is lost. This produces a fall in body temperature with subsequent chilling, decreased resistance and hence predisposition to disease.

The supposed stimulating effect of alcohol on the mind is only apparent, not real. Daniel Webster, Edgar Allen Poe, Lord Byron and others have been accused of producing some of their best efforts under the stimulation of alcohol. This increase, however, in the imaginative power, as well as the loquacity, so often observed in an individual after imbibing is due to the paralyzant effect of alcohol upon the will (which is the restraining power of our mental and physical selves), rather than to any stimulating effect upon the brain. While the loosening up of the check rein, as it were, might be productive of an occasional masterpiece from the highly developed mentality of a Webster, Poe or Byron, it cannot be argued that a similar happy result would ensue from the unchecked minds of most of us.—From "Why and How to Quit Alcohol," in Physical Culture.

PHYSICIANS ORGANIZE FOR STUDY OF ALCOHOL

Twenty-three physicians attending the annual session of the Ohio State Medical Association during the first week in May organized the Ohio Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics.

"A great deal of drinking is due to the doctors," said Dr. S. P. Kramer, the famous Cincinnati brain surgeon, in advising the formation of this society of Ohio physicians. "In the past the doctors have prescribed whisky for typhoid fever patients; brandy for those with diarrhea and beer for prospective mothers. The doctors are not doing it today, and it is the duty of the profession to admit to the public that they were wrong. A man will say that because Dr. 'So and So' advised whisky for his grandfather, the grandson should drink whisky. I have no connection with prohibition politicians. From my own experience with patients I know that whisky poisons the brain."

Chicago Chief of Police a Life-Long Total Abstainer

"I stand before you a man of sixty years, and I have yet to take my first drink of beer, wine, or whisky," declared Chief of Police Healey of Chicago, in a recent address before a Sunday school.

Chief Healey, who has just been appointed to the head of the police department by the new city administration, is very outspoken in his convictions on the subject of drinking.

"I have been credited with being a crank on the liquor question," he remarked. "Well, I have seen its results and I certainly am against it for the men in my department. No policeman who drinks can do his full duty with efficiency. Suppose a citizen is returning home late at night. When passing alleys or walking under viaducts, he is on the lookout for possible trouble, and if he sees a policeman, he naturally believes himself safe. Now, suppose that policeman has been drinking, and in response to a question from the citizen, he becomes angry. It is not impossible for an assault or even a killing to grow out of such a situation. Drunken policemen are a menace to the public."

French Physicians Favor Measure Reducing Sale Of Alcohol

The French chamber of deputies has passed, by 472 votes against 95, the law limiting the number of licenses for the sale of alcoholic drinks.

The Société de Thérapeutique de Paris at its last session, says the Journal of the American Medical Association, unanimously passed resolutions approving any measure for limiting the number of licenses and declaring (1) that the privilege of bouilleurs de cru (those who manufacture alcoholic drinks from their own crops) should be suppressed; (2) that every holder of a license for the sale of alcoholic drinks should be prohibited from carrying on concurrently any other business, such as the sale of groceries, tobacco or coal; (3) that a high supplementary tax should be placed on establishments which are open in the evening and also on amusement places, etc., where drink is sold; (4) that holders of licenses should be divided into two classes, (a) those who sell only drinks called hygienic, such as wine, beer and cider, which do not titrate more than the twenty-three degrees permitted by the Académie de médecine, and (b) those who sell drinks that titrate higher—these should be made to pay a much higher license; (5) that the law with regard to closing once a week and to night work be strictly applied to places which sell drinks; (6) that infractions of the law against drunkenness and alcoholism be energetically repressed by officers of the law, who may be summoned to do so by the members of the anti-alcohol societies.

Prohibition Kansas Banks Deposits Increase $13,000,000

Deposits in Kansas state and national banks exceed the record of a year ago by $13,000,000, according to a statement compiled May 15 by the state bank commissioner. The statement also shows, says the Topeka Capital, that there are $3,000,000 more on deposit than ever before in the history of the state.

The license states of the Union would not object to being "handicapped by prohibition" if they could be assured of such desirable results.

Tennessee Legislature Provides for Observance of Frances Willard Day

Tennessee is the fourth state of the Union to pass a measure providing for the annual observance of a Temperance day in the public schools. Alabama led the way, and New Mexico and Kansas recently took similar action, the two last named states designating the day as Frances E. Willard Day.

Our Tennessee correspondent writes that the measure just enacted provides for the setting apart of one day in each year (the first Friday in October) to be observed in all the public schools as "Frances Willard Day," at which time a temperance program, properly prepared, shall be presented.

Other praiseworthy measures which were passed by the law-making body of Tennessee are as follows:

A law authorizing the reading in the public schools each day of at least ten verses of the Bible.

A mothers' pension bill, applying, however, only to the counties having juvenile courts.

A resolution favoring an amendment to the constitution providing for woman suffrage.

Student Of Crime Becomes Prohibitionist

Fletcher Dobyns, a prominent lawyer of Chicago, in an address last week, declared that his investigations as attorney for the city council crime commission had influenced him to go out and fight the saloon, as the greatest source of crime in Chicago.

Mr. Dobyns asserted that almost all crimes are committed by abnormal persons, and said that in tracing the source of these abnormalities he had found it to be, in a large majority of cases, the liquor evil.

"Before I started my investigations in regard to crime," said Mr. Dobyns, "I was not a total abstainer or an advocate of closing the saloons. But now I believe that alcoholic drinks do more than anything else toward creating the abnormal person. We must face the liquor problem. I say it not as a prohibitionist, but as a student of crime."

"If the people who live in our cities are to be saved from physical and moral degeneracy," Mr. Dobyns said recently in another address, "we must solve the problems presented by poverty, bad housing conditions, inadequate food, disease, nervous strain, vice and crime. It is no exaggeration to say that the saloon constitutes one of the greatest difficulties that confront our cities in the solution of these problems.

"The saloonkeeper is the link between the criminal and the professional bondsman, the disreputable lawyer, the dishonest policeman and the crooked politician. There cannot be the slightest doubt that the saloon is the center of the crime situation which now confronts the people of Chicago.

Importance of City Purity.

"It is important that city governments be in the hands of men who are honest, thoroughly efficient and devoted to the welfare of all the people. The liquor forces have proved themselves utterly selfish and lacking in public spirit. To further their ends they have gone actively into politics and work as a unit. They are constantly on the alert to keep competent and courageous men out of public life."

Big Company Stops Making Saloon Fixtures—Affected By Prohibition Wave

With the exception of one plant that is now manufacturing talking machine cabinets and piano cases, the five factories of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, which employed more than 3,000 men in the manufacture of saloon fixtures, have been closed.

In explaining the action of the company, H. F. Davenport, secretary, said:

"There are two reasons for closing these factories. In the first place the demand for small bar fixtures, which we manufactured, has fallen off. Many saloons have gone out of business owing to the creation of new prohibition territory; others have been forced to quit because of population restrictions. Breweries all over the country have thousands of dollars' worth of bar fixtures that were turned back to them when saloons in which they had financial interests were closed. Warehouses are piled full of these fixtures, for there is no market for them. Officials of our company feel that the day of the small saloon is passing.

"In the second place, we wish to divorce the billiard hall and bowling alley from the saloon. Billiards and bowling are clean sports, but many people have the idea that both, especially billiards, are closely connected with the saloon."

Curse of Business Reflected on Family

"I am ambitious to make something of myself and give to my growing family every advantage," said Alderman Kronk of Detroit, Mich., who on May 1 abandoned the saloon business, as reported in the Detroit Times. "That is why I am going out of the liquor business. I have found you can't be a saloonkeeper and be respected. A saloonkeeper is classed about two degrees below the level of decent society. The curse of the business is reflected on the wife and children of the men behind the bar. He is almost an outcast from decent society."

"After five years in the drink business," concluded the alderman, "I am satisfied that a man, no matter how decent and law-abiding he tries to be, cannot be a saloonkeeper and command the respect of the community for himself and family. I am through with the business and am content to live on a smaller income. What I say is true of almost any saloonkeeper, and many of them will repeat my words."

Employes of Lackawanna Railroad Storehouses Must Be Total Abstainers

Circular letters have been sent to all employes of the storehouses of the Lackawanna Railroad, between New York and Buffalo, notifying them that the drinking of intoxicants, either off or on duty, will mean dismissal, according to the Philadelphia North American. It is said that the recent exposé of wholesale thefts of brass from the local storehouse led to the no-drink order, which makes no distinction between those who drink frequently and those who drink occasionally for good fellowship.

GOAL FOR 1915—50,000 NEW MEMBERS

HONOR ROLL FOR MAINE UNIONS

MRS. ALTHEA G. QUIMBY,
President Maine W. C. T. U.

As soon as Maine's apportionment towards the 50,000 gain in membership was received we wrote the local unions stating how many members each union would need to secure. We asked that an effort be made to secure this quota on or before a certain date.

We established an honor roll in our state paper. On this roll is placed the name of each union reporting the desired gain or more. The list is constantly increasing and we fully expect to reach the desired membership goal.

MINISTERS AID IN COLORADO'S MEMBERSHIP INCREASE

MRS. ADRIANNA HUNGERFORD,
President Colorado W. C. T. U.

The greatest increase in numbers has followed evangelistic meetings. Rev. Bu'gin has conducted a series of these in several Colorado towns and in each place devoted one or two evenings to presenting the work of the W. C. T. U. and appealing for membership. The results have been remarkable wherever our women have made the necessary follow-up calls. In a certain town, two ministers heard an earnest appeal for members and promised their quota from their respective churches. A union week-day evening meeting of five neighboring churches, with talks by the pastors and a state officer brought eighteen members to a dying union. The success largely hinged upon the fact that before the meeting was announced the wise woman in charge convinced the ministers of the great need of the continued work of the organization.

Programs by unions in nearby communities, with organization when practical; membership contests and the division of large unions into groups of tens with a captain for each, and each ten striving for new members, are effective methods when used with discrimination.

Dues tell the final story about membership and the state is trying to induce prompt payment, and indirectly to promote the reading of the official W. C. T. U. papers by offering to each union which on or before June first, pays dues on a number equal to last year's membership, five yearly subscriptions for the state paper, and to every union paying on a twenty per cent gain on or before August first, ten yearly subscriptions to the Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL. A special offer is made to unions which have never paid dues and each one which fills the requirements is to be represented on the program of the coming state jubilee convention.

WEST WASHINGTON'S EFFICIENCY CHART

MRS. MARGARET B. PLATT, President
West Washington W. C. T. U.

In West Washington various plans are being tried to increase the membership, one of which is the use of the efficiency chart. On this chart a gain of 25 per cent in membership counts ten points, and the union making 100 points is recorded a perfect union. If each union succeeds in making a net gain of 25 per cent West Washington will increase its membership by 1,000. Souvenir membership cards have been prepared for the use of every member in her canvass for new adherents. These are in two sections, one showing the picture of Miss Gordon, our National W. C. T. U. president, on one side, and the membership pledge upon the reverse side. One section is detached and given to the new member as a souvenir, while the other section containing the pledge, name and address, is handed to the local treasurer. These are freely distributed for the use of members among local unions. In some localities a house-to-house canvass is being made by local workers, and several new unions have been organized.

Many pastors have urged the women of their congregations to join the W. C. T. U., stating it as their belief that the victory for prohibition last fall was due more largely to the organized, systematic work of this organization than to any other one factor.

Steady work and persistent hand-picking by the local member is constantly urged as the most effective way to build up a membership that will "stick." The local member is the unit of power and if each one is active and efficient the desired increase of 1,000 will be made.

VISITING WEEK FOR ILLINOIS UNIONS

HELEN L. HOOD, President Illinois W. C.T U.

The third week in May is visiting week for our membership. A number of localities have a register of women voters. Many who are not members of the organization voted dry and these will be visited by precincts, streets, or in a way that will reach them, with literature explaining our methods, aims, pledge and dues. Churches in which there are only comparatively few white ribboners will be visited and members secured. Appointments will be made to discuss membership. Unions are planning to visit towns and communities nearest them to endeavor to secure new members. Publicity is being created by notices in the local papers of this visitation week. By two members going together added power is gained.

In addition, any county president whose county has made a net gain of 100 or more members during the year; any county treasurer who collects dues equal to last year's membership and 75 or more additional members; any local treasurer or assistant who collects dues equal to last year's membership and for twenty-five or more additional members; or local treasurer or assistant of any new union making a gain of twenty-five over the number of charter members, shall have her transportation paid to our state convention by the state.

Two thousand seven hundred or more new members is our goal for 1915, and to this end we are working diligently in these various ways mentioned.

LIQUOR BUSINESS OBSOLETE

GOVERNOR MOSES ALEXANDER OF IDAHO SAYS SALOONS ARE OUT OF DATE

The greatest stride forward in the history of Idaho is probably the law passed at the recent session of the legislature making statewide prohibition by statutory enactment effective January 1, 1916.

I take great pride in having been able to recommend this measure to the legislature and having had the opportunity to sign the law that puts Idaho in the column of the temperance forces.

To me prohibition is not an ism nor a fad but simply the outgrowth of years of experience in dealing with mankind, which has thoroughly imbued me with the idea that temperance is one of the cardinal virtues and one of the essential things necessary for success in life, and while the opponents of temperance rely largely upon the personal liberty clause of the unwritten law, I believe such process is too slow and I have greater faith in the mandates of a law that can be forced by the political codes of the state in place of waiting for the slow growth that is required to put the moral law into effect.

Today before anyone employs a person to fill a responsible position, he must know first of all that he is a sober man, that being one of the primary recommendations for preferment in the common walks of life, and I feel that such a law enunciating such doctrines on our statute books is a big step in the right direction.

The saloon as it exists in the United States is largely a legacy of the past.

I have no fight to make on the men engaged in the business. Circumstances oftentimes beyond their control force many of them into it. However, the fact remains that saloons are obsolete and unnecessary and furnish nothing but what humanity can do without.

What will take the place of the saloon after 1916?

That is a question I cannot answer, but there will be some rendezvous where men can discuss the topics of the day and have pleasant meetings and amusements, but it will be of a nature that will keep their minds free and their bodies strong. In the saloonless age, there will be more homes with happy children and smiling wives—more groceries, shoes and clothes bought.

The man who drinks and spends money over the bar in saloons is almost always possessed of a noble heart and good intentions, but his will power is chained down to the demon alcohol which has complete control over his faculties, thereby depriving those dependent upon him of what would be theirs if he did not face such temptation.

The absence of the saloon will change all this, perhaps not in a day nor a year, but in the course of time, and after the saloon shall have been relegated to the past, no one will desire the return of it. There is no place in society now for such an institution.

Idaho will prosper without saloons more than it ever did with them. There will be nearly a million dollars kept in the state of Idaho that is now being sent out annually for such beverages and that amount of money will circulate around the state in other channels with the result that more homes will be built, and communities bettered and improved, and what is more, it will put manhood into men, so that they can again walk erect and face the world and shower blessings upon those dependent upon them. The result will be happier children in the schools, devout worshipers in the churches, and a more prosperous people to enliven trade.

These conditions are all more valuable than the saloons, and when once enjoyed as a result of statewide prohibition and the absolute abolition of the saloons the people will unanimously favor the law.

THE WHITE LILIES OF PROHIBITION

ELIZABETH P. GORDON

It is "tulip time" in the historic pub-c garden of Boston. Decked in all the adiant colors of the rainbow, these arliest messengers of the glad summer eason seem made for comfort. They re an ecstasy of joy! The blue can-py above bends tenderly over them. 'hey smile upon the greensward, and pon the blue waters on which the swan oats, filled with merry boys and girls, lowly glide.

On a recent memorable Sunday, the eautiful blossoms healed the heartache f one who, overwhelmed with sadness t the suffering and sorrow caused by he tragic war disaster, sought refuge in Boston's quiet garden. In a magnificent ome of the great city a father and nother were prostrated with grief—for las! their lovely daughter, a young ride, who so happily sailed with her usband on the Lusitania, was an inno-ent victim of the awful tragedy. How nspeakably terrible is war, the white ibboner thought—and her mind swiftly noved to the analogy so familiar to hose who for years have been at the ront in our peaceful war "for God, and ome, and native land." The wars of he centuries have had their millions of ictims, but infinitely greater has been he destruction of human lives and of uman souls through the relentless, the nplacable legalized liquor traffic!

It was the message of a luxuriant bed of pure white lilies that brought solace to the white ribboner. It reminded her that among the manifold activities of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the National W. C. T. U. department of Flower Mission and Relief Work is filling a large place. The hearts of many voters are being reached. The fragrant flowers have opened the way for teaching, by the spoken or the printed word, the reason why National Constitutional Prohibition must come, and the Stars and Stripes must float over a saloonless nation. Already this department has a brave record in this line of activity, for at many of the departmental meetings, all over the land, the subject of nationwide prohibition has been discussed and resolutions have been enthusiastically passed. Every member added to the society of "organized mother love" aids in securing the downfall of the direct enemy of the home. In 1914 the names of 2,477 new W. C. T. U. members were secured through the then Flower Mission department. The children who always are joyous distributors of pretty posies are taught to be total abstainers and Young Campaigners for Prohibition.

Long years ago it was "tulip-time" (or spring-time) in our W. C. T. U. garden; but today, golden chrysanthemums, symbolizing equality for women, and white lilies, emblems of purity and prohibition, are everywhere blossoming. The department of Flower Mission and Relief Work, combining beauty with strength, makes a heavenly and human appeal to young and old, rich and poor, and is silently but surely hastening the day of National Constitutional Prohibition.

Department of Flower Mission and Relief Work

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union

PROGRAM

Prepared by Lella M. Sewall, National Superintendent.

Donations of Flowers, Plants, Fruits, Garments, etc., for the Flower Mission.

Hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Prayer.

Hymn, "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me," "Temperance Songster," No. 43.

Reading and Consideration of the National W. C. T. U. Flower Mission Report.

Song, "White Ribbon Rally Song," "Temperance Songster," No. 64.

Paper, "What the Flower Mission Department Can Do to Help Bring National Constitutional Prohibition." Are we doing all we can along these lines? Give ten minutes to the consideration of this question.

Song, "Out for Prohibition," "Temperance Songster," No. 128.

Reading, "Some Phases of Relief Work."

Distribution of Flower Mission Literature and Text Cards.

Recitation, "Why A Flower Mission."

Song, "Some Glad Day," "Temperance Songster," No. 46.

White Ribbon Benediction, Numbers 6:24-26.

Send all donations to the sick and poor as far as possible.

Advertise the meeting in advance by notices in the churches and newspapers. Also have it well reported in the papers.

The leaflets mentioned above and all Flower Mission supplies can be procured from Miss Lella M. Sewall, 1661 Beacon street, Brookline, Mass., or from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill. Price of programs, 25 cents per 100 copies.

A NEW LEAFLET

A new leaflet, "Some Phases of Relief Work," from the gifted pen of Eva Kilbreth Foster, National department associate, is now ready. It is sure to prove most valuable to the department of Flower Mission and Relief Work and should have a wide distribution.

RELIEF WORK FOR THE BELGIANS AND WAR REFUGEES

LELLA M. SEWALL, National W. C. T. U. Superintendent

Since our last National W. C. T. U. Convention the department of Flower Mission and Relief Work, in its ceaseless activities, has entered another open door—that of work for the stricken Belgians and war refugees. In the stupendous undertaking of the United States, looking to the relief of the homeless, starving Belgians and countless other victims of the European war, it seemed most fitting that this department of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union should have its share. For the past few months it has been privileged to lend a hand. Knitted goods (mufflers, wristers and caps) and also clothing have been provided. One box arrived from Springfield Center, New York, last week. This was promptly carried to the headquarters for the "Relief of the Belgian Refugees" in Boston.

A recent letter from the state superintendent of South Dakota says: "Your letter of February 20, enclosing list of what is needed in Europe, with appeal for help, was so effective that all our people went to work with a will." As a result a generous amount of clothing is now on its way to Boston to be forwarded from there to those in need in the war countries. Although no contributions of money were solicited, $20 was sent some months ago from one of the western states, and in March $10 came from one of the southern states, with a request from the generous donor that it should be added to the milk fund. This little "hand stretch" to our suffering neighbors across the sea is certainly a creditable beginning to a noble work—a work which will doubtless grow as time goes on unless this awful war comes to a speedy end. May God hasten the day!

THE WHITE CITY OF HOPE

IN THREE PARTS—Part I

HENRIETTA JOHNS

Chapters from a forthcoming book entitled "Uncle Joe's Home"

(All Rights Reserved)

"What's that, papa?" A small boy stood in front of a Market street saloon, and pointed to its swinging "blind" doors. It was early fall and the doors of the other establishments stood wide open, inviting the air as well as the gaze of passers-by. The lad's cultured looking father smiled. "Why, Herbert," he said, "I didn't realize that you had never seen doors like that before."

"But why do they have them, papa?"

"Because they don't want people passing on the street to see the business they're doing inside."

"Why not? Grocery stores do business, papa. They don't have such queer doors, do they?"

"No, child, but this is a saloon."

"What's a saloon, papa?"

"A place where men drink."

"Why, we drink at home; we don't go to a store to drink."

"Yes, we do sometimes. You're very fond of soda-water at the drug-stores."

"But they haven't doors like that?"

"No, because soda-water never makes men act in a strange way. But this drink does, and men don't want to be seen in such a bad condition."

Marguerite Davis was standing quite near during this conversation. She could not avoid overhearing the child's eager questions, and the sparkle in her dark eyes showed keen interest in the subject discussed. The father caught her glance, and raising his hat, courteously explained: "We live in Kansas, where there are no saloons, so the sight of one is a novelty to my little boy."

Marguerite was waiting for her father. He was not in a saloon, however; he was next door at his tailor's. But the aged parent was not to be trusted outdoors, so Marguerite had forfeited her seat at the musical festival that she might accompany him to the clothier's. Her heart was very heavy. She could not always watch his movements and yet he must not get another taste of liquor. God helping her to protect him, he was never again to get even a sip of the vile stuff. Her father was old and feeble and childish, but he had been respectable now for so many months that she was growing more and more jealous of his good record. It had long been her resolve that she would do all she could to prevent his retrograding into the sot that he had been in the past. Young as she was at the time, she vividly remembered the day when her brother Clarence almost brained him with an axe, and that other scene of her mother dying in the parlor was impressed very vividly on her young mind. She was willing to sacrifice all to save her father from a drunkard's fate.

So Marguerite was on guard while the tailor took the old man's measurements. "When I get to be a man, I want to marry a kind, beautiful lady like you," suddenly said the little Kansan, looking up into her face.

A wave of color mantled her cheeks at the child's ardent compliment. "Then you must never enter a place like that," she replied, indicating the saloon.

"I shan't," he said, a look of determination on his face.

"And due to our good fortune in living in Kansas, he can't," his father added laughingly, as they hurried on.

"Kansas! No blind doors, no saloons for the vile odor to ooze from," thought the girl as she watched the happy pair go down the street. "Oh, that I could take father to that happy land, where there are no lurking traps for unwary feet along the main highways. There will be no bartenders there ready to 'swallow them up alive!' Kansas! Why, her father would be safe there."

Over and over again she put the idea out of her mind, but it persisted in returning, especially when she walked the streets with the old man. Pshaw! What had she to do with Kansas, miles away from Harrisburg! Oh, no! Her father would never consent to leave Harrisburg! But how safe he would be! How foolish to think of Kansas! Yet Kansas came between her and her household tasks; Kansas wrote its six letters all over the pages of the hymn-book at church. When night after night her father was safely tucked in bed, sweet and clean, though querulous and petulant, she sighed in relief that another day had been worried through—outside of Kansas. But gradually, by a long series of mental evolutions, the mere suggestion became a resolve. She must try to take her father to Kansas!

One night as Marguerite sat alone in her little third-floor room, there came a gentle knock at the door and her niece Margie entered. She was wildly enthusiastic about a temperance meeting she had just attended.

"Now what was so 'wonderful' about a plain, ordinary temperance meeting?" asked her aunt.

"Well, it was Senator Steele who spoke. He's been in the legislature so long. Mother says she remembers him there when she was employed at the Capitol, though in those days he was not awakened on the temperance subject. At that time only ministers and Sunday school teachers paid any attention to the question. Now it's before the legislature in some form or other at every session. Oh, I'd like to tell you every word he said—it was all so convincing, and so aristocratic, too. You know when some ordinary person tries to talk and uses bad grammar, it seems to reflect on the cause."

"I think the cause can stand it, though," said her aunt serenely, "if he or she is thoroughly in earnest. Was there a big attendance?"

"No, small. That little hall wasn't half full. Indeed one wouldn't think this was a question of Christianity, so few Christians show the slightest concern. If only every Christian in town had been there, there wouldn't be a saloon open in Harrisburg next year."

"Now, Margie, that's very sanguine," remonstrated the more mature woman.

"Why, if they had been there, it would have meant they don't like the traffic, and each in his own ward would have influenced others to help oust it, Aunt Marguerite. Well, I can't tell you all he said tonight, but I must give you the new idea he brought to me about this matter. It is a big new reason for 'letting liquor alone.' I guess you know all about it, but I never thought of it before. It is heredity. Really, Aunt Marguerite, he made it such a vital point. His first reason for total abstinence is one's responsibility toward his brother; then heredity comes second. Do you know, he actually cited instances where both father and mother were and always had been total abstainers, and their children inherited the appetite of a drunken grandfather!"

Margie looked thoughtfully at her aunt. "Why, how dreadfully worn out you look, auntie dear!" she said. "There was a great deal more to tell you, but I'd better wait till some time when you are not tired. You have so much care with grandpa, it isn't considerate of me to keep you up." Margie rose from her seat and stretched out her arms. To her aunt, peering beyond her in an agony of emotion, her shadow fell on the lamp like a rough cross. For once she did not urge the girl to remain. She even said "good-night" in a mechanical way as Margie went out. Then she noiselessly turned the key in the lock, put out the light, and going to the window knelt down, her arms resting on the sill. She had, of course, always known the fact that Margie had emphasized—the awful fact of heredity—but somehow or other she had never applied it to herself and her immediate family. Yet—yet—her brother Clarence had been rescued from a drunkard's path, and the sins of the father might be visited upon the child. Kneeling before the window, staring unseeing into the night, she saw it all clearly, and she resolved to sound to her sweet niece, as well as to the child's parents, the note of warning against the danger from inherited alcoholism. Annetta, her sister-in-law, was the only one of the three who seemed at all concerned. Her higher education and long moral training led her to scoff at nothing that was meant in kindness, and besides, she had an appreciation of details.

Margie, in her innocence, gently rebuked her aunt when she sought to warn her against her enemy. "The thought makes me creep, auntie. You have taken the sunshine out of my day."

"It will come back again all right, dearie. Only pray without ceasing that you enter not into temptation."

Clarence himself could not discern the gravity of the admonition. "Now you're going a bit far, Marguerite," he drawled in his gentlest manner. "I feel much more concern for myself than for her. Her very sex protects her. In fact, I cannot see that it is a case for argument at all. Now I'm willing to discuss this plan of yours—though it's rather odd—to take father to Kansas, but the other is too trifling. According to your reasoning, it would be better for us all to pull up stakes and make for Kansas!"

"I'm sure it would be a happy plan," returned Marguerite promptly, "though I never before thought of it. Can't you go, Clarence?"

"Not now at any rate," laughed her brother. "We'll wait till you and father blaze the trail at least."

Annetta, on the other hand, would have been delighted to accept the Kansas proposition. "It will be dreadfully lonely here without you, Marguerite," she declared. "There can never be anyone else to take your place, but my joy in poor Father Davis' safety will make up for your absence always, even when I have to brush the tears away." She laughed as she suited the action to the word then and there.

The aged relative for whose safety all the plans for travel and separation had been made was at first utterly indifferent to the proposition. It was provoking to see how he ignored it, then laughed it to scorn. However, when Clarence and Annetta, and even his grandchild, the only member of the household in whom he ever showed any deep interest, hammered away day after day at the stubborn, rum-soaked brain, the old man

(Continued on Page Twelve)

POSIES ON POLICE DUTY

HOW JACOB RIIS STARTED FLOWER MISSION WORK IN NEW YORK CITY

In "The Making of an American," Jacob Riis, the noted journalist, lecturer and social reform worker, tells the story of his starting the flower mission work in New York City, while a newspaper police reporter on one of New York's great dailies. EDITOR

It was when the daisies bloomed in the spring that my children brought in armfuls from the fields, and bade me take them to "the poors" in the city. I did as they bade me, but I never got more than half a block from the ferry with my burden. The street children went wild over the "posies." They pleaded and fought to get near me, and when I had no flowers left to give them, they sat in the gutter and wept with grief. The sight of it went to my heart, and I wrote this letter to the papers. It is dated in my scrap book June 23, 1888:

"The trains that carry a hundred thousand people to New York stores and offices from their homes in the country rush over fields, these bright June mornings, glorious with daisies and clover blossoms. There are too many sad little eyes in crowded tenements where the summer sunshine means disease and death, not play or vacation, that will close without ever having looked upon a field of daisies.

"If we cannot give them the fields, why not the flowers? If every man, woman or child coming in should, on the way to the depot, gather an armful of wild flowers to distribute in the tenements, a mission work would be set on foot with which all the almsgiving of this wealthy city could not be compared.

"Then why not do it? Ask your readers to try. The pleasure of giving the flowers to the urchins who will dog their steps in the street, crying with hungry voices and hungry hearts for a 'posy,' will more than pay them for the trouble. It will brighten the office, the store, or the schoolroom all through the day. Let them have no fear that their gift will not be appreciated because it costs nothing. Not alms, but the golden rule, is what is needed in the tenements of the poor.

Copyrighted, L. F. PEASE

"Take them to the 'poors' in the city"

"If those who have not the time or opportunity themselves will send their flowers to 303 Mulberry street, opposite Police Headquarters, it will be done for them. The summer doctors employed by the Health Department to canvass the tenements in July and August will gladly co-operate. Let us have the flowers."

If I could have foreseen the result, I hardly think that last paragraph would have been printed. I meant to give people a chance to discover for themselves how much pleasure they could get out of a little thing like taking an armful of flowers to town, but they voted unanimously, so it seemed, to let me have it all. Flowers came pouring in from every corner of the compass. They came in boxes, in barrels, and in bunches, from field and garden, from town and country. Express wagons carrying flowers jammed Mulberry Street, and the police came out to marvel at the row. The office was fairly smothered in fragrance. A howling mob of children besieged it. The reporters forgot their rivalries and lent a hand with enthusiasm in giving out the flowers. The superintendent of police detailed five stout patrolmen to help carry the abundance to points of convenient distribution. Wherever we went, fretful babies stopped crying and smiled as the messengers of love were laid against their wan cheeks. Slovenly women courtesied and made way.

"The good Lord bless you," I heard as I passed through a dark hall, "but you are a good man. No such has come this way before." Oh, the heartache of it and yet the joy. The Italians in the Barracks stopped quarreling to help keep order. The worst street suddenly became good and neighborly. A year or two after, Father John Tabb, priest and poet, wrote, upon reading my statement that I had seen an armful of daisies keep the peace of a block better than the policeman's club:

"Peace-makers ye, the daisies from the soil
Upbreathing wordless messages of love,
Soothing of earth-born brethren the toil
And lifting e'en the lowliest above."

Aye, they did. The poet knew it; the children knew it; the slums knew it. It lost its grip where the flowers went with their message.

A busy corner in the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. Flower Mission in Boston is shown in the above picture; 1,064 dozens of eggs, 1,700 baskets and boxes of fruit and delicacies made happy the sick and poor last year; also about 5,000 cuttings for window boxes distributed in the North End tenement district of the city. In addition to the flowers and potted plants, clothing in generous quantity is provided at all seasons. The ministries of this well planned, firmly established W. C. T. U. Flower Mission are truly varied and far-reaching.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

LELLA M. SEWALL, National Superintendent

The four large express companies (American, Wells-Fargo, National and Adams) have renewed their consent given several years ago to the Flower Mission department (now the department of Flower Mission and Relief Work) to use the free label. This is most welcome news, as the privilege named greatly facilitates the work of the department and enables it to increase its activities in many directions.

The department deeply appreciates this great assistance from the express companies.

O LIVES WITH BEAUTY BRIMMING!

O loving, soul-fresh faces!
Moss of deserted places;
O voices of the chosen!
Through deadliest cold unfrozen;
O lives with beauty brimming!
Glad in the heavens, near hymning
Ye know the hidden glory;
Who else may tell that story?

Grow, sing and bloom undaunted!
A world so shadow-haunted
Needs all your bursting splendor,
Soft lights and murmurs tender.
The human want is pressing,
O'ershadow it with blessing!
Your triumph sure believing,
Till hearts shall hush their grieving.

—Lucy Larcom.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, May 27, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

OUR NATIONAL TREASURER

We are happy to report that there has been a very decided change for the better in the condition of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson, our National treasurer, and the latest messages from her hospital room are giving her comrades great happiness.

BLOSSOMS AND BIG PROBLEMS

In these days when the whole world is throbbing with weighty, heart-breaking problems, the distribution of flowers may seem to some practical-minded people a piece of sentimentality out of harmony with the needs of humanity. Such a criticism, even in thought, betrays a woeful lack of knowledge of human nature. Jacob Riis, the experienced newspaper man, than whom few have been better acquainted with the seamy side of Manhattan's great metropolis, once said that he had known an armful of dalsies to keep the peace in the congested districts of New York more effectually than a policeman's club, and pages of history might be written showing that beautiful blossoms have helped to solve problems that have defied the learning of the schools of sociology and theology.

Give the flowers a chance and they will ofttimes illumine a dark situation. They have thrown light on the subject of unemployment which is taxing the wits of many a city council. The sight of a nosegay of simple posies from the country has aroused in some "out of work," for whom there seemed no place in the city's activities, an ambition to return to the wholesome life of the farm and cease longer by his idleness to burden the already overcrowded city.

Supposedly hardened victims of the vice district have responded to a message from the blossoms telling them of God's love to all his creatures, when before they seemed deaf to any word from human lips.

The presence and refining influence of pure and undefiled lilies in a dirty tenement have been known to be more effective in promoting cleanliness and sanitation than a board of health.

The work of the physician and the nurse in the wretched homes of the sick poor is always lightened and made of more value because of the presence of that tonic to the beauty-hungry soul, the radiant blossoms of the summer time.

Even that breeding place of countless evil influences, the corner saloon, finds in the flower missioner a competitor to be feared. It has been shown that a bunch of golden-hearted daisies given into the possession of a lad reared in a saloon neighborhood has had the power to arouse in him a keen desire to get away from his wretched environment and has made him feel so keenly the lure of the woods that the artificial charms of the saloon and pool rooms were powerless to hold him, and he has left them to search for those undiscovered delights of the strangely fascinating out-of-doors to which he has been a stranger.

Give the posies a chance in the crowded sections of the big cities, in the hospitals, in the missions, and wherever the people are deprived of their rightful privilege of gathering flowers with their own hands, and they will help solve some of the puzzling civic problems of the day.

LEST WE FORGET

Utterly lacking in love of country would we be did we not feel on every recurring Memorial day, north and south, a profound sense of gratitude for the heroic men and women who made possible the existence and preservation of this nation. How immeasurably deeper then must be our feeling of thankfulness in this inexpressibly sad year 1915 when America almost alone of the great nations of the world can in peace and quietness go about her work and her play.

Portentous as have been the past twelve months in other lands, the year will be remembered in this country as an era of remarkable moral advancement. The spirit of the mighty men of God who founded the republic has seemed in an unusual degree to pervade and control the hearts of voters and law-makers, and upon the statutes of nine states have been written laws prohibiting that unspeakable traffic in human life which is as devastating and degrading as war itself.

It almost seems as if America with a newly aroused social conscience in matters of vital importance to her people has been preparing herself for the great international emergency which is now being thrust upon her—to voice the needs of humanity for the whole world. With hearts full of gratitude we can with our great-hearted Christian President say, "The inspiring thing about America is that she asks nothing for herself, except what she has a right to ask for humanity itself. The force of America is the force of a moral principle; there is not anything else that she loves and there is not anything else for which she will contend."

Our gratitude that in the providence of God these things are today true of America prompts us to beseech the Divine Ruler that out of this stupendous turmoil there may come to other nations like blessings. The observance of Memorial Day must this year have a world-wide significance, and the heart of every true patriot will respond heartily to the suggestion which has been made by the governor of Kansas that at noon of the sacred day, when all flags are at half mast and all activities have ceased, there shall be offered by every man, woman and child in the nation a silent, fervent prayer that war may cease and that world-wide peace may prevail.

INCONSISTENCY OF PERSONAL LIBERTY ARGUMENT

The newly appointed chief-of-police of Chicago has declared somewhat apologetically that he is a crank on the subject of liquor drinking, especially in its relation to the members of the police force. Although Chicago is known as a city where "personal liberty" advocates of the most extreme type abound and their voices are not infrequently heard in protest against any measures whatsoever to regulate their affairs, no citizen of the windy city by the lake seems at all disposed to criticise the restrictions of personal liberty for which the new police chief stands. Even the men who are engaged in the business of liquor selling, and who themselves occasionally are victims of burglaries and hold-ups, would admit that they feel a certain degree of safety in having at the head of the police department a man who in all the sixty years of his life has never permitted his brain to be befuddled by alcoholic drinks and who, in so far as he can control them, will see that the blue-coats of the city are not allowed to indulge in the beverage termed by the friends of personal liberty "the great health drink." It goes without saying that thousands of citizens who cast their ballots at the polls in favor of a continuance of the licensed saloon, and who deprecate any attempt on the part of reformers to interfere with what they call the personal liberty policy of the city lie down at night in their homes with satisfaction in the thought that the big man who controls the police force is an out-and-out total abstainer, is not in sympathy or in league with the seven thousand saloons of Chicago, and will do all he can to insure a sober force of policemen to guard the homes and persons of citizens.

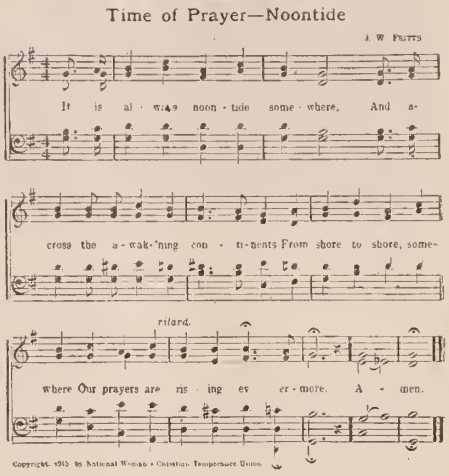
In short, these "personal liberty" advocates heartily approve any restrictions of personal liberty placed upon the people who are responsible for their safety. They would prohibit the railroad engineer who runs the train on which they travel from ever entering the saloons they legalize by their votes. They would discharge the chauffeur who runs their automobile if he were seen entering the saloons they legalize by their votes. Frequent visits by the physician and surgeon who ministers to their family to the liquor shops they have approved at the ballot box would be considered sufficient cause for his peremptory dismissal. To the extent that the prohibition of personal liberty is necessary to protect them they uphold it. They do not stop to consider that by permitting the legalized saloons, they are every day and every night endangering not only the lives of women and little children—the victims of drunken husbands and fathers—but are menacing the safety of every resident of the city, for over and over again we are told that the saloon is the breeding place for the criminals of our big municipalities.

Common decency demands that the zone of protection which every citizen would like to provide for himself and his family be extended to include the whole city, and the one way to do it is to abolish the sale and manufacture of alcoholic drinks.

"Our Prayers are Rising Evermore"

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union was born in prayer and has ever been nurtured in the faith of a firm reliance on God.

Throughout the world today we are very closely united in our supplications for one another and for world-wide peace. Not alone at the noon-tide hour should our fervent petitions ascend to God. Let the spirit of prayer pervade all our deeds on the busiest days. Only thus shall our aching hearts be comforted; only thus shall we be constrained to walk in God-directed paths; only thus shall we fully realize the consoling truth that as one great household, we are all safely sheltered in the love of God.



FOUR MORE MINNESOTA COUNTIES OUTLAW THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC—VICTORY IN MOORHEAD MEANS SAVING OF $100,000 TO NORTH DAKOTA

Minnesota is making excellent use of her recently enacted county option law. Since it went into effect nine counties have voted to outlaw the liquor traffic. Five of these have been reported in a previous issue of THE SIGNAL. On May 10, Swift county, by a majority of three to one, voted out the saloons. On May 17, Clay county, with thirty-seven saloons; Rosseau, with eight, and Yellow Medicine, with two, voted to become prohibition territory. The banishment of the drink traffic from Clay county is a cause for rejoicing in North Dakota, for Moorhead, its county seat, is the twin city of Fargo, North Dakota, being located just across the river. Ten brewery distributing plants in Moorhead will be put out of business as a result of the election. Judge Charles A. Pollock expresses it as his belief that the abolition of the saloons on the Minnesota side of the state line will mean a direct saving to the people of North Dakota in the cost of state and county governments of $100,000.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

By a majority of over 4,000, Pike county, Kentucky, has voted to abolish the traffic in liquor from its boundaries.

The courts have decided in favor of the drys in the election contest in Aberdeen, South Dakota.

Santa Fe, New Mexico, is to vote on the liquor question at a special election in June. The temperance people feel hopeful of victory.

A large delegation of business men from all parts of the Province of Alberta recently interviewed the premier, asking for greater restriction of the liquor traffic by the closing of the bars at seven o'clock at night.

Bedford county, Pennsylvania, by reason of having been free from the saloons for some time, has been enabled to make the final payment on its bonded indebtedness of $38,000.

Consul General John H. Snodgrass at Moscow who has been extensively quoted by the liquor people as making light of prohibition in Russia, now admits, on the testimony of large business concerns, that blue Monday is a thing of the past as far as Russian manufacturing establishments are concerned, and that the output of the first working day of the week is no longer materially decreased because of Saturday night and Sunday drinking.

The lower house of the Connecticut legislature on May 12, by a vote of 82 to 65 voted indefinitely to postpone a resolution in favor of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the making and selling of intoxicating liquors.

By a vote of 154 to 48 the state federation of labor of Pennsylvania endorsed woman suffrage.

"Russia with war and without vodka is more prosperous than Russia with vodka and without war," asserts the Russian minister of finance.

"Prospects for the submission of a prohibition amendment to the Federal constitution are more encouraging now than ever before," remarked United States Senator Morris Sheppard in a recent interview in Texas.

That the shutting down of distilleries and breweries due to increased prohibition territory has materially affected the glass bottle industry is an argument used by the National Glass Bottle and Vial Manufacturers' Association in a controversy with the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association concerning wages. The thirty-odd manufacturers who compose the first-named association and who control the bulk of the bottle trade, in considering demands of their workers, have attributed partial responsibility for the decline in the trade to the prohibition wave which has been sweeping through the country.

When the principal of the Iola (Kans.) high school the other day asked how many of the 350 students had never seen a saloon over 100 hands were raised in an affirmative answer.

A bill to legalize the sale of three per cent beer in Tennessee cities was introduced in one of the houses of the legislature, but it was killed by an overwhelming vote on second reading—a thing that is rarely ever done and never except on an exceedingly unpopular measure.

MEMORIAL DAY THOUGHTS

(Mors et Vita)

May 31, 1915

Blanche A. Wheatley, Bolivar, W. Va.

They come no more; in vain are tears and pleading;
The ear that ever harkened to our call,
Forevermore all earthly sound unheeding,
Perchance now listens where sweet accents fall
From lips long loved and lost, whose joyous greeting
Blots out the memory of our weeping eyes,
And in the joyous rapture of that meeting
Lost are the echoes of our yearning cries.

(Ah, happy dead! Would we to earth recall them
To bear afresh the burden of life's pain?
No more, no more do sin and grief enthrall them,
They pass beyond our ken, where tears are vain)

And year by year sweet spring, with fingers tender,
Will deck the spot that marks their last repose;
The summer sun will paint anew with splendor
The velvet petals of the fragrant rose;
Rich autumn, with her store of golden treasure,
Will yield to winter's reign, as e'er before,
And pain and grief will alternate with pleasure,
But they who passed will come again no more.

(But, ah! We know, somewhere in life eternal,
They wait, far, far from mortals' holden view;
Because we mourn, their joy not yet supernal—
Somewhere, somewhere they live, wait, and are true.)

Liquor dealers in Yankton and other South Dakota towns who have been selling in violation of a clause of an Indian treaty, the terms of which provide that a considerable portion of Charles Mix county shall be prohibiton territory, will be prosecuted, and charges have already been brought in some instances.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday of Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

OBSERVANCE OF JUNE 9

LELLA M. SEWALL, National W. C. T. U. Superintendent of Flower Mission and Relief Work

The approach of June 9, the birthday of Jennie Casseday, and the Red Letter day of the department of Flower Mission and Relief Work, always arouses new interest leading to blessed activities in this blessed department.

Flower Mission meetings are held in local unions; flowers and delicacies are carried to the homes of the sick, poor and discouraged ones; the day is observed in prisons, jails and other public institutions where splendid programs are given, and flowers and text-cards are distributed.

Let us not forget this year to give place on the program to the clarion call for National Constitutional Prohibition. Help to increase the wave of prohibition which is so rapidly rolling over our country. The department of Flower Mission and Relief Work must never lose an opportunity to advance sentiment along this line and that of "Votes for Women" also. Let us have many rallies for these great causes on our Red Letter day!

WORK AMONG THE INDIANS

MRS. DORCAS J. SPENCER

I wish the president of each state having any Indian population would consider this article as a personal letter to herself, and "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the idea that I desire to convey to her mind, which is simply this: That the most direct means of elevating the Indian or any other race is to educate and train workers of their own race.

I fully appreciate the difficulty of securing state superintendents of this department, but feel sure that more could be done if this fact were recognized.

Is it not possible to find a woman acquainted with some Indians who will interest herself in an individual or group of young people, encourage attendance at school, see that they have the same opportunities that white boys and girls enjoy, get them into Sunday school with a welcome, in short, treat them so much like other folks that they will naturally learn and adopt white people's ways, and thus being raised above the average of their own people, they consequently bcome leaders among them.

Indians will acquire a thirst for knowledge if tactfully led towards it. In the state of Wisconsin several Indians have availed themselves successfully of the opportunities offered by the correspondence course of the agricultural college. Those boys must have had the kindly interest of white friends long before to have acquired the taste for learning. Some one qualified to know has said, "It is safe to say that every Indian of liberal education has received his first impulse from some good white woman." When we see the influence that educated Indians, men and women, are having in the uplift of their race, as well as the positions they are filling in life, we must recognize the demand for personal effort in their behalf and our own obligation to render assistance to the upward trend of a native element of our own people.

In the Alleghany Reservation in western New York there has been for many years the Friends' School for Indians, where the hand-to-hand work has steadily gone on. One of the products of this school is an Indian woman who is now serving efficiently as the state superintendent of Work Among Indians, for the New York state W. C. T. U., and she knows better than the members of any other race can, just what the needs, interests and tastes of her own people demand.

Educated Indians are taking positions in the ranks of professional and business life in numbers that prove their adaptability to the pursuits of any race. These are thought to be exceptional men and women, but there are large numbers of Indians living in poverty and ignorance whose condition might be greatly improved and their own ambition stimulated by the aid we can give them. I am tired of writing personally to state presidents. I do not always get replies. I know what burdens of care you are all bearing, but just think now of some good woman out on the frontier—for Indians do not live in cities—who can reach individuals, give them the glad, encouraging hand and incite in them aspirations that will be the means of uplifting their people, and send me her name as superintendent of Indian work in your state.

Alameda, Calif.

SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS AND THRIFT

SARA LOUISA OBERHOLTZER

The School Savings and Thrift work has aroused much thought among educators, and is moving on satisfactorily. Many inquiries from different states in regard to the simple methods of collecting and caring for the savings of the scholars are answered by the department. The bankers in various cities are co-operating and they are in frequent communication with your representative. Besides the new department leaflet, "The Relation of Thrift Teaching to Prohibition," "How to Institute School Savings Banks" and other long standing prints are in demand and widely distributed.

The "School Savings Banks Bulletin," a pamphlet of thirty-four pages, written by your World's and National superintendent of School Savings and Thrift at the request of the United States Commissioner of Education, Mr. P. P. Claxton, and published by the Government a few months ago, was sent by the Bureau of Education to "all state superintendents and to all superintendents of schools in cities having a population of 2,500 and upwards, as well as to Normal schools, universities and colleges and a selected list of libraries." In addition to this, at my request, the Commissioner of Education had the bulletin mailed to a list of several hundred people whose names and addresses I furnished. This list included our National officers, state presidents, other officers and members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and persons especially interested in this work. This kindness and recognition has been an aid in spreading thrift teaching. The bound files of Thrift Tidings, thirty-two numbers, have also been placed in some of our state libraries. These files and the Thrift Maxims (250 thrift maxims alphabetically arranged in a booklet) are popular helps to the work.

There is to be a Thrift Congress held at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, August 9-12. August 12 is set apart as "Thrift Day," and school savings banks will be represented.

Our associate National superintendent, Mrs. L. O. Middleton of Kansas City, spoke at the state educational convention of Georgia this month. At the request of the Georgia W. C. T. U. we have sent about a thousand pages of literature on school savings and thrift to be used at the convention, and the Commissioner of Education, Dr. Claxton, has mailed to a representative of the W. C. T. U. in care of the mayor of

(Continued on Page Eleven)

VIRGINIA VITALITIES

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

There is a constant rumor abroad in Virginia, circulated, of course, by our friend, John Barleycorn, that all temperance agitation has ceased and will be needed no more because we have voted the legalized liquor traffic out of Virginia.

No one knowing our indefatigable leader, Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, will give the rumor a second's consideration, and yet the mischievous seed-thought makes it necessary for our workers at home and afield to explain constantly the fatal error of suspended effort and the need of a thorough education of the masses.

The outlawing of the legalized traffic was indeed a splendid victory, but every thinking man and woman in the state realizes that we have the illegal traffic yet to contend with and that our success in statewide prohibition depends on our method of arresting the outlaw.

The electorate, too, is constantly changing and without our system of education through public addresses, posters, literature, personal, individual effort and the public press we have no assurance whatever that the splendid majority of 33,000, which was ours last fall, could be counted on in two or ten years.

And so there has been no suspension of animation in Virginia and there will be none. The rumor is false, as false as the campaign tales about Kansas. Our women are awake and "on the job." Like the Israelites on the wall of Jerusalem they "every one with one hand share in the work and with the other hand hold a weapon." "Nevertheless we make our prayer unto our God and set a watch against them night and day," and shall we not win with this wonderful trinity of activities, prayer and works and watchfulness? We will.

Mrs. Emma Howland of Boston, National organizer and lecturer, is afield in Virginia in response to an urgent call from her many friends in the state.

Mrs. Amy C. Weech of Alexandria, Va., National organizer and lecturer, is filling an engagement in Missouri.

Miss Christine I. Tinling, National lecturer, is visiting in the home of state secretary Lilian A. Shepherd of Norfolk and has been doing some valuable school work for Norfolk county and the union of which she is a member.

The state president, Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, is afield in the western part of the state for three weeks' constant institute work. She reports excellent meetings and much interest throughout our mountain counties.

Norfolk county is enjoying a temperance revival with Mrs. Hortense Ropp as the chief speaker. Twenty-five meetings are to be held in twenty-one days, not including those held in schools.

Mrs. Shepherd, Miss Tinling and Mrs. Helen H. Green are assisting the county president, Mrs. Hugh Simpkins, in the conduct of these public meetings.

Mrs. Helen H. Green has been afield three weeks in Brunswick county and reports six new unions with a total membership of 108.

Henrico, Hanover, Dinwiddie and Rockingham counties are among those planning special work for June with the organizers and state officers.

SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS

(Continued from Page Ten)

Macon one hundred copies of the School Savings Banks bulletin. Since our National Convention in Atlanta there has been increased interest manifested through the southern states in thrift teaching. I have numerous letters of inquiry and demands for literature from Georgia, Texas and Florida. School savings banks have been taken up in Lakeland, Florida, and there is much activity in Houston, Texas. I wish our W. C. T. U. in these states might be more impressed with the value of saving pennies and daily thrift practices as an active factor in the development of self-responsibility, good habits and a prohibition that prohibits. Mrs. Anna M. Pratt, W. C. T. U. superintendent in Gardiner, Me., has been doing effective work in her city and school savings are now being collected by twenty-four teachers. In Wethersfield, Conn., the system was established in a school in April. It was also adopted in an additional school in New London, Conn. Two public schools in Philadelphia have recently introduced the system and, speaking through their principals, say, "It is one of the best things we teach. It is not so much the value of the money the children save as the value of the thrift habit it engrafts that helps them on to better man and womanhood." This is our object beyond all thought of the time and money saving, to encourage better men and women. This is an every day national and individual need.

In Chicago, where the plan of school savings banks was instituted in a few schools, April 1914, on January 1, 1915, there were banks in forty-eight public schools and with the authority and support of the Chicago school board they are this year being established in others.

In New York City, the board of education has arranged for the general introduction of thrift teaching through school savings. This teaching was in force in twenty-three public schools last year with much success: Eight schools in Manhattan, two in Bronx, six in Brooklyn, and five in Queens, in addition to the manual training and the Washington Irving high school. This year it is being extended to others.

There is good news to be listed from Oregon, Washington, California and Montana that will be found in the little paper, Thrift Tidings, and the department leaflets. Enclose postage, five cents in stamps, for it, or better send a dime to me or to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, at Evanston for helps and prints on School Savings Banks and Thrift.

2113 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Temperance agitation is not being neglected in New York City these days. Mrs. Suessa B. Blaine, National organizer and lecturer, not long ago gave "Columbia's Congress" in Brooklyn, and on a recent evening Secretary of State Bryan spoke in Carnegie Hall under the auspices of the National Abstainers' Union. The Flying Squadron will be in the city the last of May. In the meantime there will be institutes in every one of the five counties of Greater New York.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

MILK A SUBSTITUTE FOR BEER

At the noon hour the men employed in the Cold Springs Shops, located at Forty-second street and the St. Paul railroad, Milwaukee, Wis., now drink milk instead of beer as an accompaniment to the midday meal. This substitution of a good thing for a bad one comes as a result of the action of the company. Its welfare secretary, Bert Hall, in writing of the new state of affairs to Mrs. Emma Broegman, president of the Milwaukee (First) W. C. T. U., states that the shop employs between 500 and 600 men. About six months ago these men consumed several hundred bottles of beer with their luncheons. "We arranged to have a man leave a few bottles of milk to start the experiment," says Mr. Hall. "Calls for the milk steadily grew, while those for beer steadily diminished, until about two hundred bottles of milk were consumed daily. Then came an increase in the price of milk from three to four cents per pint bottle. The men went back to their beer, but the milk man saw the error of his ways and compromised on a price of three and one-half cents. The following day the number of pint bottles taken soared to 250, and at present nearly 300 are ordered, and practically no beer is consumed."

According to the Champion of Fair Play, the house of representatives of Michigan "passed with a flourish" the bill to prohibit the use of pictures of former Presidents in connection with whisky advertisements. The measure was designed to protect General Washington and President Lincoln from misrepresentation in advertising which has been widely used by certain large beer manufacturers.

WHEN DINNER COMES
One Ought to Have a Good Appetite

A good appetite is the best sauce. It goes a long way toward helping in the digestive process, and that is absolutely essential to health and strength.

Many persons have found that Grape-Nuts food is not only nourishing but is a great appetizer, and children like the taste of it and grow strong and rosy from its use.

It is especially the food to make a weak stomach strong and create an appetite for dinner.

"I am 57 years old," writes a Tenn. grandmother, "and have had a weak stomach from childhood. By great care as to my diet I enjoyed a reasonable degree of health, but never found anything to equal Grape-Nuts as a standby.

"When I have no appetite for breakfast and just eat to keep up my strength, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with good rich milk, and when dinner comes I am hungry. While if I go without any breakfast I never feel like eating dinner. Grape-Nuts for breakfast seems to make a healthy appetite for dinner.

"My little grandson was sick with stomach trouble during the past summer, and finally we put him on Grape-Nuts. Now he is growing plump and well. When asked if he wants his nurse or Grape-Nuts, he brightens up and points to the cupboard. He was no trouble to wean at all—thanks to Grape-Nuts."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Girls of an Elocution club of the Frances E. Willard Settlement, Boston, enjoying a happy afternoon.

AN ARBOR DAY SONG

The last verse of the following song was used upon the occasion of the planting at Llewsac Lodge, Bedford, Mass., of a beautiful white rose-bush in memory of Frances E. Willard and a graceful white beech tree in remembrance of Lillian M. N. Stevens. It was written by Mrs. Susan R. Graham Clark:

WE ARE PLANTING TREES

Tune, "Tenting Tonight."

We are planting trees on the Llewsac grounds,
Trees for the years to come,
For beauty and shade and for fruit and joy—
Around the dear old home.
Many are the hearts that shall share our joy,
Share it in years unborn;
Many are the lips that shall bless and praise
The task performed this morn.
Planting today, planting our trees, planting on the Llewsac ground!
Looking for the day, hoping for the day that comes good work to crown.

With singing and praise to the Lord, our King,
With thanks for home so dear,
The daughters of Llewsac are planting trees,
Planting with hope and cheer;
Digging, digging in the fragrant earth,
Cov'ring each rootlet deep;
Charging the rain and the winds and dew
Our precious trust to keep.
Planting today, planting our trees, planting on the Llewsac ground!
Looking for the day, hoping for the day, that comes good work to crown.

We are planting trees on the Llewsac grounds,
And fancy loves to dwell,
On the rustling leaves that we do not see,
And the blossoms we do not smell.
Ours be the joy of the planting in faith,
Of turning in hope the sod;
To others the joy of the harvest feast,—
The thanks and praise of God.
Planting today, planting our trees, planting on the Llewsac ground!
Looking for the day, hoping for the day, that comes good work to crown.

A BIRTHNIGHT CANDLE

A candle, waiter! Thank you. No, 'tis not
To light a cigaret. I wish its flame
For better use. A little nearer, please.
For if the guests should see, they'd wonder—well,
But you do know that I have touched no wine
This hallowed night, this night the lad was born
Which ushers in each year great Lincoln's day.
The brilliant banquet-hall of myriad lamps
Will not deny me this one little blaze
From all its dazzling wealth to celebrate
His natal festival.

Do you perchance,
Not have this custom, garçon, in old France,
Of lighting candles on a birthday cake,
And quenching then each flame with some fond wish?
Well, I have said that wheresoe'er this night
O'ertook me exiled from his happy face,
I'd blow a candle out with such desire
As could have speech, but in a lambent flame
Piercing the mystery of space about.
This night has found me guest at this high feast,
Companioned of famed men, but with my thought
Ever of him and her who gave him birth.

And here's the candle. For some holy rite
'T was doubtless fashioned, and by hands that moved
In rhythm with some sweet song, molding the wax
Distilled by bees that roamed through flowered fields
In drowsy summer afternoons, to store
The precious fires from out the skies, and then
To give them perfume of the fragrant earth.

There! It has gone, and never light since God
Divided day from dark has borne a prayer
More ardent than this wish for him whose name
I, bearing, vow anew to keep from stain.
. . . . . .
Put back the candle in its golden cup.
No, thank you, waiter; no liqueur for me,
But just a little coffee. Yes, two lumps.
(The smoke is getting in my eyes.)
That's all.

By John Finley,
Commissioner of Education of New York, in The Century.

THE WHITE CITY OF HOPE

(Continued from Page Six)

gradually began to change his mind. As usually happens, the longer they all championed the idea, the more interest they themselves felt in it, until they were all persuaded that there was no other course open. The plan, as it finally appealed to him, was this: Marguerite would take him on a long trip as far west as Kansas, for the benefit of his health, the exact length of the time to be spent away from home to be determined upon later. Marguerite felt in her heart that it was to be "till death do us part," but she argued that it was impossible to tell whether they would have to stay three months or six years. "You see it is taking so long to get started, father, we'll have to stay a longer while when we get there."

The old man finally gave his consent. "I have concluded I would like to see a little of the world before I die," he said to Margie. "I haven't seen much here in Harrisburg but the saloons, I guess, and I've always thought I'd like to find out if the saloons in other places are any different." He winked in the direction of Marguerite as he said this.

There were not many of John Davis' old rum cronies left in town. Many of them had gone down as prey to pneumonia and other diseases to which their drinking habits had made them susceptible. Those who were still lounging about the bars, both at Dregg's and at Brink's new saloon, got wind of the Kansas project. They were afraid to come to the Davis home, and their old "pal" never appeared on the street without escort, yet they felt he was being carried off against his will and they were afraid the hated temperance cause would make capital of his going. It was finally decided that a few of "John's best friends" would be at the Union Station to see him off, that they would take him by storm, as it were, from his helpless daughter's care, and carry him off to a saloon for a great celebration.

Just as it helps to have "a friend at court," so it also sometimes helps to have a friend "below stairs," and this friend materialized in the shape of the bartender's wife, who, having no sympathy with the scheme, quietly unfolded the plot.

"We will go the night before we had planned," said Marguerite, when told of the movement on foot, and by following this schedule the travelers managed to leave the city unmolested. Marguerite had not allowed any one to accompany them to the station, and it seemed but a short time after leaving home before they were comfortably ensconced in the sleeping car, and the train was slowly and hesitatingly beginning its long pull toward the Alleghanies.

(To be continued)

FLOWER MESSENGERS

Flowers, fair flowers, are lovesome things,
With God's own breath made sweet
And in the evening cool He walks
So softly 'mongst their budding stalks,
They do not hear His feet—
But oh, with ecstasy the while,
They bask in radiance of His smile,
Their glad hearts thrill and beat!

Flowers, fair flowers, are lovesome things,
The handwriting divine—
Wherein is writ the precious lore
Of heavenly love, the landscape o'er
In many a beauteous line—
The golden text, where eyes of men
May read, they too shall rise again
With God's own light to shine!

And oh, how beautiful the hands
That bear the lovesome flowers
To darkened homes of toil and pain,
To suffering ones who sigh in vain
For fragrant, woodland bowers—
Blest hands that nourish lovingly,
The souls longing for sympathy
As flowers thirst for showers.
—Zitella Cocke.

The roof garden of the Frances E. Willard Settlement, Boston is one of the finest in the city and is popular for rest and recreation. Here, high above the din of the street, with fresh air to breathe and stars for company, many of the girls sleep in summer. The boxes filled with flowers, from the earliest moment in spring till the coming of late fall, add much to the enjoyment of all.

SCENES OF TEMPERANCE ACTIVITY IN GEORGIA

MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD

Mrs. Lizzie Owens Middleton, special lecturer for the National S. T. I. department and associate superintendent of the department of School Savings and Thrift for the National W. C. T. U., is touring Georgia in the interest of scientific temperance instruction, reaching practically the entire public school system of the state. Teachers and pupils in both schools and colleges were impressed with her manner of presenting the subject. She has made many fine public addresses, gained members, and organized nine unions. Her address, "The Key to the Situation," delivered May 6 before the Georgia Educational Association of Macon, was so well received and deemed of such importance that the officers of the association requested her to prepare it for publication and general distribution.

In the vestibule of the Americus church where 2,000 registered delegates attended the state Sunday school convention April 20-22, Mrs. C. W. Schaefer, state superintendent of the Sunday School department, had on display for the benefit of superintendents, teachers and pupils all necessary helps for doing effective temperance Sunday school work. Fifteen hand-painted illustrations were a feature of the exhibit. Literature was distributed and orders for the helps were taken.

A powerful address on "A Plea for the Separation of the State and the Saloon" was delivered by Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta. It was enthusiastically received by the Sunday school workers.

The topic for recent meetings of all the Epworth Leagues of the North Georgia Methodist conference was "Epworthians as Dike Builders Against Rum." The meetings were special rallies of young women and men in the interests of National Constitutional Prohibition.

An attractive feature of the annual meeting of the Christian Endeavorers of Georgia at Fitzgerald was an evening program, consisting of a temperance play, songs and readings, all of which stressed the slogan, "A Saloonless Nation in 1920."

The annual convention of the Georgia Phileathea-Baraca Association held in Rome, May 7-10, adopted resolutions recommending the study of scientific temperance and prohibition, and work for National Constitutional Prohibition.

Judge Samuel D. Weakley, a judge of the supreme court of Alabama, delivered a masterly prohibition address at Mercer University, Macon, at the Georgia inter-collegiate oratorical contest. Mr. H. L. Hardy of Georgia College of Technology, Atlanta, won the first prize. His subject was "The Remedy and the Price."

The W. C. T. U. is organized, or works through temperance committees, in all Georgia female colleges and many co-educational colleges. Hundreds of S. T. I. essays, all tending toward the complete overthrow of the liquor traffic, are being written by pupils in these institutions.

The Oxford W. C. T. U. entertained the Newton county teachers in Emory College. A fine program was rendered, the college professors, who are staunch prohibitionists, and Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, college secretary for the Georgia W. C. T. U., making interesting talks. The securing of honorary members among the faculty and students helped to make the day tell for temperance, as well as being delightful socially. The teachers were given S. T. I. leaflets tied with white ribbon. A bountiful luncheon was served by the W. C. T. U.

Under the supervision of Mrs. L. E. Bucholz, state superintendent of Institutes, an excellent program was carried out April 20 at the Fulton county institute in the Baptist tabernacle, Atlanta.

On May 5, when Mrs. J. W. Calloway called the Bibb county institute to order, the Centenary church, Macon, blossomed like a spring garden with thousands of roses, pinks and other flowers, and was further decorated with National Prohibition pennants and large national flags, among which gleamed many white ribbon bows. Seventeen superintendents told what their departments are doing for National Prohibition. The state L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. J. L. Kennedy, and other prominent state workers assisted in the program. Two Loyal Temperance Legions gave demonstrations. A white ribbon luncheon enjoyed by 200 people was served.

A picture of one of the beautiful W. C. T. U. floats of the Columbus home-coming week, April 14-17, adorned the front page of THE UNION SIGNAL of May 13. The W. C. T. U. had two other entries, namely, a beribboned water wagon, in which rode three Y. P. B. boys, costumed to represent Uncle Sam, John Bull and the Czar of Russia, and a handsomely decorated automobile with the prophecy, "National Constitutional Prohibition—We Shall Win" displayed. The vehicle overflowed with Y. P. B. boys and girls.

The Savannah W. C. T. U. had a handsome float at the May festival.

Membership campaigns are being waged all over the state. An important social event was the beautiful reception tendered twenty-five new members by the Macon W. C. T. U. The occasion from beginning to end was "a joy forever."

An important three days' mid-year executive session was held in Macon, May 6-8, in a parlor of Hotel Lanier, the management kindly tendering its use. The state president, Mrs. T. E. Patterson, and the other four general officers of the state were in attendance.

Hints
for Commencement Gifts

BOOKS—

LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, $1.50.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS, Frances E. Willard. Price, 60 cents.

HOW I LEARNED TO RIDE THE BICYCLE, Frances E. Willard. Price, 40 cents.

WHAT FRANCES E. WILLARD SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 75 cents.

WHAT LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 50 cents.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC, William E. Johnson. Price, $1.00.

COMPENDIUM OF TEMPERANCE TRUTH, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO GIRLS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO BOYS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TELL STORIES TO CHILDREN, Sarah Cone Bryant. Price, $1.10.

THE TYRANT IN WHITE, (Anti-Cigaret story). Price, $1.00.

A SINGULAR LIFE, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. Price, $1.25.

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. Price, $1.37.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. Price, $1.47.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, Jack London. Price, $1.42.

A MODERN MADONNA, Caroline A Stanley. Price, $1.50.

JEAN MITCHELL'S SCHOOL, Angeline Ray. Price, $1.00.

LOIS MORTON'S INVESTMENT, Eva Murphy. Price, $1.35.

TWO, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 40 cents.

FRECKLES, Gene Stratton Porter. Price 60 cents.

All books cloth bound. Prices include prepaid carriage.

SOUVENIR SPOONS

W. C. T. U. TEASPOON, showing Crusade Church on bowl.

REST COTTAGE TEASPOON, Rest Cottage in bowl.

Spoons made of sterling silver. Price, $1.50 each.

REST COTTAGE SOUVENIR

A TERRA COTTA PLAQUE, cottage in bas relief, hand carved and hand tinted. Price $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

The friends of Dr. George H. Vibbert, who passed away April 29, are arranging for a memorial service for the promoted leader, to be held in the Woodlawn Universalist church of Chicago, May 30.

INDIANA SWINGING INTO THE PROHIBITION LINE

LORA S. LA MANCE

Indiana is ripe for a statewide prohibition campaign. It is tired of shilly-shally; tired of having the brewers in its midst go down in droves to the state capitol and crack a whip over the legislature; tired of having a gallery packed with liquor men hiss the state W. C. T. U. president when she speaks by invitation before the law-making body of the state; tired of having good bills slaughtered; tired of chopped-up, piecemeal township local option that makes the state as speckled, wet and dry, as is a patient with the measles; tired of compromise and half-way measures.

In my judgment Indiana is spoiling to get into the fight. There is a psychological time to strike a blow for freedom, and that time has come for the "Hoosier" state.

The Flying Squadron has stirred Indiana cities in fine shape. Its April-May tour has been a real victory. Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, state president, and Mrs. Elizabeth T. Stanley, vice-president-at-large, have been doing fine work, as have Indiana's other state workers. Mrs. Lulu Shepard, president of the Utah W. C. T. U., with her wit and logic, will tour the state in June. The writer will round out April and May, plowing a furrow from the Michigan border to the Ohio river.

Indiana's plan is to divide the state into sections like slices of cake. Some one in each section takes charge of the speaker and makes plans to utilize every moment possible. Every county in the state is to have work done in it. Indiana intends to gain 2,000 new members and organize 200 new unions this year. It has been pushing institute work and will get our cause before the Chautauquas.

Winona Lake's famous Chautauqua thanks to the efforts of Mrs. Stepp, county president, has given the W. C. T. U. a place on the program for a straight week, besides allowing the white ribboners a regular afternoon once each week. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National W. C. T. U. vice-president-at-large, and Mrs. Stanley, will be among the speakers. A suffrage debate will be one of the features of the week. Winona Lake is the home of Rev. "Billy" Sunday and of Homer Rodeheaver, the "Rody" whose singing has charmed tens of thousands at the Sunday revivals. Not less than a half dozen evangelists make their summer home at Winona Lake. Every train brings its crowds while the Chautauqua is in session. It means much to get the emphatic approval of the management of this educational center. By special invitation the writer was invited to address the young men at the Agricultural college at Winona Lake. Prohibition is in the air, in the lake region of the state.

Ft. Wayne, one of the wettest spots in the state, held a most profitable meeting recently. Four unions came together for business. Mrs. Martha Ridenour, the district president, made a brief address in which she introduced the writer, stating that a lecture was not desired, as that would be given by the organizer that night at the court house. "Our brewers defeated the suffrage bill and the statutory prohibition bill," she said. "We want to make Fort Wayne dry. What shall we do to be saved? Tell us this afternoon." Then followed instruction, questions and answers on house-to-house work, poster displays, parades, street meetings, work among colored people, foreign-speaking people, workmen and other special classes. Watch for Fort Wayne. Something will be doing there!

Through the efforts of Mrs. Ridenour a series of meetings was held with the Mennonite and Dunkard population of the county. Two generations ago these people fled from persecution in Europe and settled in colonies in Indiana. They are splendid citizens, and withal a prosperous class, first-class farmers every one of them. They have been slow to open their churches to temperance speakers. This time they did and we count it the beginning of a bright day. These people are so substantial and so influential that it was a double joy to see how enthusiastic they were when once they became interested. The German-Americans of the Lutheran church in northern Indiana, are being aroused also, and gladly open their doors. The Brethren church, influential in that section of the state, is strong for temperance.

We had fine meetings in Kokomo, that prosperous dry city of 20,000 inhabitants. It expects to increase the dry majority if the wets force another election, as they threaten to do.

Several important towns have voted dry lately, among them the important one of Goshen. There is a dry spell coming in Indiana. By 1917, if not before, it will take its place in the ranks of the dry states.

On May 3, Hartford City, Indiana, went dry the first time in seventy-three years. Jackson township, Hamilton county, includes the towns of Atlanta, Arcadia and Cicero. An election was called. The liquor interests understood that Mrs. Reinier, a Friends minister, was to speak upon the streets of Cicero, so they sent in a Columbus lawyer to speak before she could give her talk. He gave a very offensive, insulting tirade and a long one, to prevent her from speaking, but the plucky Quakeress answered him with dignity, poise and eloquence. He came back with an attack on the Bible and loudly declared "Jesus Christ was a WET." Rev. Mr. Shoemaker, Anti-Saloon League state superintendent, answered that. It was eleven o'clock before the crowd was dismissed. That abuse aroused Cicero. The women went to the polls and stirred up Atlanta and Arcadia to do likewise and thus they won a glorious victory on May 3. Mrs. Reinier is credited with bringing about the victory.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

In the Chicago Tribune the other day we found this headline over a common tragedy:

YOUTH FOUND GUILTY

Half way down the column were these words:

"Later, in the county jail, he said: 'This is what booze will do for you. I had too much in me, and that was all there was to it. I have no grudge against anybody, and I'm ready for the pen.'

"Enough said—except to ask the people of the distilling cities of Peoria, Louisville and Baltimore whether they know the smug and comfortable gentleman who walked down the street this morning clad in finery bought with the proceeds of this murder?"—Collier's.

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS

56 & 58 Park Place NEW YORK

FLOWER MISSION LITERATURE

Text Cards, 12c per 100; $1.00 per 1,000.

Text Cards (Loyal Temperance Legion), 12c per 100; $1.00 per 1,000.

Comfort Powders, 25c per box.

What the Flower Mission Can Do To Help Bring National Constitutional Prohibition, 20c per 100.

Plan of Work, 60c per 100.

Mission of the Blossoms, 60c per 100.

The Story of Jennie Casseday, 60c per 100.

Arbor Day, 60c per 100.

What the Flower Mission Should Mean to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Community, 60c per 100.

Duties of Superintendents, State, County, or District and Local, 25c per 100.

Why a Flower Mission, 60c per 100.

A Cluster of Posy Poems, 60c per 100.

Frances Willard and the Lamplighter, 25c per 100.

Program for a Flower Mission Meeting, 25c per 100.

Arbor Day Program, 25c per 100.

Report Blanks, 25c per 100.

Record Cards, 5c per dozen; 35c per 100.

Hints for the W. C. T. U. Flower Missions, 25c per 100.

Lights and Shadows of the W. C. T. U. Flower Missions, 60c per 100.

The Blossoms of the Beatitudes, 60c per 100.

A Flower Mission Brochure, 10c per dozen; 60c per 100.

(Four short poems by Anna Adams Gordon)

Flower Mission Quiz, 60c per 100.

Flower Mission Post Card, 2 for 3c, 12c dozen, 90c per 100.

The Story of a Roof Garden, 60c per 100.

Flower Mission Exercise, 60c per 100.

Some Phases of Relief Work, 50c per 100.

Annual Report, 50c per 100.

Order from MISS LELLA M. SEWALL, 1661 Beacon Street, Brookline, Massachusetts.

or from

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

VISITING CARDS 35c per 100, postpaid. Any Style. Hulisch Printing Co., Springfield, Mo.

HERE AND THERE

Elton (La.) W. C. T. U. is planning a parcel post sale, parcels to be sold just as they are received at ten cents each.

Mrs. Leila O. Stratton, National organizer, has just undergone a severe surgical operation at a hospital in Nashville, Tenn. Her friends will be glad to learn that she is rapidly improving in health and expects soon to resume her W. C. T. U. work.

Forty W. C. T. U. members of Powell, Towanda, Liberty Corners and Monroeton unions of Bradford county, Pennsylvania, met in a group institute at Powell, May 7, and held a very instructive and interesting meeting. A demonstration by thirty legioners of Monroeton was greatly enjoyed. Six new members were received.

Miss Belle Kearney is to lecture every afternoon for three months this summer at the Lincoln Chautauquas. At the close of the season she expects to make her headquarters in the East.

On May 12, Lambertville, N. J., celebrated its fortieth anniversary. The meeting place on that occasion was effectively decorated with posters, which later were placed in the Sunday school room of the church. The union is planning to supply posters for public schools, stores, moving picture shows, barber and blacksmith shops and mills, and is also expecting to arrange for a float in the flag day parade.

The Fifth district of the Florida W. C. T. U. is congratulating itself upon the acquisition of a valuable worker in Mrs. Anna L. Andrus who has been appointed president of the district by Miss Minnie E. Neal, state president, to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Ida De Garmo, who is leaving Florida for a stay of some months. Before Mrs. Andrus moved to Miami three years ago she was a leader in temperance circles in Detroit, having been recording secretary of the state W. C. T. U. of Michigan, superintendent of institutes and district president. Mrs. Andrus is particularly welcome at this time when Dade county is in a campaign and the women are doing yeoman service.

Afternoon and evening addresses at South Warsaw, N. Y., by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the state W. C. T. U., given according to a state custom as a reward for a gain of fifty in membership, were big events in the history of the local work. To properly receive Mrs. Boole, Mrs. Susan McKernan, the president of the South Warsaw union, invited the pupils of the eight schools of the district and their parents and all friends of the local white ribboners to attend. On the appointed day, May 14, at two in the afternoon, Mrs. Boole addressed 160 children and seven teachers on the lawn of Mrs. McKernan's home, and 116 of the children signed the triple pledge, Mrs. Boole writing her name on each child's card. Refreshments were then served to the children. At three o'clock, Mrs. Boole spoke to the older people, and in the evening at the school house, addressed a meeting for parents.

A most interesting and delightful institute of Cook county (Ill.) white ribboners, held April 22, in the Sheridan Road M. E. church of Chicago, was opened by Mrs. Almena P. McDonald, president of Cook county. Mrs. M. H. Landon, county evangelist, led the devotional exercises. The five minutes allowed each county superintendent to present "Plans and Suggestions," and "What We Hope to Do and How," told by each local president in the same length of time, brought out many valuable suggestions, among them the need of a chapel in the county jail; providing temperance speakers for churches wherever possible; encouraging children to raise flowers for distribution in hospitals and public institutions and inducing them to visit those less fortunate than themselves with offerings of flowers, fruit, postcards and scrap books; getting in touch with our foreign population before it is brought under evil influence and given a wrong start; sending The Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL to every minister; placing The Young Crusader in as many homes as possible, and in the hands of Sunday school scholars, and personal work by every member for an increased membership.

Mr. C. F. Rinehart, superintendent of the Dry Chicago Federation, and Mr. Virgil Hinshaw, president of the National Prohibition Committee, were among the speakers.

Franklin county (New York) white ribboners met in Malone for their annual institute, May 11-12. They were fortunate in having as speaker Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, National superintendent of Franchise, who proved a most efficient leader, giving the women many new and practical points, as aids to efficiency in the work of the local union. Mrs. Livingston's evening address was the most logical, able and convincing argument for National Constitutional Prohibition and equal suffrage ever heard in the town. New York being one of the suffrage campaign states, intense interest in the suffrage department was shown by the large number of white ribboners in attendance. Mrs. Livingston captivated her audiences by her charming personality and zealous championship of the cause. A unanimous wish for her return to the "north country" before the fall election was expressed.

You Can Weigh Exactly What You Should

You can—I know you can, because I have reduced 32,000 women and have built up that many more — scientifically, naturally, without drugs, in the privacy of their own rooms.

You Can Be So Well!

—if you only knew how well! I build up your vitality—at the same time I strengthen your heart action; teach you how to breathe, to stand, walk and relieve such ailments as

Nervousness, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Indigestion, Etc.

One pupil writes: "I weigh 83 pounds less, and I have gained wonderfully in strength."

Another says: "Last May I weighed 100 pounds, this May I weigh 126 and oh I I feel SO WELL."

Won't you sit down and write now for my interesting booklet! You are welcome to it—it is FREE. Don't wait, you may forget it. I have had a wonderful experience and I should like to tell you about it.

Susanna Cocroft

37. 624 Michigan Boulevard, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is a college bred woman. She is the recognized authority on the scientific care of the health and figure of women.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

AGGRESSIVE WORK FOR OFFICIAL PAPER

State Plans

We shall from time to time print in this column state plans for the increased circulation of our official paper and are sure that all will welcome suggestions or methods that have been carefully and successfully worked out, knowing that an increased circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL means increased efficiency among our workers.

Maine

"The supreme effort in Maine to increase our subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL has been the observance of March 1," writes Mrs. Althea G. Quimby, president of the Maine W. C. T. U. "Each union is asked to have a special program, to secure all renewals and a certain number of new subscribers. This plan has met with a hearty response.

"A letter is sent to each county convention asking that a certain number of SIGNALS be pledged, the number being apportioned according to the membership in the different counties.

"We try to have in every union an active local agent for THE UNION SIGNAL. In such unions there is generally an average of one subscriber for every four members."

Kansas

Miss Mary E. Dobbs, corresponding secretary of the Kansas W. C. T. U., writes that the following provisions concerning subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL have been recommended for adoption at the next state convention as a by-law:

"No woman shall be eligible to serve as state superintendent unless she subscribes for THE UNION SIGNAL.

"No woman shall be eligible to serve as district president unless she subscribes for THE UNION SIGNAL.

"No woman shall be eligible to serve as county president unless she subscribes for THE UNION SIGNAL.

"No woman shall be chosen as delegate to the national convention unless she subscribes for THE UNION SIGNAL."

North Idaho

"I certainly hope to increase our subscription list for THE UNION SIGNAL more than 100 per cent this fall," is the good word from Mrs. Madge E. Fohl, president of the North Idaho W. C. T. U. "I urge upon the unions at all times the necessity of subscribing for the official paper, and of late I have made it a point to mention this matter in every letter I have written to local workers, especially emphasizing the necessity of having the paper in the newly organized unions, at least for the officers."

POPULAR POSTERS

18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

Exclusion of Objectionable Post Cards from the United States Mail

Undeliverable Matter

Undeliverable first-class matter (including postal cards and post cards) and official matter. (See Sections 670 to 673, Postal Laws and Regulations.)

Withdrawal of Objectionable Post Cards from Mails

Section 573 of the Postal Laws and Regulations provides that "All matter which is manifestly obscene, lewd or lascivious, * * * will, when deposited in a post office, be withdrawn from the mails and sent to the Dead Letter Office." Under this rule every post card bearing a picture or language that is obscene, indecent or improperly suggestive should be immediately withdrawn from the mails and forwarded without delay to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General, Division of Dead Letters. If there is doubt as to whether a card is sufficiently objectionable to warrant its exclusion, it should be forwarded to the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post Office Department for decision. Postmasters are directed to exercise all possible vigilance in the enforcement of this regulation.

The above is taken from the United States Official Postal Guide for July, 1909, Page 52, Ruling 56.

It is a part of Section 3893 of the Revised Statutes as amended May 27, 1909, and has been given out to all Postmasters by the Postmaster-General, F. H. Hitchcock.

You can help to enforce this law by bringing violations, for which there is a heavy penalty, to the notice of your Postmaster.

Testimony from Former Governors of Prohibition States

The Pioneer Prohibition State of Maine:

For the last fifty years every Governor of Maine, with three exceptions, has declared in effect that prohibition has largely contributed to the moral, the social, and the economic welfare of the state.

Governor Stubbs, Kansas:

"If the prohibitory law had not given Kansas a better civilization and a higher type of manhood and womanhood, it would have been repealed years ago."

Governor Burke, North Dakota:

"Under prohibition the people of this state are better fed, better clothed, better schooled, and are better citizens."

Governor Cruce, Oklahoma:

"Since the closing of saloons the banks have more money, the stores are selling more goods, real estate is worth more, and the whole state is more prosperous."

Governor Brewer, Mississippi:

"I am a red-hot, uncompromising prohibitionist, in favor of statutory prohibition, and of every species and form of state prohibition and national prohibition."

Governor Kitchin, North Carolina:

"Under prohibition there has been a marked diminution in crime, business has increased, and politics and government have been relieved of one of their most corrupting influences."

Governor Hooper, Tennessee:

"The consumption of liquor in this state has greatly diminished, and the crimes resulting from the traffic have decreased in number."

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

JUST FROM THE PRESS
NEW MUSIC

PROHIBITION'S IN THE AIR
Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A stirring quartet for mixed voices. Price, 10 cents.

THE WORLD-WIDE JUBILEE
Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A demonstration song to be used either by the Y. P. B. or the W. C. T. U., consisting of solo, mixed quartet and chorus. Price, 15 cents.

PRAYER SONG
Written by J. W. Fritts. The words, "It is always noontide somewhere," so familiar to all, beautifully harmonized, to be sung immediately following the noontide prayer. Price, per fifty copies, 15 cents; per hundred, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
EVANSTON, ILL.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

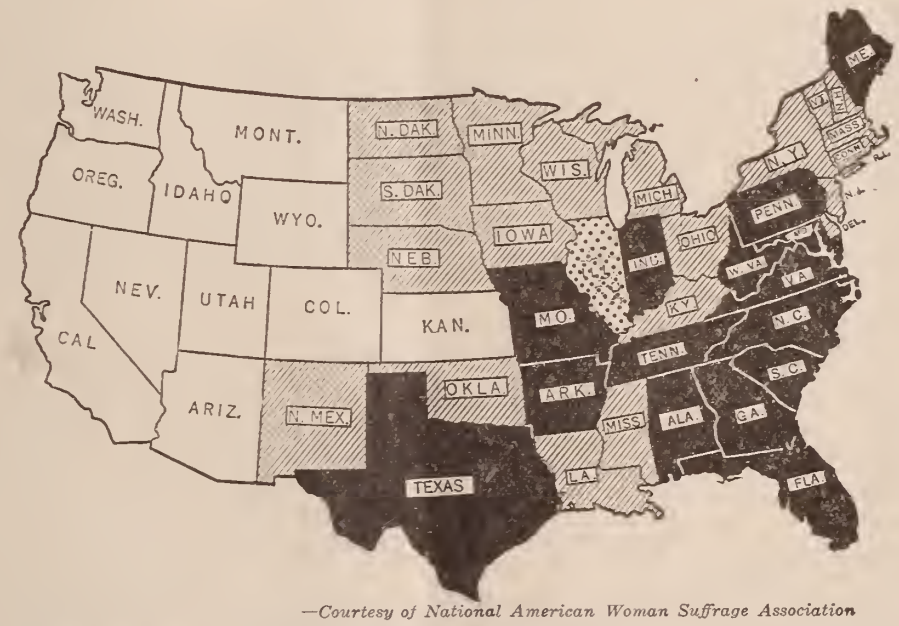
Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI EVANSTON, ILL., JUNE 3, 1915 No. 23



—Courtesy of National American Woman Suffrage Association

WHITE STATES: Full Suffrage. SHADED STATES: Taxation, Bond or School Suffrage. DOTTED STATE: Presidential, Partial County and State, and Municipal Suffrage. BLACK STATES: No Suffrage.

STATUS OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Full Suffrage

Wyoming	1869	Washington	1910	Oregon	1912
Colorado	1893	California	1911	Alaska	1913
Idaho	1896	Arizona	1912	Nevada	1914
Utah	1896	Kansas	1912	Montana	1914

Presidential and Municipal Suffrage

Illinois 1913

States to Vote on Suffrage at Next General Election

New York Pennsylvania New Jersey Massachusetts

States to Vote in 1916

Iowa South Dakota West Virginia

Call to Prayer

As our paper goes to press the grave crisis in our national affairs calls for the united and earnest prayer of our membership everywhere that those upon whom great responsibilities rest may be divinely guided. Let us pray unceasingly in this critical hour for our President and the members of his Cabinet.

DECISION ON WEBB LAW BY UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT EXPECTED THIS MONTH

The decision of the United States Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the Webb-Kenyon law is expected this month. Two cases: "The Adams Express Company vs. the Commonwealth of Kentucky" and "The James Clark Distilling Company vs. the State of West Virginia," are now under consideration by the Supreme Court. In the lower courts the commonwealths of Kentucky and West Virginia have won and reversals were asked by the Adams Express Company and the Clark Distilling Company respectively.

The decision of this court of last resort on a measure of such importance to the cause of prohibition will be awaited with keen interest.

THREE MINNESOTA COUNTIES OUTLAW LIQUOR TRAFFIC — POLK, CARLTON AND LINCOLN ENTER WHITE LIST

With startling rapidity the counties of Minnesota under the new county option law are outlawing the liquor traffic. The latest victory occurred on May 24, when Polk, Carlton and Lincoln counties voted to outlaw the saloons. The passing of Polk county into the dry column is almost as much of a victory as was Clay county, recorded last week, as it borders on North Dakota and has been a hindrance to law enforcement in that state. Since the county option law went into effect twelve counties have been added to the list of dry counties.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH APPROVES STRONG OVERTURE AGAINST LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Strong resolutions against the liquor traffic were passed by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America, which met last week in Rochester, New York. These resolutions will be given at length next week. In addition, action was taken on an overture presented by the Ohio synod, which gave power to excommunicate pastors or elders who by any secret or overt act give aid to the liquor interests. The assembly approved this overture.

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS ENDORSE PROHIBITION

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in national convention at Cleveland, Ohio, last week endorsed state and national prohibition, by the unanimous vote of its over 800 delegates, representing over 70,000 locomotive engineers in all parts of the United States and Canada.

LIQUOR DEALERS BARRED FROM MEMBERSHIP IN KNIGHTS TEMPLAR ORGANIZATION

At the sixty-second annual conclave of the grand commandery of the Knights Templar of Pennsylvania, a resolution was passed by a large majority which makes it impossible in the future for any one, directly or indirectly connected with the liquor business, to join any commandery in the state.

CHICAGO HOTEL PROPRIETOR FORESEES PROHIBITION

As the first step in an effort to enforce the law requiring all saloons to close on Sunday, an organization known as The Citizens' Committee has addressed a letter to all the larger hotels, calling attention to the law and the penalties for its violation.

In response to this notification the Blackstone hotel declared it would hereafter close its bar on Sunday. President Tracy C. Drake of the Drake Hotel company, owner of the Blackstone, gave the following explanation of its attitude on the question:

"Prohibition is on its way in the United States. The Blackstone hotel is prepared to meet it gracefully and not combatively. When the hotel was built we recognized that prohibition was bound to come and planned our bar arrangements accordingly, so needed changes may be made easily when prohibition arrives. As a result we are in a position to be less hurt financially by the arrival of prohibition than any other hotel in the United States. Sunday closing is merely a step on the way. We do not propose that in the law enforcement campaign the Blackstone hotel shall be the 'goat.'"

The Great Northern hotel bar has been closed on Sunday for many months.

New Mexico State Officials Participate in Remarkable Anti-Liquor Demonstration—Chief Justice and Governor Speak

The fight to outlaw the law-breaking saloons of Santa Fe is being led by some of the prominent state officials. At a mammoth demonstration held in the state capital on May 14, Governor McDonald, Chief Justice Roberts and Justice Hanna of the state supreme court, and Judge Abbott of the district court were among the speakers.

Especially significant were the remarks of Judge Abbott. He disclosed some highly sensational information in regard to warnings he had received of threatened disasters which would befall him if he aligned himself with the anti-liquor forces, and the exalted positions to which he might attain if he would keep out of the fight. He explained that he was not a coward on the question under discussion, and said, "I believe it is the duty of every citizen to come out on the side which he believes to be right and for the good of the people. I believe a man is a coward who deliberately refuses to come out openly and take a position for the right. So I say to all these people that I stand unequivocally and openly against the saloons. If that will defeat me in my ambitions for the future I am perfectly willing to be defeated."

> "The saloons are violating every law of God and man. If the law of God prevailed the saloonkeeper would be sent out to the penitentiary to serve time with his victims."—Justice Hanna.
>
> "If they will not quit this nefarious business of robbing men of their reason and their manhood, let us make it a crime to sell liquor in any form here."—Judge E. C. Abbott.
>
> "The saloon cannot be controlled by law. Since it cannot be regulated and cannot be made to obey the law, take the step which you know will be effective and close it up."—Governor W. C. McDonald.
>
> "Drink hurts our people more than anything else. It is the duty of all to help eradicate the saloon and save the Spanish-American people from its clutches. Let us vote to free this city from the abominable evil of the liquor habit."—Colonel Jose D. Sena.

Judge Abbott then gave to his audience some facts out of his experience as a judge on which they could base a decision as to whether it was economy to continue to tolerate in their city so outrageously expensive an institution as the saloon. He said:

"In the fourteen years during which I have been a resident of this county, most of the time I have been district attorney or on the bench. I will make the assertion and back it by proof if any one wants to challenge it—for I have the facts—THAT AT LEAST EIGHTY PER CENT OF THE CRIME IN THIS DISTRICT IN THE PAST FOURTEEN YEARS HAS BEEN DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY DUE TO BOOZE OR THE SALOON.

"The expense borne by the tax-payers of maintaining a penitentiary; the expense of your insane asylum and innumerable other expenses directly or indirectly entailed by the liquor traffic are so much greater than any alleged benefits—and I deny that there are any—derived from liquor licenses, that there is no comparison. There is no argument on the face of the earth in favor of the saloons, and the liquor people admit this by refusing to come before the public and argue for their business."

Santa Fe is to vote on June 7 and the outlook for a victory for the prohibition forces is most hopeful.

Women Voters Make Honorable Lobbyists

rs. Adrianna Hungerford, President
Colorado W. C. T. U.

'wenty-two years of enfranchisement h e broadened the vision, quickened the s se of civic duty, and had a marked in- f nce generally upon the individual man and her varied interests. Voting men, impelled by the doctrine of the G den Rule, and armed with persuasive, vincing facts and figures, have been lders in campaigns to better conditions communities and change certain state icies.

Because possessed of full citizenship, Colorado W. C. T. U. women were able t nspire other temperance organizations al the churches to co-operate in the vic- ious campaign for constitutional pro- hibition. The boon of the ballot also ngs prestige in the halls of legislation. al the speaker of the Colorado house of representatives is quoted as saying: "he W. C. T. U. has put the prohibition through by honorable lobbying." This eted power does not come through pty affiliation or the holding of political ce, but is increased by freedom from sh relations and aspirations.

Arizona Women Exemplary Citizens

Mrs. Frances Willard Munds,
State Senator

The matter-of-fact manner in which t women of Arizona have accepted t responsibilities of their newly ac- red citizenship has been somewhat appointing to the more strenuous ad- cates of equal suffrage. We have a et way of doing things down here in izona, but we get what we want just t same. In the first place, our laws not bad or vicious in any respect, l those pertaining directly to women d children, while not ideal, are excelled those of only a few of our states. nsequently, our women did not hasten overturn things nor make unnecessary nands as soon as they acquired the wer to assert themselves, but turned ir attention to the eradication of the uor traffic. While it is true that the hibition campaign which resulted in king Arizona dry last November was nned and carried on principally by n leaders, it is equally true that they ver would have succeeded without the men's vote and the women workers to luence the men. Arizona has been nefited in many ways, directly and irectly, as a result of giving women ballot. For instance, merely at the uest of influential women of the state age of consent was raised from six- n to eighteen years during the first ssion of the legislature after woman's franchisement.

have been a close observer of politi- situations, and have been actively erested in politics for many years, and an testify that never within my knowl- ge were all candidates for office se- ted with such special regard for their ral standing as during the campaign t fall, which was the first election at ich the women voted. It is also my inion, based on an intimate knowledge, t the personnel of the present legis- ure represents by far the highest class citizenship of Arizona. It is the con- sus of opinion, and the expression is ard on every side, that Arizona women voting citizens have certainly made od.

Women Place Home Interests First

Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, President
West Washington W. C. T. U.

One of the greatest benefits which has come to Washington through equal suffrage is the added interest shown by women in all public questions. They are studying closely matters of public import and striving earnestly to fit themselves to act intelligently upon every issue. Women have found upon careful analysis that all questions coming before the voters for action reach back toward and in some way concern the home, the child and the woman as well as the man and the political party. Therefore, women are interested in everything, and they are more anxious to conserve the best interests of home and children than they are to promote the pet schemes of politicians or advance the particular propaganda of a political party. What greater benefit can come to a state than to have all its women become intelligently and conscientiously active in all matters pertaining to municipal and state government?

The state is benefited by having all questions which concern government decided by those who are to be governed, each sex taking a part in government affairs and not delegating to one the right to govern all. Whether voting bonds for municipal improvements, electing a governor or president, a legislature or Congress, deciding questions financial, educational or moral, the state is benefited by having woman's judgment and wish recorded and counted with man's. Washington has benefited much by woman's ballot and in the future will benefit still more. Her women have been both blamed and praised for the part they took in bringing prohibition to the state. Time will show that under the blessing of God this will prove the greatest blessing that could come to us as a state?

THE ADVANCING HOST

Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston

(Tune: "Bringing in the Sheaves.")
See the host advancing! from the west they're marching,
Thousands of the women, armed with voting strength.
See a bow of promise! O'er the skies 'tis arching,
Read its glowing message, "Power has come at length."

CHORUS:
Women want the vote,
Women want the vote,
To bring in prohibition, women want the vote;
Women want the vote,
Women want the vote.
To make a sober nation, women want the vote.

Long have they been praying to the God of heaven
For the weapon needed to aid them in their fight.
Now the answer cometh, and the boon is given,
They will have the ballot, to gird them for the right.

CHORUS:
Women want the vote,
Women want the vote,
To bring in prohibition, women want the vote;
Women want the vote,
Women want the vote,
To make a sober nation, women want the vote.

Oregon Woman Voter a Power

Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, President
Oregon W. C. T. U.

In introducing a speaker on "Clean Politics" at a public luncheon of the Oregon Civic League in Portland, the chairman paid a high tribute to the influence of the votes of women in improving political conditions in the city and the state. As instances in point he cited the first city election in Portland after women were given the ballot. The political ring, entrenched in power and with a notoriously corrupt record, was deposed, a commission form of government adopted and clean men elected mayor and commissioners. Against this administration there has been brought no charge of "graft" and no shadow of complaint. Similar results have followed the entrance of women into the political life of other Oregon cities.

To the work and votes of women he also gave the credit for the great "Oregon Dry" majority last fall, the first state election in which they had part. Since women are able to register their opinions where they count they are shown a new respect and a marked deference.

What Suffrage has Done for Illinois

Helen L. Hood, President Illinois Woman's Christian Temperance Union

At every election at which women have had the opportunity to vote in Illinois the result of the drilling, organizing and specializing of all the years since the state W. C. T. U. was organized in 1874 has been shown in the careful and thorough way in which our women have accepted the duty of casting the ballot. It has been demonstrated in many ways that the ballot in the hands of women has secured cleaner municipal conditions and a larger area of law enforcement. We understand, now, the routine of elections, what is expected of us, and what we must do to secure results. We employ a method that counts mightily—that of driving indisputable facts and figures into the conscience and brain of voters.

Before the election of November, 1913, we had 29 dry counties, out of 102; 598 dry cities, villages and towns. At the close of April, 1915, we have 54 dry counties, only one county wholly wet; 1,234 townships out of 1,430 dry, while 790 incorporated municipalities are dry. Chicago women have not as yet voted upon the licensing of saloons, but will next spring cast votes against the continuance of over 7,000 saloons. Outside of Chicago, 1,396 saloons have been voted out, leaving 3,500 down state yet to be cared for! We have estimated that there are 1,000,000 qualified women voters in the state and of this number at least 75 per cent have rendered a good account of themselves, voting against the saloon, vicious candidates, and graft propositions. The campaigns were infused with the oxygen of intense vitality; we had a new realization of our opportunities and responsibilities, and we made good.

Had our brains been dissected during the campaigns, the grey matter would have shown the words, "Votes for women;" "Vote right;" "Don't forget to vote;" "Vote out the saloon."

As we look today at the prohibition map of Illinois we find that on the border-line facing St. Louis there is a small black patch, another spot northeast near Chicago, and a narrow strip along the bank of the Mississippi river. If these spots can be cleaned, the complexion of the map will be entirely white. This will be the color of Miss Willard's state not far hence.

Improvement in Character of Candidates Due to Woman Suffrage

Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard, President Southern California W. C. T U.

All good citizens admit the beneficial influence of woman suffrage in our state in municipal, county and state elections. Better men have been chosen to office and there has been an improvement in administration. Since women have voted the conditions of female labor have been improved and the child labor law extended.

The Red Light Injunction and Abatement law has been adopted and is being enforced. The age of consent has been raised to eighteen years, and now a father is compelled to support his child born out of wedlock. Enactments have been adopted providing for joint guardianship of children and governing property interests.

There has been a great improvement in the polling places, and, instead of being insulted, women are paid great deference not only by the election officials, but also by men voters; in fact, in many instances women have acted on election boards, giving perfect satisfaction. Suffrage has increased the respect paid to women in the home, and in social, political and religious circles.

Women register and vote, and vote intelligently, making fewer mistakes than the men. Suffrage has given the women an opportunity to smite the liquor traffic, and this they have done in most instances, and a great many saloons have been driven out.

Montana Women Awake to Civic Responsibility

Mrs. Mary L. Alderson, President Montana W. C. T. U.

Montana women have become more interested in civic affairs since they became enfranchised last November. Study clubs and good government clubs have been formed all over the state, and the women are studying school laws, election laws, moral laws, anti-liquor and other laws. Local unions have taken violations of laws against liquor into court and secured the conviction of saloon men.

During the legislative session efforts to secure the submission of constitutional prohibition failed because, on account of the woman suffrage campaign, many temperance people had kept "under cover" and allowed the liquor interests to elect a decidedly wet legislature. (Another demonstration of the fallacy of hiding our colors.) A referendum prohibition bill was, however, passed.

Men are recognizing the value of woman's vote. Women are appointed to minor civic offices. Political parties are responding to the demand for candidates of higher moral standards, thus advancing the movement for "cleaner politics." By petitions against saloons, and by local and county option campaigns, attempts are being made to drive liquor from within the borders of Montana.

Women have formed political parties in Butte, but in general they have remained non-partisan, banded together to work and vote as a body in support of moral and civic measures they desire.

Women Can Be Depended Upon to Vote Right

Mrs. Nettie R. Chipp, President Southern Idaho W. C. T. U.

Idaho during the winter of 1915 came into its own by securing the passage of a statutory prohibition law and a measure providing for the submission to the people of a constitutional prohibition amendment.

We are besieged with requests for statements of how we did it; what part woman's enfranchisement had in the victory. Although Idaho's women citizens have made a splendid record by enacting into law measures especially dealing with the welfare of the home and the protection and education of children, the one thing more than all others expected of woman is that she will use her influence for the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

With more than twelve years' active service along political and reform lines, we keep our faith in women as voters. Where the lines are clearly defined, the majority can be depended upon to vote right. Criticism comes largely from disgruntled and defeated politicians, and now and then from some well meaning brother who comes to the state with early prejudice and a set opinion in regard to "woman's place." All honor is due the men of the state who in early days showed themselves broad-minded, sympathetic and eager to be comrades to their wives, mothers and sisters by voting to give them the franchise, having faith in their ability and good judgment to make of Idaho a state proud not only of its wealth but of its citizenship.

We are proud of the three leading political parties in the state which came out last year against the liquor traffic. The people of the state registered their votes for men who stood for the same high ideal. Governor Alexander included in his message a recommendation for the legislative enactment to take effect January 1, 1916, and also for the constitutional amendment that will give the people the privilege of registering their votes to write into our constitution the prohibition of the liquor traffic within our borders. All honor is due the splendid men sitting in our legislative halls during the winter of 1915 who refused to be influenced or intimidated by the forces of evil, but who unanimously in house and senate registered their votes in conformity with the will of the people. Nor would we forget our representatives in Congress who placed themselves on record for National Constitutional Prohibition.

We realize the fight is not over until the votes are counted on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. The people of the state are overwhelmingly against the liquor traffic, but the forces of evil that will line up in an attempt to defeat the will of the people must be reckoned with as must that other factor that often contributes to defeat—the indifferent voter. But the men and women of Idaho will join hands for the final victory for God and Home and Idaho.

Women Voters Stand for Principle

Mrs. Lulu L. Shepard, President Utah W. C. T U.

For more than nineteen years the women of Utah have had the rights of full citizenship and the question arises as to what they have accomplished with the ballot. It should be remembered that from the first settlement of our state the men have been in the majority, as they always are in mining states, but even in the face of this condition, there have been many notable victories won through the united efforts of the women.

In every legislative session, the women have been powerful factors in pushing good laws; they have outlined measures needed for the betterment of women and children, and, then, by taking a united stand, have in almost every instance succeeded in passing the desired legislation.

They have watched every city election and by careful inquiry, through a set of eight or ten questions, have found precisely where prospective candidates would stand, and if they failed to measure up to the proper standard, defeated them.

As an illustration: At last fall's election, when candidates were being nominated in Salt Lake county, each of the parties, Democratic, Republican and Progressive, named one woman on the legislative ticket. When questions were put to the Salt Lake delegates in regard to where they would stand on prohibition the Democratic and Progressive women both said they would, if elected, vote for prohibition; the Republican woman refused to answer. As a result the latter although most capable and charming was overwhelmingly defeated, while the other two were elected. Where women vote, it pays to stand for principle rather than for party.

WHY?

Is there any reason why sex should be a barrier against voting. It is not a barrier against conducting a business, or managing a farm, or editing a paper, or writing a book, or clerking in a store, or teaching in schools, or practicing medicine, or following the profession of the law, or working in a factory. We do not consider the question of sex when we impose a tax or inflict a legal punishment or build schoolhouses for the education of the young. And if all these things be so, why not make intelligence rather than sex the test of citizenship? Why not make intelligence and morality and civic virtue a standard of excellence in this country? And when you do, you must of necessity accord to women at least an equal privilege with the men.—U. S. Representative John M. Evans of Montana.

THE NEW BROOM

Adapted from the Minneapolis Journal

BENEFITS FROM WOMAN SUFFRAGE FAR-REACHING

SAYS U. S. SENATOR BORAH OF IDAHO

In a recent statement given to the press by United States Senator Borah of Idaho, he very effectually disposes of many of the arguments urged against woman suffrage. He says:

"We have had woman suffrage in my state for more than twenty years. I entertain no doubt that its tendency is all for the good, for the advantage and benefit of the body politic generally. I am quite sure that none of the evils and none of the tendencies which the opponents of woman suffrage so often prophesy and seem greatly to fear have resulted from suffrage in our state. On the other hand, I can see much good resulting from it.

Idaho Finds It of Great Benefit

"Of course, woman suffrage is not a panacea for all the ills of the body politic, but it is a distinct substantial step, in my judgment, toward the lessening of the evils and bettering of the conditions of politics. Woman's influence in politics, like her influence in every sphere of life in which she moves, is for the good.

"I feel quite certain that those who have closely observed the effect of woman suffrage through a number of years will pronounce it both just and wise. I am equally sure that if the question in my state were left to the male vote alone woman suffrage would be continued there.

"I saw a statement the other day that in those states where woman suffrage prevails the better class of women do not take part in politics and do not vote, while the more undesirable or wholly undesirable do take part and do vote. I have been somewhat active in politics in my state for twenty-odd years. I have spoken in every hamlet and village, in every part of my sparsely settled state. I have seen the test applied under all inconveniences, and I say to the people of the east that the good women, the very best class of women, do vote. They attend political meetings, they read and take an interest in politics and in political questions, and they know what they are voting on or about.

Good Women Outnumber the Bad

"They are the quiet, intelligent, faithful, incorruptible, dependable force in politics. They are the bulwark of every great moral or quasi-moral fight in the state. The good women of our state do vote, be assured of that, and the good women far outnumber the bad women in every community.

Women Voters' Influence Felt in Politics

"No political gathering ever takes place in a state where woman suffrage prevails which does not take into consideration woman's influence and her probable action at the ballot-box. Whether she votes or not, men do not affront or challenge the moral sense of the best womanhood of the state, when they know that woman has the power to vote.

> "The supremest question of the future in this republic is that of rearing a citizenship commensurate in moral and physical stamina with the tremendous obligations which shall rest upon that citizenship. And I maintain that in the question of the rearing of citizenship, in the making of the laws, and especially the customs and practices which shall shape and mold the lives of the citizens, we cannot, we dare not deny ourselves the wisdom, the intuition of woman, and under present conditions, she can only make that wisdom and intuition effective through the ballot."

Vicious Interests Always Against Suffrage

"You may argue until doomsday that women are no better than men, and have no higher ideals and will vote about the same way, yet a political gathering will inevitably act upon the theory that it is not safe to rely upon the woman to condone a wrong or ratify a questionable transaction. And permit me here to say in this connection that while as good women as live are sincerely opposed to suffrage, and while men disinterested and patriotic are opposed to suffrage and most sincerely so, yet it is nevertheless true that every evil and vicious influence in politics is opposed to woman suffrage.

"While others will say women will vote along with their husbands, and there will be no change in the situation, the evil influences in politics do not seem willing to take that chance. I have a most profound regard for the accuracy of the intuitive powers of such evil influences.

"There was a time in the history of governments when it was not so important that women be permitted to vote, for the business of the government was largely that of defending by force against opposing foes. But the business of the state in these days is far otherwise. There is no phase of our social life, virtually no sphere of being into which the state does not intrude and about which politics does not obtain.

"Almost every conceivable question is now settled in the domain of politics. The question of the care and growth and education of the child, the sacred circle of the home and family, birth, education, marriage, are looked into, supervised, directed and molded by the state. Everything in these days for weal or woe feels the impress of politics. Nothing is too sacred or too small for the state's consideration, and in its last analysis virtually all great questions of today are moral questions.

"Politics has, therefore, entered into woman's domain, usurped the place which once was supposed to be virtually under her dominion, and why is woman, under such circumstances, denied the most potent instrument for effectuating results in politics, the ballot? Why should she, the creature of politics in these days, jostled and guided and circumscribed by politics, compelled to take notice of politics, be denied the most powerful weapon of the arena?

"The child is no longer the mere ward of the family. It is, in almost every sense, the ward of the community. Thousands and millions of our children, our future citizens, enter the industrial world while yet mere waifs. The community must look after them. It must guard and direct and take care of them. It is woman's duty to be there, and it is man's duty to give her the most effective instrument of warfare when she goes there. Give her the ballot. It will not degrade her and she will not dishonor it. It is the only really effective instrument of political warfare."

PENNSYLVANIA'S PLAN FOR ITS SUFFRAGE CAMPAIGN

MRS. ELLA M. GEORGE, President Pennsylvania W. C. T. U.

The final legislative act has passed and Pennsylvania takes its place as a full-fledged campaign state for woman suffrage. The question will be decided at the polls on November 2, 1915. Since we women have no voice in the settlement of this question, which is of such vital interest to us, it behooves us to put forth every effort possible to stimulate interest in our behalf among the men voters.

In the hope that this measure would be passed by the assembly we prepared for the campaign by setting aside five hundred dollars for special franchise work. We appointed as superintendent of the department one of our most capable and progressive women, giving her an assistant and dividing the state into two sections, that every locality might be reached.

The following plan has been mapped out and approved by the state officers:

(1) "Votes for women" is to be kept to the front on all occasions.

(2) It is urged that a superintendent be appointed in every locality. If none can be secured, a suffrage committee is to be appointed.

(3) All sections of the state will be given some specific work to do each month.

(4) Individuals or unions are urged to

(a) Distribute at least 200 pages of suffrage literature monthly.

(b) Hold some kind of public meeting — medal contest, debate, parlor meeting, institute, play, tea, circle, social or lecture.

(c) Get voters to pledge their support to the amendment.

(d) Secure space in local papers for suffrage items, and fill it.

(e) Arrange meetings for suffrage lectures and entertain the speakers.

(f) Place suffrage posters in shop windows.

(g) Place suffrage literature in barber shops.

(h) Secure permission to present the suffrage question at picnics, fairs, farmers' clubs, teachers' institutes, and grange meetings.

(i) Secure the enrollment of members and non-members.

The suffrage superintendents are asked to join with the other department superintendents and thus form a team. In this way every department will be considered and at the same time the suffrage question will be emphasized.

For instance, a meeting in the interest of Work among Foreign Speaking People may be held. The superintendents of this department and that of Franchise may arrange the program and conduct the meeting. Literature on suffrage for the foreigners can be distributed and arrangements made to canvass our naturalized citizens for votes for the amendment.

The Medical Temperance superintendent can assist the Franchise superintendent by distributing to physicians literature on "Votes for Women." If physicians can be persuaded to use a "Votes for Women" stamp on their prescription blanks it is furnished by the superintendent of this department.

The Flower Mission department must be specially mentioned. We are joining the Woman Suffrage Association in its effort to make Pennsylvania one bower of yellow bloom. At the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage headquarters they have made up packages of six different kinds of yellow flower seeds. These are selected so that there will be a continual bloom from June until November. In this way plenty of flowers will be on hand for decorations and these voiceless preachers will plead for "Votes for Women." White ribboners are urged to purchase and plant these seeds.

A lecture bureau has been formed and national lecturers who will deliver addresses on suffrage are being routed throughout the state.

THE SUFFRAGE CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK STATE

MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, President New York W. C. T. U.

The campaign to secure the adoption of woman suffrage in New York is in charge of the Empire State Campaign Committee, with Mrs Carrie Chapman Catt as chairman. The state has been thoroughly organized, and much money has been raised for campaign work. At one meeting in Carnegie Hall last fall the collection amounted to $105,000.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been of great service in the matter of organization, for in each place the white ribbon organizer has been able to find women who through the W. C. T. U. have been educated to believe in woman's ballot, and in this way suffrage organizations have been made possible.

The failure of the state legislature to pass any temperance bills, even so popular a one as that raising the age at which liquors may be sold to minors, has deepened the conviction that the mother sex needs representation in the government, and members of the W. C. T. U. are becoming aroused to more active participation in the campaign.

Each union is urged to hold a suffrage meeting, or a suffrage medal contest, and to do personal work in getting voters pledged to vote for the amendment this fall.

The state W. C. T. U. has sent to every local union a package of the literature issued by the Franchise department, with the expectation that the leaflets will be used at a local meeting, and that many additional copies will be ordered for distribution.

Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, National superintendent of the Franchise department, is in the state for a month's meetings.

Automobile trips, open-air meetings, voiceless speeches, addresses wherever groups of people may be gathered, parades, debates, banners, posters, personal work—all these methods and more will be used to win the ballot for women in New York state.

A constitutional convention is now in session and it is reported that the members are much disturbed because the legislature voted to submit the amendment in November, and if a new constitution is submitted that does not have the same amendment it will supersede it. However, there are clever women watching the situation and they will be on the alert to detect any conspiracy to defeat our cause.

Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch is arranging a centennial celebration in honor of her mother, Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Three great meetings will be held, one at Seneca Falls, another at Johnstown and another in New York City. Mrs. Stanton organized and was president of the first woman's temperance society in New York state, and as early as 1854 representatives appealed to the legislature for redress from the evils of drink. The way in which women were treated then was in striking contrast with the courteous treatment we receive now at Albany.

The vote for women is but the crowning of women's equality everywhere, and as those homes where husband and wife share the burdens and responsibilities are most complete, so the government of state and nation needs the viewpoint of both men and women.

The anti-suffragists are active. They seem to have plenty of funds with which to carry on their campaign. Their appeal is to the ultra conservative, the indifferent and the ignorant.

Such a campaign as we are engaged in is highly educational and is helping to fit women for citizenship. The W. C. T. U. is assuming a definite part of the campaign work, and is placing the emphasis on fitting women for citizenship.

Women should be taught the comparative value of issues and especially the fact that the greatest issue before the American people is that of securing national prohibition of the liquor traffic.

The Women Will Legislate for Their Offspring

The women have paid an incalculable price of sweat and tears for man's use of alcohol. When they get the ballot they will vote for prohibition. It is the wives and sisters and mothers who will drive the nails into the coffin of "John Barleycorn." Ever jealous for the race, they will legislate for the babes of boys yet to be born, and for the babes of girls, too, for they must be the mothers, wives and sisters of these boys.

—Jack London in "John Barleycorn."

MASSACHUSETTS' EQUAL SUFFRAGE CAMPAIGN

MRS. KATHARINE LENT STEVENSON, President Massachusetts W. C. T. U.

That Massachusetts is at last numbered among the suffrage campaign states is a matter for profound rejoicing on the part of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It is true that ours is not the major part in the campaign. The state in which the suffrage movement originated and in which its two greatest leaders, Lucy Stone and Susan B. Anthony, had their birth, has had for more than half a century strong, well organized equal suffrage societies into whose hands the conduct of the campaign of necessity falls. If you could take a peep into the busy headquarters at 596 Boylston street, you would realize that it is a veritable campaign which is being waged. The rooms are so filled with workers that the old simile of "sardines in a hox" seems not an exaggeration. Nor is Boston the only place with headquarters. In nearly every city and large town they are established, while a corps of ahle workers and speakers is kept constantly in the field. Literature is heing distributed with a liheral hand and if the referendum should fail of adoption on November 2, it would certainly not be for lack of splendid generalship on the part of the leaders of the movement.

But although the leadership does not rest with the Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we are by no means mere camp followers or laggards in the great work. We are working in conjunction with the suffrage societies in some parts of the state and in others we are paddling our own canoe, and that very effectively. Each union in the state is expected to hold at least one puhlic suffrage meeting; many are holding several. We have published our own enrollment blanks and are circulating largely Mrs. Livingston's admirable leaflets. Mrs. Livingston herself is to be in the state during July and August and we are expecting to use her for as many meetings as she can give us in her rest months. Other speakers are vigorously at work, including our National workers, Miss Sewall and Miss Foster, and our efficient state superintendent, Mrs. C. E. Birdsall.

The special reason why we helieve that an independent campaign on the part of the W. C. T. U. is necessary in Massachusetts is hecause the suffrage societies feel that there is no call for them to emphasize the relation of the ballot in the hands of women to the great cause of temperance and prohibition. Some of them fear that to lay too great an emphasis on these and kindred matters of reform might alienate the man who is accustomed to the moderate use of liquor who might, otherwise, cast his vote for equal suffrage. Without doubt there is much to be said for this position on the part of the suffragists. On the other hand, the women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union see the great army of earnest temperance men who hesitate to give their allegiance to equal suffrage because they fear it will not prove a factor in securing the ends they so greatly desire. Many Christian men would vote for granting the hallot to women if they were really convinced that it would prove a help in the twin causes of total abstinence and prohibition.

To just such men—and they are many—the Woman's Christian Temperance Union feels that it has an especial mission. We can let the light of fact in upon their doubts. We can show what woman's ballot has done in other parts of the country. We can show how the liquor interests dread it as they dread almost nothing else. To the women of Massachusetts has come an unusual opportunity for proving the attitude of the liquor forces towards the ballot in the hands of women. A man high in the inner circles of liquordom, a paid agent of "the trade," has been circularizing the state for the past months, calling especial attention to the menace of the impending referendum vote. His latest communication, "unbeknown" to himself, fell into our hands. We have had it photographed and have sent it hroadcast throughout the state, especially to the press and to the clergy. Its heading is as follows:

WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOST BITTERLY OPPOSED IN EVERY WAY TO THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND ALL FORMS OF LIQUOR LICENSE.

It declares itself to be "Most important to Brewers, Distillers, Hotel Proprietors, Wholesale and Retail Dealers, Saloon Owners and all others who in any way handle liquor for sale." Its chief line of argument relates to the fact that liquor is a necessity and that its sale must be licensed and properly regulated. It affirms that the prohihitionist is the enemy of honest men in an honest vocation and advises the friends of license to come together for concerted action. "We can and must have license by all honorable means." "The coming referendum leaves a way open for us to succeed for license." "Lastly, we must and do know if woman suffrage should by any possibility he confirmed at the referendum, that it will mean entire state prohibition. No one in the state can then secure a license because the women will, in the majority, vote against it." These are some of the choice sentences with which the document is adorned.

Is it any wonder that, in giving this document to the puhlic, the Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union feels it is furnishing a valuable contribution to the campaign? It is possible to deceive good temperance men and women on the relation of woman's hallot to the great question. It is not possible to deceive those whose very existence and interest is hound up in the perpetuity of the liquor traffic. They know what it means and they are opposing it with might and main. It is affirmed by those who claim to know that the liquor traffic of the state has pledged eight millions of dollars to defeat the amendment. Whether or not the sum named is a correct one we are sure, from past experience, that neither men nor money will be spared in the effort to defeat the conscience of the home in its battle against the non-conscience of the saloon. God speed the right!

HELP US WIN THE VOTE

DEBORAH KNOX LIVINGSTON

Tune: "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

We have heard a song of triumph, it has rolled from shore to shore,
A song of joy and gladness which we'll sing for evermore.
"Woman Suffrage" sure is coming to the land which we adore.
Come, help us win the Vote.

CHORUS:

Soon the women will be voting,
Soon the women will be voting,
Soon the women will be voting,
Come, help us win the Vote.

Come, sisters of the sunny south, we need your help today,
Come, comrades of the eastern states, we know you're on the way.
Our western sisters join us, and they sing this happy lay,
"You soon will win the Vote."

There is much of wrong that we would right, there's work for each to do.
The license shame we'll put to rout, and all that is untrue.
For prohibition is our goal, the challenge comes to you,
To help us win the Vote.

Copyright, 1915, by the National Woman Suffrage Publishing Co., Inc., 505 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City

Our food, our health, our home, our schools, our play are all regulated by men's votes.

Isn't it a funny thing
When father cannot see
Why mother ought to have a vote
On how these things should be?

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, June 3, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

May thirty-first being a legal holiday, the paper for this week was prepared a little in advance of the usual schedule and was practically all in type when the news of Mrs. Hutchinson's passing on was received. It is therefore impossible to give in this issue more than a brief statement. A biographical sketch and tributes to the promoted leader will appear in next week's paper.

The war is teaching us one lesson that will not be easily forgotten. It is that not only in war but in the tremendous rivalries of peace those nations will prevail which most intelligently conserve the basis of their power—the human being. The nation that wastes its resources of manhood and womanhood will go down. That is the challenge of the great moral measures to the voters and the law makers.

The constant plaint of a certain element of the liquor interests that "the bad saloon has brought odium upon all saloons" is nullified by the fact that the liquor legislators always fight to the limit any measures that would transform the bad saloon into something less objectionable.

NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION URGES NATIONAL PROHIBITION

Resolutions urging national prohibition of the liquor traffic were adopted by the northern Baptist Convention, in session at Los Angeles. Dr. Cortland Myers, the noted divine of Boston, expressed the belief that the liquor traffic would be driven out of the country within the next four years.

National W. C. T. U. Treasurer Enters Upon Heavenly Activities

Most of our readers have no doubt already learned, through the medium of the Associated Press, of the great loss sustained by our organization in the translation to life eternal of our beloved National treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson.

Although for nearly three weeks Mrs. Hutchinson's condition had been critical and grave fears were entertained of her recovery, the members of her family and her friends and comrades were hopeful that the skill of the physicians, under the guidance of the Great Physician, might restore her health.

In March she left Evanston for the West, with Seattle as her objective point, planning to combine in her trip both business and pleasure, and, before returning, visit the homes of her two sons. After a vacation respite of a few weeks at Hot Lake, Oregon, where she had the companionship of Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp and Mrs. Henrietta Brown, president and vice-president respectively of the Oregon W. C. T. U., she decided to submit to treatment at a well-known surgical hospital in Portland, Oregon. She went more willingly to Portland, as it was the home of her long-time and intimate friend, Mrs. Kemp, who throughout the dear invalid's last illness was almost constantly with her. During the last few weeks Mrs. Charles Roberts of Winfield, Kansas, the only daughter of Mrs. Hutchinson, was in loving attendance upon her.

Although Mrs. Kemp and Mrs. Roberts kept the National officers at Evanston informed by daily telegraphic bulletins of the condition of the invalid, they were not prepared for the message received the latter part of last week to the effect that the physicians in charge had nearly given up hope of helping the sufferer. With anxious hearts they waited for further word, which came to them on Sunday morning, May 30. The telegram was as follows:

"Our beloved friend and comrade has joined her dear ones over in that other land where pain and suffering are unknown. She left us at six minutes past nine Saturday night. Services at Hutchinson, Kansas, next Friday."

Not only did Mrs. Hutchinson have the loving care of the most skilled physicians and nurses during her illness, but Oregon white ribboners were unceasing in their attentions.

She will be laid away by the side of her husband, Dr. Hutchinson, at Hutchinson, Kansas, their former home, at which place will be held on Friday, June 4, the committal service. At the same hour there will be held at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters, Evanston, Ill., a memorial service.

The home-going of Mrs. Hutchinson comes not only as a great bereavement to the national organization but as a personal grief to her countless friends and white ribbon comrades in every state in the Union.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AS A SUFFRAGE SENTIMENT-MAKER

The persistent, vindictive and in many cases outspoken opposition of the liquor and vice interests to the woman suffrage movement has won for it many votes. It has forced not a few ultra-conservative or prejudiced citizens to a realization that there is nothing the traffickers in the virtue of boys and girls fear more than the votes of the mothers of the class they seek to victimize. When these well-meaning but unprogressive people read that in New Jersey a federation of liquor organizations representing $75,000,000 of capital has been formed to fight the suffrage amendment, and that the liquor men of Massachusetts are warning the friends of personal liberty that woman suffrage is most bitterly opposed in every way to the liquor traffic, they come to the conclusion that, quite aside from the justice and righteousness of the cause, the votes of the women are needed to help secure state and nationwide prohibition and to elect conscientious and courageous officials who will enforce it.

In the Christian church at large, somewhat slow at first to acknowledge the value of woman suffrage, the conviction is each day growing stronger that it is a divinely appointed agency to help rid the nation of the two crime-breeding institutions, the liquor and vice traffic.

THE ANSWER TO BE FOUND IN SUFFRAGE STATES

The type of anti-suffrage oratory that rants and raves against drawing women into the miry pool of politics and prates of the destruction of the home that will result from giving woman the ballot is rapidly disappearing. In fact, all the arguments used for years by the opponents of suffrage have been made to appear so absurdly ridiculous in the light of what is really happening in the states where women vote that none other than a very daring or a very foolish individual would give voice to them.

In replying to the ancient tradition that women will be polluted by participating in politics, one need only to say that in virtually every suffrage state it has been proven that instead of being contaminated, the women have compelled the politicians, in order to secure their vote, to consider the moral cleanliness of the men they put up as candidates.

As to the destructive effect on the home, the voting women not only continue to preserve its sacredness, to tenderly care for their children and their husbands, and to carry on as heretofore their duties in the church and charitable societies, but have as well, through their newly acquired powers, secured for the less fortunate members of their sex and for thousands of little children, home privileges of which they have been deprived by long hours of labor and hard conditions.

The argument that women do not want the ballot and will not use it is disproved by statistics which show that in every state where they have full suffrage they cast a large vote. The secretary of state of Wyoming has said that ninety per cent of the women of his state vote; the Colorado legislature has declared officially that the women vote "as generally as the men." A statement issued by the justices of the state supreme court of Idaho testifies to the big vote polled by the women; and the unprecedentedly large number of ballots cast at the only general elections at which the women of Kansas, Oregon, Arizona and California have had an opportunity to exercise their franchise privileges, proves the interest of the women in those states.

In fact, full, adequate and conclusive answers to every one of the stock arguments of the opposition may be found in abundance in the twelve states which have honored themselves by enfranchising the women.

GIVE THE MOTHERS A CHANCE AT THE BALLOT BOX

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AS WILLIAM J. BRYAN SEES IT

"The argument which had most weight n bringing me to believe in woman suffage is the right of the mother to a voice n determining the environment that surounds her children," says Hon. William . Bryan, secretary of state. "The mother acrifices for the child. Her life tremles in the balance at the child's birth. 'rom one-third to one-half of the averge woman's life is given to her children. She spends upon them her nervous force nd energy and she endows them with he wealth of her love. What has a boy ost when he reaches maturity? You can ot measure what any boy costs, and the nother pays by far the larger part of the rice. She is the one who, more than the ather, makes the necessary sacrifices, nd when a mother raises a boy until he s about grown and then evil men conspire to take him from her,—when they ay snares for him and try to ruin him for the money they can make out of it,—lo you tell me it is fair to allow these men to use the ballot and then tie her hands so she can not protest as strongly as she would. Give the mother a fair chance, at least, with those who would rob her of that which is dearest to her, that upon which she hopes to depend in her old age.

The Enemies of Suffrage

"Where is the active force against woman suffrage? It is to be found amongst those who attack public morality and public decency. You can go into any state where woman suffrage is an issue and you will find that the man who profits by sin, who lives off of vice and is an enemy of society,—you will find that he is afraid to let the women vote. Why have good people less sense than bad people?—why do good people divide when bad people stand together?

"Why should we be afraid to entrust women with the ballot? What is the most sacred thing with which we have to deal? Is it not the child? Are we afraid to entrust woman with the child? Is she not the child's first teacher? And is she not as such instructor, apt to have a large interest in the government under which she and her child must live? You say women have not time for those things? Will they not take time for the things that are important? Is it not true of our wives? If there is any emergency, if there is any need, is there anything that stands in the way of their doing their duty?

"Woman suffrage is coming; you can not prevent it. Why discredit yourselves in the effort to prevent it when you can obtain credit by recognizing their right? Is there any evil in government from which woman does not suffer? If she must bear with man all the evils of bad government, why should she not bear with man the responsibility for making government better?"

POSTER COMPANY REFUSES VALUABLE LIQUOR ADVERTISING

It is reported, on the best of authority, that the Van Beuren and New York Bill-Posting Company recently refused a $20,000 liquor advertisement. It will be remembered that three months ago the Poster Advertising Association, of which this company is a part, passed resolutions at its national meeting at Palm Beach, Florida, that no further contracts for advertising whisky, distilled or spirituous liquors would be accepted, and that under no circumstances would existing contracts be continued beyond December 31, 1915.

FIRST NAVAL RESERVE HYDRO-AEROPLANE CHRISTENED WITH WATER

The first American naval reserve hydro-aeroplane was recently christened in Chicago by Miss Mona Dunne, the daughter of the governor of the state of Illinois. In seeking for use on this unique occasion a fluid which should be a product of the state of Illinois, water from a well on Abraham Lincoln's historic Springfield home was selected. Illinois leads the states in being the first to launch a naval militia hydro-aeroplane, and it was christened with water, not champagne!

PATERSON, N. J., LOSES ONE HUNDRED SALOONS

On May 14, the date for the renewal of saloon licenses in Paterson, N. J., one hundred saloons are reported by the Chicago Examiner to have failed to make application for a continuance of business. This reduces the number from 430 to 330. The cause of this dropping out is said to be the sentiment against the liquor business aroused by "Billy" Sunday's preaching and general depression of business.

WOMEN OF DENMARK TO HAVE FULL SUFFRAGE

The new constitution of Denmark which has recently passed the new diet, according to Associated Press dispatches, provides for equal suffrage for men and women, and also confers on women eligibility to the diet. It is expected the new constitution will be signed by King Christian on June 5, the anniversary of the signing of the first constitution in 1849.

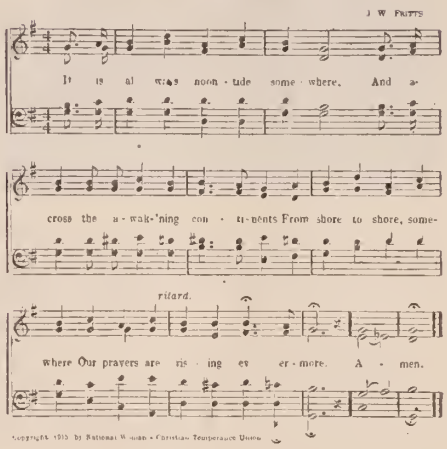
STUDY OF CRIME CONDITIONS LEADS PROF. MERRIAM TO URGE PROHIBITION ORDINANCE

Professor Charles E. Merriam, a member of the city council of Chicago, recently introduced in that body an ordinance seeking to forbid the sale of all spirituous liquors. As an explanation of his advocacy of the measure, Mr. Merriam, who is a professor of political economy at the University of Chicago and has made a study of vice and crime conditions in his city, issued a statement giving his reasons, as follows:

"My work as chairman of the council crime committee impressed upon me the very close connection between alcoholism and crime. Study of the report of the vice commission and the practical experience in attempting to carry out the commission's recommendation regarding the sale of liquor in dance halls have deepened this impression.

"I have come to the conclusion that it is time for the city council to take prompt and vigorous measures to curb the now practically unbridled liquor traffic in Chicago. We cannot permit any special interest, liquor or otherwise, to ride roughshod over the city government and the citizens."

Time of Prayer—Noontide



A WHITE RIBBON PRAYER

BLANCHE A. WHEATLEY, Bolivar, W. Va.

A kind heart,
A true heart,
A heart as pure and clean
As mountain stream translucent,
That flows fair banks between;
A heart with founts of pity
Quickening to the Master's will—
Lord, one soul may I rescue,
Ere my heart in death is still.

A clear mind,
A broad mind,
When duty's call rings out
To guide my feeble footsteps,
Sin's dreadful power to rout;
A mind to know the pathway
An all-wise Hand doth mark—
Lord, lead me, lest I falter
When the way is growing dark.

A firm hand,
A sure hand,
A hand full tender, too,
To lift the weak and fallen,
Whose clasp will strength renew;
A hand that's quick to labor
For weary and oppressed—
Lord, may I lift one burden,
Ere I fold my hands to rest.

A white life,
A pure life,
A life that scintillates
With diamond sparks of goodness,
As fair as heaven's gates;
A life that joys in striving
To bring sad eyes delight—
Lord, may I know that gladness,
Ere fades this world from sight.

A strong soul,
A fine soul,
A soul to overcome
The lure of deadly marshlights
That lead us far from home:
A soul with power to conquer,
With strength the faith to keep—
Lord, may thy love enfold me,
When I lie down to sleep.

PERSONAL MENTION

Among recent visitors at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters were Miss Mary G. Hay, a member of the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Lulu L. Shepard, president of the Utah W. C. T. U. Miss Hay was on her way to Portland, Oregon, to attend the national council of the General Federation. Mrs. Shepard expects to fill engagements in Indiana, Pennsylvania and other eastern states.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
MRS. ELIZABETH P HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JUNE 9—Flower Mission Day (Birthday o f Jennie Casseday)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

THE RELATION OF WOMAN'S BALLOT TO THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

MRS. DEBORAH KNOX LIVINGSTON, National W. C. T. U.
Superintendent of Franchise

In this suffrage edition of THE UNION SIGNAL W. C. T. U. women will find much material to help them in the furtherance of the department of Franchise. There is no more important question before the state and local unions today than that of securing "votes for women as a weapon against the legalized liquor traffic." Eleven states enjoy full suffrage. They and Illinois, with its limited privileges, have demonstrated that where the ballot is granted to women on equal terms with men it has been used against every form of legalized vice. Our opponents, the traffickers in drink, the white slavers, the gamblers, the exploiters of child life and all others who seek the destruction and demoralization of society, testify that the ballot in the hands of women spells defeat. Our friends are a mighty host. The educators, the philanthropists, the social service workers, the best element of capital and labor, the great percentage of the Christian organizations of the country, are arrayed with us in the effort to secure equal political rights for women. New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts are now in state-wide campaigns and magnificent work is being done in these states by our Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in co-operation with the suffrage associations and kindred societies which have as the supreme end and aim of their efforts the securing of the ballot for women.

I should like to urge that two lines of activity be carried on not only in the campaign states, but in the "near campaign" states, namely the holding of meetings during the summer months everywhere people congregate, and the distribution of literature. The National W. C. T. U. is putting out an inexpensive line of campaign leaflets which I sincerely trust may be used by our constituency in preference to the publications of other organizations for the reason that in the material used by our publishing house an attempt is made to show the relation of woman's ballot to the solution of the liquor problem. Let us work for complete victory over the enemy.

SOCIAL MEETINGS AND RED LETTER DAYS

MRS. MARY DAVIS TOMLINSON, National Superintendent

The summer days are hastening on, when many of our workers will leave their homes for the seaside or mountain resorts; but whether away or at home, meetings may be planned for the observance of the Red Letter days. Lawn parties can be made very attractive with flowers, flags, banners and posters. Now is the time for the agitation of our principles, and for the education of the people along the lines of our department work and National Constitutional Prohibition.

At every meeting should be read the proclamation of our promoted leader, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, as given to the nation and world on that memorable date —September 10, 1911.

Red Letter Days

While we love to remember June 9, the birthday of Jennie Casseday, on other days during the summer flowers and delicacies may be given to the sick, either in the home or at the hospital.

On July 21 we shall wish to honor the birthday of our beloved National W. C. T. U. president, Miss Anna A. Gordon. The members of the Loyal Temperance Legion, the Young People's Branch, and we of maturer years, should celebrate this day. Miss Gordon was the chosen comrade of our great leaders, Miss Willard and Mrs. Stevens.

July 31, Temperance Missionary day, is the birthday of Miss Mary Allen West, our heroic worker in Japan. Too much reverence cannot be shown Miss West. Let this day be remembered by our workers everywhere, and especially may the women of Illinois, to whom she belonged before taking up her work in far-away Japan, hold her in loving memory.

August 3, Fresh Air Mission day, the birthday of Lady Henry Somerset, must not be forgotten. Speak of her love for Miss Willard and of her work at Duxhurst Colony, concerning which articles have appeared in THE UNION SIGNAL.

On August 28, the birthday of Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes, Ohio's loyal daughter, biographical sketch should be read.

September 28 is the birthday of our first promoted chieftain, Frances E. Willard. Make this truly an ingathering of workers. As many of the state conventions will occur this year at that time, the day could be made one long to be remembered. An especial effort to gain members and to secure subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL and The Young Crusader should be put forth. Purchase "The Life of Frances E. Willard," by Miss Anna A. Gordon, price $1.50, and read a chapter or two from it. This book will be valuable for reference, as it contains many incidents that would make enjoyable and profitable reading at any social meeting.

Do we, dear comrades, realize how much we owe to these veterans of our peaceful warfare, who kept steadfastly at the work in season and out of season; who sacrificed strength, health and funds that our country might be freed from the dominant power of the liquor traffic and kindred evils? Considering the change in the consensus of public opinion towards prohibition and all moral reforms, the help of the ministry, the ease in travel, and the growing popularity of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we should avail ourselves of every opportunity to help the National to make an increase of 50,000 members; and this department should at least gain 20,000 new workers.

Mothers' meetings are always appropriate and can be held at any time. The revised booklet of Madam Willard may be read and with the program prepared by the National superintendent, makes an interesting evening. These booklets are ten cents each and may be purchased from me or from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill.

212 E. 7th St., Plainfield, N. J.

We record here the names of comrades and friends who have recently passed to the higher life:

MRS. IOWA HOLSTON, state treasurer of the California (North) W. C. T. U. Mrs. Holston was a woman of exceptional executive ability and rare judgment, and for more than twenty years has held positions of trust and honor in local, county and state organizations. For the past seven and one-half years she has been the very efficient treasurer of the state W. C. T. U. In her passing on, the W. C. T. U. loses from its ranks a true woman and a faithful and loyal comrade.

MRS. MARY ELSTON, North Chemung, New York, loyal member of the local union.

MRS. CAROLINE W. VAN METER, Salem, N. J., a loyal, generous member of the Salem No. 1 union. Mrs. Van Meter had reached her ninety-fourth year.

MRS. ELIZABETH DUNN, for nine years president of the Sparta, Wis., W. C. T. U., passed away April 19 at Pomona, California.

CAPTAIN RICHARD BLAKE SWIFT, Laddonia, Mo., an honorary member of the W. C. T. U. and a zealous advocate of the cause of temperance.

Mrs. Cornelia T. Hatcher Visits Sitka, Alaska

MRS. LOUISA K. CAMPBELL, Corresponding Secretary Sitka W. C. T. U.

Sitka, the first dry town in Alaska, enjoyed the services for a week of Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Hatcher, president of the Alaska W. C. T. U. Mrs. Hatcher was entertained by the president of the local W. C. T. U., Mrs. Margaret Georgeson, wife of Professor Georgeson, who is in charge of all the United States experiment stations (agricultural) in Alaska. Mrs. Georgeson had planned for the speaker a most comprehensive schedule

On Friday, the day after Mrs. Hatcher's arrival, she addressed the ladies' guild of the Episcopal church. On Saturday an informal reception for her at the home of Mrs. Georgeson gave the women of Sitka an opportunity to meet her, and on Sunday the children of the native village and their elders gathered in the U. S. public school room to hear a most pleasing talk. Eleven children signed the Young Campaigners' pledge. In the evening at the First Presbyterian church a goodly number greatly enjoyed a discourse by Mrs. Hatcher. Monday morning the Sheldon Jackson mission school proved a responsive audience as evidenced by the spirited way in which the Young Campaigners' battle cry was taken up. The town school for white children was the next place on the list. In the evening a large audience of native people assembled in their new Alaska Native Brotherhood hall and listened quietly and thoughtfully to an address. At its close a large number of men and women came forward to sign the pledge, while more children were enrolled as Campaigners. On Tuesday over thirty of the native women met to be instructed and organized into a union. A president, secretary and treasurer were appointed, the latter officer demonstrating her fitness for the position by collecting dues from thirty-one women before Mrs. Hatcher's departure from Sitka. A meeting with the ladies of the altar society of the Catholic church filled the afternoon.

The crowning feature of the week was the illustrated lecture by Mrs. Hatcher, given Wednesday evening in the Verstovian theater, credit for which is largely due to Mr. Turner, who gave the hall and his services. Every seat was filled and a large number stood during the entire lecture. At the close boys, girls and a number of older people flocked to the platform to sign the pledge and the Young Campaigners' roll. It was gratifying to see one of our brightest young men "dare" another to sign with him. The "dare" was accepted and two for whom several have long been praying are now enrolled on the safe side. The example of these two men was followed by three sailors from the U. S. C. G. S. "Manning," and a large number of students from the Sheldon Jackson school.

The local union spent a pleasant and profitable hour with Mrs. Hatcher before her departure on the "Georgia."

During the week thirty-eight signed the pledge as Young Campaigners for Prohibition, and sixty-nine men and boys and the same number of women and girls became total abstainers, enrolling their names as such.

We are grateful for the good work done and believe that the fresh enthusiasm and impetus received portend better things for our little town. We are encouraged to believe that Sitka will stay dry.

Lessons Learned From Legislative Session

Must Draw Line Between Friend and Foe Before Election

MRS. DORCAS J. SPENCER

The close of the legislative session of California marks the end of hopes and efforts in that line for this year, but leaves no lack of things to be done. This session was of more than the usual length of days, but hardly a proportionate record of achievements; though the fact that the forces of reform held their own, and have no lost ground to lament, is gratifying.

An important lesson was learned, however, by the winter's proceedings. Both senate and assembly were made up of men averaging creditable ability and character, but the new issues forging so rapidly to the front made a cleavage on new lines. We know now, that "he that is not for us is against us." Never before have men been so clearly identified by the company they keep.

The principle of prohibition draws the line of separation. The adherents of that principle are compelled to stand together, for never before were the opposing forces so thoroughly solidified. Temperance bills were most gallantly defeated but generally defeated by the solidity of their opponents, by margins significantly small. An amendment to our scientific temperance instruction law was passed, but our solons proved their own need of instruction, when they struck out the word other from the phrase "alcohol and other narcotics." However, their children, going to school, know better.

It is hoped that the lesson of solidarity will not be lost, and that in the election of future legislators the lines between friend and foe will be drawn before election.

The spring conventions are in season now, and the state president, Mrs. Sara J. Dorr, is flitting from one county to another. So far twelve have already been held—all evidencing activity in many lines. A few changes have occurred in county presidents; for instance, in Santa Clara county Mrs. Anna Beal, a woman of rare merit, takes the place of Mrs. Ina Orvis, whose experience has covered three years of successful work. Mrs. Orvis has removed to another county. The migratory movements of Californians have often served the purpose of helpfulness all along the line, as officers and members from various localities come together in new places, lending inspiration to others. Mrs. Estes, the vice-president-at-large, and Mrs. Skoe, the recording secretary, are still holding institutes. Miss Chase, Y. P. B. secretary, is in the field in the interest of her Branch and is also doing splendid work in schools.

Conventions of last year's Dry Federations are being held in the various counties to elect delegates to a state convention to be held at Fresno, June 2, to consider plans for next year. Needless to say, that means another campaign. The liquor traffic is now in a state of siege, and the individual campaign in any state is but a factor in the conflict that can only end in victory. Whatever shall be the declared purpose of the approaching convention, its result will be an unrelenting siege.

SUFFRAGE MIDGETS

One of the exhibits which is attracting much attention in the suffrage booth at the Panama-Pacific Exposition is made up of tiny imported dolls representing the women of the various countries of the world. The non-voting dolls stand behind a wall, "symbolic of the conservatism, inertia and self-interest which keep women from the ballot." The costume of each country is carefully presented except that midgets from the unenfranchised countries are dressed in mourning.

PASTORS AND CITIZENS ASK FOR W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION

A strong union was recently organized in Presque Isle, Maine. Following a religious awakening in the town, the pastors and one hundred citizens signed a petition asking for the organization of a Woman's Christian Temperance Union and promising to co-operate in its work. By invitation of the Maine W. C. T. U. Mrs. Katharine L. Stevenson, president of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., went to this important point, spoke before a large audience in the Baptist church in the morning, organized the union in the afternoon at the Congregational church and in the evening addressed a mass meeting at which even standing-room was at a premium. The local press pronounced this address the finest and ablest ever given before a Presque Isle audience and added: "It is a great honor in these days when the tide of world-wide prohibition is grandly marching on, to be found in the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union." Great credit is due Rev. G. M. Parks and the other pastors for paving the way for this good work.

CLEAR-HEADED

Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee and tea did for him:

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"I had an attack of pneumonia, which left me with dyspepsia, or neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, and we liked it so much that we will never change back; for I am a well man today and have used no medicine.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co's branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee drinking days I was subjected to nervousness and the 'blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal — the original form — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

THE WHITE CITY OF HOPE

IN THREE PARTS—PART II

HENRIETTA JOHNS

Chapters from a forthcoming book entitled "Uncle Joe's Home"

(All Rights Reserved)

With the aid of the car porter, Marguerite soon had the old man safely tucked away in a berth for the night. Then she had a little talk with the kind-faced colored man. He did not need the generous tip she laid in his palm to cause him to be more than willing to assist her. "Your fathe'h, Miss, ain't gwine to get no liquoh aboahd dis train," he promised.

She had taken the precaution of giving her father a dose of the medicine with which Dr. Mills had equipped a small case, and even now the old man was sound asleep.

Marguerite stretched out her own weary body with a certain satisfaction in the thought that the journey was begun, a feeling which expressed itself ere she fell asleep in a softly breathed "Thank you, heavenly father."

Pittsburg, Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Jefferson City, Kansas City, Lawrence, Topeka! Marguerite had committed these names as the strategic points in their flight from liquor, and each one she was prepared to count off almost as a prayer said on a rosary.

"Marguerite!" Her father's voice awakened her from a revery. "I believe I'll just walk through the train a little while. I'm tired sitting, and maybe I'll find some of my old cronies on board."

They had passed Pittsburg—and one prayer had been said.

"You're too weak, father, to walk through a moving train alone. I'll call the porter."

"Can't I do anything myself," he muttered as he went off, the porter gently guiding him by the arm.

They were hardly out of Marguerite's sight when the old man turned and faced his attendant, a big, round, solid silver dollar in his hand. "Mr. Porter," he said, "that's yours if you'll get me something on this old train to drink. Now you needn't shake your head. I know it's aboard and I'm going to have it. I saw it at breakfast in the dining car. My little girl in there has been good to me, and I don't want her to know anything about it because she has never seen me drink. But I'm going to have a swallow, and that soon, too. I won't ask for any more if you'll only get me one little glass of something to stop this burning in my throat. I don't care what you bring, understand, but a good stiff Scotch whisky would just about see me through."

"Sorry, sah," said the porter, pushing the dollar back into John Davis' hands, "but I'se undeh orders, sah, from the company, you know, and I couldn't do it, sah!"

"Then I'll find some one who can." In a sullen rage Davis turned back, in one breath cursing with every oath he could manufacture the porter, who still assisted him, and in another calling down maledictions upon his daughter. He did not speak in a loud tone but mumbled his threats in an insidious way.

Columbus! They were to change cars here, and to break the steady travel Marguerite had arranged for a few hours' stop-over. Her father's increasing restlessness and irritability made her welcome the thought of change; the stay at Columbus might make the remainder of the journey easier for both of them. The obliging porter carried their wraps and suit cases into the station. "I'm sorry to say good-bye to you," smiled Marguerite, pressing into his palm another fee.

"Now, father, if you will please stay by our traps while I make some inquiries, we will soon get out into the fresh air again."

She hurried to the information window. When she returned, their baggage was undisturbed but her father was—gone. Quick as a flash she was at the door leading into the street. There, taking a lively constitutional along the crowded thoroughfare, was her aged parent!

"Oh! oh!" she cried in anguish. She did not realize that she was speaking aloud, nor that she was wringing her hands; she was wholly unconscious of her surroundings. A refined looking man was just entering the station. He had heard her exclamation. He hardly had time to raise his hat and offer his services when she spoke.

"Oh, thank you," said Marguerite quickly. "Do you see that little old man with the white hair and moustache? He's my father, and I fear he will go into a saloon for a drink. Oh, he must not! He must not!"

The gentleman hurried after the object of her solicitude, darting in and out between the drays and people, as necessity demanded. Marguerite did not know she was addressing a state representative of Ohio, nor that as he went on her errand he was thinking sub-consciously, "I voted wet! I voted wet! For the sake of young women like that one, I wish I'd voted dry instead."

Just as Davis disappeared into a common looking shanty down a side alley, the representative caught up with him. Davis had snatched up a glass intended for another customer, and was throwing a coin on the counter in his eagerness to be served. The representative took hold of Davis's arm and lowered the untasted glass to the bar.

"Let go of me!" yelled Davis in loud tones.

"Your daughter needs you immediately."

"Curse her," shouted Davis, knocking aside the honorable arm to again seize the glass.

"What's the matter here," suddenly came the voice of an officer who had just entered the door. "You after me, too," yelled Davis, in the frenzy of his craving striking wildly at the representative, who stood nearest him.

"Fight! fight," cried the loafers, gathering quickly.

"You come with me," said the officer firmly to Davis. But the disappointment in not getting the liquor was too great for the old man and he tried to break away to snatch at the glass still foaming on the bar. It really was a light blow that the officer dealt him, but Davis was far from strong and he dropped senseless to the floor. It was the most merciful thing that could have happened. Marguerite had waited a little while in the station, and then had thrown discretion to the winds and started out in search of the two men. Instinctively she connected with her father the grog shop with a group of curious people about its door. Into the depraved crowd walked the daughter. "Water, please," she said quietly, bending over her prostrate parent. Water was a hard article to produce, it seemed, and a glass of brandy to resuscitate the benumbed brain was politely tendered instead. "No, thank you, not that! Water, water!" she said frantically.

"Water," repeated the representative, and finally himself procured from next door a glass of muddy water, which he proceeded to dash into the face of the unconscious man. Two weeks before he had argued eloquently on the floor of the house that in many accidents brandy was the only remedy, and that it was a necessity generally.

Ohio's representative was soon on his honorable knees, examining the still form.

"The pulse is all right, though the heart beat seems irregular, probably from liquor drinking," he ventured, seemingly forgetful of the fact that he had often solemnly declared that the prohibitionist had yet to prove that alcoholic liquors had any injurious effect on any organ of the body.

"I wish we could remove him to the street," said Marguerite. The burly policeman lifted the wasted form and strode out of the vile resort. As the air began to revive the old man, he was able to struggle to his feet. Between the representative of the Ohio legislature, and the representative of the Columbus police force, to whom matters had been explained, he was half pushed, half lifted to the station. The luggage had not been disturbed, and down beside it sat the officer, with Davis's aching head against his shoulder, while the Ohio representative made hurried inquiries about trains for the west.

The next train was all but due, so the men who had so reeently made the acquaintance of father and daughter stood by them, helping them to board the train, and in every possible way trying to atone for the vast trouble that the liquor interests of Columbus had caused the lady from Harrisburg.

It was a through train to St. Louis, and Indianapolis, the third bead on Marguerite's prayer chain, was left behind without trouble. Her father was more like himself than he had been for months. "Marguerite, I'm proud of you. I don't just recall what happened, but somehow I know you did nobly." They were the tenderest words he had ever uttered to her.

"O God," her heart cried, "keep father like this all the way to Kansas!"

For some hours her father apparently had no return of the craving for drink, but she did not leave him alone a second, even arranging with the porter to bring them their food from the dining car. As the hours went on, however, her father's old irritability gradually returned, and once more Marguerite's heart was filled with fear. The next morning her father walked away with the porter for a little exercise. At the end of half an hour Marguerite became alarmed. What should she do? Hurriedly she glanced over at a man who occupied the seat across the aisle. Something in her face attracted the stranger's attention. "Pardon me," he said, "may I be of assistance?"

"Thank you," replied Marguerite at once. "Possibly you have noticed my father. He is an elderly man, and I'm worried about him. I can't trust the porter to keep him from getting liquor on the train. Will you do me the great kindness to look him up?"

"Assuredly," was the polite rejoinder. The stranger was none other than John Kressler, member of the Philadelphia firm of Kressler and Hewitt, the largest retail grocers in the state holding a license to sell liquor of every description for "family use." Kressler rose with alacrity to do the bidding of the young woman, whom he mentally termed a beauty. John Kressler's conscience had given him a little worry lately. It persisted in suggesting the cutting out of the liquor part of his grocery business which was by far the most profitable source of income. Well, he reasoned, he was using all the money for humanity.

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

OUTLOOK FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN NEW YORK HOPEFUL

"You cannot turn around in New York without seeing 'November 2,' the date of the vote on woman suffrage," remarked Mary G. Hay, a prominent suffrage and club leader of the Empire state, upon a recent visit to National W. C. T. U. headquarters. So thoroughly and so skilfully is the publicity work of the suffrage organization being done that every man, woman and child is continually reminded of the issue before the people,—"votes for women," and that, said Miss Hay, is really about all that is needed at the present day among the intelligent class. Miss Hay spoke confidently of the prospect of success for the amendment at the polls and as the basis for her belief gave the following interesting facts:

Only one of the newspapers of the great metropolis opposes the measure. While not all are for it, neither are they against it. The New York Tribune has promised a special suffrage edition and speaks for the cause through its editorial columns. The afternoon papers are all with the suffragists as are, of course, the religious journals. Even Tammany Hall is not to be counted with the opposition, and it is reported on good authority that one of the Tammany leaders warned his followers not to fight suffrage. Practically the sole opposition comes from the liquor and vice interests who try to conceal themselves behind the anti-suffrage organizations. The work in New York is thoroughly organized by assembly districts, and the captain of every precinct is responsible for seeing that all voters are visited. "Suffrage Bees" are popular, the women going in twos, to call upon the voters. Every man is recorded under one of three classifications: "Favorable," "Opposed," or "Indifferent." At the end of the day these workers gather together at some home in the district for supper and to compare experiences. Daily, thereafter, suffrage literature is sent to all the indifferent voters and in about six weeks he receives another call from the suffrage workers. "It is organization that will win," and the admirable machinery of the suffrage association undoubtedly will go a long way toward fulfilling the prophecy heard on every hand that votes for women will be victorious at the polls next November.

MARKED DEFERENCE PAID WOMEN MEMBERS

That Arizona is proud of the women members of the legislature is shown by the fact that they are placed on various committees from time to time. Our own white ribbon sister, Mrs. Frances Willard Munds, state senator, was called to the chair on two occasions in committee of the whole when important matters were under consideration. She was roundly applauded the first time and persistent cries of "Speech, speech," came from every quarter of the senate chamber. But with vigorous raps of the gavel she secured order and proceeded with business.

Mrs. Munds has been chairman of the committee on education and public institutions and a member of the public health and land committees. She introduced bills endorsed by the State Federation of Women's Clubs relating to social and moral questions, and others endorsed by the state teachers' association relating to schools.

A novel incident that created considerable amusement occurred at one of the senate sessions. Mrs. Munds' little daughter had accompanied her mother to the senate chamber and did not leave when that body was called to order, but sat on the floor near her mother's desk embroidering while affairs of state were considered.

Arizona has a woman representative, Mrs. Rachel Berry, and seven county school superintendents are women.

KENTUCKY'S CLUB WOMEN URGE VOTE ON SUFFRAGE IN 1917

MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP Represents W. C. T. U. at State Federation Meeting

Kentucky's federation of women's clubs, which met recently at Lexington, not only passed resolutions in favor of the submission of a constitutional amendment providing for woman suffrage, but earnestly requested the adoption by the political parties of the state of a plank pledging their members to such a measure.

Fraternal greetings were extended to the federation on behalf of the W. C. T. U. by Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the Kentucky W. C. T. U. Claiming that the men citizens of the nation need the co-operation of the women and without their aid cannot lift civilization to its greatest heights, she prophesied that when woman fully realized her high commission of motherhood and through the possession of the ballot was enabled to do that which her mother heart prompted her to do, she would accomplish great things. She said in part:

"When we supplement our brother's laws with laws that represent the mother heart of the state our streets will be as clean and safe for the feet of little children as a flower garden. There will be no saloon or brothel, no gambling den or haunt of infamy, and no procurer, but each child's weal will be each man's care.

"When women protect their business of child culture as men now protect their hogs and horses and sheep and cattle, then will the home's highest interest be safeguarded. I say again, man cannot do this. He will rejoice in such a condition, but he cannot bring it about. He has not had 'the vision.' He has not paid the price, he cannot, he does not know the priceless, the immortal value of a little child. That is our work, we must do it, or it will forever go undone."

WISCONSIN FIELD NOTES

Special Correspondence

Wisconsin white ribboners, most of them, are so busily employed in the various activities which go to build up our work that few of them find time to keep THE UNION SIGNAL reporter informed as to their efforts. The following news notes are of interest:

County Institute Meets In Dry Sparta

Monroe county institute, held at Sparta, April 28, was a jubilant occasion, the county having in the recent election won notable victories at Kendall and Norwalk, and especially at Sparta, the largest city in the state to come into the dry column this year, and by the safe majority of 101. Very appropriately the pantomime representing "Uncle Sam" and "Aunt Columbia" hanging the dry states on the line was given, after which Kendall, Norwalk and Sparta were added, arousing great enthusiasm. All united in singing, "Sparta has gone dry."

An Hour With Japan

A Japanese social given by the Palmyra union was an event worth while. Our work in the "Sunrise Kingdom" was presented in an interesting way by white ribboners, in costume, who represented Japanese ladies in attendance at a reception ostensibly held in honor of Madame Yajima, president of the Japan W. C. T. U. Nearly one hundred people were present.

Unions Making Sentiment

Maiden Rock is striving to create sufficient sentiment to take the saloon license from its hotel. It had difficulty in finding a paper which would admit temperance matter, but the Spring Valley Sun now gives them a column free. Work in the Sunday school has been rewarded by the securing of signatures to the temperance pledge of every scholar. Six splendid silver medal contests and one gold contest have been held, and the temperance sentiment created thereby has already become manifest.

Randolph, led by the union and the churches, carried on a brave campaign for no-license. "John Barleycorn" was presented to a full house. Captain Wiard talked to large audiences at four days' meetings. A fine medal contest was held just before election; 3,500 pages of campain literature were distributed by the L. T. L. members. These young folks led a parade of two hundred children up and down the streets of the village, singing and giving their rally cries, and although the battle was lost by a few votes, the gain in temperance sentiment will doubtless show itself in the next election.

HOPEFUL LEGISLATION IN NEWFOUNDLAND

In a letter received at National Headquarters from Mrs. Anna Mitchell, St. Johns, Newfoundland, she says:

"Several weeks ago our house of assembly opened and the members have gathered from all parts of the island to transact business and to make and amend our laws for the present year. One of the earliest measures introduced was a resolution on the liquor law, not for actual prohibition, but to cut out wines and spirits, leaving the lighter ales and beers. Our local union, feeling that half a loaf is better than no bread, decided to support the bill. We organized a woman's parade—the first ever seen in St. Johns, and marched through the streets with flags and banners bearing appropriate inscriptions.

"Prior to the march we held a woman's meeting in one of the city halls. We were very nervous about it, wondering how our women would respond, but we need not have feared, for the hall was crowded and fully five hundred people participated in the parade. The governor of the colony addressed us from the steps of his home and wished us success, though he could not agree with our root and branch methods.

"The next day the resolution was before the house. The white ribboners attended in a body to listen to the debate. The one who introduced the resolution belonged to the opposition and the government made a party question of it and voted it down. Then the government brought forward a bill for total prohibition, arising out of a largely signed petition presented by the W. C. T. U., when the house was in session more than a year ago. I have just received a note from the mover of the first resolution in which he says, 'I have every hope that a satisfactory bill will be put through the legislature at this session, enabling the question of prohibition to be decided at the polls, in which case, I feel sure it will be carried.' Governments are sometimes very slippery customers and our present rulers are not in favor of this bill, but were forced to it by the opposition members and by public opinion generally."

FIVE YEARS OF CONTINUOUS IMPROVEMENT

Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, has demonstrated to its own satisfaction that liquor license revenue is not at all necessary to run its affairs. For five years it has been without saloons, and conditions have improved each year since the bars were closed. Bank deposits in the threo banks have increased from $885,000 to $1,122,000 during the dry regime. The county commissioners have just paid $15,000 of the county's bonded indebtedness of $53,000 standing against the county since 1889, and promise a further reduction of the debt six months hence from the $16,000 retained in the county treasury.

Hints
for Commencement Gifts

BOOKS—

LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, $1.50.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS, Frances E. Willard. Price, 60 cents.

HOW I LEARNED TO RIDE THE BICYCLE, Frances E. Willard. Price, 40 cents.

WHAT FRANCES E. WILLARD SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 75 cents.

WHAT LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 50 cents.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC, William E. Johnson. Price, $1.00.

COMPENDIUM OF TEMPERANCE TRUTH, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO GIRLS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO BOYS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TELL STORIES TO CHILDREN, Sarah Cone Bryant. Price, $1.10.

THE TYRANT IN WHITE, (Anti-Cigaret story). Price, $1.00.

A SINGULAR LIFE, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. Price, $1.25.

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. Price, $1.37.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. Price, $1.47.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, Jack London. Price, $1.42.

A MODERN MADONNA, Caroline A Stanley. Price, $1.50.

JEAN MITCHELL'S SCHOOL, Angeline Ray. Price, $1.00.

LOIS MORTON'S INVESTMENT, Eva Murphy. Price, $1.35.

TWO, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 40 cents.

FRECKLES, Gene Stratton Porter. Price 60 cents.

All books cloth bound. Prices include prepaid carriage.

SOUVENIR SPOONS

W. C. T. U. TEASPOON, showing Crusade Church on bowl.

REST COTTAGE TEASPOON, Rest Cottage in bowl.

Spoons made of sterling silver. Price, $1.50 each.

REST COTTAGE SOUVENIR

A TERRA COTTA PLAQUE, cottage in bas relief, hand carved and hand tinted. Price $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works
Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

PROHIBITION POPULAR IN GEORGIA

JOHN H. REYNOLDS, President
First National Bank, Rome, Ga.

To my mind prohibition in Rome has been most beneficial, notwithstanding it has not had the support to which it is entitled. In the days of the saloons the saloonkeeper was the power in local politics. Everybody knows what that means to a town. Our greatest trouble, of course, was with the negro, although a great many white men were equally annoying to the public. My residence is on a most prominent thoroughfare and Saturday nights were made hideous by the noise of drunken men on their way home. We now have none of that. Of course in these matters one has to speak in general terms. Property has enhanced in value. I cannot claim that that has resulted entirely from prohibition, but it shows that prohibition does not injure the value of property. It certainly has not injured business in Rome, Ga. I cannot imagine that a corporal's guard of our best people could be found who would favor the return of saloons.

JOTTINGS FROM MICHIGAN

Special Correspondence

It is now expected that Michigan will be in the fight for constitutional prohibition in 1916.

The Michigan state W. C. T. U. convention is to be held in Sault Ste. Marie, June 23-27. An earnest endeavor is being made in the state to gain 2,600 new members.

Bay City (Central) W. C. T. U. has begun a systematic work among the Poles in the city through the distribution of hundreds of pages of Polish literature which in most cases is gladly accepted.

Rev. Etta E. Shaw, of Grand Rapids, National evangelist, and Mrs. Rachel A. Bailey of Paw Paw have been doing splendid work in the state.

While Mrs. A. S. Benjamin is no longer the president of the Fifth district, she is, by virtue of her position as honorary president of the state, a member of the state executive committee and as National superintendent of Parliamentary Usage is still a member of the National executive committee. All through the years she has constantly shown a rare refinement and a broad culture.

THE WHITE CITY OF HOPE

(Continued from Page Twelve)

His conscience, however, got in some good work and as Kressler rather slowly made his way through two cars ahead he was trying for the thousandth time to persuade himself that it didn't make much difference whether he sold liquor or not.

The next car was the diner, and on its vestibuled platform he found the porter politely putting into Davis's hand the longed-for boon, a glass of liquor!

"Give that to me," he demanded sternly of the colored attendant. Kressler made a quick motion toward the untasted glass, and a sudden lurch of the train completed the insecurity of the fated tumbler and it fell to the floor.

"You'll pay for that, sir," said Davis, fiercely, "get me another glass or I'll knock your head off your shoulders."

"I'll cheerfully pay," said Kressler good-naturedly, pulling a five dollar bill out of his pocket and placing it in Davis's hand. "That will more than reimburse you and include the tip you gave this fellow here who has acted the part of traitor to your daughter."

"Let's give it to him," cried Davis angrily to the porter.

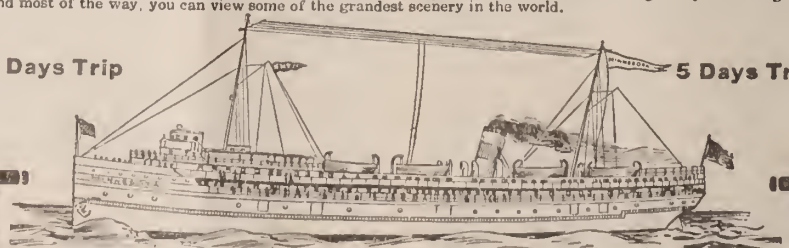
Without warning Kressler was knocked off his feet by the two men just as the conductor came in from the diner. The porter instantly withdrew from the scene, while Davis cowered at the sight of the brass buttons, wiping his hands on his handkerchief and babbling over his disappointment.

(To be continued.)

Cruise for Vacation on the Lakes

Enjoy the Beautiful Scenery and Historical Points of Interest in your own country. You can have the many comforts which a large, elegantly equipped steamer affords. You will eat well and sleep well. Peaceful quiet and exhilarating breezes will rest and strengthen you. In sight of land most of the way, you can view some of the grandest scenery in the world.

7 Days Trip — 5 Days Trip



The Magnificent Steel Steamship "Minnesota" to BUFFALO (NIAGARA FALLS) AND RETURN $40 Including Meals and Berth

via Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, and historic Mackinac Island, viewing both ways by daylight the beautiful scenery of the Detroit River, and St Clair Flats, stopping at all points of interest. 12 hour stop at Buffalo allows plenty of time to see Niagara Falls. During season leaves Chicago every Thursday at 11:00 a. m.

The Elegant Steel Steamship "Missouri" to KAGAWONG, ONT., AND RETURN $34 Including Meals and Berth

via Mackinac Island, The "Soo," St. Mary's River, North Channel, and the shores of Manitoulin Island, stopping at all points of interest. During season leaves Chicago every Monday at 4:00 p. m.

S. S. "MISSOURI" also makes special trip each week to Onekama, Frankfort, Glen Haven and Glen Arbor leaving Chicago Saturdays at 4:00 p.m.

Our line of steamers offers you the greatest possible opportunity for real rest and genuine pleasure. You can go for a full week or only a few days as you prefer.

The Elegant Steel Steamships
"MANITOU"—"MINNESOTA"—"MISSOURI"—"ILLINOIS"

offer unrivalled service between Chicago, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Bay View, Harbor Springs, Mackinac Island, Ludington, Manistee, Onekama, Frankfort, Glen Haven, Glen Arbor, Leland (via Auto or connecting steamer from Glen Haven) and Traverse Bay Ports, Sault Ste. Marie, and Buffalo, connecting with all lines for Lake Superior and Eastern Points. For illustrated folder and book of tours address

Northern Michigan Transportation Co.
J. C. CONLEY, Gen. Pass. Agt., North End Rush Street Bridge, Chicago, Ills.

ANTED—Several honest, industrious peo-e to distribute religious literature; $60 a onth sure. Nichols Co., Box 14, Naper-lle, Ill.

2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each wn to distribute free circulars and take orders for ncentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?
NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is ne of the best Temperance songs written in ears. Its beautiful story of a young girl's ea to her father is really a Temperance rmon, while its melody is one of the sweet-st ever written. Ask your music dealer for , or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. How-y Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New ork. Special rates on quantities to Societies Temperance Organizations.

A Wave of Prohibition
FACTS AND FIGURES
ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new
PROHIBITION FAN
(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)
Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal
Protect Our American Youth
by
Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic
These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is
36 Fans, $1.00
Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

KANSAS MAKES FINE SHOWING IN CENSUS REPORT

Since the showing of the last Federal ensus Kansas cannot be attacked by the liquor interests on the ground of a stationary population, remarks the Topeka Capital. "This state from 1900 to 1910 increased in population 15 per cent, against 6 per cent in Missouri, 12 per ent in Wisconsin, 11 per cent in Nebraska, 7 per cent in Indiana, 12 per cent in Michigan, and in spite of the growth of Chicago but 17 per cent in Illinois, 18 per cent in Minnesota and an actual loss of 3 per cent in Iowa. The Census bulletin makes a fine showing for Kansas. Of the nine middle western states mentioned above Kansas is the only one that advanced in rank among the states from 1900 to 1910 in both crops and manufactures."

AMONG OUR WORKERS

On the occasion of the birthday, May 8, of Mrs. Katharine Lent Stevenson, president of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., there was held at the Massachusetts headquarters a party in her honor, at which she was presented with more than 1,500 new members to the W. C. T. U. as a birthday gift.

Mrs. Deborah K. Livingston, National Franchise superintendent, was the speaker at the Delaware county (N. Y.) institute and delighted her audience with her presentation of the subject, "Equal Suffrage." She also spoke to the children.

Four unions organized and seventy-four members added to the fourteenth district (Fla.) W. C. T. U. is the record of the work accomplished by Mrs. Alice Scott-Abbott, a Florida state worker, during the week she celebrated her sixtieth birthday. In addition she secured five subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL, gave eight addresses in six different towns, spoke to the students of eight school rooms and the normal school at Ft. White, and presented to the high school at Lee a picture of Frances E. Willard and a set of the S. T. I. charts.

The Hyde Park union of Chicago, Ill., held an all-day institute on May 20, with Mrs. Almena P. McDonald, county president, Dr. Pauline Smith and Mrs. Ruth Frances Stevens as speakers. A part of the cantata, "A Saloonless Nation in 1920," was given by boys of the Hyde Park L. T. L., under the direction of Mrs. D. D. Barta. The June flower mission meeting of the union will be held at the Oak Forest poor farm.

The spring institute of Monroe county (N. Y.) W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary A. Bishop, president, was held at West Webster, May 10-11. The meeting was a great success in point of attendance, program, speakers and interest. Besides many W. C. T. U. members, a physician, a minister, a school professor and a suffragist took part on the program, while Mrs. Addie B. Parsels, National organizer and lecturer, and vice-president of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., delivered addresses seldom excelled for force of argument, strength of thought and humor. Seventeen new members were secured through her efforts. One state membership was given. Mrs. Stone, of Buffalo, ninety-three years of age, and a Crusader, was in attendance. The L. T. L. exercises were in charge of the county superintendent and participated in by a large number of boys and girls. The Y. P. B. secretary presented the work of the young people and was elected delegate to the convention in July. At the close of one of the afternoon sessions there was a street poster parade. Monroe county has just closed a poster campaign. The president has organized two new unions and reorganized another.

The thirty-first annual convention of the St. Louis (Mo.) district W. C. T. U., held May 13-14, was most successful. Every report submitted gave evidence of progress. St. Louis comes up with an increase in membership, one new union organized, and two Y. P. B.'s, the young presidents of each taking an active part in the convention. Mere words cannot express the praise merited by Mrs. Gorrell Clinger, general secretary of the Y. P. B. in St. Louis. The Branch will soon be a factor in the temperance life of the city. At the diamond medal contest Miss Jessie Hayes, sister of Mrs. Ross Hayes Schachner, National general secretary of the Y. P. B., was victorious. Beautiful musical numbers, and strong temperance readings added to the interest of the program. Although far from well, Mrs. E. B. Ingalls presided throughout the convention, and was re-elected president for the twenty-sixth term. The cordial thanks of the St. Louis district are due the Y. W. C. A. which generously donated to the convention the use of its assembly hall, free of charge.

You Can Weigh Exactly What You Should

You can—I know you can, because I have reduced 32,000 women and have built up that many more — scientifically, naturally, without drugs, in the privacy of their own rooms.

You Can Be So Well!

—if you only knew how well! I build up your vitality—at the same time I strengthen your heart action; teach you how to breathe, to stand, walk and relieve such ailments as

Nervousness, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Indigestion, Etc.

One pupil writes: "I weigh 83 pounds less, and I have gained wonderfully in strength."
Another says: "Last May I weighed 100 ponnds, this May I weigh 126 and oh! I feel SO WELL."

Won't you sit down and write now for my interesting booklet? You are welcome to it—it is FREE. Don't wait, you may forget it. I have had a wonderful experience and I should like to tell you about it.

Susanna Cocroft
Dept. 37, 624 Michigan Boulevard, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is a college bred woman. She is the recognized authority on the scientific care of the health and figure of women.

"I am organizing in season and out of season, and in the worst season," writes Mrs. Lila Carlin Moore, National organizer, from western Nebraska. "Recently I was invited to an old settler's birthday dinner, and when I was called upon for a reading I replied, 'Yes, if you will let me make a short talk afterward.' By that talk I gained five new members for the W. C. T. U. Recently the pastor at Potter delivered an illustrated lecture, and at its close gave me thirty minutes in which to speak. One honorary and two active members were secured. I have recently organized two new unions in this section."

The Sahara of Indiana is Hamilton county, the border of which reaches to within a dozen miles of Indianapolis with its great breweries! This dry strip counts its dry majority by the thousands. The county has a dozen or more Friends' churches scattered over it, which accounts for its uncompromising attitude. There is a Bible Seminary and a Friends institution at Westfield. This town never has allowed saloons although twice an attempt has been made to run in under cover something of the kind. On one of these occasions years ago, the women, two by two, took their knitting and sat all day long in the suspected store and defeated the efforts of the liquor interests. In the second instance all the inhabitants met the would-be violators when they stepped off the train and invited them to "move on." There is a flourishing W. C. T. U. at Westfield. It took a stranded National speaker at a few hours notice and held a meeting on the night of the big May storm that Indiana will not soon forget. The hail fell in sheets, the wind blew a gale and to cap it all the lights went out. The speaker, Mrs. La Mance, called for lights and by the rays of one lamp, the services were concluded.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

AGGRESSIVE WORK FOR OFFICIAL PAPER

State Plans

We shall from time to time print in this column state plans for the increased circulation of our official paper and are sure that all will welcome suggestions or methods that have been carefully and successfully worked out, knowing that an increased circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL means increased efficiency among our workers.

North Carolina

"We try to show our women they cannot do efficient work unless they have the national and state papers. We urge the four-to-one plan," writes Mrs. T. Adelaide Goodno, president of the North Carolina W. C. T. U.

Texas

"We have this year started a plan that each local union send five Campaign Edition subscriptions to local pastors," is the cheering word from Mrs. Nannie Webb Curtis, president of the Texas W. C. T. U. "This has worked very well. I am also trying to make perpetual the campaign subscription to each member of the state legislature, each great daily paper in the state, the pastors of all large cities, the Y. M. C. A.'s, the Y. W. C. A.'s, churches, colleges and public libraries. This plan more directly reaches our leaders, public thinkers, public sentiment-makers and law-makers than any other I have been able to find. At the last state convention I recommended that no woman be eligible for office, local, district or state unless she is a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL. This matter will be decided at the next state convention. We also have under consideration the one-fourth membership plan."

Alabama

"We try to have all the local officers subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL," writes Mrs. Annie K. Weisel, president of the Alabama W. C. T. U. "The state agent is devising new schemes for the wider circulation of the paper."

SENDS THE SIGNAL TO EVERY FAMILY ON HIS FARM

As an evidence of my interest in THE UNION SIGNAL and my admiration of its ability, strength and usefulness, I have recently sent subscriptions to it for every family represented on my farm. There are one hundred people altogether who live on the farm, and out of this number there are eight housewives. I have ordered THE UNION SIGNAL sent to each one of these homes, and I do not know of anything better I can do for these good women and their families.

THE UNION SIGNAL is one of the best papers that America has ever had, and to me it grows in interest constantly.

Very truly yours,
J. B. CRANFILL, Dallas, Texas.

DOES IT PAY?

That the argument for prohibition is sound is receiving fresh proof in Lansing, Mich., which a little more than a year ago closed its saloons. According to a statement of Chief of Police Cole, crime in Lansing has decreased 40 per cent in one year. During the period between May 1, 1914 and May 1, 1915, there were 1,280 arrests as compared with 2,155 for the previous twelve months. The arrests for intoxication dropped from 756 to 232. The chief also explained that during the time that Lansing had saloons any man who could stagger home without creating an uproar or menacing public safety was not molested, while now much care is exercised in arresting every one under the influence of liquor in order to determine where the liquor was obtained, so that although the police net is of a finer weave than it was a year ago, the catch is nevertheless smaller.

Bowling Green, Ky., which has been dry for a little more than a year, is coming forward as a champion of the cause of prohibition, by calling attention to the decrease in arrests for drunkenness under no-license. For the twelve months ending April 30, 1914, the last saloon year, Bowling Green had a total of 1,075 arrests, of which 425 were for drunkenness, as compared with a total during the next year of 642, of which 137 were for drunkenness. The records of the Warren circuit court also show a decrease in law violations. For the fiscal year ending April 1, 1914, the grand jury returned 239 indictments; for the next year only 157 true bills, and if the year ending April 1, 1916, continues on the same basis as it has begun there will be a total of but ninety indictments for the year.

Quincy, Mass., a city of approximately 35,000 population, which has been dry continuously since 1884, or more than thirty years, adds its voice to the testimony against the saloon. When prohibition was first adopted many merchants claimed that trade would be diverted to Boston, which is only eight miles distant. After a year's trial, however, trade conditions showed improvement, and this state of affairs has continued without interruption. Savings bank deposits began to increase after the first year and they now compare more than favorably with those of cities under license. A large number of laboring men own their homes. It is interesting to note that the rate of taxation did not increase. On the contrary, after the first year, the appropriations for the police department and the support of paupers showed a marked decrease.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

Prosperity Post Cards in Foreign Languages

What Every Merchant Knows (Spanish)
Prosperity Statistics (German)
Of Interest to Taxpayers (Italian)
Of Interest to Bankers (Swedish)
Of Interest to Wage-Earners (Norwegian)

Price, per dozen, 15 cents;
per hundred, $1.00

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House,
Evanston, Illinois

Franchise Leaflets

Should Women Vote, Frances E. Willard.
A Whole Humanity, Zerelda G. Wallace.
Votes for Women, Hester T. Griffith.
Price, 3c each; per hundred, 75c.
Influence vs. Power, Anna Howard Shaw.
Price, 2c each; per hundred, 35c.
The Real Opponent, Deborah Knox Livingston.
An Appeal to Missionary Societies, Emeline B. Cheney.
Woman Suffrage and Temperance, Deborah K. Livingston.
Womanhood and Citizenship, Deborah K. Livingston.
The Value of My Vote, Deborah K. Livingston.
Suffrage Statements, Deborah K. Livingston.
The Promised Land, Frances E. Willard.
Price, 2c each; per hundred, 30c.
A Bloodless Revolution, Jane Addams.
The Strongest Argument for Equal Suffrage, Anna Howard Shaw.
Eighteen Years a Citizen, Adrianna Hungerford.
The Safe and Sane Way, Florence D Richard.
Opinions of Prominent Men.
Price, 2c each; per hundred, 25c.
Why I Like Citizenship, Lulu L. Shepard
What a Woman's Ballot Would Do, Deborah Knox Livingston.
Facts for Busy Women, Deborah Kno Livingston.
Facts for W. C. T. U. Women, Deborah Knox Livingston.
Facts for Busy Men, Deborah Knox Livingston.
Why Women Want the Vote, Deborah Knox Livingston.
Suffrage Debate Outline, Deborah Kno Livingston.
Franchise Institute Program, Debora Knox Livingston.
Franchise Songs, Deborah Knox Livingston.
Price, 2c each; per hundred, 15c.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHIN HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:
A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

Popular Books Every White Ribboner Should Rea

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Ha Jr. The story of a man's fight for N tional Prohibition told most cleverly— book destined to arouse the reader his responsibility—a book with a defini purpose.
Price, $1.25. Postage 12 cents.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gra The story of a little cripple boy, who serenity and triumphant faith, not on finds his way to sturdy young manhoo but casts about himself a beautiful i fluence for good. A wealth of humo pathos, romance, skillfully blended wi a great moral lesson.
Price, $1.35. Postage, 12 cents.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, the life story Jack London.
Price, $1.30. Postage 12 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHIN HOUSE
Evanston, Ill.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., JUNE 10, 1915 | No. 24

Elizabeth P. Hutchinson

Promoted, May 29, 1915

ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON

PROMOTED MAY 29, 1915

Biographical Sketch

"Service" was the keynote of Elizabeth P Hutchinson's character, and so unselfish and Christlike was her investment of the threescore years of her life that not only her immediate family and the members of the organization in which she was a leader, but the world at large is richer because she lived.

From her earliest years she seemed actuated by a desire to use her talents in some form of social service. Born at Brodhead, Wisconsin, she became, at the age of sixteen, the able assistant of her father, Shelton T. Otis, a distinguished educator. In 1876, upon the removal of the family to Kansas, Elizabeth became both student and teacher in the Normal College at Emporia, Kansas. Some years after her marriage to Dr. A. M. Hutchinson of Spring Valley, Minn., they with their three children, Harold, Clarence and Mabel (now Mrs. Charles W. Roberts of Winfield, Kansas), removed to Hutchinson, Kansas. Mrs. Hutchinson was in every sense a helpmeet to her husband, not only in the home but in his practice as a physician. Ready in any emergency, when a nurse could not be secured, to go to the bedside of the sick and dying and by her skillful, tender ministrations, help her husband, she filled a large place in the hearts of the community.

It was in keeping with the fine spirit of Elizabeth Hutchinson that soon after becoming a resident of Kansas she should identify herself with the W. C. T. U., and enthusiastically and whole-heartedly enter into its activities. Her ability as a leader was promptly recognized and she was elected treasurer of the Kansas W. C. T. U., which office she held for three years, as she did that of business manager of the state official paper, Our Messenger. She also served three years as president of the largest district in Kansas, known as the "Big Seventh."

Then came the call to the presidency of the Kansas W. C. T. U. In this position she served for ten years, during which period there was a steady growth in membership. Under her able, fearless leadership the white ribboners of the state had a large part in the campaign for enforcement of the prohibition law. Her work was essentially constructive. She did not believe in wasting energy in tearing down. She once remarked to a friend, "If I had to choose between closing a whisky joint or educating a boy to become a prohibition voter, I would give my strength to the latter and more important task." Constantly she urged the enlisting and training of the children and young people to take the places of the older workers in the temperance ranks.

Mrs. Hutchinson possessed a genius for carrying on successfully at the same time many worthy enterprises. Presiding over a beautiful home noted for its hospitality, and magnifying even more than the average woman her privileges and responsibilities as wife and mother, she yet found time, in addition to her W. C. T. U. work, to take a keen interest in church activities. She served as steward in the Methodist Episcopal Church of her home town and as temperance secretary of the Southwest Kansas Conference.

In 1908 at the National Convention, held in Denver, Colo., she was elected National treasurer, and the qualities which made her so successful as a state leader contributed to her equally successful work as custodian of the finances of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

For many months Mrs. Hutchinson had been a sufferer, but with a keen sense of her obligation to the National W. C. T. U. she declined to entertain a thought of dropping any of her official responsibilities. Early in the year it had been arranged that she should go to Seattle to attend to certain matters re-

(Continued on Page Nine)

GREAT WAS HER SERVICE TO STATE AND NATION

ARTHUR CAPPER, Governor of Kansas

Kansas is proud to have given to the cause of temperance such a champion as Elizabeth P. Hutchinson. Her name is ineffaceably written in the history of prohibition and law enforcement in this state and in the nation, and her passing is a distinct loss. Enlisting early, when prohibition crusaders were few and unpopular, for thirty years she was prominently identified with every movement against the saloon, and she was always a great factor in every campaign for law enforcement and clean, upright citizenship. For ten years she rendered inestimable service as president of the Kansas Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and then heard the call from the nation. For the past seven years she was a leader in the national campaign and served the National W. C. T. U. as its treasurer. I doubt if she could have rendered her state a greater, a more patriotic service than the large part she had in banishing the saloon from Kansas; I doubt if she could have dedicated her life to a more righteous cause than the campaign for the annihilation of the liquor traffic in the nation, which is sure to be crowned with success. Every Kansas boy and girl growing to manhood and womanhood in a state free from the saloon, indeed, the entire country, owes to Elizabeth Hutchinson an everlasting debt of gratitude, and the greatest monument that can be erected to her memory, or that of others who have fought with her, will be represented by the happy homes that know not the heartache born of the saloon.

KANSAS HOLDS HER NAME IN SACRED MEMORY

JOHN MARSHALL, Justice of the Supreme Court of Kansas

Elizabeth P. Hutchinson was my friend. She was a noble woman, an earnest Christian, and a firm supporter of the right in all public affairs. She did much to rid Kansas of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor and that at a time when it took courage to stand for the prohibitory liquor law and its rigid enforcement in this state. All Kansas mourns at her grave and holds her name in sacred memory.

HER FRIENDSHIP A PRICELESS HERITAGE

LILLIAN MITCHNER, President Kansas W. C. T. U.

Kansas white ribboners are inexpressibly grieved at the loss of our dear friend, Elizabeth P. Hutchinson. For more than twenty years she was closely identified with the Kansas Woman's Christian Temperance Union, serving as district president, state treasurer, and for ten years as state president, ever leading our organization on to victory. Her executive ability, patience and good cheer, her unfaltering devotion to the cause of temperance, and her loyalty to the right, made her a dauntless leader in our state and endeared her to all who shared her purposes and convictions. She was a woman of great capacity for work. In addition to her labors for temperance, she found time to lend her power of brain and forethought to church and club activities. Always a fearless and militant soul, she was ready to take a leading part in every demonstration of protest against the liquor traffic, whether initiated by her own society or some other. She was active in the fight for the enforcement of the prohibition law in Kansas, when it meant sacrifice, hard work and self-denial.

Personally, I feel that I have lost one of my very best friends. I can not express what her trust and confidence have meant to me. Often when I realized keenly the feebleness of my own efforts, there would come a dear letter from her to brace and strengthen me. I remember when she was elected state treasurer, and I was asked to fill the office of district president, I protested, saying I did not know the work well enough to follow one who had made such a success of it. She urged me to accept, giving the loving assurance: "I will be a sister and a mother to you," and right royally she fulfilled that promise. As a sister, she was always kind and helpful, and motherlike, she did a great deal of my work that first year. For more than twenty years, we have been comrades and the bond of fellowship has been precious to both of us.

Others will speak of her service to the state, but in these first days of grief and loneliness, I can think only of my personal loss. That she was my friend is a precious heritage. In the midst of our grief at her departure, let us not forget to rejoice that she lived and served the great temperance cause. She counted not her life dear unto herself, but poured it out for humanity's sake. "She has fought a good fight; she has kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of rejoicing." God help us in these coming days to be true to one another, true to our beloved friend, who has entered upon heavenly activities, and to the sacred interests of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"On any morning—
Think of stepping on shore and finding it Heaven!
Of taking hold of a hand and finding it God's hand;
Of breathing a new air, and finding it celestial air;
Of feeling invigorated and finding it immortality;
Of passing from storm and tempest to an unknown calm;
Of waking up and finding it Home!"

A BELOVED NEIGHBOR

SADIE E. LEWIS, Treasurer Kansas W. C. T. U., Hutchinson, Kansas

In the translation of Mrs. Hutchinson I feel a great personal loss. She has been very near and very dear to me for many years. We were neighbors in Hutchinson for years and it was a joy to be in her home and to have her in mine. So genial and cheerful was she always that wherever she went, she carried sunshine.

I remember well our first meeting—it was at a church service at which she and Dr. Hutchinson were present. I was attracted by her clear, ringing testimony. Together we worked side by side in church and W. C. T. U. enterprises. She was truly a consecrated Christian, well equipped for the warfare in which she was engaged. To me she was always an inspiration. By her belief in my ability to do what seemed impossible, she inspired me with confidence. In this as in so many other ways she showed her ability as a leader in our work.

Words of Appreciation From Co-Officers

"THE FAITH THAT MAKES FAITHFUL"

ANNA A. GORDON, President
National W. C. T. U.

Among the many strong traits of Mrs. Hutchinson's character which have impressed me during our seven years of close comradeship, are her friendliness, her fearlessness, her fortitude and her faith.

"Blessed are the inclusive for they shall be included," applies to our beloved National treasurer, whether we think of the many friends who will miss her on earth or of her welcome to the house of many homes. Her yearning desire to help bear the burdens of others and to share in all the details of our busy life at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters, frequently led her to overtax her powers of endurance. In fact, we often gently chided her for giving too much time to little matters from which others might relieve her.

But so great was her love for the sacred tasks at Headquarters and for the mighty cause they represented that I believe she would have rejoiced to carry all our responsibilities and would happily have worn them as a crown of glory rather than have regarded them as a burden. No deed was too humble and no service too trivial to command the best endeavor of her friendly heart and hand.

Mrs. Hutchinson was absolutely fearless in her advocacy of principle. She was a true Kansan; not alone during her many years of W. C. T. U. leadership in her own state, but also in the succeeding seven years of National official life. She helped mould the policy of Kansas for law enforcement when it meant a high type of fearlessness to fling down the gauntlet to the lawless liquor traffic; and she longed to live that for our nation she might still further aid in securing the boon of National Constitutional Prohibition.

Our dear friend's physical fortitude only those most closely associated with her during recent months can adequately appreciate. The handicap of pain and weariness seldom deterred her from her daily toil, while her smiles and good cheer gave no hint of her intense suffering and allayed our apprehension. Her courageous spirit was displayed to the last. Her latest letters, written on the day she entered the hospital, reveal the triumph of her splendid fortitude when put to a supreme test.

Our beloved comrade possessed a Christian's faith, the blessed old-fashioned type of faith. She looked up into the face of our heavenly Father with the naturalness and implicit trust of a child. It always helped me to hear her pray, for in her prayers there was the same sweet spirit of simplicity and confidence, the definite petition for the specific need. She had "the faith that makes faithful," the faith that expressed itself in tireless, efficient, conscientious efforts for the great causes to which her forceful life and her tireless energy were wholly devoted. She will be widely mourned, and by thousands of her comrades her memory will be lovingly cherished. A Christian patriot, she builded well, and the work of her consecrated life will abide forever.

"Thou wast her Rock, her Fortress and her Might,
Thou Lord, her Captain in the well fought fight;
Thou, in the darkness drear, her one True Light, Alleluia!"

AN IDEAL OFFICIAL

ELLA A. BOOLE
National Vice-President-at-Large.

One by one we must answer the heavenly roll-call, but the news that the death angel had claimed our National treasurer came as a shock to all white ribboners. We shall miss dear Mrs. Hutchinson, for we loved her for herself and for the work's sake. Familiar with the details of the department and appreciating the needs of the organization, she was very sympathetic with the workers and always helpful in solving their many problems. As treasurer she was conscientious, accurate and conservative. As a woman she was approachable, friendly and an earnest Christian—a comrade beloved.

SO NEAR TO GOD

Sweet soul, who livest now in Paradise,
Abiding where God's will doth make all peace,
Watching the angels with those kindly eyes,
Can I believe thy care for us doth cease?

Is it so blissful in that other life
That thou, absorbed, dost think of us no more?
Hast thou forgotten love? Art thus at strife
With all that made thy life so large before?

Perish the thought! O valiant heart and true,
Loving, believing, faithful to the end,
Lo, with fresh courage we our way pursue,
Since thou, so near to God, art still our friend.

"THE MOTHER OF THE HOUSEHOLD"

FRANCES P. PARKS
National Corresponding Secretary

"To know folks and to understand them is to love them." Mrs. Hutchinson had that quality which leads and guides. The last chapter in an ideal home life had been written a few months previous to the time when she came to Evanston as a resident National Officer. The habit of directing a household was still strong upon her and her heart was home-hungry. She found relaxation from the exacting duties of her office in looking after the general welfare of the large family which gathered each week-day at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters, and soon became the "mother of the household," the depository of personal confidences, the competent and sympathetic helper in joy and in sorrow. The hospitality of the prairies was hers and found expression in simple festivities in which all the household could join without interfering with the duties of the day. A picnic luncheon "under the spreading chestnut tree" on a summer-time birthday was an occasion for the exercise of her fertile genius in planning delightful surprises.

One snowy February day I was the happy "birthday lady" so surprised and the memory will be sweet to the end of my birthdays on earth. Called for "an important conference" with Miss Deane, I was amazed on my return after a half hour's absence, to find the entire household assembled in my office, my dear mother the center of the smiling group. Willing hands had moved out the familiar but somewhat shabby furnishings and everything in the office was new and up-to-date. The decision to refurnish as finances permitted had been made some time previous. The connection with the personal life of the occupant of the office was the kind thought of Mrs. Hutchinson. Every room in the Administration and Literature buildings has its own individual history of changes which were made interesting by this great woman whose activity in National affairs made her no less a home-maker.

Mrs. Hutchinson applied the Beatitudes to everyday life. She held that the wrong things in this world are not helped by the complaining voice but that the song of gladness, once started, echoes and reechoes in the hearts of the multitude. She delighted in that refreshing character of present day literature, Pollyanna, the little girl who made a whole town better and happier by her "being glad" game. Mrs. Hutchinson played the "glad" game. She was brave and cheery even when passing through the purgatory of pain, bearing her cross over the stony way of suffering with beautiful patience and pathetic gratitude to all around her. The glad note was sounded in her last message to us, "The folks at Headquarters have all been so good to me."

We are bereaved and sorrowing but persuaded that "Love can never lose its own." There is gladness in the thought that the beloved "mother of the household" knows the peace and joy and love of the home eternal.

A TRUSTED LEADER

ELIZABETH PRESTON ANDERSON
National Recording Secretary.

Mrs. Hutchinson was so much alive, so keenly interested in everything pertaining to our great work, that it is impossible to realize that she has gone out from us. She had an unusually active mind; she thought in terms of large projects, and yet had a genius for details. She was warm-hearted, generous and sympathetic. She liked folks. She was happiest, even during the past year and a half while she was heroically battling with disease, to be in the center of our great activities at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters and a vital part of the busy life there.

She had exceptional qualities which well fitted her for the office of National W. C. T. U. treasurer and her best service was joyfully given to the cause she loved.

A GUIDE BELOVED

SARA H. HOGE, National Assistant Recording Secretary

There are sorrowing hearts all over our country because of the going away from us of Mrs. Hutchinson. Every one who knew her recognized her ability and her devotion to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. When chosen by the Denver convention she gladly assumed the duties of treasurer and as one of the resident officers at National Headquarters felt and evinced a personal interest in every detail of that busy place. Her pleasure in the gain in membership in the states and the helpful suggestions given by her to the state treasurers did much to stimulate activity in that part of our work, so necessary to the real success of the organization. Her untiring efforts, for the comfort of all on the "white ribbon special" on the long trip to Portland, Oregon, in 1912, and on other like occasions, will always call up a feeling of gratitude and appreciation from those privileged to be in the party. A brave worker has been promoted. Let us who remain renew our efforts for a nation freed from the curse of the liquor traffic.

ALASKA'S FIRST ANNUAL TERRITORIAL CONVENTION

1916 DRY CAMPAIGN INCREASES INTEREST OF WORKERS

MRS. L. H. PEDERSEN, Treasurer Alaska W. C. T. U.

The first annual territorial convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Alaska was called to order in the Methodist Episcopal church at Skagway May 14, by the territorial president, Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Hatcher.

It is of more than passing interest to note, in connection with this convention, that the first local W. C. T. U. in Alaska was organized in Skagway in 1900, by Mrs. S. E. Shorthill, the mother of Mrs. Elizabeth Harrison, who is now treasurer of Skagway union. Mr. and Mrs. Shorthill were among those who came to the North in the rush of 1897, and they found Skagway a typical mining camp, without church or school. Within a week of their arrival Mrs. Shorthill was asked to conduct the funeral of a local saloon-keeper, the white ribbon she wore representing all of Christian fellowship that the community possessed. Coming from Kansas, Mrs. Shorthill was rooted and grounded in the prohibition gospel, and she found ample opportunity for the exercise of her faith through its unfailing source, the church. She circulated a petition for funds with which to erect a building to serve as both church and school; a missionary was secured, and Mrs. Shorthill acted in the capacity of leader and teacher in the Sunday school. In 1899 the National W. C. T. U. Convention met in Seattle, and, recognizing the work of the pioneer member in the North, Mrs. Shorthill was appointed National representative in Alaska, a position she held until her removal to Tacoma, six years later.

Officers of the Alaska W. C. T. U. Mrs. Cornelia T. Hatcher in the center

Including the territorial officers, all of whom were present, there were sixteen delegates in attendance at the convention at Skagway, about three times as many as were expected. All but one of the important places in southeastern Alaska were represented and when the great area of the country, the time and means required to travel, and the very material expense are considered, it is not to be wondered that the interior and western parts did not send delegates. The comparatively large attendance, however, indicates keen interest in the temperance and prohibition cause.

A change of method in ascertaining the will of the people was instituted last year by the judge of the First division. Through the efforts of the W. C. T. U. and others interested the judge has again made a change so that the wet and dry expression of opinion this year will be by secret vote. As the election takes place next year the interest in the convention is in part explained.

The opening evening of the convention the town of Skagway was startled at the sight of a procession of women and children carrying flags, and singing temperance songs as they marched down the main thoroughfare. One lone man brought up the rear. The street was lined with people and shop-keepers rushed out to "see the fun." A little woman stepped out of the ranks, and, turning, faced the children, crying, "Who wants Alaska dry?" With increasing emphasis came the reply from every little mouth in the procession: "I, I, I." Then came another question: "Who to make it so will try?" This was followed by three hearty yells: "I, I, I." Again the little woman with the hearty voice shouted: "Who wants Skagway dry?" and every little one jumped about, waved his or her flag and replied again, "I, I, I." "Who to make it so will try?" "I, I, I," Some of the old "guzzlers" leaning against the doors of the saloons took their pipes out of their mouths, "spat cotton," and looked as if an earthquake had struck them.

In view of the election in 1916, when the question of statewide prohibition for Alaska will be determined, the convention voted by resolution to request that during the open season next year, Mrs. C. T. Hatcher be sent down the Yukon River, up the Tanana to Fairbanks, and on to Nome. The convention expressed its belief that Mrs. Hatcher's acquaintance with Alaskan conditions, and her years of experience in W. C. T. U. work combine to make her qualified above all others to undertake such a trip.

Reports by the unions represented showed a healthy growth, there now being 115 paid-up members. The delegates left Skagway enthused and inspired. Seven life memberships were presented during the convention. A silver medal contest, and a picnic gave variety to the meetings.

The following officers were elected to serve during the year: President, Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Hatcher, Knik; vice-president, Mrs. Lulu B. Thompson, Juneau; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lucy Spaeth, Ketchikan; recording secretary, Mrs. Margaret Georgeson, Petersburg; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Clara Michener, Ketchikan; treasurer, Mrs. Frances Turner Pedersen, Skagway.

A feature of the convention was the celebration of the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. L. H. Pedersen. Upon that occasion the greetings from Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the National W. C. T. U., were highly appreciated, as was a gift from her of a silver sugar spoon, which had been given to Frances Willard on her fiftieth birthday.

The Skagway union had made every preparation for the pleasant entertainment of delegates; a noon-day luncheon was served at the church and altogether the town set an example of hospitality that was the cause of much favorable comment.

The convention is historic in that it was the first of its kind in Alaska, as well as the first convention of women in the territory. Invitations to meet in Juneau and Ketchikan were extended to the convention.

PROTECT THE YOUNGER GENERATION IS KEYNOTE OF ADDRESS BY GOVERNOR LISTER OF WASHINGTON

In a recent address before the state federation of Parent-Teacher Associations and the Spokane Mothers' Congress, Governor Lister gave utterance to these words:

"The American saloon is steadily becoming a thing of the past, and if those engaged in the business accept the inevitable they may be able to avoid the shock attendant upon sudden financial adjustment. Our state prohibition law may not compel men who have used intoxicants to undergo a process of reform, but it will at least eliminate from our streets the saloon with all its demoralizing influences on the younger generation. It is that younger generation that must be carefully watched now, and you, as mothers and teachers, have a great part in doing this constructive work."

CONSUMPTION OF DISTILLED SPIRITS RAPIDLY DECREASING

Statistics made public by the United States Treasury Department on June 4 show that there have been material decreases in the amount of distilled spirits consumed in the United States.

Internal revenue collections on spirits are decreasing at the rate of approximately $1,250,000 a month, despite the fact that wines are paying a high tax as a result of the emergency "war tax" law enacted by the last Congress.

Figures given out by the Treasury Department indicate that revenues derived from taxes on spirits during the period from July 1, 1914, to May 1, 1915, were $121,804,705 as against $135,518,495 during the same period a year ago, a decrease during the ten months of $13,713,790. Less tobacco is being used than heretofore.

MINNESOTA COUNTIES ROLL UP MAJORITIES FOR PROHIBITION

Douglas, Rock, Nobles, Fillmore and Jackson Outlaw Booze

It has been "blue" Monday every week this spring for the liquor dealers of the state of Minnesota. On Monday, May 31, Douglas, Rock, Nobles, Fillmore and Jackson counties voted by good majorities to outlaw the liquor traffic. This makes seventeen counties which have become dry since the county option law went into effect. For the next four weeks, at least, Monday elections will be held in other counties.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AT ITS 127TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Reiterates Its Stand for National Prohibition

Stirring speeches for National Prohibition and the annihilation of the liquor traffic were delivered on the afternoon of May 23 in Convention Hall, Rochester, N. Y., at a temperance mass meeting in connection with the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. James A. MacDonald, editor of the Toronto Globe, who had been invited to fill the place on the program of Secretary of State Bryan, who was unable to leave Washington, treated the subject of temperance from the point of view of a newspaper man. He characterized the organized liquor traffic as the greatest menace to a nation and explained that it cannot be wiped out unless every person does his share in the work of suppression. "It must be a fight without neutrality and a war to the death," said Mr. MacDonald.

"The liquor traffic has no patriotism," he continued. "In Canada in the war days the liquor traffic is the one traffic that has insisted on its right to weaken the nerve and to take the power of the muscle and the courage of men who are needed at the front. There has come in Britain the greatest social transformation in all the world in the blow that has been struck there at the liquor traffic. The greatest enemy of Great Britain is not Germany, Austria or any of the nations with which she is at war, but the liquor traffic.

"When this war is over there will be a reckoning with the liquor traffic that will surprise Americans. This traffic, with the power of leaders of the church at its back, stood against every proposal British government leaders could make. Tell me that this is patriotism. It is treason to the king; it is treason to the people.

"May all churches rise to the appeal of all nations for a new internationalism, for a new civilization when the state will strike its enemies from within as it is now willing to strike those from without."

Professor Scanlon, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Temperance, declared that the church had no right to be silent when human interests are in peril and that the church cannot be neutral when right and wrong are in conflict.

Below are given several of the strongest resolutions which received the endorsement of the Assembly:

We commend all temperance organizations and societies laboring to suppress the sale and use of intoxicants, whether by education or legislation, and we reaffirm the antagonism of our church to intemperance in all its forms, as that antagonism has found expression in the deliverances of every Assembly from the first to the one hundred and twenty-seventh.

Your committee would call the attention of the Assembly to the coming battle against alcohol in Alaska. The territorial legislature at its recent session provided for an election to be held in November, 1916, to determine the question of wet or dry in Alaska. We commend this home mission field of our church to the prayerful interest of the church in the coming struggle and to the special help and support of the Board of Temperance.

We call the attention of all our ministers, elders and church members to the National Abstainers' Union organized in Washington, D. C., January, 1915. This union represents thirty denominations with 17,000,000 communicants. It includes in its membership many United States Senators and Representatives with the governors of many states and other political leaders. We recommend that all our ministers and elders co-operate with this society by becoming members.

That we favor legislation making the vendors of alcoholic beverages, their bondsmen and the owners of property rented for such purposes, jointly and severally, responsible for damage resulting from the intoxication of those to whom such beverages are sold.

That we commend the action of railway officials who have excluded intoxicating liquors from their trains and stations, and express the earnest wish that all steamship officials may take similar action.

That we rejoice that approximately 600 daily newspapers and a large number of other leading publications have excluded all liquor advertisements from their pages, and express the hope that other periodicals may speedily take similar action.

We recommend to all our ministers the duty, privilege and importance of preaching upon temperance annually and of practicing it daily.

The Rev. George I. Long, D. D., of San Jose, Calif., submitted an additional resolution condemning the attitude toward the liquor traffic of Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, pastor of the Madison Square Presbyterian church of New York City, and his action in sending telegrams and letters to California last fall opposing the prohibition amendment which was then pending before the people of that state. The resolution was passed amid a storm of applause.

EX-GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA ARRAIGNS LIQUOR TRAFFIC

According to the Shreveport Times, at a recent big political gathering in Baton Rouge, ex-Governor J. Y. Sanders of Louisiana hurled the following statements at a surprised audience:

"If the liquor traffic of the city of New Orleans is so strong and so powerful and has such a grasp upon our political affairs that it can dictate in advance the writing of our constitution, not only for you and for me, but for generations yet unborn, it is high time the manhood and womanhood of this state should rise in their might and destroy this iniquity, this horrible sore on our body politic.

"I have no objection to the state running and controlling the liquor traffic, but I do object to the liquor traffic running and controlling the state. Whenever this question shall come up as an issue, I, for one, will be found fighting in the ranks of those who would destroy this interest, and I believe that the decent manhood of the state will enlist under the same banner.

"I am not directing a prohibition fight, but just as sure as open gambling was prohibited, the Sunday closing law enforced, just as the lottery and race-track gambling were put out of the state, just so sure is the whisky ring of New Orleans marching to its own destruction. The liquor traffic, arrogant and drunk with power by its domination of the New Orleans machine seeks now through the calling of this constitutional convention to control the state of Louisiana, and in thus seeking it is about to destroy itself. A great prohibition sentiment is sweeping not only over Louisiana but over our entire nation; aye, over the world, and there is nothing which will more surely and swiftly hasten the final end of the liquor traffic than its arrogant interference in political affairs."

NEBRASKA PHYSICIANS FAVOR PROHIBITION

The Nebraska state homeopathic society, at its recent annual convention, at Lincoln, declared itself in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition. The text of the resolution reads:

"Whereas modern medical science has demonstrated that the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage is highly detrimental to the moral and physical welfare of the human race, and whereas the use of intoxicants as a beverage is the cause of much pauperism, insanity, crime and disease, therefore be it resolved that the Nebraska homeopathic society declare in favor of constitutional prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants for beverage purposes."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

"It is glorious to man a Lifeboat, but better to build a Lighthouse"

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER, National General Secretary Young People's Branch, Evanston, Ill.

"WE'LL SEE THIS THING THROUGH"

The month of roses is here! And what a splendid time for youth to assert itself. Older folks may complain of a spring-time inertia, but the young man or the young woman whose veins are pulsing with the blood of youth and whose nerves are keyed to action—never! All eyes these beautiful days are turned toward the things that are young and new—the newly leafed trees, the newly blossomed flowers and plants, and the garden stuff all green and fresh. New life is all about us and we are filled with the joy of it. It will not be long, though, before the harvest days will come—the sequel to the spring days. And they, too, are joyful days for they speak of the evolution of life and the product of labor.

I do not fear to contemplate what the harvest days will mean for the Young People's Branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union this year for the spring days bring me stirring news of our young people's labors and their growth in many states. It is hard to make a fair estimate of the results of our April seed-sowing—they can not be calculated until later (until harvest time), but I have been assured of a 300 gain in one state, a 200 gain in another, a 150 gain in a third, while yet others report not actual numbers but a "sure gain." How glad we are to have these recruits. They will help to spell VICTORY later on. Even as all eyes are turned toward the things earthy that are new, so countless eyes these days—both from the enemy's lines and from our own—are turned toward the new, young life of our great temperance army. Many who have carried the torches through the dull, hard winter days of this great campaign must lay them down now, and it is good to know that as others must pick them up and march on, the youthful volunteers are falling into line, that there may be no gaps in the ranks. And how happy you should be, dear young people, to follow the gleam of those who are going before. They, too, are happy that you are following in their wake, that you are lending enthusiasm to their efforts and supplying fuel for the fires of their spirit. Many letters tell me of the joy that is felt in your service.

Let us not waste the days that are upon us. If it does not grow too warm to play tennis, or baseball, or to row, or to swim, it does not grow too warm to spread the gospel of temperance in devious little ways. Those April new members are splendid! It would be too bad to lose one of them through suspended effort during the summer months. If you do not do much, do something.

Before the next Y. P. B. edition reaches you, another Fourth of July will have been celebrated. Dominated by the spirit of a new patriotism, may our young people this year celebrate the signing of America's Declaration of Independence by special efforts calculated to hasten the day of its larger freedom—freedom from the bondage of strong drink. A "Young America Parade," floats in other parades, mass meetings, picnics with colors flying and shouts filling the air, anything, everything, which will make votes for prohibition will be in order on "the day we celebrate." (Read further suggestions given below.)

Let us all join in the proclamation made by that fine band of "student volunteers"—the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association—at their last convention with arms upraised and hands clenched: "We'll see this thing through," and then do that very thing. Read how "Freckles," as told in Forward, did it:

"Freckles was his nickname. He had no mother. He had a drunkard for a father. But he had a Sunday school, and there he learned about temperance and decent living and the fight against evil. Freckles served milk at people's back doors; but, young as he was, he had the steady spirit of a crusader. When the town had a local option election he put on a white badge marked in gold letters with the slogan, 'The saloon must go,' and did his best to help; for, as he frequently said, 'It's an awful hard town to live in the way it is.' Plenty of men wore the badges too; but the liquor forces were too strong, and it was discouraging from the first. When election day came, the town went wet, overwhelmingly so, and the men took off their badges and said. 'It's no use.' But Freckles—well, Freckles went around serving milk the next morning with his badge, 'The saloon must go,' still on. 'Why, you haven't taken off your badge yet,' said one customer. 'What should I do that for?' was Freckles' reply. 'It was the men that voted yesterday; but it won't be long before we Sunday school boys will be doing the voting, and then the saloons are going to go.'"

PROGRAM FOR JUNE

Since in this month comes Flower Mission Day, why not let the Flower Mission superintendent have charge of the program, altering the one suggested in any way she sees fit?

Song—"While the Days Are Going By." Page 63, Y. P. B. Chorus Book.

Roll Call—Scripture Quotations (using Flower Mission text-cards).

The Story of Jennie Casseday and the Flower Mission.

Discussion: "Can the Flower Mission Department Help to Bring National Constitutional Prohibition?"

Story of the Roof Garden.

(Previously ask each member to bring a flower, bouquet of flowers or some delicacy, all of which may later be taken by the Flower or Sunshine committees to the sick, aged or prisoners.)

NOTICE

If there are birthday cards filled in but not yet sent to the National secretary, please send in same at once. Or if any county secretary has failed to report Branches organized by her during April, please notify your state secretary immediately in order that she may notify the National secretary.

APRIL PRIZES

Prize for the individual member anywhere in the United States gaining the largest number of certified members—dues-paid—(winner not yet determined). (Gold medal presented by the National secretary.)

Prize for the county secretary in any state organizing the largest number of new Branches—with five or more certified members. (Winner not yet determined.)

Prize for the state making the largest net gain in membership during the month will go to Ohio—300 new members, 240 dues paid. (Prize of $10 in UNION SIGNAL subscriptions offered by the National W. C. T. U. to be presented at the National Convention.)

Miss Zoe Atchison of Kansas and Mrs. Mary Stewart Powers of Ohio will be remembered by the National secretary with a special token for having sent in the best all-around report of their individual work during April.

HOW WILL YOUR BRANCH CELEBRATE THE FOURTH?

The Fourth of July this year falls on a Sunday and it would be most fitting for any Branch to hold a Christian Citizenship mass meeting in church or park, using the program appearing under suggestions for April in the February 11 or March 11 edition of THE SIGNAL, or any of the programs furnished by the Christian Citizenship department.

The general celebration of the holiday however, will follow on Monday, the fifth, and will furnish a splendid opportunity for any Branch to conduct a "Young America Parade" carrying appropriate banners, bearing mottoes, and also campaign posters. A Y. P. B. picnic or hayride making use of flags, colors, etc., would be enjoyable, as well as attractive. If there is a carnival or similar celebration in your town, have a booth serving grape juice or lemonade, and dispensing good literature. Do not overlook this as a "summer suggestion."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

JOTTINGS FROM THE APRIL RECORD

ENCOURAGING MEMBERSHIP GAINS DURING THE Y. P. B. CAMPAIGN MONTH

On Monday, April 19, Mrs. George W. Rooke, president of the Rhode Island W. C. T. U., entertained 105 of the Providence young people, with Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston as guest of honor. Bouquets of sweet peas were presented to both Mrs. Rooke and Mrs. Livingston on behalf of the Livingston Y. P. B. All reports show that some of the larger states will need to look well to their laurels—"Little Rhody" is moving on.

Five counties in New York state held rallies in observance of the campaign month, and new Branches were organized at Ithaca, Brooklyn, New Paltz, Port Jervis, Valley Cottage, Yates and Syracuse. The state secretary reports material gains in many Branches and also that a goodly number of the unions entertained the young people in honor of Y. P. B. Day.

The Mississippi secretary is hopeful of many new members in response to her persistent appeals. The Belzoni Branch gave a hayride in honor of April recruits and it is reported as a most pleasant and successful affair.

The Ohio Young People's Branch is strengthened by the organization of twenty-five new Branches as a result of efforts made during April—twelve of these were organized by the state secretary in one county—Highland—where, previous to her visit there was not a single Branch. This is the county wherein is located historic Hillsboro. Mrs. Powers writes of a most delightful visit to the old town and the privilege and honor of taking tea in the old home of Mother Thompson.

The towns of West Union and Peebles, Ohio, ordered birthday cards but could not find room on them for the names of all their new members and so sent them in by letter!

The New Jersey "Y" conference held at Beverly is reported as most interesting and helpful. The diamond medal contest—with all contestants supplied from one Branch — previously announced, proved to be all that was expected. Three new Branches are reported in New Jersey, one in Cooperstown with eleven charter members; one in Moorestown with forty-six charter members and a colored Branch at Jersey City. The "Y" at Bridgeboro has invited the W. C. T. U. of Burlington county, of which Miss Blanche L. Dilks is county "Y" secretary, to hold its annual meeting there in the fall.

Mrs. J. Mercer Johnson, secretary of Texas (Thurman) Y. P. B., reports 158 new members, with a pledged membership of 2,314. Mrs. Johnson visited twelve schools during the month, and writes that "what the young people lacked in money was made up in interest and enthusiasm."

The District of Columbia Y. P. B. added forty-six names to its membership enrollment during April. A splendid, enthusiastic mass meeting was held on Sunday, April 25, at which time an American flag was presented to the Georgetown Branch for the largest increase in members, and to Hopeful Branch, for the largest percent attendance at the meeting, a flag was also presented.

The Missouri secretary reports four new Branches organized during the month. The splendid Branch of 100 members at Jackson,, conducted a most inspiring prayer service the night preceding the city's spring election and then worked zealously at the polls the following day. They were more than repaid by the election of a mayor favoring prohibition and other city officials with similar principles.

The West Park Branch of St. Louis held a public meeting, April 13, which was advertised as a "Frances J. Barnes meeting." The talks and readings were most educational and the music inspiring and enthusing. The Y. P. B. orchestra furnished several numbers.

The Central Branch of St. Louis, April 30, presented the cantata, "A Saloonless Nation." All who attended the entertainment declared it a splendid sentiment-maker.

Miss Enright, secretary for Virginia, reports two new Branches for her state with an aggregate membership of forty-five. She writes: "I feel sure that I have aroused great interest in the young people's work and that it will bear fruit in the months to come."

Mrs. Hubbs, the general secretary of Georgia, declares that she is "always at it" and that she hopes for a more extensive presentation of Branch work to other organizations of young people.

The April number of Our Messenger —the Kansas state paper—was a Y. P. B. number and a splendid one indeed! Miss Atchison was called from the field by illness and death in her home during the month, but notwithstanding that fact, organized four Branches, conducted institutes, visited numerous young people's societies in the interest of the Branch, and in addition to delivering the regular evening address, she also made a special request of all field workers who were in her state during April to present the Y. P. B. work at each public meeting and offered a prize to be given at the state convention to the one organizing during the year the largest number of new Branches. Prospects for Kansas seem bright indeed!

Mrs. Hattie Doughty, secretary for Southern California, reports two new Branches and a gain in membership (as far as reported) of fifty. Several interesting joint meetings of the W's and Y's were held and a number of old Branches were revived.

A splendid letter telling of the efforts of Mrs. L. V. Smith, secretary for South Dakota, has just reached the secretary's desk. Time and space will permit only mere mention of it, but more will be given later.

Word from Louisiana is that there are several new Branches in the state and that all are doing nicely.

Mrs. Anna B. Hail, Mobile (Ala.), has been doing some telling work among the young people of her vicinity, and a number of wide-awake enthusiastic Branches are the result of her efforts—one at Oakdale, and one at Mt. Vernon. The names of the other Branches have not been received.

The work of Mrs. Linnie Carl in Montana during the month of April and of Miss Mary Anderson in Rhode Island and Delaware has been the means of reaching large numbers of young people and presenting our work to many organizations, to say nothing of the splendid Branches resulting. Our field secretaries are creating a "taste for more" wherever they go.

The third annual conference of the Massachusetts Branches was held in Boston, April 17. Aside from encouraging reports of the work and the plans laid for future work, the story of "The Miracle in Russia" was given by a Russian girl (member of the Boston Branch) with the result that the Massachusetts young people resolved to make the United States flag as stainless as Russia's emblem.

FURTHER NEWS FROM THE STATES

A Branch of eleven members—all high school pupils—was organized, May 11, in Brookland, District of Columbia, by the state secretary, and it is the plan to make this Branch the banner Branch of the District.

A Y. P. B. of thirty-one members was organized at Cannelville, O., by Miss Amy R. Stine, with Miss Mae Dunn as president. This is a mining town and the Branch has an opportunity for much good work.

Mrs. Flora M. Lowe, state secretary for Nebraska, reports the organization of a Branch of seventeen members in her home town, Juniata, with Mr. Carl Vortman as president.

Mrs. Jessie T. Williams, state secretary for Iowa, reports the completion of the first book of the study course by seven young people of Rolfe, and the passing of the examination with an average grade of ninety-six. The aim of this Branch is to complete the other books of the study course before the state convention in the fall. A most commendable aim!

The Louisville Branch of Ohio has opened a club reading room, the only restriction being that all who frequent the same must be pledge signers and pledge keepers. Good music and games of the right sort are permitted as a diversion. This may serve as a suggestion for other Branches.

The Milford Branch of Ohio is busy placing anti-narcotic and other posters in Boy Scout headquarters. Are there Boy Scout headquarters in your town or city?

QUESTIONS

Have you read "The Case Against the Little White Slaver," the opinion of Mr. Henry Ford, the automobile magnate, concerning the cigaret? It is obtainable for a small sum from Mr. Ford himself, Detroit, Mich., and would furnish excellent material for any regular meeting.

Have you tried the method of arranging programs two or three months, or a whole season in advance, and placing the program in the hands of the members? This may solve the program problem for some Branches.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS BEING ENLISTED

Truly the temperance forces believe in the conservation of youth these days as a most valuable asset in the campaign for National Prohibition. This is evidenced by the Prohibition Leagues now being organized throughout the state of Oklahoma by the State Prohibition Association. Students of the Muskogee high school to the number of 254 joined such a league recently and similar societies have been organized in Oklahoma City and Tulsa. The league is educational in its aim and both boys and girls are eligible to membership. A traveling secretary has been elected in Oklahoma and the work will doubtless spread to other states.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, June 10, 1915

AN IDEAL MEMORIAL

The other day there passed from earth one whom the world termed rich, but who was pitifully poor in the love of his fellows. When his will was read it was found he had made provision for the erection, as a memorial to himself, of a marble monument costing many thousands of dollars. Poor, mistaken soul, to think that memorials can be purchased with money or that remembrance is a commodity to be bought, like stocks and bonds, in the world's markets. Memorials, whatever their form, are only for those who have earned them by true heart service to another. Only the men or women who lose themselves in self-forgetful, altruistic effort for humanity leave behind any real or lasting memorial. But for those whose ambition it has been "to make some work of God's creation a little fruitfuller, more worthy of God; to make some human hearts a little wiser, happier and more blessed," there will be always a monument imperishable. Governor Capper rightly interpreted the genius of Elizabeth Hutchinson's life when he said, "The greatest monument that can be erected to her memory, or to that of others who have fought with her, will be represented by the happy homes that know not the heartache born of the saloon." All her life she gloried in her championship of the cause of home protection from the liquor traffic. Her mother-heart went out in unutterable longing and determination to make the nation and, if possible, the whole world safe for the feet of little children and weak men and women, and it was a constant gratification to her that the state in which she had invested the best energies of her life had successfully demonstrated that by prohibition such protection was possible. What she had helped to secure for Kansas she longed, before she was called home, to see accomplished for the nation, and like that other heroic soul, who has so recently gone from us, she desired to be spared until the consummation of the great battle for national righteousness. Not only will the homes of Kansas, made safe from the legalized liquor traffic, be her memorial, but because she lived so truly and battled for the right so valiantly, her comrades will go forward in their campaign for National Constitutional Prohibition with clearer vision, more undaunted determination and more fervent zeal.

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

Miss Anna A. Gordon, National president, who left Evanston, Thursday, June 3, to attend the funeral service of Mrs. Hutchinson, at Hutchinson, Kansas, returned Saturday evening, June 5.

All of the National officers have been in conference during the present week, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Anderson, recording secretary, and Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, assistant recording secretary, coming to Evanston for that purpose.

PRAY FOR THE PRESIDENT AND HIS CABINET!

The call to prayer in last week's SIGNAL met with a response in the hearts of all white ribboners and during the past week at family altars and in personal devotions the President and the members of his cabinet have been remembered. To the telegram sent by Miss Anna A. Gordon, National W. C. T. U. president, assuring President Wilson that 500,000 Christian women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union were praying that he and his associates in the cabinet might be divinely guided in the present crisis, Mr. Tumulty, the President's secretary, replied:

The White House,
Washington,
June 2, 1915

My Dear Madam:

The President has asked me to thank you most heartily for your very kind message of today, and to assure you and all concerned of his deep appreciation of your sympathetic interest and good will.

Sincerely yours,
J. P. Tumulty,
Secretary to the President.

SERVICES AT HUTCHINSON, KANSAS

The funeral service of the promoted leader was held on Friday afternoon, in the home of Mrs. Sadie E. Lewis, state treasurer of the Kansas W. C. T. U., at Hutchinson, for many years of her happy married life the home city of Mrs. Hutchinson. Around the casket, where she lay in peaceful sleep, gathered her family and friends, and state and National officers of the W. C. T. U. Rev. J. W. Abel, pastor of the First Methodist church of Hutchinson, conducted the service. Rev. Jay Somerville, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church of Wichita, a former pastor of Mrs. Hutchinson, in a beautiful eulogy referred to her as a Christian soldier who had bravely "fought the good fight" for righteousness. He recalled in reminiscent fashion many significant incidents of her helpful influence in the church and community life of the town in the years she resided there. With tender feeling, "Lead Kindly Light," a favorite hymn of Mrs. Hutchinson's, was sung by Mrs. Gaston Boyd, Kansas' state superintendent of music, and Mrs. Henry Ginn gave a comforting message of song.

The closing words were spoken by Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the National W. C. T. U., who participated in the service at the request of the family. She paid to her comrade of many years a tribute of affection, and by her words brought comfort to those who were so intimately related to Mrs. Hutchinson.

The committal service was at Eastside cemetery, where the dear form was laid by the side of that of her husband, Dr. A. M. Hutchinson.

All of Mrs. Hutchinson's immediate family, although widely scattered, were present at the funeral: Mrs. Mabel Roberts with her husband and son, of Winfield, Kansas; Harold Hutchinson of San Diego, California, and Clarence Hutchinson of Hurley, New Mexico.

Memorial services were also held at the same time in other towns in Kansas.

MEMORIAL SERVICES AT NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

At the hour of the funeral in Hutchinson, a company of white ribboners of Evanston and other parts of Cook county gathered for a simple memorial service at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters. The room was beautiful with flowers from God's out-of-doors, gathered and arranged by the loving hands of some of the "girls" who were especially dear to Mrs. Hutchinson.

Most touchingly Mrs. Frances P. Parks, National corresponding secretary, who presided, recalled the occasion only a little over a year ago when a company of friends had gathered in the same room to honor the memory of Mrs. Stevens, and Mrs. Hutchinson had stood by her side and spoken most tenderly of the beloved "chieftain."

As a member of the Official Board, Miss Helen L. Hood, president of the Illinois W. C. T. U., paid a tribute of love on behalf of the state W. C. T. U. presidents. She spoke of Mrs. Hutchinson's wonderful chain of service in our organization, from the presidency of the local union, up to that of the district, the state, and finally her election to a National position. "To all of these offices she brought that potent factor of success—enthusiasm yoked with system and method," said Miss Hood. "The forenoon of her life was full of preparation for the harvest of public opinion against an evil system. The furrows were many and deep in which she sowed the seed of fact and argument, always the clearest and most conclusive. She sowed abundantly, and thus in the afternoon of her life she had the joy of seeing the fruition of her labors."

Mrs. Adelia E. Carman, National superintendent, spoke on behalf of the Board of Superintendents, and dwelt with deep feeling upon Mrs. Hutchinson's helpfulness to every department and every superintendent of every department of our great work. Not only were her advice and counsel most helpful, but she had the wonderful ability to impart courage and zest for new endeavor.

In a sympathetic tribute for herself and for the Board of Organizers and Lecturers, Miss Louise E. Hollister gave expression to the comforting thought that we must not think of the dear one as far away. "She has but gone away from us for a little time, from this room into the next. Why grieve because instead of going over into Kansas, or Oregon, she has stepped across the threshold of our Father's house of many mansions."

Brief tributes of love were given by Mrs. Clara C. Chapin, director of the Publicity Bureau, Miss Windsor Grow, editor of The Young Crusader, and Miss Julia F. Dean, the managing editor of THE UNION SIGNAL. The "girls" at National Headquarters, under the leadership of Miss

(Continued on Page Nine)

NEARING THE END OF LIFE'S JOURNEY

MRS. JENNIE M. KEMP, President Oregon W. C. T. U.

Hot Lake, Oregon, where I welcomed my friend, Mrs. Hutchinson, on the morning of April 2, is beautifully located 2,700 feet above sea level, in the midst of the Blue Mountains. She told of a comfortable trip and seemed to look forward with pleasure to a bit of a vacation with Mrs. Henrietta Brown and myself. Easter Sunday was most charming, and she referred to it often as "that delightful day." For years I have not seen her so happy, so care-free and contented as she was those first days at Hot Lake. Dr. and Mrs. Tape, who are in charge of the sanatorium, are delightful people, and their kindness to Mrs. Hutchinson can never be fully understood except by those who witnessed it.

As Mrs. Hutchinson continued to grow steadily worse, she was advised that nothing except the skill of the surgeon offered any hope of relief, and she decided to go to Portland and place herself under the care of Dr. R. C. Coffey, an eminent surgeon of national and international reputation.

On April 22, accompanied by Mrs. Tape, we went to Portland. Although in pain, Mrs. Hutchinson enjoyed the trip, was interested in the irrigation projects, the beauty of the Columbia river scenery and the new Columbia highway, as we saw them from the train. At Pendleton and The Dalles white ribboners greeted her with big bouquets of choice flowers. Dr. Coffey met us at the station in Portland, and she was taken at once to the Portland Surgical Hospital. With all her suffering, I never heard from her either then, or later, one word of regret that she had come to Oregon. After reaching the hospital, she told me she believed her going there was "providential," and said she felt sure in no other place could she have better care or more skilled attendance. White ribboners will be interested to know that Dr. Coffey was one of the leading members of the Committee of One Hundred in our "Oregon Dry" campaign. On the hospital staff Mrs. Hutchinson found a number of friends and from the first she felt that she was surrounded by those who took a personal interest in her case.

On Wednesday, April 28, Mrs. Hutchinson received from Dr. Coffey the final decision that an operation was inevitable, and the following Tuesday was decided upon as the time. With characteristic fortitude she immediately made ready for the trip to Seattle to consult the National Convention hostesses, familiarly called "the Margarets," with regard to convention plans. On her return to Portland a stenographer was secured and on Monday she dictated many letters, which will be treasured sacredly by their recipients, her friends and co-workers at National Headquarters and elsewhere. Even though in distress and very weak, she insisted on using the last hours before going to the hospital in "setting her house in order."

The great prostration following the operation made our hearts very anxious and at the end of the first week her only daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Roberts, of Winfield, Kansas, took the long journey alone that she might minister to her mother, to whom her presence was indeed a precious comfort.

Never was there more earnest effort made to restore a loved one to health. Mrs. Hutchinson had two of the most skilful of nurses, cultured young women who cared for her as for a loved mother. Dr. Coffey was greatly impressed with her strong personality and intellectual gifts and earnestly desired to hold her for her loved ones and for the work. The faith of Dr. Erickson, the superintendent of the hospital, was wonderful and her prayers for the dear one were most fervent. Never was there a braver fight.

All through the anxious days beautiful flowers told of the love of her friends. Each day the unions of Multnomah county sent to her a handsome bouquet. The General Officers at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters and intimate comrades of the Kansas W. C. T. U. provided for her sweet blossoms of remembrance. Oregon flowers were so abundant that with some of the money sent by friends I suggested to Mrs. Hutchinson that books she would enjoy might be purchased so that later they could be read to her, and she seemed pleased with the idea.

While our friend was too weak to even know about the many letters of sympathy that came to her, she one day asked me to "write to everybody" and to "give everybody my love," saying "Everybody is so good to me."

As her strength waned and hope faded she knew that her earthly work was ended, and assured her daughter that it was "all right." She asked about those nearest and dearest to her and sent them a tender, loving message. "I have more over there than I have here," she told us. Her personal messages to me are sacredly treasured.

In her closing moments all pain left her and there came over her face a beautiful, peaceful expression. Without even a sigh "she was not, for God took her."

Many friends rendered invaluable assistance, and loving hands of sister white ribboners made our beloved friend ready for her long homeward journey.

On Monday afternoon a short service was held, the chapel being filled with white ribboners and other friends. They brought "love flowers" from their own gardens, the exquisite roses which in Oregon grow in such abundance. The National Federation of Women's Clubs in session at Portland sent a representative to the service, and a beautiful sheaf of pink roses.

Our dear one looked so peaceful as she lay asleep. Years of suffering had dropped away and she appeared as we knew her fifteen years ago. The little white bow and a bit of the floral offering from Miss Gordon were the only ornaments she wore. The soft gray casket was almost covered with a wealth of Oregon roses. Dr. Frank Loveland, pastor of the First Methodist church of Portland, conducted the simple service, and spoke of Mrs. Hutchinson as a notable woman and a representative of a great organization. Dr. Shank, who knew her during his pastorate in Winfield, Kansas, characterized her as the homemaker and the leader of the fight for civic righteousness as state president of Kansas. Mrs. Helen D. Harford, National organizer and lecturer for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, spoke tender, eloquent words.

At midnight Monday night we started on the journey eastward. At Mrs. Roberts' earnest request, I accompanied her as far as Hot Lake. Mr. Atkinson of the O. W. R. & N. R. R., who had made the trip to Seattle so comfortable for Mrs. Hutchinson, was untiring in arranging for every detail of this last homeward journey.

Elizabeth Hutchinson has been my friend for nearly a quarter of a century and her love has blessed and enriched my life.

"A whiter soul, a fairer mind,
A life with purer cause or aim,
A gentler eye, a voice more kind,
We may not seek on earth to find.
The love that lingers o'er her name
Is more than fame."

MEMORIAL SERVICES AT NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS

(Continued from Page Eight)

Addie Austin, manager of the Circulation department of the official papers, sang with feeling favorite hymns of Mrs. Hutchinson.

Throughout the service, mingled with profound sorrow for the going away of the honored and loved leader was the realization that for her had come release from all pain and an entering into the joys of life eternal.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

(Continued from Page Two)

lating to the National Convention, and no persuasion could deter her from carrying out this plan. In March she left Evanston for the West, intending to combine business with pleasure, and before returning to visit her daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Roberts at Winfield, Kansas, and her two sons, one living in southern California and the other in New Mexico. After a few weeks of rest at Hot Lake, Oregon, she went to the Surgical Hospital at Portland, Oregon. Being advised by the surgeons there that an operation was imperatively necessary, she consented, but insisted that before submitting to the treatment she must go to Seattle to attend to the business which had been one of her reasons for taking the western trip. She made the journey to Seattle and returned satisfied to place herself under the surgeon's care. The operation was performed and was apparently successful, but her vitality had been so exhausted by long months of suffering that she failed to rally, and the end came peacefully on the evening of May 29.

Mrs. Hutchinson was endowed by nature with many talents. She was a fine parliamentarian and possessed unusual ability for convention work. As a speaker she was forceful and logical, possessing a rare gift for taking her audience into her confidence and sharing with it her own unique experiences, which never failed to interest and charm.

Her broad sympathy with all classes and conditions of humanity made her always the center of a wide circle of friends. Indeed her chief joy in life seemed to be to help in solving the problems and bearing the burdens of others. In the last pain-racked months of her life she was always more interested in discussing and working out some plan to make life easier for another than to consider any remedy which might relieve her own suffering.

To serve the great organization of which she was so proud to be a part was "meat and drink" to her, and if she ever expressed regret that her health could not be restored and her life on earth prolonged it was because of her earnest desire to give a few more years to the temperance cause, until National Constitutional Prohibition should be assured.

A FRIEND OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE

ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER,
National Y. P. B. Secretary

In the home-going of our beloved National treasurer, Elizabeth P. Hutchinson, I am experiencing a sense of loss—not only personal but in behalf of the Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U. which she served so steadfastly. Her vision of its possibilities was clear and unfailing and her last message to the young people was synonymous with her faith in them—"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, dear young comrades." We shall miss her comradeship, her friendship and her guidance.

"But ever near us, though unseen,
The dear, immortal spirits tread—
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead."

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 21—Loyal Temperance Legion Day (Birthday of Anna A. Gordon)
JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION POPULAR IN THE WEST

In eight weeks, Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, National W. C. T. U. superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction, addressed 40,650 students in the universities, colleges, normal schools and high schools of the states of Iowa, North Dakota, Montana, Utah, Kansas and the province of Manitoba in Canada.

Seven weeks of incessant work in the schools show how scientific temperance instruction is regarded today by educators. Everywhere throughout the west a warm response was given by young men and women to the unanswerable logic of scientific statement. If the school is the pulse of the nation, surely never before has there been a steadier or more convincing temperance heart-beat. Teachers and students alike were responsive and alert to the needs of the hour.

Iowa State university, through its medical department, gave the Woman's Christian Temperance Union the results of a careful, scientific investigation of the nature and effects of tobacco. The leading article in the July number of The Temperance Educational Quarterly will cover this ground.

In North Dakota and in the cities of Manitoba, Mrs. Davis was able, in addition to her teaching, to study the children in the grades, obtaining statistics concerning mental deficiency and mental retardation, their causes and their relation to the use of alcohol.

In Winnipeg, Manitoba, the war, with its dreadful story of heart-break, was prominently brought out in the work of the Woman's University Club, which Mrs. Davis addressed. As she spoke to the members they were employed in making bandages for the wounded boys who had but recently gone out from their homes. Death had required a heavy toll from the mothers of Winnipeg, but they clearly saw that a yet heavier toll was being demanded by the liquor traffic and that Great Britain today is in greater danger from the ravages of drink than from the hostile advances of Germany, Austria and Turkey. One boy had been sent home in disgrace because of drunkenness acquired at the army post. Notwithstanding the fact that the army had placed before him every temptation, his buttons were cut off, his uniform taken from him, and never again could it be donned.

Montana and Utah, though states of magnificent distances, were both alive to the work in the schools. The Mormon schools were interested equally with the Gentile schools in the teaching of temperance, as was illustrated by the fact that Logan, where no W. C. T. U. exists, had Mrs. Davis return a second time in order to address the Brigham Young College and the State Agricultural College. In Salt Lake City deepest interest in every meeting was manifested.

Because of limited time, Mrs. Davis was able to make but one stop in Kansas. This was at Sterling, where she spoke to a packed house Sunday evening, and Monday morning addressed Cooper College, whose president assured her of the interest of Kansas in her department of work and pledged the hearty co-operation of the young people of the schools of the great state in the teaching of temperance. As one thinks of the power of teaching, the glory is summed up in the words of South, "He that governs well leads the blind; but he that teaches gives him eyes."

The July number of The Temperance Educational Quarterly is, as usual, issued in June for the benefit of the schools. The current number is devoted to the study of tobacco. The leading article is, "The Nature and Effects of Tobacco as Proven by the Scientific Investigation of the Medical Department of the State University of Iowa." Dr. T. D. Crothers also furnishes convincing articles upon "The Effects of Tobacco Upon Life and Offspring" and upon "What Can Be Done to Overcome the Drug Habit." The exhaustive article upon "The Physiological Effects of Tobacco and Scientific Conclusions" should be read by every Sunday school teacher before the quarterly temperance lesson of June 20, as well as by all public school teachers.

Order The Temperance Educational Quarterly directly from Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, Hartford, Wis. Single copies, fifteen cents; fifty cents per year; in clubs of ten, forty cents.

*Promoted.

PENNSYLVANIA PEN POINTS

Special Correspondence

The workers in the Keystone state are too busy to report what they are doing, but the work being done is bound to bring good results.

Local option is voted down again. Well, what then? Something better for us and worse for the liquor traffic will no doubt materialize next time. Mrs. Ella M. George, president Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., was called to the platform in the great local option demonstration in Harrisburg, and received a tremendous ovation while she delivered an earnest, eloquent appeal for the pending bill. Mrs. George is continually busy with institutes, conventions, and public meetings, all looking toward the awakening of Pennsylvania to her duties and responsibilities.

Suffrage, of course, is receiving great attention, for the fate of the franchise for women hangs on the work of the next few months. If the men vote "No" in November, there will be no chance for seven years; but it is comforting to know how many plain, ordinary folks are in favor of fair play for women. Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, National Franchise superintendent, will be with us soon and will no doubt help the women to realize the need of earnest work.

Beaver county, the home of the state president, has held the largest and most enthusiastic meeting in its history. The Rev. J. E. Morrison, Mrs. Cora Blackledge, probation officer, and Mrs. Ella M. George were the speakers. A feature of the afternoon session was a debate by four Geneva college girls on the question, "Resolved, that woman should be granted universal suffrage." The decision was for the affirmative. Mrs. Boole was the speaker of the evening and gave an interesting and inspiring address.

Blair county has had as speakers the Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson and Mrs. Mecca Marie Varney. It has also had the benefit of the Stough revival meetings. While there was no special co operation between the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the evangelists yet the influence of the great revival l felt and an increase of membership l looked for.

Fox Chase W. C. T. U. of Philadelphi county has lost by death a well loved an useful member, Mrs. George L. Keil, wh was secretary of the union and activ in all good work. Mrs. Keil was intens ly interested in missionary work and i all activities of the Episcopal church, c which she was a faithful member.

In a news note in THE SIGNAL of May 2 Mrs. Stepp was named as the presider of Kosciusko county (Ind.) W. C. T. U The name should have been Mrs. A. I Shedd.

NEW YORK'S EFFICIENCY CONGRESS

The "Efficiency Congress" at Oneonta, N. Y., May 25, in which eleven counties took part, was in many ways like a state gathering. In addition to delegates from the various counties, the state was represented by its president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole; its vice-president, Mrs. Frances W. Graham, and the state secretaries of the two Branches, Mrs. Maude Perkins of the Y. P. B. and Miss Helen I. Root of the L. T. L.

The excellent program had been prepared by Mrs. Georgia L. Weaton, president of Otsego county W. C. T. U., and a member of the entertaining union. The large church was well filled morning, afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Lula Walker, state superintendent of Medal Contests, voiced the greetings for the local union; a parliamentary drill was conducted by Mrs. Graham and a Bible message for service, with noontide prayer, completed the morning meeting.

The afternoon meeting opened with a group of short addresses which had to do with efficiency for the W. C. T. U., Y. P. B., and L. T. L., and were arranged as follows on the program:

ON TO STATE AND NATIONAL PROHIBITION

W—Marching Orders—Mrs. Boole —E
C—County Unions—Mrs. Frances De Graff, Pres. Montgomery Co. .. —F
T—City Unions—Mrs. A. Bradbury, Pres. Broome Co. —F
U—Rural Unions—Mrs. Addie Quackenbush, Pres. Schoharie Co. —I
Y—Officers—Mrs. Irene Taylor, Pres. Schenectady Co. —C
P—Departments—Mrs. Della Jones —I
B—Young People's Branch—Mrs. Maude Perkins, State Sec. —E
L—Loyal Temperance Legion — Miss Helen Root, State Sec. —N
T—Equipment—Mrs. Mary Hyde, Afton —C
L—Songs and Their Uses—Mrs. Frances Graham —Y
Physical Training—Temperance Bells

These brief addresses certainly spelled "efficiency" for the W. C. T. U., Y. P. B. and L. T. L.

Miss Jane Olcott of New York represented the Empire state committee on woman suffrage, at both the afternoon and evening meetings. Mrs. C. E. Lindsay of Albany, National superintendent of Fairs and Open Air Meetings, gave a splendid exposition of the "poster" idea, which was followed by an exhibition of posters which had been made and used to good effect by Mrs. Nellie Finch of Otsego county.

At four the children appeared with caps and pennants and after their exercises, were addressed by Miss Root. Later Mrs. Perkins spoke to the young people. White ribbon recruits were on hand also, Mrs. Boole tying a white ribbon on the wrist of each little one.

In the evening the Tabernacle choir conducted a song service, and a double male quartet sang, "The Brewers' Big Horses," after which Mrs. Boole delivered the chief address of the conference, her topic being, "The Onward March of Prohibition." Mrs. Graham had charge of the music during the day and sang two selections at the evening meeting, "Victory," being the closing song.

Mrs. Weaton presided during the entire conference, and much of the successful carrying out of the program was due to her untiring and careful management. One of the songs used, "America to Be," was composed by Mrs. Weaton, and dedicated to Mrs. Boole. It was received with applause. We give here the closing verse:

"When the golden era dawning,
Flashes joy to all the world;
When the flags of peace and freedom,
O'er the nations are unfurled
Then the cords of love earth binding,
Bonds of right and purity,
Shall proclaim the new evangel
Of a world forever free."

It is certain that every county represented will receive new enthusiasm for the work because of this meeting. Meals were served by the Oneonta union, and all delegates were most hospitably entertained in the homes over night.

A "follow-up" system for Otsego county had been planned by Mrs. Weaton, and on May 26, 27 and 28 group meetings were held in Portlandville, Worcester and Cherry Valley, the corps of workers, with the exception of Mrs. Boole, accompanying Mrs. Weaton, carrying to the various parts of the county some of the messages and echoes from the conference.

In Worcester a Y. P. B. of twenty members was organized and officers elected, the president being the daughter of Mrs. Della Jones, state superintendent of Sunday school work. Decorating the platform was the handsome silk flag which was presented to Mrs. Jones at the last National Convention for the best report of the greatest amount of work done in Sunday schools last year. The evening address was given by Mrs. Frances W. Graham, who also visited some of the local unions in the county after the group meetings were ended, and the work of the week was rounded out with a big mass meeting in Oneonta on Sunday, May 30, Mrs. Graham giving the address on "The Making of an American." In honor of Memorial day this was a patriotic as well as a temperance address.

Mrs. Weaton planned for this series of meetings and presided over them. Otsego county, which ten years ago was almost missionary territory, today has the largest number of local unions of any county in the state, all of this work having been accomplished during Mrs. Weaton's administration. On Sunday evening there was another meeting at West Oneonta, Mrs. Graham giving the address, after which a new union was organized by the county president and officers were elected.

IOWA'S SENTIMENT-MAKING CAMPAIGN FOR PROHIBITION AND SUFFRAGE

Special Correspondence

The work in Iowa is steadily going forward. While every heart sorrows with our dear state president in the home-going of her noble husband, yet his life and example are stirring the temperance forces to greater effort in the cause he loved so well. County conventions and institutes are the order of the day. Miss Bertha Bowers, Mrs. Laura B. Hale, Miss Aldrich and Mrs. Isabella Smith are in the field much of the time. Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Hurford, and Mrs. Lucile Shadle are also doing field work and making sentiment for suffrage and constitutional prohibition. Already politicians are in the field preaching a "take-it-easy" policy. "Constitutional prohibition is sure to win whether or not the women have the ballot," is their cry; but we know that it is going to take much hard work to win. We must not, we cannot feel secure until the vote of the people is taken.

Tax-Payers Bear the Financial Burden of the Liquor Traffic

The 200 acre farm set apart at Knoxville, Iowa, for the treatment of the finished product of the saloons is reported by the board of control to be worth, with the buildings, $165,635.85. During the biennial period of 1913-14 there were 585 patients committed to the hospital for inebriates, costing the taxpayers $102,765.94 for maintenance alone.

The following figures recently issued by the state board of control show the hospital expenses for Iowa for the two years ending June 30, 1912 and June 30, 1914; and the proportion of it which is directly due to the liquor evil:

	1912
State Insane Hospital	$1,396,827.94
State Penitentiaries	486,776.46
State Reformatories	233,303.57
State Feeble Minded Institution	410,759.87
State Inebriate Hospital	80,227.17
Total	$2,607,895.01
	1914
State Insane Hospital	$1,570,554.40
State Penitentiaries	618,765.21
State Reformatories	250,440,96
State Feeble Minded Institution	445,592.52
State Inebriate Hospital	102,765.94
Total	$2,988,119.03

The following figures give the percent of this expense properly chargeable to the liquor traffic:

	1912
Insane, 60 per cent	$ 838,096.76
Penitentiaries, 80 per cent	389,267.17
Reformatories and Feeble Minded, 65 per cent	410,759.87
Inebriates	80,227.17
Total	$1,718,350.97
	1914
Insane, 60 per cent	$ 942,332.64
Penitentiaries, 80 per cent	519,012.17
Reformatories and Feeble Minded, 65 per cent	452,421.86
Inebriates	102,765.94
Total	$2,016,532.61

The above figures cover only the cost to the state government and do not include any of the county or city expenses incurred in taking care of this class of people.

VALLECITOS, NEW MEXICO, GOES UNANIMOUSLY DRY

With the dry forces led by Cosme Martinez and Sixto Chavez, and the saloons joining in the campaign against themselves, the town of Vallecitos, Rio Arriba county, New Mexico, went dry by unanimous consent at a recent election, sixty-two votes being cast against the saloons and none in their favor.

GET POWER
The Supply Comes From Food

If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by selecting food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

"Not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach trouble," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heart-burn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

"A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I kept up its use. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heart-burn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain, disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 lbs., my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts did it."

A ten days trial will show anyone some facts about food.

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE WHITE CITY OF HOPE

IN THREE PARTS—PART III

HENRIETTA JOHNS

Chapters from a forthcoming book entitled "Uncle Joe's Home"

(All Rights Reserved)

Kressler scrambled to his feet. "If you will be kind enough to return this man to his daughter in car three, back of this," he said to the conductor, "you will find me waiting here on your return to discuss the subject. But be sure to tell the lady everything is O. K."

Davis went tractably enough—he had always stood in awe of uniforms—and the conductor, who had seen so much intoxication on his train that he would have been glad to see the liquor traffic exterminated root and branch, soon returned to find an able champion of the temperance cause in Kressler. "The United States government," said that gentleman, "will be compelled to prohibit liquor-drinking on all railroad lines. It won't do to leave the matter to the individual states. To think of a man like that"—he jerked his thumb in the direction of the rear car—"in a respectable country like ours being allowed to get drunk on a train! Why, it might lead to awful things. Talk of the comfort and convenience of passengers. Get him drunk and there wouldn't be any peace for any one."

"Oh, we would stop the train at the first station and put him off," laughed the man of buttons.

"And that would be very comfortable and convenient for the young lady, wouldn't it? How the good Lord suffers such things to go on—"

"You are a clergyman, I see," said the conductor quite affably.

"No, I'm not," answered Kressler fiercely. "I'm a member of one of the biggest firms in Pennsylvania doing a wholesale and retail grocery business combined with liquor selling. I've no intention of being a preacher, but hang it, I have a strong notion to do away with liquor in my own business, and help to stop the cursed traffic everywhere, especially on the trains, from the engineer's cabin to the observation platform!"

"It would help my business all right," smiled the conductor as he passed through to the next car.

St. Louis! Another prayer bead was counted off Marguerite's rosary! Missouri was the last state to be crossed—but it was a wet one. At Jefferson City a new passenger boarded the train and entered the car. Flashy and coarse looking, he and Davis proved "kindred souls," especially when the interesting fact was disclosed that he hailed from no other spot on earth than—Harrisburg! Though the men had never met at home they were soon fast friends. The situation grew critical when the two walked off together for a stroll. The porter Marguerite felt she might be able to control, but she thought herself helpless before the advances of this Pennsylvania stranger. Then a stop came suddenly and unawares. Up to the present time at every station, at every junction, Marguerite had had her father beside her. She peered out of the windows anxiously This was not a town, nor even a crossing. Lonely wastes of barren land stretched away in every direction. Everything was as still as the grave. Many of the male passengers had taken advantage of the halt to enjoy a walk on terra firma. She could see several from the car window, among them a man she thought might serve her as a knight-errant. He was a scholarly looking fellow and there was something familiar about his face. She remembered now that she had often seen the man but never had known him. He was a Harrisburg educator, principal of one of the city's largest schools who had been traveling for some time because of broken health.

Finally the train moved on, and still her father did not return. It was high time for Marguerite to appeal to her scholarly neighbor for help. As usual she received courteous acquiescence. She indicated the direction her father had taken and the man promptly started out to do her bidding.

Soon he returned. "Are you quite sure your father went that way?" he asked. "Suppose I look for him toward the rear of the train."

Marguerite was alarmed. "Do you think he could have fallen from the train? He is very feeble sometimes."

"Perhaps he went for a walk when the train stopped," he suggested kindly.

"Perhaps," she said, a troubled look darkening her beautiful eyes. "I'll be very much obliged if you will make another search," she added feverishly.

Long educational discipline was all that prevented the man from abandoning the search, for he had carefully surveyed the last seat of the last car. As he stood there trying to solve the problem by some other method than the one he had employed, a little old lady sitting at the end of the aisle rapped him gently on the arm with her spectacle case. "Looking for some one?" she asked. "I hope you are, for three men went out on the platform there, and I'm afraid they're up to mischief."

The educator, who considered would-be reformers as a rule fanatics, noted that the nice old lady wore a tiny white ribbon bow on the lapel of her rather dingy coat. He answered eagerly with another question:

"A white-haired man?"

"Yes, he was one of the two who went out together first, taking three chairs. Then a third man with bulging pockets followed. He had several bottles, I think.

He lifted his hat with a hurried "Thank you," and hastened toward the observation platform. Of course he was a temperance man—few teachers in the city schools even twenty-five years ago were anything else—but he had never entered heartily into the teaching of fads. Innovations he always eyed with conservative distrust, and the state compulsory law requiring the teaching of the injurious effects of alcohol and tobacco on the human system was a thorn in his pedagogical flesh.

But there was an object lesson waiting for the educator on the observation platform—a lesson he would never forget. He easily picked out the lovely young woman's father, as soon as he stood face to face with the group the old lady had described. The whole scene was characteristic of a drinking set. The man from Harrisburg, who had become so quickly a "crony" of Davis's, was light complexioned, sharp looking, puffy, and decked out with flashy jewelry. The third man was a "kindred soul" found aboard the train on the old principle of "birds of a feather flock together." He had a small, worn-out body, a heavy face, and bloodshot eyes half covered with heavy lids. Every man of the three was undersized, even the Harrisburg fellow who was by far the youngest and best preserved. He had a short, thick-set neck that gave him a "hammered together" appearance. Every man had a huge cigar grotesquely hung from the corner of his mouth, and held an uncorked bottle of "Old Scotch Rye." There were no glasses, and the party was about to begin its orgy with a toast to the man who had set up the liquor. A man like Kressler of Philadelphia would have rushed on the scene, but Mr. Blank, the scholar, even as Davis lifted his bottle to his lips, paused carefully to consider the best method of procedure.

Then God himself intervened between the drunkard and his bottle. The train was just rounding a sharp curve, and the engineer failed to see the mass of earth and rock that a landslide had precipitated on the track. With a fearful lurch the engine and succeeding cars ploughed through and over it. Only the last car was jolted off the rails, and dragged on the ties and ballast till the engineer could stop the train. No one was seriously injured, but there was much commotion. On the rear platform John Davis had been violently thrown from his insecure camp-stool, and but for the rear gate would have been precipitated to the ground. The bottles had been smashed to bits, and when the men, who had been willing to be "pards" in a revel had seen the aged toper motionless on the platform, they had slunk away. Mr. Blank and the white ribboner quickly summoned a physician some one said was on board the train, and before Marguerite came the old soldier had been partially resuscitated.

When finally the train went on, and all became quiet and orderly again, and her father was sleeping like a tired child, Mr. Blank told Marguerite all he knew of the matter.

"Of one thing I can assure you," he reiterated again and again. "Your father did not taste liquor. I congratulate you on the fact, and I sincerely trust that you will reach Topeka without his getting a drop."

The temperance moral which later on Mr. Blank drew from the case for the benefit of a party of curious young men would have surprised the teachers under his supervision back in Harrisburg.

"Kansas City!" The words shouted by the trainmen were soothing music to Marguerite's ears. It was the border-land at last! Hadn't she read of a street in Kansas City, Missouri, which had endless saloons on one side but on the other, in Kansas City, Kansas, had no saloons? She could almost imagine the blue sky would smile on the prohibition side, even though the rain was steadily falling as the train snorted into the city. Marguerite and her father remained in their seats until the train pulled out again. The old man was very quiet and meek. He had nothing to say about his escapade. His daughter waited on him patiently and lovingly. Because she dreaded the influence of the Harrisburg "pal" who, Mr. Blank informed her, was still aboard, Marguerite decided on a stop-over at Lawrence. Speak-easies there probably were in the town, but wasn't it from here the small boy had come who had never seen a saloon?

In the waiting room Marguerite noticed a little chap standing by the window, tightly clasping the hand of a man who, she thought, was probably his father. She smiled when she recognized the little Kansas boy whose remarks had first suggested her present enterprise, and he likewise remembered her. And so it came about that Professor Bailey of the State University and his son Herbert insisted on befriending them during the stop-over, and they were all sorry when the time came to separate. Even the feeble old man liked the member of the faculty because he was "lively."

"All aboard for Topeka." Marguerite heard the words with a sigh of relief, remembering that their apartments were already engaged, and that they would soon be secure from liquor in the white city of hope. "The last leap in my flight," she murmured as she made her father comfortable for the night.

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

NEBRASKA PUSHING CAMPAIGN PLANS

MRS. MAMIE M. CLAFLIN, President Nebraska W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Lulu Shepard was with us for sixteen days and a wake of enthusiasm followed in her trail. More than half the points visited have asked for her services again next year. She added many members and put a substantial sum of money into the treasury. Our people were delighted not only with the spirit this dear comrade manifested but with her force of character and her eloquence. At a number of places the social features attending her visit gave her a hearing she would not otherwise have obtained and proved again to the unions that it pays to take a little trouble to get friends to come out to hear the message our workers have to give. Mrs. Shepard will receive a yet warmer welcome when she returns to Nebraska.

Huge Delegated Meeting Called

Campaign plans are working out quite to our satisfaction. The initiative petitions will soon be ready for circulation and this part of the work will be in charge of the W. C. T. U. A committee of one hundred or more of the most influential men and women of the state are calling a huge delegated meeting for September 29-30 at the capital city for the purpose of uniting in a "Nebraska Dry Federation." Many extraordinary features are in preparation for this event. Constantly we are receiving advices which show that King Alcohol realizes the day of his doom is at hand in Nebraska, but such information does not bring with it any sense of over-confidence, which has been the submarine which wrecked many a victory. There was never in any campaign, at this early period, a more splendid assembling of forces under one banner, "The Saloon Must Go," than at the present time in Nebraska.

Our field workers are doing valiantly. Mrs. Nesbitt, Mrs. Heald and Mrs. Rood are afield gathering the sinews of war, and more than incidentally spurring the people to effort. Mrs. Lora S. LaMance and Mrs. Sena H. Wallace will each fill a brief period of dates this month. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, our honored National W. C. T. U. vice-president, will come to us for two weeks in the Chautauqua season, for which we feel extremely grateful.

Unions Working for Membership Honors

Our state convention will be held in Grand Island, Sept. 21-24. We are certainly expecting to have the desired 1,000 net gain at the close of the year. The second round of letters is just being sent to the unions urging a net gain of at least twenty-five per cent. Many unions have far eclipsed this mark. Omaha union, having made a gain of 130 percent last year, under the leadership of Mrs. N. J. McKittrick, has this year already made a good gain with "more to follow." A reception with the state president as a guest was lately given to the new members. Ninety were present. Frances Willard union of Omaha has made a good percentage gain and the spirit of prohibition is growing by leaps and bounds in this hitherto stronghold of the liquor traffic. The unions of the city and the state expect to reap a harvest of members from the Sunday meetings to begin in September.

We are anticipating with great pleasure a visit this summer from the former president of the Nebraska W. C. T. U., Mrs. S. M. Walker, now of Toledo, Ohio. This will be the first time Mrs. Walker has been to Nebraska since her departure sixteen years ago. There are scores of her old comrades here to whom this visit will be a long desired treat. We are expecting her to fill some institute dates in June.

Deep grief fills our hearts upon the passing of our beloved National treasurer. She seemed quite "ours" and we loved and trusted her. But the world of light has opened to her and from afar she will watch our progress.

OUR NEIGHBORS TO THE NORTH

The house of assembly of Newfoundland has passed a measure providing for the submission to the voters, in November next, of the question of prohibiting the importation, manufacture or sale of spirits, wines, ale, beer, cider and all other alcoholic liquors for use as beverages.

Alberta, Canada, is in the midst of a prohibition campaign and Mrs. Jackson Silbaugh, National organizer and lecturer, has been doing excellent work throughout the province. During a three-days' stay in Edmonton she spoke at seven public meetings, attended a reception in her honor at Government House, organized a union with thirty-nine members in a locality that has long been hard to reach, and secured many new members for the existing unions. Her visit has been very beneficial and the workers are falling into line and getting into the harness as never before. A unique feature of the Sunday evening service was the opportunity afforded the liquor men to reply. Four advocates for whisky spoke from the platform for five minutes each. Mrs. Silbaugh made good use of the privilege afforded her of speaking when they had finished, and by showing the falseness of their position she made many votes for no-license. At the last meeting Mrs. Silbaugh was assisted by Mrs. Nellie McClung, the Canadian writer and lecturer, who is well known from coast to coast, and with two such gifted speakers the hearers were doubly inspired to go forth to battle for the cause.

THE DE BOUTVILLE HALF SPOON

which is advertised on another page, is a most useful article for the kitchen and sick room. If your Union wishes to make money for local or campaign funds, write to the company for special terms to your union. Such an article should find a ready sale among your neighbors, benefiting them as well as your treasury.

"BLUE MONDAY" GONE FROM WEST VIRGINIA

Governor Hatfield of West Virginia in discussing the condition of his state under the new prohibition law says that the working men appear on Monday morning following a pay-day with clear heads where before if they went to work at all on Monday morning, a great many of them went in a semi-stupid condition which was the result of Saturday's dissipation. Practically all this has been eliminated. There is no question but what the economic value of the laboring man has increased and that the overdraft, that was so vexatious to both the employer and the employe at the end of the month, has practically disappeared. All of these results for the men who toil are in favor of the families who are dependent upon them. Mortalities from accidents, as well as violations of the law and commitments to insane asylums, will be materially reduced, which will lessen court procedure, and lessen the number of inmates in our prisons. This will work to the relief of our tax-payers and will guarantee a higher standard of citizenship from every point of view.

MISSOURI FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS ENDORSES STATE AND NATIONAL PROHIBITION

Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., who attended the recent session of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs at St. Joseph, writes that the federation endorsed statewide and nationwide prohibition and woman suffrage, and that prolonged applause greeted both resolutions. The Missouri W. C. T. U. and the Missouri Suffrage Association have jointly launched the campaign for suffrage in 1916 and plans for active work are well under way.

PROHIBITION PARAGRAPHS

Marion, Indiana, on May 25, voted, by a majority of 729, to abolish the saloons.

The Unitarian Temperance Society, at its recent annual meeting in Boston, went on record as in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition.

The seventh general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America, which recently met at Loveland, Colorado, passed resolutions petitioning Congress to enact a constitutional amendment prohibiting the importation, exportation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

Six large downtown hotels of Chicago have announced that hereafter they will close their bars on Sunday, in accordance with a law on the statute books of Illinois which has heretofore been practically ignored.

During the twelve months ending August, 1914, Ohio put out of business 1,493 saloons, not counting those affected by the limitation of one saloon to every 500 population. Of the 1,493 saloons closed 365 were abolished because they were neighborhood nuisances and 309 because they were permitted to be frequented by women and girls. Forty-three "road houses" and thirty-four "barrel houses" were put out of business. In the segregated vice districts 175 saloons had to quit business and 153 were refused licenses because they were known to be the resort of petty crooks. Sixty saloons frequented by gamblers were among those forced out, and 143 were closed because a certain class of patrons made their headquarters in them.

COAL MINERS VOTE TOWNS DRY

Whether or not the coal miners of Curry township, Indiana, wanted saloons was the issue at the elections in Shelburn and Farmersburg, Indiana, on May 29. That they much prefer a dry atmosphere was shown by the good majority in each town against the saloons.

GERMAN TEMPERANCE LITERATURE.

The following German pamphlets are issued to help enlist as many as possible of the German-Americans in the fight against the drink habit and the liquor traffic. They appeal to them in their native tongue and on lines which will most easily influence them. Speed the cause of national prohibition by distributing these pamphlets widely.

1. "THE BIBLE AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE." 32 pages, 2d edition, ten thousand now issued. Price 5c each, 25c a doz., $1.50 a hundred, postpaid.
2. "THE GERMANS AND THE DRINK QUESTION." 8 pages, forty thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a dozen, 50c a hundred, postpaid, $4.00 a thousand by express.
3. "CHRISTIANITY AND PROHIBITION." 8 pages, twenty thousand now issued. Same price as No. 2.
4. "THE AIMS AND RESULTS OF PROHIBITION." 12 pages, 3d edition, thirty-five thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a doz., 65c a hundred, postpaid, $5.00 a thousand by express.

Of this last a new revised edition has just left the press. It also embodies the latest statistics and statements concerning prohibition in Kansas by the Governors, Stubbs, Hodges and Capper and by the legislature of the state. Send orders to

J. G. EVERT, BOX B, HILLSBORO, KANS.

Popular Books Every White Ribboner Should Read

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. The story of a man's fight for National Prohibition told most cleverly—a book destined to arouse the reader to his responsibility—a book with a definite purpose.

Price, $1.25. Postage 12 cents.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. The story of a little cripple boy, who by serenity and triumphant faith, not only finds his way to sturdy young manhood, but casts about himself a beautiful influence for good. A wealth of humor, pathos, romance, skillfully blended with a great moral lesson.

Price, $1.35. Postage, 12 cents.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, the life story of Jack London.

Price, $1.30. Postage 12 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Ill.

RECORD WORK IN HOUSE-BUILDING

A Result of Liquor License Fight

A bungalow begun and entirely completed in ten hours, with a temperance family rushed in as occupants at four o'clock in the morning, was the result of an effort to prevent the establishment of a liquor selling cafe in a residential section of Binghamton, N. Y. This record-breaking construction work was necessitated by the fact that Chapman Bros. were erecting a building to be used as a cafe, where liquor could be sold. According to the law, two-thirds of the residents within three hundred feet must consent to its presence. As the only house within the three hundred feet was owned by Chapman Bros., there was no legal objection to the opening of the saloon. However, T. B. Crary, who lives in the vicinity, was strongly opposed to the establishment of this place for the sale of liquor. He made arrangements for the immediate erection of a bungalow, secured a building permit, ordered lumber, and at six o'clock in the evening a force of twenty-five carpenters was on hand and with the aid of large arc lights the work went rapidly forward during the night. At four o'clock in the morning furniture was delivered and a family moved in, and even the painting was finished by ten o'clock in the morning. When the intention of Mr. Crary became apparent the cafe men also made arrangements to work through the night, and by the light of automobiles a large force of men continued the construction of the building. With the bringing in of the temperance family the victory rested temporarily with the opponents of license. Chapman Bros., however, immediately undertook the work of converting into a dwelling house a barn on their premises within three hundred feet of the proposed saloon. Mr. Crary, who owns much of the land in this section, as a counter move, at once gave orders for the erection of two more houses which were to be finished and occupied by the evening of the day which saw the completion of the bungalow. The final victory, as the matter now stands, will belong to the side which is able to build houses with the most rapidity, with the advantage on the side of the saloon's opponents, because the liquor men must secure the consent of two-thirds of the residents, that is, the consent of two families to offset each family which is opposed to the saloon.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

THE WHITE CITY OF HOPE

(Continued from Page Twelve)

If Marguerite had been asked whose influence over her father she most dreaded, she would, without doubt, have said, "Dregg's," of Harrisburg. Now, as she sat beside her charge, relaxing in mind and body as she had not for a long time, she caught the reflection of a face in a mirror. It was that of a man several seats ahead of them, and his eyes were on her reflection! It was Dregg, the saloon-keeper. Pale to the lips with fear that her father, whose eyes were on the Kansas landscape, would turn, she addressed a passing trainman.

"May we have seats in the next car? Will you be kind enough to help us move?" What a slow process it proved —explaining to the old man and getting wraps and baggage together! It must be the merest accident that the saloon-keeper was aboard.

As they settled themselves again Marguerite prayed fervently that Dregg had not seen her father. Perhaps he had not even recognized her. God grant that they were safe!

The door opened and a man entered. It was only the trainman. Another came in —this time it was the conductor. The cold chills of anxiety were running down Marguerite's spine. The door banged again and Dregg sauntered leisurely down the aisle, scrutinizing boldly each face as he passed. Marguerite bent quickly over her father and pointed excitedly to some trivial object in the landscape "Don't you see it, father? There it is!" Oh, why did the saloon-keeper move so slowly by their seat? She felt he was watching them. Did he recognize her father with his head still tied up from a cut he had received from a broken bottle during the scene on the observation platform. Of course the bandages would attract his notice. Would he never go by? Yes, he had passed at last; he had even gone out of their car. She might take a long breath again.

By and by she dared to look at her watch. In twenty-five minutes they would reach the promised land. Fifteen minutes now, and the race would be over. But—ah—there he comes. She sees the hateful face in the mirror. Her father is counting the telegraph poles. "So many to a mile," he says. She dimly hears him call out the figures. How slowly Dregg comes up the aisle. Now he has stopped beside her and she feels herself growing numb with suspense. Ten minutes between them and the goal! But what might those ten awful minutes mean to her father? Now the buildings of a large city can be seen from the car window. The new white city lies just ahead.

"Topeka!" shouted the conductor, throwing open the door. On the platform stood Dregg. "Hello, Davis," he cried, putting out his hand. "Won't you shake for the sake of our good old times in Harrisburg? I thought two or three times it was you! You're looking fine, too, especially your game head." He laughed loudly. Davis returned the smile and the greeting, but with two umbrellas and a small suit-case which Marguerite had persuaded him to carry, he could not take the proffered hand of "good fellowship!"

"Getting off here, are you?" went on the owner of a legitimate though not respectable business in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. "Sorry you aren't going on to Denver, Davis, so I could see more of you. Better come along with me anyway. I'm bound for the big liquor convention and a good time is promised. Come along! The fare isn't heavy."

But Marguerite and her father were on the station platform now, and the conductor was calling "All aboard!" Dregg was still making tempting proposals to Davis from the car platform when the conductor gave the signal for the train to move on and swung on board. The brave daughter trembled as she gently drew her father along. In the best of humor the old man turned and playfully waved the umbrellas, one after the other, at his friend, Dregg. It was the last time he was ever to see a saloon-keeper on God's beautiful earth.

"Good luck to you," he cried, looking a little wistfully after the now fast receding train. As Marguerite realized that it was bearing from her parent the last temptation to drink he was ever to encounter, she burst into tears. The race was won.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS

56 & 58 Park Place NEW YORK

INDIANA NEWS NOTES

The Indianapolis W. C. T. U., under the leadership of Mrs. Margaret Collier, wife of a Methodist minister, and sister of Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, president of the Indiana W. C. T. U., is very active along many lines. The state treasurer and several of the state superintendents also live in the capital city. In May the Flying Squadron visited the city, and immediately afterwards came Mrs. LaMance, National organizer, and Mrs. Lulu Shepard, president of the Utah W. C. T. U., Mrs. Vayhinger following them. Mrs. La Mance spoke eight times, once at a union meeting of white ribboners, once at a factory, twice at mass meetings and twice to railroad men. She also did effective work among the colored people, of whom there are approximately 40,000. A mass meeting for the colored race addressed by Mrs. LaMance was attended by over four hundred. The Indianapolis white ribboners are greatly interested in these people and are working to build up an overwhelming prohibition sentiment among them. Progressive colored leaders are about to start a civic betterment league and put in a settlement missionary of their own race. The white people are also contemplating some extensive settlement work.

Castleton, Indiana, is to push a Sabbath observance campaign through the W. C. T. U. The pastors are backing the movement, and are preaching on the subject.

FOR DISPLAY

AT

Chautauquas and Open Air Meetings

The Proclamation for

NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION

Lillian M. N. Stevens

President National Woman's Christian Temperance Union

Portland, Maine, September 10, 1911

The Proclamation has been prepared in permanent form, ready for framing—to be used in exhibits, state headquarters, churches and Sunday Schools.

Set in gothic type, mounted on heavy plaster board, beveled. Size 30x40 in.

Price, postpaid, $2.00.

Printed on heavy glazed paper.

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Ill.

AMONG OUR WORKERS

Mrs. Emily Hoppin, editor of the White Ribbon Ensign, the state paper of the California (North) W. C. T. U., has been elected president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Sabbath Observance department has been formally adopted by the Alaska W. C. T. U., with Mrs. D. C. Brownell of Seward as its superintendent.

Seventy-three of the one hundred students of the Middle (Tenn.) Normal school who were present at the vesper service on a recent Sunday when Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, National organizer and lecturer, was the speaker, signed the total abstinence pledge. Since that meeting a number of the students have written Mrs. Atkins for literature, saying they had selected as the subject of their graduating essays "National Prohibition," "Total Abstinence," or some other phase of the temperance question.

Oceana county (Mich.) W. C. T. U. held its thirty-first annual convention at Ferry, May 6-7, with Rev. Etta Shaw, National evangelist, as one of the speakers. Inspiring reports of the good work done by the different unions of the county followed the devotional exercises led by Mrs. Newell. Other interesting features of the program were the annual address of the county president, Mrs. Phebe Cramer; a paper by Mrs. Orville Wetmore; the children's half-hour under the direction of Mrs. Sutherland; an address by the district president, Mrs. Springer; and the consecration of six little white ribbon recruits. The grand gold medal contest was of unusual interest. Mrs. Winifred Thomas was elected county president, owing to Mrs. Cramer's inability to longer serve in that capacity. Before the county convention Mrs. Shaw had spoken to twenty audiences in the county and brought the work of the W. C. T. U. before the residents of this section of the state.

The Adams county (Ill.) institute was held in Quincy under the direction of Mrs. Mary Edwards, the efficient county president, with Miss Helen Hood, state president, as leader and speaker. The W. C. T. U. co-operated with the Christian Endeavor Societies and the churches in the recent visit of the Flying Squadron to Quincy. The Quincy union is now enjoying one of the finest headquarters buildings in the state, having last year sold their old building at 224 North Sixth street and bought a building on North Eighth street, which was opened last December with appropriate exercises in which Miss Hood participated.

From start to finish the Allegan county (Mich.) W. C. T. U. convention held in Allegan May 19-20, was an unqualified success. The local people did their part well, with generous hospitality, fine music, good meals and a beautifully decorated church. The reports of the work throughout the county showed encouraging progress. Excellent papers and inspiring addresses were among the good things provided. Mrs. Etta S. Shaw, National evangelist, Miss Margaret Bilz, National organizer and lecturer, and Mrs. M. E. Bodwell, president of Kent county, gave excellent help. A poster parade and an automobile parade were among the special features. Conspicuous among the banners displayed was one made by the efficient county president, Mrs. Nellie Wicks, patterned after the cartoon of the dry cleaning establishment pictured on the cover page of THE UNION SIGNAL of April 22. The white states were mounted on black cambric. A medal contest was held with six young men, students of Hope college, as contestants. Mrs. Nellie Wicks was re-elected county president.

A Wave of Prohibition

FACTS AND FIGURES

ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN

(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth

by

Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Illinois

S. T. I. WORK IN KANSAS

The department of Scientific Temperance Instruction has scored a signal success in the public schools of Winfield, Kansas. The local W. C. T. U. offered three prizes in the high school of five dollars, three dollars and two dollars, respectively, for the best three essays on "The Effect of Total Abstinence on the Life," and three similar prizes in the grades, for the three best essays on "The Effect of Alcohol on the Nervous System." Mrs. Agnes Rogers, state superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction, whose home is in Winfield, introduced the work, and she reports the most hearty encouragement and co-operation on the part of the teachers and superintendent. The greatest interest was shown by the pupils and 290 essays were written in the high school and 225 in the grades. The good resulting from the preparation of the essays touched not alone the pupils, but the fathers and mothers in the homes caught the enthusiasm and expressed their appreciation of the value of such effort in behalf of their children. The educational value of this work to the pupils themselves, in the schools generally, and in the homes cannot be measured.

The prize-winning essays in Winfield will later come into competition with essays from other schools in the county for county prizes and the prize-winning county essays will compete for state prizes. Not only have the essays been written, but in the English classes the teachers gave as a subject for debate: "Resolved, that the United States Should Have National Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic." "After the several debates in the classes," writes Mrs. Emma W. Grover, state W. C. T. U. vice-president, "the final debate was held in the high school chapel amid great enthusiasm, and of course, was decided in favor of the affirmative!"

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

Is 25 per cent of your membership on The Union Signal subscription list?

Our union membership is forty-four, and as I am sending twelve subscriptions, you see we have one more than is required for the one in four record.

COOPERSTOWN, N. D.

The Wrangell W. C. T. U. of Alaska sends twenty subscriptions for the Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL, saying: "Herewith we enclose a list of our paid-up members, with money for a subscription for each to the Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL."

EVERY PRESIDENT IN THE COUNTY A SUBSCRIBER

We held a meeting yesterday and secured a subscriber to the paper of papers, THE UNION SIGNAL. This goes to one of the local presidents in our county, and I am aiming to catch them all. Some are already subscribers, but I want all of the twenty-eight presidents in this county to be on THE UNION SIGNAL subscription list.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO.

LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD
By ANNA ADAMS GORDON

This beautiful volume, the library edition, has been secured as a premium by many for sending ten subscribers to the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL.

The biography should be in every home and can be obtained for one dollar and fifty cents, or by securing ten subscribers to the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL.

The following have recently secured the book:

48. Mrs. Fannie Van Gelder, Ithaca, N. Y.
49. Mrs. M. A. Reichenbach, Oakdale, Cal.
50. Miss Helen Olmsted, Milford, Pa.
51. Mrs. Emma Madden, Ingersoll, Okla.
52. Mrs. Joseph Grover, Red Bank, N. J.
53. Emma M. Davidson, Milton, Dela.
54. Mrs. D. A. Shaffer, St. Edward, Nebr.
55. Mrs. Bessie Lathe Scovell, Minneapolis, Minn.

A PRACTICAL SUGGESTION FROM GEORGIA

We have been having so many good cartoons in THE SIGNAL that I have cut them out and pasted them in a large kodak album, putting the book on the table in our public library where it catches the eye of everybody who comes in. Every cartoon is a lecture, and this seems a good way to reach people that can not be reached otherwise.

WHITE RIBBONER

ARIZONA CONVENTION MAKES SENTIMENT FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

MRS. IMOGEN F. H. LA CHANCE
State W. C. T. U. President

The twenty-sixth annual convention of the Arizona W. C. T. U., which took place in the city of Tempe recently, was the greatest and best ever held in the history of the organization. The beautiful little city was indeed a picture in its springtime garb of roses, oleanders, sweet peas and pomegranate blossoms; and the members of the hostess union had made bountiful preparations for their white ribbon visitors. The women were full of enthusiasm, and great interest and earnestness prevailed throughout the entire session.

The first day was taken up with meetings of the official board, executive committee and a conference of superintendents of departments, closing with a union meeting of prayer and praise in the evening.

The two following days were fully occupied with an interesting and helpful program, including, in addition to the regular features, addresses of much interest on "Prohibition as Good Business," by Dr. John Wix Thomas, president of the State Temperance Federation; General Thomas Wilson, formerly state chairman of the Republican party, and Colonel James McClintock; "What Woman Suffrage Has Done for Arizona," by our white ribbon senator, Mrs. Frances W. Munds, and other speakers. The convention lecture, on National Prohibition, by Rev. Claude Jones, was a masterpiece of logic and eloquence.

A fitting finale to the entire program was a splendid and inspiring literary recital given by Mrs. Dixie Dees Gammage, who is using these recitals to great advantage in all parts of the state in connection with her work as state superintendent of the dual departments of Purity in Literature and Art, and Medal Contests. Too much cannot be said of Mrs. Gammage's loyal and efficient work during our campaign for statewide prohibition.

The work in Arizona has ever been sadly retarded for lack of funds. Mrs. Gammage with her financial plan is meeting that need and our prospect for a successful year's work is bright. Everywhere the people are gladly responding to her appeals for help for the state treasury. She is a veritable flame of spiritual fire that spreads itself in all directions. She came to us in a time of great need and she is giving herself loyally and continuously to us.

The great piece of work to which we have set our hearts and hands is the building of sentiment for the enforcement of our state law and for national prohibition.

Sixteen prisoners indicted by the May grand jury were given a temperance lecture by Judge Martin Luther Keedy of Hagerstown, Md., recently. When the judge asked all who had started on crime careers because of drink to raise their hands, nine hands went up. The judge then described in detail the evils of intemperance.

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

Hints
for Commencement Gifts

BOOKS—

LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, $1.50.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS, Frances E. Willard. Price, 60 cents.

HOW I LEARNED TO RIDE THE BICYCLE, Frances E. Willard. Price, 40 cents.

WHAT FRANCES E. WILLARD SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 75 cents.

WHAT LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 50 cents.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC, William E. Johnson. Price, $1.00.

COMPENDIUM OF TEMPERANCE TRUTH, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO GIRLS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO BOYS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TELL STORIES TO CHILDREN, Sarah Cone Bryant. Price, $1.10.

THE TYRANT IN WHITE, (Anti-Cigaret story). Price, $1.00.

A SINGULAR LIFE, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. Price, $1.25.

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. Price, $1.37.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. Price, $1.47.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, Jack London. Price, $1.42.

A MODERN MADONNA, Caroline A Stanley. Price, $1.50.

JEAN MITCHELL'S SCHOOL, Angeline Ray. Price, $1.00.

LOIS MORTON'S INVESTMENT, Eva Murphy. Price, $1.35.

TWO, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 40 cents.

FRECKLES, Gene Stratton Porter. Price 60 cents.

All books cloth bound. Prices include prepaid carriage.

SOUVENIR SPOONS

W. C. T. U. TEASPOON, showing Crusade Church in bowl.

REST COTTAGE TEASPOON, Rest Cottage in bowl.

Spoons made of sterling silver. Price, $1.50 each.

REST COTTAGE SOUVENIR

A TERRA COTTA PLAQUE, cottage in bas relief, hand carved and hand tinted. Price $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

JUST FROM THE PRESS
NEW MUSIC

PROHIBITION'S IN THE AIR

Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A stirring quartet for mixed voices. Price, 10 cents.

THE WORLD-WIDE JUBILEE

Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A demonstration song to be used either by the Y. P. B. or the W. C. T. U., consisting of solo, mixed quartet and chorus. Price, 15 cents.

PRAYER SONG

Written by J. W. Fritts. The words, "It is always noontide somewhere," so familiar to all, beautifully harmonized, to be sung immediately following the noontide prayer. Price, per fifty copies, 15 cents; per hundred, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
EVANSTON, ILL.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL, JUNE 17, 1915 | No. 25

See Page Eight

NORTH DAKOTA PROHIBITION RESERVISTS

The Last Word on Conservation

The necessity for conserving our national resources has been occupying the attention of our legislators, national and state. Laws have been enacted to protect our forests and our water supply. Millions of dollars have been spent in controlling contagious diseases among our domestic animals, and to eliminate the boll weevil from the Southern cotton fields and the various blights from our fruit orchards. What greater national resource has our country than our boys and girls, and why should not the government protect them from the blight caused by the use of intoxicating liquors? —Congressman Addison T. Smith of Idaho

CAMPAIGN EDITION

New York's Health Department Declares War on Alcohol

"GET ON THE WATER WAGON" IS SLOGAN OF CAMPAIGN

A mandatory letter has been sent out by Health Commissioner Goldwater of New York to the board of health's advisory council, directing the immediate organization of a special committee to begin a campaign against alcohol.

Commissioner Goldwater says that the entire power of the board will be employed to "fight the rich man's champagne as well as the poor man's beer." According to the report sent out by the Associated Press the publicity work in connection with this campaign will embrace illustrated lectures, moving pictures, posters, permanent exhibits in prominent places, free pamphlets and articles in papers.

"This campaign against drinking is one necessary for every board of health to adopt," New York's health commissioner is reported to have said. "No board of health can afford to ignore longer the evils of rum and the resultant poverty and disease. I hope every city in the country will follow our lead. It is as necessary to battle drink as to fight an epidemic. It is as much a part of the duty of the board of health as is any other phase of its work. Physiologically the cause against alcohol is strong. A substance which is protoplasmic poison lessens the vital resistance, hinders the community, fosters poverty, promotes all poverty's diseases, and calls for vigorous handling by the board of health. The use of a bracer is dead wrong. Bracers destroy the warning signals of tired, exhausted nature. Bracers abolish fatigue for the moment, but fatigue warns the body that rest and recreation are necessary."

For some months the New York State Board of Health has been giving out to the press of the state under the title "Health Hints" strong statements concerning the injurious effects of alcohol, and the action now taken by the New York City board, therefore, is not a great surprise.

Minnesota's Prohibition Territory Increased by Nine More Counties

Of the twenty-six counties of Minnesota which have held elections since the going into effect of the county option law, all but four have voted to outlaw the saloons. On June 7, nine of the twelve counties voting gave good majorities against John Barleycorn. Their action exterminates from twenty-eight towns seventy-three saloons. As a result of the election in Todd county, twenty-two saloons and two breweries were put out and four towns were made dry for the first time in their history. Since the county option law has been in operation, 236 saloons have been driven out of business.

The cleaning up of Minnesota counties will be of incalculable benefit to its sister state of North Dakota in the enforcement of its state prohibition law, and will affect the sale of liquor by the breweries in the larger cities.

Transformation of Breweries in Anticipation of Prohibition

Most of the breweries in Colorado are perfecting plans for new lines of business. The Coors in Golden is increasing its output of beautiful pottery made from a local clay and is experimenting with its malt for the manufacture of malted milk. Neef Brothers of Denver, are making a new temperance drink, named "malt-brew," guaranteed to contain no alcohol. The new law interferes with the plans of the Walter Brewing Company, Pueblo, for making a two per cent drink, as it construes the term intoxicating liquors to apply to any beverage which contains any per cent of alcohol. Zang's of Denver is owned by the United Breweries Company, an English concern, and a director stated recently, "We shall close the brewery in conformity with law. We shall keep the plant in good repair because we feel that before long the people of Colorado will rescind the action of last fall."

The stockholders of the brewery located at Bellingham, Washington, say it is their present intention to turn their plant into a cold storage and creamery establishment for storing eggs and manufacturing cheese, butter and condensed milk. One building will be used as an ice plant.

Drink Big Factor in Chicago Divorce Court

Drunkenness is one of the leading reasons given in applications for divorces in the courts of Chicago, and it plays an important part in the wrecking of an average of one home a day in that big city.

These facts are shown by the court records collected by the statistical bureau of the county clerk's office. A representative of the Chicago Herald, who has made a careful study of the data secured from the supreme court in order to ascertain to what extent alcohol is responsible for divorces, makes the following statement:

Habitual drunkenness was the only charge made in 152 divorces granted. To this charge was added one or two others in 124 divorces, that is, drunkenness was one of the charges, the other was one of the statutory grounds recognized in Illinois as sufficient cause for divorce.

Drunkenness and cruelty appear more frequently than any other one combination of charges on which divorces were granted in the superior court last year.

The writer in The Herald calls attention to the fact that whenever a petitioner for a divorce wanted to place more than one charge against the defendant, the combination of drunkenness and cruelty was used in 45.8 per cent of the cases, and that there was foundation for the charge is inferred from the fact that the judges granted the divorces.

Where Drinking Is Sole Charge

The following table shows the number of divorces granted by months last year on the ground of drunkenness alone and for drunkenness and other charges:

	Drunkenness.	Drunkenness and other charges.
January	5	14
February	10	11
March	19	16
April	20	7
May	21	5
June	12	3
July	21	10
August	6	6
September	1	2
October	12	18
November	13	20
December	12	12
Total	152	124

These 276 cases were heard in the superior court. A hundred more were counted in the circuit court, but insufficient time prevented a tabulation of them.

Twenty-two Philadelphia Liquor Dealers Retire From Business

Lack of trade has driven twelve saloons, nine wholesale liquor places and one brewery in the city of Philadelphia out of business, reports the North American of that city. This fact was brought to light by the failure of the licensees of the places to pay the required license fees to the city treasurer.

Decrease in consumption of intoxicating liquors has been especially noticeable in the mill districts. Thousands of mill-workers have stopped drinking beer altogether or have cut their drinking to a minimum. Nearly all of those who allowed their licenses to lapse by nonpayment of fees, admit that an unprecedented slump in the demand for beer and whisky forced them out of the rum business.

"The saloon business is very bad. It has been steadily growing worse for more than a year," said one saloonkeeper. "This spring I did not sell as much liquor by one-half as I did one year ago. People have hardly enough money to buy bread and meat, so why should they spend money for beer? Hard times have forced thousands to stop drinking altogether."

"Both my husband and son," said the wife of one liquor dealer, "were sick and tired of the business and decided to get out of it and go into the glass business. Of course, business has been slow for several months."

Prophetic Figures

In a set of figures recently published by the Wall Street Journal of New York may be read a prophecy of the future of the liquor traffic seen through the eyes of the producers of alcohol. These statistics set forth that the production of whisky in Kentucky in January of this year was 1,980,000 gallons against 6,102,452 in January, 1914; the production in Pennsylvania was 1,073,808 gallons in January, 1915, against 1,552,445 a year ago, and in Maryland 506,919 gallons as against 918,582 last year. Whisky bottled in bond in January, 1915, was 691,508 gallons compared with 928,187 in January, 1914. The decrease in Kentucky's production amounts to 66 2-3 per cent; in Pennsylvania it is about 33 per cent, and in Maryland, more than 40 per cent.

These figures and others similar to them from other sections of the country are significant as showing that the distillers are preparing for the future abolition of their traffic, realizing that the demand for the commodity in which they deal will steadily decrease. In the picturesque language of Collier's Weekly, "They are quietly discounting their own funeral."

TESTIMONY TO THE VALUE OF PROHIBITION FROM NORTH CAROLINA CITIZENS

NO DESIRE TO RETURN TO LICENSE

CONGRESSMAN JOHN M. FAISON.

It gives me great pleasure to fully endorse statewide prohibition in North Carolina, and testify to its splendid results in the state after a trial of about seven years, which has fully convinced the whole state of the wisdom of statewide prohibition.

The law has been well enforced, public sentiment for prohibition has largely increased, and it seems needless to say that there is no desire among the people of the state to return to the liquor traffic.

MEDICAL MEN DISCOURAGE USE OF ALCOHOL

J. W. LONG, M. D., F. A. C. S., Professor Emeritus of Diseases of Women and Children in the Medical College of Virginia

The greatest change imaginable has taken place in the medical profession since the enactment of the North Carolina law seven years ago. The doctors in the city of Greensboro have, almost to a man, quit prescribing whisky. I have not written a whisky prescription in over five years.

The following resolution passed in June, 1914, by the Medical Society of North Carolina, emphasizes the attitude of the medical profession of the state on the subject: "The Medical Society of the State of North Carolina will use its best efforts to discourage the use of alcohol in any form as a beverage. It is the sense of this society that any member of the profession who does promiscuous or unnecessary prescribing of whisky, either for patients or non-patients, is violating one of the principles of our profession, and is deserving of censure. Resolved, that alcohol as a drug can be eliminated from the pharmacopoeia, without in any degree crippling the efficiency of the doctor's armamentarium."

TEMPTATION REMOVED FROM THE BOYS

J. L. MANN, Ph. D., Superintendent City Schools, Greensboro, N. C.

Coming from another state where the prohibition law does not obtain, I had so often heard the expression, "Prohibition does not prohibit," that I had come to believe possibly there was something in the statement. However, I have had prohibition, in its operation, under close observation for the past five years and I am prepared to state positively that its beneficial results exceed my fondest expectations. Seldom does one see a drunken man, and the boys are removed practically from all temptation to drink, because men who, by manipulation, do obtain a small portion of liquor, drink it clandestinely. I commend prohibition to all communities, for I have learned that prohibition does prohibit.

INCREASE IN REVENUE RECEIPTS

According to figures furnished August 19, 1914, by B. R. Lacy, state treasurer, the state revenue has increased $1,051,645.45.

UNPRECEDENTED PROGRESS UNDER DRY REGIME

T. J. MURPHY, Mayor of Greensboro

The question of the benefit of prohibition to a city, county or state has long since been settled in the minds of the great majority of people in Greensboro, North Carolina. This city closed up the saloons just ten years ago the first of this year, and since that time the state of North Carolina has voted them out. The result has been most gratifying and benecial in every way, morally, industrially and commercially. Our state and city have made unprecedented growth and progress under prohibition and our people seem well satisfied with the change from a wet to a dry state.

POLITICAL PARTY AN ALLY

The Democratic convention of June 4, 1914, included the following section in its platform: "We stand for the strict upholding of the laws prohibiting the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors, in the enforcement of which great progress has been made. We are made glad by the evidence that both drinking and drunkenness and the crime that they bring are rapidly decreasing."

"GREENSBORO CONTINUED TO PROSPER"

A. W. McALLISTER, President and Manager Southern Life and Trust Company

The benefits of the prohibition of the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors have been so great in Greensboro that in my judgment there could not at present be found a corporal's guard in Greensboro that would be willing to go back to the old régime.

At the time that the saloons were voted out, it was predicted that business would stagnate, that rents would go down, that there would be much vacant property, etc. None of these predictions came true. On the contrary, Greensboro continued to prosper, business improved, real estate values increased, and while none of the material disadvantages that were prophesied came true, the community has made vast improvement in every way. There followed a better moral tone, more civic pride, better community conditions, and Greensboro is today a thousand times better place in which to live than it was before prohibition was enacted. I doubt if any man could be found in Greensboro who would advocate a return to saloons.

The blessings of prohibition, material, civic and moral, have been so great, and it has proven to be a community asset of such value that there is no slightest danger or probability of return to the old conditions. Prohibition in Greensboro is a fixture.

MARKED SALUTARY EFFECT

F. M. SIMMONS, Committee on Finance

Having been somewhat prominently connected with prohibition legislation in North Carolina, I have, as a matter of course, carefully studied its effects on the state, and I have no hesitation in expressing the opinion that from every standpoint—economical, commercial, educational and moral—the effect has been markedly salutary to the whole state. The progress of the state during the period of prohibition has been constant and rapid, and I am sure, is satisfactory to an overwhelming majority of the people of the state.

A SOURCE OF FINANCIAL STRENGTH

CHARLES H. IRELAND, President Odell Hardware Company

The effect of prohibition on Greensboro and vicinity has been very beneficial. We have tried every means of dealing with the liquor traffic, and this community has finally arrived at the conclusion that there is only one way to handle it successfully, and that is by its entire prohibition. Of course there were all kinds of predictions as to what would be the effect of prohibition upon business. There is not a single house that was formerly used for the sale of liquor that is not occupied for other and better purposes. Business, instead of decreasing, has increased; taxable property has doubled in value two or three times; school buildings have been practically rebuilt throughout the entire city from the grammar to the high school grades.

The city has a population of about 30,000 people, and it only requires about ten police for day and night duty. There is some bootlegging still, but little by little that is being reduced.

Many of our papers, both daily and weekly, were at first opposed to the enactment of the prohibition law, but they have seen the beneficial effects and are now most earnest champions of the cause.

We have no poor people. Some have much less than others, but we actually have none who can be called poor. Good, and good only, has resulted from the abolition of the liquor traffic. If the question were submitted to our people today, total prohibition would carry three times as strongly as it did, not only in this community but throughout the state. The complete abolition of the liquor traffic is the most effective measure for meeting financial difficulties, and abolishing misery and crime.

Our city has recently returned $20,000 worth of bonds which were voted before the sale of liquor was abolished. The advocates of liquor said we could not pay the interest on our bonds. We have paid it promptly and accumulated a reserve fund to pay off the amount named above and will retire other bonds as they fall due.

Prohibition has been a blessing, and a blessing only, to the state of North Carolina. I know whereof I speak.

PROHIBITION OF IMMENSE BENEFIT TO THE STATE

HON. LOCKE CRAIG, Governor of North Carolina

Prohibition has been of immense benefit to North Carolina. In many districts it has brought peace and prosperity where lawlessness prevailed.

The good effects of this law are apparent on all occasions when the people gather for amusement or instruction.

It has made good citizens of men who would not otherwise be good citizens, and has brought comfort and happiness to many homes.

North Carolina has never known in all her history a period of greater prosperity than that through which she has passed since prohibition was adopted. Real estate in all the cities and larger towns has greatly enhanced in value and every line of business has prospered.

WEST VIRGINIA UNDER PROHIBITION

EFFECT UPON REVENUE, BUSINESS AND THE MAN HIMSELF

HAROLD A. RITZ, Attorney of Bluefield

The most effective argument of any used by those opposed to prohibitory liquor laws has always been the effect that would be produced upon the public revenue. It cannot be denied that the state government, as well as the several local governments, derived a considerable amount of revenue from the sale of intoxicating liquors.

I have heard no complaint from any source because of this loss of revenue. On the other hand, I believe the people are very generally willing to pay any additional taxes which may be necessary to make up the deficiency. We may be assured that the people of West Virginia have sufficient intelligence to appreciate the fact that while those engaged in the business of selling whisky were paying considerable sums in revenue into the treasury of the state, and to the several municipalities, still that revenue was derived from the people, and these same people are willing to pay revenue directly into the several treasuries, instead of paying it in an indirect manner through bar-rooms, where ninety-five per cent of the amount is retained by the man engaged in the liquor business.

The business conducted in the criminal branch of the courts of the state has very materially decreased within the last year, and a very large saving in the expense of administration is the result of this decrease. We may confidently expect that this will continue, and that the saving in future years will be even greater.

As to the effect of the prohibitory laws in this state upon business conditions, my observation is that the only business that has suffered has been the liquor business. My information leads me to the belief that all other business is better than it would have been under license. Under the present conditions, we find that people who formerly, when they had drawn their wages on Saturday evening, went to the bar-rooms, and after paying their liquor bills spent the balance in a drunken debauch, generally lasting over Sunday, now go to the grocery stores and the dry goods stores and buy clothing and provisions for their families; and I have yet to hear of a case where a man who was sober and temperate under past conditions has become an intemperate man under existing ones; so that it follows that the effect upon the business of the state has been to put into the channels of other trade a large part of that money which had heretofore been spent in drunkenness and debauchery. Then, too, a number of the wage-earners of the state, it will be found, have begun to accumulate a little money, and to open savings accounts with which they will be able to meet any untoward conditions that may arise in the future.

From the standpoint of real morality, the most interesting proposition is, has the effect upon the individual been good, bad or indifferent? If a condition existed in the country, the effect of which was to lower morality and to dull the better senses of the citizens, it would be the part of good government to eradicate this condition, even though such action might result in serious depletion of the public revenue, and in substantial interference with business conditions. It must be recollected that the safety of the republic rests upon the individual character of the citizen, and it is as much a part of the business of the government to sustain that character at a high standard by educating the moral and intellectual sense, as it is a duty to raise revenue for conducting ordinary operations of the state. Observation leads me to the belief that within the last year a great number of the citizens of this state, who heretofore were addicted to the use of intoxicants, have become aroused to their moral responsibilities and that the citizenship as a whole is substantially better than it was a year ago. Improvement along this line, however, is slow, and we may be assured that succeeding years will produce more conclusive evidence of a substantial advance in this direction. With an efficient and conscientious enforcement of our prohibitory laws, we may expect in the next generation to see a citizenship free from the taint of moral debility produced by alcoholic indulgence.

Upon the whole, I feel sure that no one who has kept in touch with conditions, and who places his citizenship at its par value, would care to return to the conditions that existed before the prohibition amendment went into effect.

DRUNKENNESS DECREASES

JAMES A. DONOHUE, Police Judge

A comparison of my records for the months of January, 1914, and January, 1915, shows that in January, 1914, the number of arrests for drunkenness was 58; fines assessed, $357.50. In January, 1915, the number of arrests for drunkenness was 22; fines assessed, $235.00.

This I consider a fair comparison. Quite a decrease in the number charged to drunkenness will be noticed from a study of the above figures.

FINANCIAL GAIN

E. HERBERT THOMPSON, St. Luke's Hospital

The city of Bluefield has improved wonderfully both morally and financially since the saloons have been abolished. I am very much gratified to know this to be the condition, as a great many people thought our town would be ruined.

GOOD EFFECT ON THE INDIVIDUAL

D. C. RODINGTON, Grocer

There can be no doubt about the benefits of prohibition. I think one illustration will demonstrate the working of the act for the good of the individual. For several years I have conducted a retail grocery store two doors from a saloon. Among my customers were men who ran monthly accounts. Several of these fellows would come into my place of business, order a ham or perhaps a dollar's worth of sugar, take it away and then go straight into the saloon and trade the ham or the sugar, as the case might be, for drink. These same men, when pay day came, complained that their wives were extravagant. They could not run an account with the saloonkeeper as probably the majority of these customers were railway men and an attachment for a bill, if brought by a saloon man, meant instant dismissal, but not in the case of the grocer. It may be difficult to enforce prohibition but it does a heap of good.

LIQUOR WITHOUT A FRIEND

E. S. PEDIGO

Three months after the closing of the saloons in Bluefield there was a marked improvement in retail trade conditions, especially noticeable in collections and cash sales. From conversations had with other merchants, I feel assured that even if there were nothing to be considered but the business point of view, not one retail merchant would vote to have the saloons re-open, and certainly there has been a very great improvement in the morals of the city.

PROHIBITION A GREAT SUCCESS

H. A. LILLY, President Henry A. Lilly & Co.

While not without natural bias in favor of prohibition, I think I can make an honest and conservative statement of my observations of the working of prohibition in West Virginia after almost ten months' trial.

At the outset I will say that saloons were conducted in Bluefield more nearly in conformity to the law than in any city with which I am acquainted, and the evils of the liquor traffic were not so great in some respects as in many towns. Yet I feel sure that the most pronounced advocate of the theory that "prohibition does not prohibit" would not be bold enough to claim that one-tenth, yea, one-twentieth of the liquor is now consumed in Bluefield that was consumed here when we had license. The appearance of an intoxicated man on the streets of our city is now so rare as to occasion comment, and the moral atmosphere of the city has improved greatly.

The police force has been reduced and the criminal docket is very small compared with days of license.

The buildings formerly occupied by saloons were quickly filled with desirable lines of business; there are fewer loafers on the streets; there has been no diminution of the better class of out-of-town trade, and on the whole I feel safe in asserting that prohibition not only prohibits in West Virginia, but that it is a grand success. I hope the day is not far distant when every state in the Union will prohibit the sale and manufacture of spirituous beverages.

ALL-AROUND BETTER CONDITIONS IN DRY CITY

D. W. HANCOCK, Secretary-Treasurer Bluefield Furniture Co.

This is rather an unfair time to compare conditions that we find in our city since it went dry with those that existed when we had saloons, as a large part of the world is now at war, and this affects the utmost sections. Our company is fully convinced, however, that the working men, as well as all others, are much better off without the saloons; they have nicer homes than they ever have had before.

Visiting one of Virginia's cities a few weeks ago, I called on a furniture dealer with whom I discussed conditions, and he stated that the only money he had made in the furniture business was accumulated the year his city was dry. He believed that when the whole state was dry the people would enjoy much better conditions.

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

Copyright, 1914—The Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio

GOVERNOR LISTER FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

MRS. MARGARET B. PLATT, President West Washington W. C. T. U.

If there were in the good state of Washington any liquor dealers or would-be liquor dealers who fondly imagined that they would, after January 1, 1916, nullify the new prohibitory law and their transgressions would be winked at in official circles, their hopes must have been rudely shaken when a short time ago Governor Ernest Lister, in an address before the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church of Seattle, declared that he would personally see to it that the provisions of the law are strictly enforced as soon as the law becomes effective.

The governor said he had opposed the efforts of the legislature to have the prohibition law again submitted to the people. As the measure had been approved by a large majority of the voters, he saw no reason why it should not be given a fair trial before it was again submitted. Concerning this the governor said in part:

"After January 1 of next year the saloon in Washington will be a thing of the past. If the question ever comes to another vote and the pendulum swings again, it will swing much harder against the liquor interests. The majority of the voters of this state have spoken in favor of prohibition, and I am going to see that the statute is enforced.

"Although my recommendation to the last legislature that an appropriation of $50,000 be made to be used in enforcing the new law was ignored, I will personally see that the law is strictly obeyed. No matter what one's opinion or sentiment before the election, we should all join hands now in enforcing this measure. Every one should be willing to give it a trial."

Will Never Return Saloons

The governor added, as his personal belief, that the people of Washington will never favor the return of the saloons after the prohibition law has been in effect for a few years, but, instead, will vote for the absolute elimination of the liquor traffic.

Regarding the question of substitutes for the saloon, which is at present receiving considerable attention, Governor Lister said: "If you help figure out something that will solve this problem you will be doing a great work."

Following the suggestion of the governor the Men's Club appointed a committee to study conditions that will arise, and prepare to recommend something to replace the saloons soon to go out of business.

THE PRICE OF PRODUCING GOOD CITIZENS

GOVERNOR ARTHUR CAPPER OF KANSAS

[Excerpts from address delivered to Kansas State Bankers' Association]

Every good cause in good time will triumph. Every good system will prove and vindicate itself. Every state, nation or people that deserves to thrive and make progress will go forward irresistibly. This is the universal, never-failing principle. It is the law of God, the great reason back of the modern worship of efficiency, of being fit, the recognition of the fact that we rise or fall as a people according to our customs, our manner of living and our power to think and act rightly. And this is why we find science, reason, common sense, today unitedly condemning and prohibiting drug habits, drink habits and the social evil, because they are the most common, the most destructive influences in the degeneration and in the degradation of humanity.

We have learned already that if we are to perpetuate the state, we must not only produce citizens, but good citizens —men and women of sound bodies, clear minds and clean souls. And this change in our attitude toward the life and health and well-being of the individual is not sentimental nor entirely humanitarian in its source. It is based on the soundest economic principles.

No question which comes before us can be of more vital or far-reaching import than those questions which we have come to group under the general head of public welfare. It is our duty to see that our future citizens are well born; that they are properly nourished, and are reared in that environment most likely to develop in them their full capacity and powers. It is our duty to them, from motives of humanity, to "give them a chance in life," it is our duty to the state, from an economic motive, to develop them into good and useful citizens for the state.

For this reason, the curse of intemperance must be banished utterly from America. Let me say that in my judgment one of the greatest blessings ever bestowed upon the state of Kansas, and the law which is doing more to make useful men and women and to bring prosperity and happiness to this state, is the amendment to our constitution absolutely prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors from one end of the state to the other. It has made better Kansas homes, happier and more prosperous families; it has brought higher standards of living and thinking, of education and intelligence. I hope and believe you and I may live to see the day when the saloon is outlawed from every state in the Union.

Kansas men and women should lead the movement for nationwide prohibition just as Kansas led the movement which abolished human slavery, for Kansas offers the strongest, the most convincing proof of the widespread and far-reaching benefits of a saloonless state.

It has been demonstrated in Kansas that the cities which have received no revenue from vice have a lower tax rate than those cities which in the old days stuck to the last to the license-fining system. In this country our greatest public debt-makers have been the saloon and the saloon license. They have also been our greatest tax on thrift and prosperity. We now have in Kansas the finest retail market in the United States as one of the many benefits resulting from the enforcement of our prohibitory law.

THE GREAT PEACE MEASURE

Ex-Senator Henry W. Blair, who introduced in the United States Congress the first bill for National Constitutional Prohibition, in a recent letter to Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, writes:

"Prohibition is the great peace measure. It is peace itself. It is the greatest of all war measures. All parties and all nations must be for personal and world-wide prohibition."

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES A GREATER MENACE TO PUBLIC HEALTH THAN CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

BITTLE C. KEISTER, A. M., M. D., Roanoke, Va.

The alcohol problem, with its various important relations, is today commanding the attention of the world's greatest minds. Each decade sheds more light and reveals greater and more important data upon this unsolved problem. The best trained minds of the medical profession of the leading nations of the world are giving this subject more thought and deliberate study from a scientific, hygienic and economic standpoint than ever before in the history of the world.

Physiological Effects of Alcohol

Laboratory research has solved the problem so far as the physiological effects of alcohol on the human body are concerned. We know the susceptibility of each organ to the deleterious effects of this narcotic poison. We know of its deadly grasp upon the liver and kidneys in producing two of the most fatal of all diseases. We are familiar with its double action on the respiratory organs, increasing the mortality in pneumonia and pulmonary tuberculosis from thirty to fifty per cent in persons who have long been addicted to its use. We are not unacquainted with its diabolical action on the gray matter of the brain, its paralyzing effects on the great nerve centers, causing incoherency of thought and speech, and we know that while in this abnormal state of mind, should the passion of anger become aroused from the simplest imaginary affront or insinuation on the part of a dear friend, or loved one, assault with intent to kill, is the usual outcome, all of which is due to acute alcoholic poisoning of the intellectual powers of the brain. No less than three thousand homicides of this character were committed in the United States last year by persons who were under the influence of alcoholic beverages.

By careful estimate it is found that there are 195,000 insane persons and over 90,000 epileptics in the United States, thirty per cent of whom owe their hopeless condition to the hereditary effects of alcohol on the brain and nervous system. (Horsley.) It is a well known fact in medicine that all contagions, such as yellow fever, typhoid fever, small pox, pneumonia, tuberculosis, influenza, etc., when contracted by persons addicted to alcoholic beverages, are very much more serious in character, and the mortality reports show that the rate is more than doubled, varying somewhat with the quantity taken and the length of time that each person has been addicted to the habit of strong drink.

In view of these plain and well authenticated facts, expressed and emphasized by such men as Dr. Wm. H. Welch, professor of pathology at the Johns Hopkins Medical College, Dr. Adolf Strumpell, professor of special pathology and therapeutics at the University of Leipsic, Sir Victor Horsley, professor of pathology at the University College of London, Dr. T. D. Crothers, author of a late text book on the subject of alcohol and its physiological effects on the human body, and a score of other distinguished writers who have made investigations on the subject that are equally as important, should we as public benefactors and conservators of the public health sit idly by and allow this monster social parasite to continue its deadly work of exterminating our race and degrading humanity below the common level of the brute?

Consider the increased mortality rate of that dread disease, pneumonia, the "nightmare" of the medical profession, a disease that defiantly stalks abroad in every clime, in every community and in every household, regardless of the ordinary sanitary precautions of municipal health boards. When this monster attacks one of our fellow mortals who has been addicted to alcoholic beverages to any great extent we may consider his doom almost in sight. His chances for recovery are decreased from fifty to sixty per cent, and when complicated by influenza or any other infectious disease the mortality is doubly increased. On account of the pathological conditions of the various organs and vital parts of the body caused by the habitual use of alcoholic beverages, the heart is weakened, the power of resistance is lessened, the pneumo-opsonic index is lowered, the phagocitic power of the white blood cells is destroyed, immunization is hindered, resolution is delayed and as a natural sequence, a horde of deadly micro-organisms swoop down upon the tender tissues and other parts of the lung, swallowing up the little belligerent army of phagocites ere the "death rattle" is heard and the last breath is drawn.

What has been said of pneumonia and its increased rate of mortality in persons addicted to alcoholic beverages, applies with almost equal force to typhoid fever, yellow fever, cholera, small-pox and tuberculosis.

To the Second and Third Generations

In discussing this problem from a public health viewpoint, we should not fail to consider it in all of its relations to mankind, such as the hereditary effects on future generations, as a causative factor in the increased prevalence of epilepsy, imbecility and insanity. We should also consider the cost of maintenance of institutions for the care and protection of this class of helpless humanity, the humility and distress of heart endured by friends and loved ones, the cost of which, is paid only in tears and heart-aches.

Problem of the Feeble-Minded

Public attention throughout the world is at this moment being directed to a solution of the "problem of the feeble-minded," and those experts who have devoted most attention to the subject regard alcohol as certainly one of the most prolific causative factors in that deterioration of brain-tissue which lies at the real root of mental inability and feeble-mindedness of so many human beings.

* * * * *

The question of maternal inebriety is one of national importance, and I may add, of nati nal urgency. A community that cares for the general efficiency of its members will obviously safeguard the health of its women, inasmuch as these, from the very fact of their maternal functions, may either themselves become the sustaining and repairing element in the race, or else may provide many of these very elements of deterioration which are so greatly to be dreaded. With this in view the growth of alcoholism among women calls for legislative action from those who are sincerely interested in the future welfare of the nation. While many people may think it the exclusive duty of the legislature to deal with such problems as these, it is no less the duty of science and scientists to indicate the cause or causes of this state of things, in order that measures which are really preventive and remedial may take the place of those which are at present in vogue.

For more than a quarter of a century I have watched and kept track of this monster parasite of our race. I have also observed other parasitic enemies, such as tuberculosis, pellagra, diphtheria, pneumonia and hook-worm, and when we consider the vast difference in the effect of these evils in the lowering of the standard of our nation mentally, physically and morally, and the great amount of distress of heart to the human family caused by alcohol, to say nothing of the three billion dollars wasted annually in the United States for this narcotic beverage, we are at a loss to understand why our Federal and state governments have not taken more radical steps toward driving it from the face of the earth.

A WEST AFRICAN TRAGEDY

DR. FISCH TELLS HOW NATIVE RACES ARE BEING DESTROYED

In an article by H. H. Johnston, entitled "Alcohol and The Empire," in the May number of The Contemporary Review, there is given the result of certain observations made by Dr. Fisch in two sections of West Africa, one prohibition and the other decidedly non-prohibition.

Dr. Fisch, a medical missionary for twenty-seven years, is a Swiss medical man belonging to that missionary society of Basel which has played such a great part in the education of the Gold Coast natives. For twenty years he was not a total abstainer and struggled long against the enlistment of his personal habits in the temperance campaign. What he saw and experienced as a doctor on the Gold Coast surmounted every other consideration and forced him to be a champion of prohibition. We give below certain portions of his story in his own language.

—EDITOR.

The British Colonial Governments of West Africa are still under the spell of the financial gain which the spirit trade brings, and the struggle against it is carried on with a single mind and energy by only a small number of men. The others regard the spirit trade as harmless or as not very dangerous. Such are not only the brewers and distillers or the shareholders in such concerns, and not only the members of the trading firms which have to thank the spirit trade for a good share of their profits, but they comprise many government officials who have not yet been brought to see clearly in all their seriousness the ills which rum brings upon the colored peoples.

In the last years of my service I took a journey through that district of the Gold Coast in which the spirit trade is forbidden and also through Togoland and I should like to speak of the difference which struck me between the prohibition and non-prohibition territories.

When I first took up the work in Aburi—at a period twenty-seven years ago—spirits did not play anything like so large a part as they do in the life of today. What terrible effects will show themselves twenty years hence when the harvest is reaped of what is now being sown! I cannot think of it with anything but deep pain for what was already to be seen in my time was enough to cause the deepest grief to anyone who had an open eye and had also a warm heart for the condition of the people. The present mischief does not end with the degeneration of the drinker himself. In early days signs of degeneration among the children of the alcoholized showed themselves, and these are becoming still clearer and more distressing. Whilst formerly tuberculosis belonged to the less common diseases, in the course of the last decades it has laid hold of the Gold Coast and to a greatly increased extent. And not this only, but also in the form of tuberculosis which runs a very rapid course. With an unremitting high fever cavities appear in the lungs after a very short time and at the end of one year or two years the patient is dead. No aid can be given. The destruction of tissue goes on uncheckably. For the most part I knew the patients and their parents before them and undoubtedly the decrease of the resistivity of the tissue was to be set down to the indulgence in spirits by their parents—a practice in which they indulged for the most part secretly but which sooner or later became publicly known. It was remarkable how the families of fishermen who, dwelling by the sea, had every chance of remaining healthy, were carried off by tuberculosis. They are almost without exception heavy drinkers.

A similar observation as to the serious increase of tuberculosis is reported from Togo and the Cameroons. All the doctors who have made these observations, associate the increase of this disease with the rapidly-growing use of spirits.

What Matters the Cost to the Brewer?

A second terrible symptom of degeneration is now seen in the previously unheard of incapacity of mothers to suckle their children. By nature negresses are endowed with a quite remarkable ability to feed their children at the breast. I have seen many a grandmother suckle her grandchild and many a mother suckle at the same time her youngest child and her youngest-but-one without either going short. But in the last two decades feeding bottles were increasingly asked for. The people brought condensed milk with them and asked how to prepare it as the mother could not breast-feed her babe. Alcoholism was constantly found in the father and mother of the woman who could not breast-feed her child. To the very great mortality of the children from malaria is now added the quickly increasing mortality of children from artificial foods, from stomach disorders arising from dirty or unsuitably prepared nourishment.

That tissue of the human body which seems hardly calculated to show injurious influences, namely dentine, shows already diminished resistivity among the negroes. In the early years when anyone came to the missionary with carious teeth it was sure to be a mulatto, a class of cross breeds who come weak into the world. If a negro came to have a tooth drawn it was generally a case of a tooth quite sound so far as the tooth was concerned, but one from which the gum had receded, leaving the tooth tottery and requiring no great force to bring it out. Rarely did a negro come with a mal-formed tooth. Carious teeth were never to be seen in negroes. Now that is different. In negroes now not only are milk teeth to be found in a quite decayed state, but also many permanent teeth. The mass of evidence today (which proves that the incapacity of women to suckle their babes and the decay of the teeth are a consequence of the alcoholism of the parents) has grown so much that there can be no doubt as to the correctness of the deduction.

Juvenile Paralysis in Children of Alcoholics

A further serious fact is the appearance of a form of juvenile paralysis. The negroes themselves declared that this ailment had hardly ever before occurred. I saw the male descendants of a drinking family each and all of them suffer in the third decade of their life from this complaint and die within ten years. The family lived within the sphere of my practice and was well known to me. A great many of such patients have been brought to my surgery in the course of the last twenty years. The disease was often very rapid, mental dullness, symptoms of paralysis and assumption of a lying posture and rapid increase of these symptoms and then death.

Idiocy and Epilepsy Result of Drinking

Another remarkable thing was the increase of idiocy and epilepsy. Almost always the intemperance of the father, often that of both parents, could be shown. Both forms of degeneracy were rarities at the commencement of my practice.

Further abuse of alcohol has brought about an alteration in the national character, which we Europeans think far from pleasant. The people who used to be obliging, friendly, and genial have become impudent, self-assertive and unfriendly. It is true there are still many kindly, native folk to be found, but it is remarkable how many impudent, unfriendly faces one sees. For every service, even the smallest, the negro now asks payment, and if it is refused or if one says to him that it was not the custom to ask payment in the old days, he goes off with a scornful laugh. This would have been simply unthinkable in earlier days.

(Continued on Page Eleven)

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

453

Evanston, Illinois, June 17, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

UNPUBLISHED TRIBUTES

Almost all of the letters received at National Headquarters during the last two weeks have had in them a note of sorrow for the loss to the organization of the beloved National treasurer and an expression of personal grief at the homegoing of a valued friend, coupled with words of appreciation of her beautiful, consecrated life.

The attractive group on the cover page is the family of Mrs. P. G. Davidson, for many years the president of the Scandinavian W. C. T. U. of Valley City, N. D. The oldest boy, just twenty-one, has never used liquor or tobacco. The little girl next the baby is named Frances Elizabeth, after Frances E. Willard.

For the significant statements by business and professional men of North Carolina and West Virginia which appear on pages three and four, we are indebted to Mrs. Mary E. Cartland, Mrs. Elizabeth Turner and Mrs. C. E. Fisher, presidents respectively of the local unions of Greensboro, and Asheville, N. C., and Bluefield, W. Va.

The article on page 6 by B. C. Kelster, M. D., on "Alcoholic Beverages a Greater Menace to Public Health than Contagious Diseases," is an excerpt from a paper read before the American Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics, in the city of Washington, D. C.

CONFERENCE OF NATIONAL W. C. T. U. OFFICERS

Responding to the call of the National W. C. T. U. president, the National General Officers have been in conference at Headquarters the past week, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson and Mrs. Sara H. Hoge reaching Evanston on June 8.

At the first meeting appreciative words of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson were tenderly spoken and it was agreed to send, on behalf of the organization, letters of sympathy to the members of Mrs. Hutchinson's family, to Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, to Mrs. Sadie E. Lewis of Hutchinson, Kansas, in whose home the last service was held, and to others who had shown Mrs. Hutchinson special care and helpfulness during the closing weeks of her earthly life.

Upon her sister officers devolved the duty of arranging for the work in the treasurer's office during the remaining four months of the fiscal year of the National W. C. T. U. Mrs. Frances P. Parks was appointed acting treasurer. Miss Katherine Adams, who was given a very hearty vote of thanks and of confidence in her ability, will continue her efficient work as treasurer's assistant.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole was appointed chairman of the Transportation committee for the balance of the year, Miss Adams to be the assistant.

The Seattle convention program, transportation plans, campaign literature and many other questions of great importance were fully discussed.

ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON MEMORIAL LIBRARY

During the illness of the beloved National treasurer, many friends sent gifts of money with which to purchase flowers for her. As the Oregon blossoms were so abundant and the physicians would not permit flowers to remain in her room, Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp suggested using the money for the purchase of books that later could be read aloud to her, and Mrs. Hutchinson seemed pleased with the idea. Because of the dear one's extreme weakness and inability to even listen to messages from friends, only one book was purchased, and Mrs. Kemp writes that it was left at the hospital for others to read. This gave to her the thought of establishing in the Portland Surgical Hospital a memorial library to Mrs. Hutchinson. In the office of the hospital is a book-case which could be filled with books sent by our promoted comrade's friends, and above it would be placed her picture. A book-plate would be used to tell all who handled the books of the beautiful, heroic life of the one in whose memory they were given. Of course a most careful selection of volumes that will cheer and uplift those who read them would be made.

Dr. Nellie Erickson, the superintendent of the hospital, would welcome this remembrance of one whom she learned to love most dearly.

THE SALOON IS DOOMED BUT—

The saloons are doomed. This is frankly admitted by "the trade." Saloon-keepers are voluntarily changing their business, realizing that it is only a matter of a few years at most when they will be forced out. Breweries and distilleries are going into bankruptcy for lack of business. Allied enterprises dealing in articles used by the liquor dealers are reducing their output. Without question the saloon will soon be only an historic relic of a semi-civilized age. But that does not mean that the liquor interests have given up the fight. In a hundred insidious ways they are planning to deceive the public into believing that the saloon—the place where liquor is sold—is the sole evil thing against which the people have been crying out, and that alcohol is a necessity for the health, happiness and prosperity of society.

In only one way can the threatened danger be averted. The people who make the laws must be educated to understand the truly diabolical effects of the racial poison alcohol, upon their children and their children's children.

At the National Conference on Charities and Corrections recently held it was declared, on the authority of experts, that approximately fifty per cent of the prostitution, pauperism, crime and delinquency in this country is committed by feeble-minded persons. From whence come these subnormal and abnormal persons, you inquire. Go to the laboratory of the man of science; ask him, and he will tell you that, in a large majority of these cases, the poison alcohol had through drinking parents affected the tender cells of the young life in the prenatal period and before the child opened its eyes upon this world it had been mentally crippled, so that it never came into possession of the full use of its faculties. Trace the lineage of the feeble-minded child and in the great majority of cases you will find its pitiful condition can be accounted for by the fact that it had an alcoholic father or mother who if not a drunkard was a so-called moderate drinker.

Facts along this line must be burned into the minds and the hearts of the voters of the country if it is to be saved from the curse of alcohol.

A WORD ABOUT RESOLUTIONS

This is the season of the year when all the rampant evils of our social and civic life are being "resolved" out of existence and every good movement is receiving eloquent approval in carefully worded resolutions. The Presbyterians, the United Presbyterians, the Northern Baptists, the Unitarians and other denominations have again reiterated their conviction that John Barleycorn must be exterminated and that the only method of accomplishing the task is National Constitutional Prohibition. The Locomotive Engineers 800 strong have declared undying enmity to alcohol as the foe of efficiency and decreed its death by Federal law. Certain state medical organizations have in strong scientific terms expressed the conviction that the most insidious disease of the body politic is the legalized liquor traffic, and have prescribed for this organic trouble, the organic remedy, National Constitutional Prohibition. Many other equally important organizations, representing in each case a large body of influential voters, have taken similar action. Pronouncements of this character are most helpful to the cause, and should be encouraged and promoted in every possible way. The attention of every convention, conference or assembly should be called to the importance of passing such resolutions, and wide publicity should be given to them. Above all else, every man or woman who has raised a hand or voice in favor of these resolutions should go home to interpret their spirit and purpose in terms of intelligent, enthusiastic activity.

National Constitutional Prohibition Plans for July

Independence Day celebrations afford excellent opportunities for spreading the gospel of National Constitutional Prohibition. If a patriotic meeting is to be held in your community, endeavor to secure a place on the program for a temperance speaker. If no meeting has been arranged, let the Woman's Christian Temperance Union plan a prohibition parade, in which all the churches, Sunday schools, public schools and fraternal organizations shall participate. Let this be followed by a public meeting with a program of patriotic and prohibition speeches and music.

At least twice during the month, the W. C. T. U. would do well to hold in one of its city parks, an out-of-door evening meeting, in the nature of a picnic, inviting to it through the church pulpits and the general press, every citizen of the community. The messages on such occasion should be given by strong-voiced orators and singers. To such a meeting many would be attracted who might not attend an indoor gathering.

July is primarily the month for distributing prohibition literature. Sentiment for our cause may be made by giving wide circulation at Chautauquas, picnics and every kind of summer gatherings to short, breezy, live leaflets on total abstinence and prohibition.

Many influential organizations hold their conventions in July. At all such meetings occurring in your vicinity, urge the passage of a resolution in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition.

FIGURES WHICH CONVINCE

The Internal Revenue department of the United States has just made public certain figures that will be most valuable for campaign purposes. They definitely and conclusively dispose of one of the stock arguments of the liquor interests, namely, that prohibition does not prohibit and that with the growth of dry territory the consumption of liquor increases. Notwithstanding indications on every hand to the contrary, journals of the liquor trade, anti-prohibition platform orators, and writers of liquor publicity articles in the general press reiterate the statement that legislation has not had and never will have any effect upon the amount of liquor consumed. The statistics just given out by the Internal Revenue department, to the effect that the internal revenue tax on spirituous liquors is decreasing at the rate of a million and a quarter every month disposes most effectively of these falsifications. Much unnecessary argument might be saved by carrying in one's pocket or hand-bag these convincing official figures, ready to produce whenever the question arises. Without a word the individual who raises the objection that prohibition does not lessen the consumption of liquor can be silenced by this documentary proof that would be acceptable in any court of law.

UNITED COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS PASS STRONG TEMPERANCE RESOLUTION

The Iowa grand council of the United Commercial Travelers of America, at its recent annual convention, without a dissenting vote, passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, The order of United Commercial Travelers of America, being the only fraternal organization in our glorious country having as one of its principal tenets that of temperance; and

"Whereas, There is a mighty wave of temperance and sobriety sweeping over this 'land of the free and the home of the brave;' therefore be it

"Resolved, That the sixteenth annual convention of the grand council of Iowa, United Commercial Travelers of America, held at Sioux City, Ia., go on record as indorsing this great temperance movement as exemplified in our ritualistic work."

ARTICLES ON LIQUOR QUESTION IN CURRENT NUMBERS OF LEADING MAGAZINES

"National Prohibition," by L. Ames Brown, in Atlantic Monthly for June.

"A Saloonless Nation in 1920," by John S. Gregory, in The World's Work for June.

"A Teetotal War," by James Middleton, in The World's Work for June.

"Why the British Shy at Total Abstinence," in Current Opinion for June.

"Alcohol and the Empire," in Contemporary Review for May.

"The People vs. Alcohol," by Lewis Edwin Theiss, in The Outlook for June 9.

"When Drink Declared War on England," by Canon Yates, in Sunday School Times for June 5.

NO ALCOHOL FOR SOLDIERS

According to news received by the North American of Philadelphia, the military authorities at Berlin have issued an order forbidding officers of all ranks and private soldiers from visiting any of the bars and wine rooms or restaurants and cafes in that city. The order points out that the purpose of the furlough granted the officers and the men is physical recovery and recuperation and that this purpose will be seriously retarded if not defeated by visits to these places.

PERSONAL LIBERTY VS. EFFICIENCY

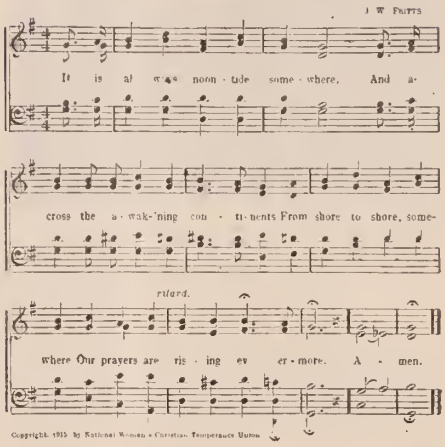
The keepers of the saloons across the street from the Wisconsin Steel Company, Chicago, waited vainly at the noon hour, May 27, for the usual crowd of customers from the big plant. The reason for their disappointment was to be found in the signs displayed in conspicuous places in the big workshop, which read:

"Employes of this company are not permitted to visit saloons during the noon hour. Violation of this order will be at the employe's risk."

"We cannot have the men's efficiency reduced by drinking during working hours. The men themselves will soon appreciate the value of the new ruling," declared the head of the safety department of the company.

The prohibition committee of the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church in session in Memphis, Tenn., on May 22, endorsed the movement for nationwide prohibition and urged that no candidate opposed to prohibition should receive the support of church members.

Time of Prayer—Noontide



RETROSPECTION

(Found in the Bible of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson)

"Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee."—Deut. 8:2

He was better to me than all my hopes,
He was better than all my fears;
He made a bridge of my broken works,
And a rainbow of my tears.
The billows that guarded my sea-girt path
But carried my Lord on their crest;
When I dwell on the days of my wilderness march
I can lean on His love for the rest.

He emptied my hands of my treasured store,
And His covenant love revealed,
There was not a wound in my aching heart
But the balm of His breath had healed.
Oh! tender and true was the chastening sore,
In wisdom, that taught and tried,
Till the soul that He sought was trusting in Him,
And nothing on earth beside.

He guided by paths that I could not see,
By ways that I have not known;
The crooked was straight and the rough made plain
As I followed the Lord alone.
I praise Him still for the pleasant palms,
And the water-springs by the way;
For the glowing pillar of flame by night,
And the sheltering cloud by day.

And if to warfare He calls me forth,
He buckles my armor on;
He greets me with smiles, and a word of cheer
For battles His sword hath won;
He wipes my brow as I droop and faint,
He blesses my hand to toil.
Faithful is He as He washes my feet
From the trace of the earthly soil.

Never a watch on the dreariest halt
But some promise of love endears;
I read from the past that my future shall be
Far better than all my fears.
Like the golden pot of the wilderness bread
Laid up with the blossoming rod,
All safe in the ark with the law of the Lord
Is the covenant care of my God.

—A. S.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 21—Loyal Temperance Legion Day (Birthday of Anna A. Gordon)
JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

JEAN B. WYLIE, National Superintendent

I hope the state superintendents are busy endeavoring to advance the good work we have undertaken in behalf of the Bible in our public schools. Open doors can be found for addresses on the subject and for the distribution of literature at missionary conventions, teachers' institutes, chautauqua assemblies, young people's conventions, W. C. T. U. conventions, parlor meetings, and so forth. In fact, there is really no end to the opportunities to present the work.

An encouraging event occurred in the city of Pittsburgh, Pa., a few months ago. In the Central Y. M. C. A. chapel of this city a conference was held, the object of which was to devise some plan of united action to safeguard the right of the Bible to a place in our public schools. The conference consisted of five representatives from each of the following associations: The International Sunday School Association, the International Reform Bureau, the National Education Association, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Order of Independent Americans, and the National Reform Association. By a unanimous vote the following resolutions were adopted:

"This conference declares its profound conviction that the welfare of our country depends upon the moral character of its citizenship, that the public schools are charged with the responsibility of caring for the moral as well as the intellectual training of our young people; and that the moral standard of the Bible, accompanied by the sanctions supplied by its divine Author, is essential to such training.

"We therefore very strongly affirm our position in favor of the use of the Bible in all our schools as the basis for moral training.

"We pledge ourselves to active effort in favor of a movement to secure such legislation as will safeguard the Bible against exclusion from the schools in all the states in which sufficient safeguards do not already exist."

By the blessing of God upon our united efforts we may expect great success.

The National superintendent's plan of work is in the hands of the state superintendents who may cull from it whatever is adapted to their respective states and local communities. Superintendents should not fail to send reports on their way by September 20. As the National Convention will be held October 9-14, reports must reach the National superintendent a little earlier than usual. I hope this year will show marked progress in the work.

DELAWARE COUNTIES HOLD CONVENTIONS

The twenty-eighth annual convention of New Castle county (Del.) W. C. T. U. assembled at Red Clay Creek Presbyterian church, May 27. The attendance was large, many coming in carriages and motors from the surrounding country. Mrs. S. M. Donnell, county president, presided. The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. L. W. Emerson, a former president of the Wilmington union. Speakers for the meeting were Madame Layyah Barakat, National evangelist; Miss Christine Tinling, National lecturer; Mrs. Lena Messick, president of the Delaware W. C. T. U., and Mr. A. R. Spald. During the year Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, Mrs. Ruth Frances Davis Stevens, Miss Rose Davison, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and Miss Mary F. W. Anderson have toured the county in the interest of W. C. T. U. work. The unions of New Castle county have furnished twenty-one rooms in the new Delaware Industrial School for Girls. Kent and Sussex counties have also contributed very generously for this good enterprise.

Kent county held a very interesting and largely attended convention at Frederica late in April, with Miss Rose Davison, National organizer, as speaker. Mrs. Lena Messick, state W. C. T. U. president, presided, owing to removal from the state of Mrs. Lucretia Dame and the illness of the vice-presidents. Mrs. Ella D. Cordray was elected president to succeed Mrs. Dame.

The Sussex county convention was held in Milford, April 6. Miss Lillian Cade was re-elected president. A very helpful and interesting program was rendered, with Madame Layyah Barakat, National evangelist, as convention speaker.

We record here the names of comrades and friends who have recently passed to the higher life:

MRS. JENNIE VOORHIES, Plymouth, Michigan, who has faithfully served the W. C. T. U. for many years. As president of the local union for twenty-nine years, president of the district for ten years, state treasurer for five years and state vice-president-at-large for nine years, her life was intimately interwoven with the progressive stages of temperance work in her native state.

FELIX T. MCWHIRTER, the husband of Mrs. Luella McWhirter, a prominent official of the Indiana W. C. T. U. for many years, and the father of Mrs. Susan M. Ostrom, National superintendent of the Sabbath Observance department. Mr. McWhirter was a lifelong generous and devoted friend of the temperance cause and a leader in the Prohibition party.

MRS. MARY P. COOKE, Mansfield, Mass., a charter member of the local union and the first vice-president since its organization twenty-five years ago.

MISS ETTA LOFBURG, Pierson, Fla., beloved recording and corresponding secretary of the local W. C. T. U.

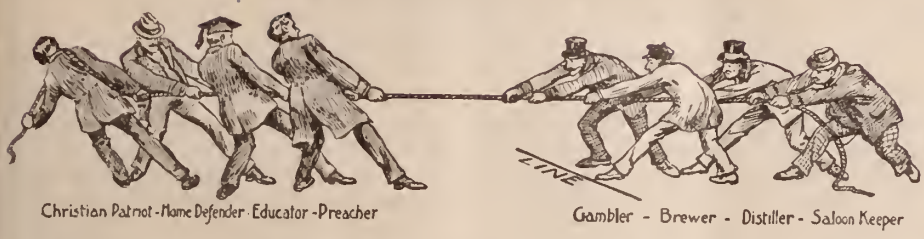
MRS. MARTHA J. MASONHEIMER, Port Allegany, Pa., for thirty-five years an active member of the W. C. T. U., having served for twenty-five years as the Mercy superintendent in Lawrence county, Pennsylvania.

One of the first memorial services for Mrs. Hutchinson was that held on June 3 by the union of Ottawa, Kansas, where Mrs. Hutchinson was personally known and loved.

SHE MADE THEIR WORK EASIER

"We are glad for women like Elizabeth Hutchinson. What she did in Kansas has made our work easier," writes Frank M. Stahl, superintendent of the Kansas State Temperance Union. "No greater eulogy was ever given to anyone than that given by the Great Teacher when He said, 'She hath done what she could.' Officer, lecturer, teacher and citizen, —Mrs. Hutchinson hath done what she could."

THE TUG OF WAR



Every Voter must Line up

Copyright, 1914, The Standard Publishing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Why "John" Is Behind the Bars for Life

CHAPLAIN KIPLINGER TELLS THE STORY

"I have investigated the case history of each of the 226 men serving life sentences," says Orville L. Kiplinger, chaplain of the Indiana state penitentiary, in his address on "The Re-making and Mending of Men," "and I know that ninety-six per cent of the men serving life sentences in the Indiana state prison for murder, rape of child, and under the habitual criminal act trace their crimes directly to liquor as the prime or contributing cause." And then he continues:

"Let me tell you the story of just one such case. There is a boy named John serving for life. His father was a carpenter who lived in eastern Illinois. The father got the contract for building a barn in Indiana. He decided to bring his son John with him to work on that barn. They would load up their tools and drive over and stay until the job was done.

"So they began work on this barn, and in the evenings, and particularly Saturday nights, both father and son went into the little town, where they made some undesirable acquaintances. After the barn was completed, one Friday night, the father said, 'Now, John, we are all through and tomorrow we will hitch up and go see mother.'

"When they reached the little town the father said, 'I have to see some people here; you will have to wait for me.'

"John said, 'All right. I will go into the park and wait.'

"In a little time a young man came by whose acquaintance John had made. He said, 'Where are you going?'

" 'Going home to see mother; we are all through now.'

" 'Where is your father?'

" 'Oh, he had to go and pay the lumber and hardware bills.'

"The young man then invited him to come and have a drink, but the boy said, 'Not today. I am going home to see mother.'

" 'All right,' he said. 'I will wait with you.'

"By and by another young fellow came along and invited the two to come for a drink. But they would not, and he sat down with them. And then another came and suggested they all go to the saloon, and they finally drew him into the saloon. Then, after drinking, they went into the pool room, where an argument arose, and during the quarrel that boy John killed a man.

"That night, instead of seeing mother, he was in a lockup, and now occupies a cell, where he has to remain for the rest of his natural life. Can't you see if there had not been a saloon in that little town that boy would in all probability have reached home and mother that Saturday night?

"I have investigated the case history of each of 226 men serving life sentences. Careful examination revealed the fact that 212 of the 226 crimes have much the same connection with liquor as that boy John. Except for liquor 212 of 226 murderers now serving life sentences in prison might now be living at liberty and free from the foul stain of murder. I tell you, if you want to do one thing that will do more than any other one thing to abolish crime from this land of ours, you wipe liquor OUT OF EXISTENCE and you will have accomplished the desire of your heart."

A WEST AFRICAN TRAGEDY

(Continued from Page Seven)

Demoralization in National Character

The demoralization of the national character has made itself evident in great increase of crime. Although the English government does not punish for every little offense, yet the houses of correction are over full. And every year a considerable number of executions take place to expiate murders committed for the most part under the influence of alcohol, but which often had been premeditated. Cases of unnatural crime have increased astonishingly; they were almost unknown before.

Increase in Immorality

Sexual diseases have become many times more frequent. They have actually opened a tavern where women are present to incite to drinking, and gonorrhea has become terribly frequent.

Now, I had the privilege four years ago of taking a journey into the prohibition district of the Northern Gold Coast and Togo. This gave me an opportunity to note the difference between the prohibition and non-prohibition districts. * * * When we invited a chief to say to his people that I was a doctor and should be happy if I could give advice to the sick or provide them with medicine or free them from their suffering by an operation, the reply was usually made that there were no sick among his people. This was of course not actually the case, but it struck me that the one or two tuberculous persons whom it was my fortune to see, showed quite different forms of that ailment from those to which I had been formerly accustomed in the Gold Coast Colony.

I did not see any carious teeth. And that mothers should suckle their children was quite a matter of course and seemed to admit of no exception. Now these people live in a land very differently situated from that of the actual Gold Coast. It needs a respectable amount of labor to gather from the poor soil in these sun-stricken plains the means to support life, quite a different thing from what it is upon the deep soil in the primeval forest land of the Gold Coast. There is no valuable export produce to be collected as on the rich Gold Coast. Yet they are strong, brawny, enduring people, these tribes in the hot and much poorer north. If one looks at the young people of Dagbamba, of Konkomba, of Moba, even of low-lying Kasasi and Tsehakosi, one's heart smiles over this fine people, whose carriage, whose build, whose whole appearance give one the impression of a people with enviable reserve of general health and power of resistance to disease.

While in the spirits-drinking Gold Coast in South Togo there are so remarkably few old people to be seen, in the north one comes across a considerable number of venerable, white-haired, negroes. The tribes are friendly and sociable in character, unless quite recent occurrences have made them suspicious or have frightened them. We see them still, the strong, well-built fellows; how they run in front of our wheels in order to show us the way; how they would stop like lightning to cast aside a stone upon which we might have bumped; with what endurance they kept pace with us and with what pleasure they entered into the kindly jokes which we ventured to indulge in with them; how their faces lighted up when we smiled kindly at them—something so entirely different from what we met with away on the Gold Coast where we had so often come to see gloomy countenances!

The shameful slave trade has been succeeded by the no less shameful trade in spirits. Which of the two brought the greater injury to the negroes? The slave trade has cost life to hundreds of thousands truly enough; it tore families apart and robbed men of their freedom; but it has not, however, caused degeneracy in their children. Yet by alcohol the people is poisoned at its very source, and inherits the severest menace to its future.

SHE QUIT

But It Was a Hard Pull

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did an Ohio woman. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not, and could not, quit drinking it, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around, had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally I asked myself what's the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I now like Postum better than the coffee.

"One by one of the old troubles left until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my house work and have done a great deal beside."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage Instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

RIGHT ABOUT FACE!

DAWLEY PALMER

"How are you, Hale? Scarcely knew you. Haven't seen you for years."

"How are you yourself, old boy? I'm feeling fine." The two young men expressed their liking for each other in an eager handshake. "What brings you down here, Leonard? Just visiting the family?"

"No; a little business proposition. I intend going in with these salesmen who are stopping at the Hermann House. They seem to be making money and are having a pretty good time as well. They've been treating me fine—spicy little suppers, interesting games, and all that. But tonight I dine with my folks, for a change. Going my way?"

"Yes, a few blocks. We'll walk on together."

"Hale, I'm curious. What keeps you in a stupid old town like this?"

"Well, I came back home to help with the erection of a gymnasium for the young people. It has a swimming tank, lunch room, reading-room, and all that, and I am now in charge. Like to have you drop in often while you're here, Len, and enjoy yourself," urged Hale cordially.

"Ho, that's it! Thank you. A little tame for me, I fancy. I've got over that; that is, I enjoy a different kind of good time now. Tastes change, you know."

Hale realized that his one-time intimate friend now moved in a circle other than his own. He spoke impulsively: "Tell me, Leonard, just what kind of life you enjoy most. I should like to feel that I know the needs of all young men."

"Well, your own efforts are, no doubt, sincere and are possessed of merit, but usually you fellows are entirely too straight-laced. Now, in the company where I've been employed, every man, from the president down, takes his drink occasionally. You are shocked when a man takes a single drink, or puts down a dollar on a race or game. You think he is all wrong, when, nine times out of ten, he is as fine a fellow as you'd care to meet—of the highest integrity, and successful as a business man, jolly company, too." Leonard spoke with conviction.

"Len, your man is all that in spite of drink. The sterling qualities of manhood are not easily dethroned, but they are not fostered by the liquor habit. We see young fellows every day who play ball, or excel in the 'gym,' who are valuable friends and who get a great deal out of life, but who never take a drop of intoxicating liquor. They're successful men, too. But, on the other hand, we observe men with an equally good start, get into the kind of company that leads them to drink. 'Good sports' they call themselves, but they simply go all to pieces."

"My dear Hale," expostulated Leonard, "please don't misunderstand me or think for a moment I'm going to the dogs because I prefer these 'good fellows' to your kind. Your temperance views are all right for those who haven't strong wills or good judgment—who don't know where to draw the line."

"Then you do acknowledge that a line should be drawn somewhere, don't you? Why not draw it in the first place, and play safe? Do you remember Harvey Simpson's father, and how we boys used to watch for him Saturdays to see how straight, or, rather, how crooked he would walk? We'd make fun of him, poor man, and how angry he'd get? Yet, you'll recall, Simpson was once a senator, a lawyer whose cleverness and knowledge of law might well have been feared in any court-room. He doesn't notice small boys now. Len, you'd never know him. He's a derelict, that's all, and it's nothing in the world but tippling that started that man of brains on the down grade!" Hale's earnestness showed his deep concern in the stand taken by his old chum. By this time they had reached the corner where their ways parted.

THE TRIUMPH SONG

ANNA A. GORDON

Air: "Ancient of Days"

Lord God of hosts, to Thee we give the glory,
To Thee we lift our hearts in grateful praise;
To all the world we tell the wondrous story
Thy love has blest us e'en since Crusade days.

Far flung the line of battle now before us
Still lead us on, Thou Conqueror Supreme;
Thy name is on the banner waving o'er us,
Our path is lighted by its shining gleam.

Lord God of hosts, we plead for our great nation;
Grant her the vict'ry over sin and wrong;
Perfect in law and built on truth's foundation,
Then shall we sing with joy our triumph song.

"Hale, you're eloquent, and I can see you're the man for the position you occupy. I wish you luck, and I know you wish me the same." Leonard extended his hand.

"I do, sincerely. Good-by, old boy. I'm glad we met and had this talk, even though we don't agree. Friends always, Len."

"Yes, indeed. Goodnight, Bob. I'm going cross-lots to save time."

The heart of Robert Hale was heavy with foreboding concerning his friend. It was his firm belief that drink could ruin any man. Leonard had excelled in school, he remembered, and his wit and humor had won him friends everywhere. He was finely equipped for a noble life.

He had not walked far when he heard a man's cry.

"Hello! Hale! Hale!" came sharply upon his ears. "Come quick!"

It was Leonard's voice. Hale plunged into the vacant lot to find his friend staggering blindly through the weeds. Only a faint glimmer of light came from a distant street lamp.

"I've stumbled over a body here! Murder, most likely!" cried Leonard, in trembling voice. "I could have sworn nothing could shake my nerves, but this—I—I—"

"By Jove! This is awful!" agreed his friend. "What shall we do? We're a block from the road, and it's dark as pitch. Wait! I'll put my ear over his heart. Len, this man isn't dead; he is breathing," announced Hale, after a moment's examination.

"If not gone, he's surely near it," declared Leonard. "We can't leave him here, of course. Let's carry him out to the street lamp and see what's the trouble. Whew! Such vile clothes, and the man's fairly covered with mud!"

Together the young men lifted the unconscious form and carried it to the street—an unpleasant task enough, for the pitiable creature reeked with stale liquors. The dim, flickering light revealed his shabby clothing and unshaven face.

"How strange a coincidence!" thought Hale, as his gaze recognized the unfortunate man.

"It's horrible to fall so low!" murmured Leonard; then in a horrified whisper, "Is it Harvey Simpson's father?"

"Yes. He lives in the tumble-down cottage over there, where a light burns in the window. Hadn't we better take him home?"

The two sturdy young men carried home the weak old man, and a thinly-clad, elderly woman with sad eyes met them and thanked them in a weary tone, then listlessly closed the door.

"Hale, what do you suppose made things happen as they did tonight?" stammered Leonard as the two walked away, arm in arm.

"Well, Providence seems to have a way of brightening up our eyesight when it grows a little dim."

For a time they walked along in silence. It is much easier for one to see that he is wrong than to confess it. Leonard was rapidly reviewing the events of the past hour.

"Bob, all the preaching in the world could not have taught me what this incident has," at last came the admission. "I honestly thought you were a prude to point out danger to me, but now I see you were right."

"I never meant to preach to you, Len, but I do like you so jolly well that I surely could not let you run the risk of the possible wreck of your strong body and brilliant mind without a word of warning. I dared not think of the harm even a little drinking would bring upon you; that was all."

"It's all right, and I feel completely turned about and marched the other way. Bob, I believe I owe something to poor old Simpson. Of course, he doesn't know what he has done for me, but who knows what he has saved me from? And say—I have a happy thought! I'll go around and see the old man—often, I mean—and let him know I'm his friend. I might help him, don't you think?"

"It's worth trying, I'm sure."

"Yes, I ought to try to repay him for what he has done for me—and here's my oath now that I'll say goodby to the tippling habit before I know it any better. Why, that glimpse I had of old Simpson tonight will haunt me forever!"

A strong grip of friendly hands sealed the promise.

West Virginia Under Prohibition

(Continued from Page Four)

MORAL, SPIRITUAL AND ECONOMIC BENEFITS MANY

W. W. McNEAL, President McNeal & Co., Staple and Fancy Groceries

Business has improved in every particular since the closing of the saloons on the first of last July. We are selling more goods for cash at both of our stores, here and at Keystone, and in the credit end collections are better. Men have a higher regard for their obligations. Their credit rating has advanced perceptibly. Bankruptcy proceedings were almost as numerous in one month in this city as they have been during the entire nine months with no saloons.

The moral, spiritual and economic benefits will only be measured in the great beyond. A casual glance at conditions on our streets proves beyond cavil the great moral uplift. Ladies can now safely go about unaccompanied. Attendance at church makes one realize beyond measure the deep spiritual benefit of prohibition. A visit to the homes of the past habitual drinker discloses the fact that the family has more provisions and of a better grade. The wife and children have better clothing and plenty of it.

I desire to thank the noble W. C. T. U. women for the great victory that they have won. Through sunshine and rain, through sorrow and disappointment, they kept up the fight. May the brightest jewels adorn their crowns!

PEOPLE INVEST THEIR MONEY IN HOMES

W. C. HOUCHINS, Manager Houchins Land Sales Co.

I find conditions are better today in every respect than they were before whisky was voted out. It is useless at this time to talk on this issue from a moral standpoint, as every intelligent person is in a position to know about the immorality and suffering which whisky brings to every community in which it is sold. During the campaign for prohibition in West Virginia in the year 1912, the whisky interests fought the prohibition issue from a business standpoint, and it is of this side of the question I wish to speak.

For months throughout the entire United States there has been considerable depression in business, and I have had occasion during this period of time to visit a number of cities, both in this state and in adjoining states where whisky is being sold. I took it upon myself to inquire in different cities as to just what extent the depression was being felt in each particular wet and dry district. I found that the business men in the dry states would always speak in a more hopeful way. I have thus had occasion to learn of the benefits that are being derived since the people decided to drive whisky out of the state.

Being a real estate man, I am in a position to know whether or not the sale of whisky affects the growth of the business of the city. Prior to our campaign of 1912, the whisky interests claimed that our store-rooms would be vacant, that hundreds of our dwelling houses would be tenantless, and that real estate in general would suffer great depreciation. On the contrary, I find that the store-rooms and dwelling houses are now all occupied, and that there are hundreds of applicants for houses whose wants cannot be supplied at the present time. I wish to state that during this period of depression in business I am selling homes to men whom I have known for a number of years, and who are not making as much money as they were two or three years ago. These men are not investing in homes money which was saved by them when times were better, but are making small cash payments, and seem willing to assume the obligation of large monthly payments, which, in most instances, will induce the owner to sell.

I think it would be well for men in states which contemplate having a prohibition election, to study the conditions as they now exist in West Virginia, if they are hesitating about voting the dry ticket because they fear it would hurt their community from a business standpoint. I think such an investigation would be convincing.

FAIR TEST NOT YET POSSIBLE

EDWIN MANN, President First National Bank

On account of conditions, a fair test has not been made yet in regard to what effect closing the saloons has had on the business in this city. I will say, however, that in my judgment business will be better than it was under the old system. Conditions will be further improved when the prohibition law of the state of Virginia goes into effect next year.

DRUNKEN MEN AND LOAFERS RARE SIGHTS

H. E. MATTOX, Manager Summit City Shoe Company

We as a business firm are, of course, opposed to licensed saloons or the sale of intoxicating liquors, and we feel that we can give an honest and fair statement of our observation of the effect that prohibition has had in West Virginia after a short trial.

We feel safe in saying that saloons were conducted in Bluefield as nearly in conformity to the law as in any city in existence, and the evils arising from the liquor traffic were not as great as in many other cities of similar size. We also feel no hesitancy in stating that there is not one-tenth of the liquor consumed in Bluefield that was consumed here under license.

The appearance of a drunken man is so rare that it causes comment. The moral effect prohibition has on our city is wonderful. Practically no loafers are on the streets.

The criminal docket is very small compared with the days of the licensed saloon, and the police force has been greatly reduced. In other words we now have a city to be proud of. It is almost a certainty that the better people would not have license under any consideration.

The buildings formerly occupied by saloons were soon filled with desirable lines of business. We find people buying goods and paying for them who were not able to do so when we had license. Prohibition in West Virginia does prohibit and it is proving a great success.

We hope to see the time when every state in the Union will fall in line with Old West Virginia and enact laws whereby neither the manufacture nor sale of intoxicating liquors will be allowed.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

Popular Books Every White Ribboner Should Read

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. The story of a man's fight for National Prohibition told most cleverly—a book destined to arouse the reader to his responsibility—a book with a definite purpose.

Price, $1.25. Postage 12 cents.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. The story of a little cripple boy, who by serenity and triumphant faith, not only finds his way to sturdy young manhood, but casts about himself a beautiful influence for good. A wealth of humor, pathos, romance, skillfully blended with a great moral lesson.

Price, $1.35. Postage, 12 cents.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, the life story of Jack London.

Price, $1.30. Postage 12 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Ill.

ENCOURAGING LAW VIOLATION

The Alabama Supreme court in a sweeping decision recently upheld the law enacted by the legislature forbidding any newspaper in the state to advertise liquors and also forbidding outside papers to carry liquor advertisements into Alabama. A number of adverse criticisms of this decision have appeared concerning which the Seattle Sun (Independent), says:

"Naturally, this has resulted in a tremendous howl from the subsidized liquor press of the country on the dangers of censorship, some going so far as to suggest that if this state has a right to say that outside newspapers shall not carry any special form of advertisements they may desire to carry it would also have the right to say what kind of news and other reading matter should be eliminated from their columns; the result would be the suppression of the freedom of the press, one of the fundamental principles of Americanism.

"They seem to overlook the fact that the sale of liquors in that state is unlawful; that these advertisements are published, whether in the newspapers of the state or of other states immediately contiguous, and sent into that state for the sole purpose of inducing the readers thereof to buy liquor; in other words, the sole purpose of these advertisements is to induce the citizens of Alabama to do an unlawful thing. This being true, the state would be sacrificing its own sense of self-respect and encouraging its people to become law-breakers if it did not do everything within its power to prevent its citizens from becoming parties to an open conspiracy against its laws. If every state in the Union which has prohibitory statutes would follow suit, it would not be long until such advertisements would be banished from the columns of our newspapers and magazines.

"The action of the state of Alabama in passing this measure necessary to the enforcement of its prohibitory laws robs the liquor people of their most efficient method of nullifying the prohibition law, and it is not surprising that the liquor interests and their newspaper cohorts are doing all in their power to bring about a legal nullification through a court decision. They realize that this is the last stand in their fight against an enlightened and aroused public opinion."

On June 1, Center township, Ind., including the city of Danville, and Boone township, including the town of Royal Center, voted dry.

WE WELCOME YOU!

The new leaflet written by Anna Adams Gordon.

For use at ports of entry and among foreigners coming to our cities. Issued in—

English,
German,
Italian,
Norwegian,
Swedish,
Spanish.

A cordial welcome printed in attractive style, with the United States flag in colors.

Price, per fifty, 15 cts.; per 100, 25 cts.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Illinois.

WANTED—Several honest, industrious people to distribute religious literature; $60 a month sure. Nichols Co., Box 14, Naperville, Ill.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

PROSPERITY POST CARDS

In English and Foreign Languages

WHAT EVERY MERCHANT KNOWS
PROSPERITY STATISTICS
OF INTEREST TO TAX PAYERS
OF INTEREST TO BANKERS
OF INTEREST TO WAGE EARNERS

This series is now ready in English, German, Italian, Norwegian, Swedish and Spanish.

Price, per dozen, 15 cents; per 100, $1.00

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Illinois.

JUST FROM THE PRESS
NEW MUSIC

PROHIBITION'S IN THE AIR

Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A stirring quartet for mixed voices. Price, 10 cents.

THE WORLD-WIDE JUBILEE

Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A demonstration song to be used either by the Y. P. B. or the W. C. T. U., consisting of solo, mixed quartet and chorus. Price, 15 cents.

PRAYER SONG

Written by J. W. Fritts. The words, "It is always noontide somewhere," so familiar to all, beautifully harmonized, to be sung immediately following the noontide prayer. Price, per fifty copies, 15 cents; per hundred, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
EVANSTON, ILL.

AMONG OUR WORKERS

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, National organizer and lecturer, was a speaker at the conference of Methodist young people of the Fayetteville (Tenn.) district held at Flat Creek. Her address on "Prohibition," caused great enthusiasm among her hearers and was accorded long and hearty applause.

Mrs. Cornelia T. Hatcher, president of the Alaska W. C. T. U., gave a wonderful impetus to the work on her recent visit to Petersburg. She conducted a short service at the Sunday school hour and in the evening addressed a good-sized audience. She met with the local white ribboners in an institute, where plans for the coming year's work were discussed and the following officers elected: president, Mrs. Paula Jorgenson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Kate Duryea; recording secretary, Mrs. Manghild Lee; treasurer, Mrs. Louisa Laro.

The Will county (Ill.) institute under the direction of Mrs. William Perkins, county president, was held in Joliet, May 25. Delegates from all but two unions attended and presented good reports of the work of the past six months. Six county superintendents discussed the topic, "How to Help the Work of the Unions." Other features of the program were an explanation of the child labor question by Owen Horrigan and Miss Ruth Schweisser, both high school pupils, a march and song by a class of girls and boys, and two temperance solos by Miss Anna Willcocks.

One of the group meetings of the Otsego county (N. Y.) W. C. T. U. was held in the M. E. Church at Cherry Valley, May 28. Delegates from Richfield Springs, Roseboom, Springfield Center and Cherry Valley unions were present and took part on the program. The county president, Mrs. Georgia L. Weaton, was most helpful throughout the meetings, her address, "Is the W. C. T. U. a Necessity as an Organized Factor?" being especially inspiring. Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, state Y. P. B. secretary, enlivened the program greatly. A medal contest and exercises by the children were enjoyable features of the occasion.

PROHIBITION INCREASES VALUES

From the Report of State Auditor of North Carolina

Value of Real Estate:
1908	$287,459,602.00
1914	360,079,952.00
Value of Personal Property:
1908	$174,926,792.00
1914	213,324,039.00
Taxes Collected:
1908	$ 2,616,439.62
1914	4,683,875.13

Mrs. Josie E. Sizer, Wisconsin state organizer, was highly successful in work done recently in Viroqua and throughout the county. She spoke to a large and enthusiastic Sunday evening audience at the Methodist church, and Rev. E. J. Cooke, pastor of the church, cordially commended her work. Twelve new members were added to the local enrollment.

The Jefferson county (O.) institute held at Richmond with Mrs. A. C. Davis, county president, in the chair and Mrs. J. Frank Smith, state worker, as leader, was a profitable and inspiring occasion. Instructive addresses and papers, with music and readings interwoven, filled the day-time hours and "The Story of the Roses," a reading by Miss Rose Davison, National organizer and lecturer, was given at the evening meeting.

The annual convention of the Santa Clara county (Calif.) W. C. T. U. held at Palo Alto, the little city that adjoins Stanford university, entertained as guests Mrs. Sara J. Dorr, president of the Northern California W. C. T. U. and Rev. Bridelle C. H. Washburn, National organizer and lecturer and state worker, who gave addresses and were most helpful in the conduct of the meetings. Mrs. Mae M. Whitman, National superintendent of Temperance and Labor, was also a welcome delegate to the convention. Mrs. Dorr told of the work at the state legislature and the passing of a law which somewhat improves the former scientific temperance instruction law of the state. On account of removal to Madera county, Mrs. Ina A. Orvis, who for many years has been a faithful worker in Santa Clara county, was succeeded by Mrs. Anna A. Beal, president of the Palo Alto union. The county has fifteen local unions and conducts thirty-two departments of work.

Lake Cruises for Your Summer Vacation

7 Days Trip — 5 Days Trip

The Magnificent Steel Steamship "Minnesota" to BUFFALO (NIAGARA FALLS) and RETURN — $40 Including Meals and Berth

via Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, and historic Mackinac Island, viewing both ways by daylight the beautiful scenery of the Detroit River, and St. Clair Flats, stopping at all points of interest. 12 hour stop at Buffalo allows plenty of time to see Niagara Falls. During season leaves Chicago every Thursday at 11:00 a. m.

The Elegant Steel Steamshp "Missouri" to KAGAWONG, ONT., AND RETURN — $34 Including Meals and Berth

via Mackinac Island, The "Soo," St. Mary's River, North Channel, and the shores of Manitoulin Island, stopping at all points of interest. During season leaves Chicago every Monday at 4:00 p. m.

S. S. "MISSOURI" also makes special trip each week to Oneksma, Frankfort, Glen Haven and Glen Arbor leaving Chicago Saturdays at 4:00 p. m.

Our line of steamers offers you the greatest possible opportunity for real rest and genuine pleasure. You can go for a full week or only a few days as you prefer.

The Elegant Steel Steamships
"MANITOU"—MINNESOTA"—"MISSOURI"—"ILLINOIS"

offer unrivalled service between Chicago, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Bay View, Harbor Springs, Mackinac Island, Ludington, Manistee, Onekama, Frankfort, Glen Haven, Glen Arbor, Leland (via Auto or connecting steamer from Glen Haven) and Traverse Bay Ports, Sault Ste. Marie, and Buffalo, connecting with all lines for Lake Superior and Eastern Points. For illustrated folder and book of tours address

Northern Michigan Transportation Co.

J. C. CONLEY, Gen. Pass. Agt., North End Rush Street Bridge, Chicago, Ills.

Hints
for Commencement Gifts

BOOKS—

LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, $1.50.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS, Frances E. Willard. Price, 60 cents.

HOW I LEARNED TO RIDE THE BICYCLE, Frances E. Willard. Price, 40 cents.

WHAT FRANCES E. WILLARD SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 75 cents.

WHAT LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS SAID, Anna Adams Gordon. Price, 50 cents.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC, William E. Johnson. Price, $1.00.

COMPENDIUM OF TEMPERANCE TRUTH, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO GIRLS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

TALKS TO BOYS, Eleanor Hunter. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TELL STORIES TO CHILDREN, Sarah Cone Bryant. Price, $1.10.

THE TYRANT IN WHITE, (Anti-Cigaret story). Price, $1.00.

A SINGULAR LIFE, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. Price, $1.25.

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. Price, $1.37.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. Price, $1.47.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, Jack London. Price, $1.42.

A MODERN MADONNA, Caroline A Stanley. Price, $1.50.

JEAN MITCHELL'S SCHOOL, Angeline Ray. Price, $1.00.

LOIS MORTON'S INVESTMENT, Eva Murphy. Price, $1.35.

TWO, Edith Smith Davis. Price, 40 cents.

FRECKLES, Gene Stratton Porter. Price 60 cents.

All books cloth bound. Prices include prepaid carriage.

SOUVENIR SPOONS

W. C. T. U. TEASPOON, showing Crusade Church in bowl.

REST COTTAGE TEASPOON, Rest Cottage in bowl.

Spoons made of sterling silver. Price, $1.50 each.

REST COTTAGE SOUVENIR

A TERRA COTTA PLAQUE, cottage in bas relief, hand carved and hand tinted. Price $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

Evanston, Illinois

The liquor interests are said to be trying to thwart the production of the photo play entitled, "Prohibition." This play is in five acts and a prologue, and covers 6,000 feet of film. It is said to have been sanctioned by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, William J. Bryan and Richmond P. Hobson, all of whom appear on the screen.

CONNECTICUT'S STATE GRANGE AND OTHER INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATIONS ENDORSE PROHIBITION MEASURE

Special Correspondence

Never in the history of Connecticut have the temperance forces been so active as during the past few months. Not only organized temperance societies, but the young people's societies of the churches, the Y. M. C. A., clubs and even individuals, are feeling the tremendous advantage of concerted effort. And the liquor forces are not happy! The Flying Squadron spent some time in the state, giving three days to Hartford. The meetings were well attended, good reports were given in the local papers and prohibition was the main topic of conversation heard on the street. The liquor men evidently took notice, as half page advertisements appeared in the principal papers, giving "eminent opinions" on the value of beer as a food and all the other familiar "arguments."

The liquor interests are using the press of the state freely and cleverly—all of which evidences that they are hard hit.

One particular advertisement had as a head line, "We Simply Ask the Men to Stay Sober," the article reading, "Our factory rules demand 'sobriety' not 'abstinence,'" etc., but no name of factory or firm appears in the subject matter, and the papers printing it had the article labeled "advertisement." Several of the "movie" theaters have featured "John Barleycorn" recently.

The general assembly is now in session and a goodly number of bills tending toward the curtailment of the drink traffic are before the excise committee. The resolution for a prohibition constitutional amendment is before the legislature but as yet has not been acted upon. The state grange, 18,000 strong, has endorsed the amendment, as have numerous other societies.

Mrs. Addie B. Parsels has been in the state, speaking for the W. C. T. U. in Hartford and surrounding towns. While in Hartford she was invited to attend and address the Interchurchmen's luncheon, an honor never before accorded a woman. She spent some time in Middlesex county and, in addition to other good things, organized a new union in Ivoryton. As a result of her several meetings many new members were secured in that county. Membership contests have been held very generally by the unions throughout the state and substantial gains are reported. The Meriden union has forty new members as the result of a three weeks' campaign. Hartford union counts twenty-two new names. Bridgeport has gained ten; Middletown, nine; Putnam, six.

Following Mrs. Parsels came Mary Harris Armor, who delivered about a dozen addresses in the state. Large audiences welcomed her and large collections attested the genuineness of the welcome. While in Hartford she also was invited to attend the Interchurchmen's luncheon and address those present. The ministers and laymen who attend these luncheons have received a vision from a new viewpoint.

The Meriden union is doing effective work through its weekly column of live temperance news and views, published in one of the city dailies. In practically all of the cities, full reports of W. C. T. U. meetings are published.

To raise money to carry on its work, the members of Willimantic union sold a barrel of salt, and they also cleared over $100 by securing subscriptions for a magazine. Other unions have replenished their treasuries by selling Larkin's goods, holding rummage sales and food sales; and some of the members of the Hartford union earned a dollar apiece for the treasury. Some glad day victory will surely come to Connecticut—surely come.

You Can Weigh Exactly What You Should

You can—I know you can, because I have reduced 32,000 women and have built up that many more — scientifically, naturally, without drugs, in the privacy of their own rooms.

You Can Be So Well!

—if you only knew how well! I build up your vitality—at the same time I strengthen your heart action; teach you how to breathe, to stand, walk and relieve such ailments as

Nervousness, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Indigestion, Etc.

One pupil writes: "I weigh 83 pounds less, and I have gained wonderfully in strength."

Another says: "Last May I weighed 100 pounds, this May I weigh 126 and oh! I feel SO WELL."

Won't you sit down and write now for my interesting booklet? You are welcome to it—it is FREE. Don't wait, you may forget it. I have had a wonderful experience and I should like to tell you about it.

Susanna Cocroft

Dept. 37, 624 Michigan Boulevard, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is a college bred woman. She is the recognized authority on the scientific care of the health and figure of women.

"Drink causes poverty. Members of the St. Vincent De Paul Society of the Roman Catholic Church in their charity work find that most of the cases of poverty are occasioned by drink," asserted Bishop J. M. McGavick of the diocese of Chicago, at the recent convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Illinois.

"I believe the best work that a man of God can do to promote temperance is to pray for it, remembering that prayer is like faith—it needs good work to make it effective," said Bishop Paul P. Rhode on the same occasion.

The economic argument for total abstinence is having strange confirmation. The Boston papers last month, in chronicling the departure of the schooner "Orleans" for West Africa, noted that the underwriters who insured the cargo required that every man who signed the articles as a sailor for the voyage should also sign the pledge. The reason? The cargo was two hundred gallons of rum! But who will underwrite the poor blacks whom that liquor will brutalize?—The Christian Herald.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

THE NEW SUBSCRIBER

Have you, OLD SUBSCRIBER, secured the NEW SUBSCRIBER for the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL and thus become a member of the Win One Circle? If not, will you at once find the NEW SUBSCRIBER so that your name may be enrolled in the 1915 Win One Circle and the NEW SUBSCRIBER have the paper she has needed and ought to have had long ago?

Many are wanting and asking for the information to be found in THE UNION SIGNAL, but do not know where to find it. OLD SUBSCRIBER, you know and can help someone to this information by getting that NEW SUBSCRIBER.

WIN ONE CIRCLE, 1915

274. Mrs. Ella C. Washburn, Westbrook, Conn.
275. Mrs. Anna H. Roland, New Holland, Penn.
276. Mrs. Charline M. Abbott, Rochester, N. H.
277. Mrs. Orrel Moody, Rixford, Penn.
278. Mrs. O. N. Starr, Calhoun, Ga.
279. Julia E. Jones, Wyoming, N. Y.
280. Mrs. C. W. Scott, Elizabeth, N. J.
281. Mrs. B. B. Ward, Montclair, N. J.
282. Mrs. E. M. Chamney, Lawrence, Kans.
283. Mary M. Carton, Clear Lake, So. Dak.
284. Mrs. Ella C. Washburn, Westbrook, Conn.
285. Mrs. Annie Ely, Ithaca, N. Y.
286. Frank Van Gelder, Ithaca, N. Y.
287. Mrs. M. E. Gould, Chattanooga, Tenn.
288. Mrs. G. W. Bird, Clear Lake, So. Dak.
289. Mrs. Minnie E. Rice, Pierce, Neb.
290. Mrs. H. A. Davis, Canandaigua, N. Y.
291. Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, Canandaigua, N. Y.
292. Mrs. J. A. Lamb, Palmetto, Fla.
293. Mrs. H. L. Platt, Syracuse, N. Y.
294. Mrs. J. W. Akin, Wichita Falls, N. Y.
295. Mrs. Martha McCarty, Delaware, Ohio.
296. Mrs. Addie Montgomery, Ivanhoe, Okla.
297. Mrs. J. O. Berryman, Kingsville, Texas.
298. Miss Harriet Brown, Seattle, Wash.
299. Mrs. W. T. Townsend, Cape Charles, Va.
300. Mrs. J. W. Castles, Cape Charles, Va.
301. Mrs. S. E. Johns, Norwich, N. Y.

POPULAR POSTERS

18x24 INCHES

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

DRINK ROBS THE WORKINGMAN

The average drinking man in the United States spends 50 cents a day for liquor.
This takes from his income $182.50 a year.
The drinker requires more medical attendance than does the non-drinker.
The drinker is more often rejected by insurance companies than is the non-drinker.
The drinker contracts more debts than does the non-drinker.

The Drink Habit costs the workingman—through his liquor bill, his debts, his medical attendance, and his loss of profit in an insurance policy—the sum of 250 dollars a year.

The average wage-earnings in the United States are:

In the North Atlantic States...$479
In the South Atlantic States... 335
In the North Central States.... 503
In the Western States (where mining is profitable)..... 607

The average wage-earnings for the whole United States per year, per man, are 477 dollars.

Deduct 250 dollars, the sum per year paid by the drinking man for liquor and its attendant miseries, from 477 dollars, the average wage-earnings per year of the workingman, and—

There remains for the family of the workingman who drinks, little more than starvation, bankruptcy or crime.

Railroads and Alcoholic Liquor

Why Railroads Do and Must Prohibit the Use of Alcoholic Liquor by Their Employees

Science teaches that Beer, Wine, Whisky, and all Alcoholic Drinks have a Special Attraction for the Brain. They first poison the centers of Self-Control. These become shaken, staggered, then partially paralyzed.

Effect of ALCOHOLIC POISONING on the Brain

The Drinker ceases to have true knowledge of what is going on

He becomes inaccurate, unsteady, and

A DANGEROUS MAN

Alcohol creates a craving for more of itself. It dulls the senses, blunts the judgment, impairs the vision, and thus opens the way for

ACCIDENTS

No man whose Brain is poisoned, whose Self-Control is weakened, whose Vision is impaired, and who has a constant Craving for more Alcohol, can be entrusted with the lives and property of others

THE PUBLIC DEMANDS SOBER RAILROAD MEN

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE

EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

302. Mrs. A. E. Williams, Kansas City, Kans.
303. Mrs. T. A. Roberts, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.
304. Mrs. Emma Willcutts, Greentown, Ind.
305. Allie J. Kester, Millville, Penn.
306. Mrs. F. M. McConnell, Helena, Mont.
307. Mrs. A. W. Wilkinson, Oakland City, Ind.
308. Mrs. O. C. Badger, Ticonderoga, N. Y.
309. Mrs. Maud Chaffee, Silver Springs, N. Y.
310. Miss Emily Taft, Collins, N. Y.
311. Mrs. J. R. Butler, Schenectady, N. Y.
312. Mrs. Bertha R. Barcus, Towanda, Penn.
313. Maude A. Romberger, Sayre, Penn.
314. Mrs. W. G. Harrison, Duluth, Minn.
315. Mrs. Alice D. Bass, Lima, Iowa.
316. Mrs. Myrtle Hobley, Farmland, Ind.
317. Mrs. Annie L. V. McGee, Pomona, Calif.
318. Mrs. Melissa Smith, Eureka, Ill.
319. Mrs. M. R. Beach, Galesburg, Mich
320. Mrs. C. B. Buell, East Hampton Conn.
321. Mrs. Mary J. Jobson, Portsmouth Va.
322. Mrs. I. D. Van Valkenburg, Johns town, N. Y.
323. Mrs. Alice L. Bates, Glasco, Kans
324. Mrs. Charlotte I. Marshall, Weeping Water, Neb.
325. Mrs. Margaret E. Gibbs, Newton N. J.
326. Mrs. Mary E. Howe, Apalachin N. Y.
327. Mrs. May M. Kirkman, Cleburne Texas.
328. Mrs. Jennie Carr Pittman, Prescott, Ark.
329. Mrs. Goldene Douglas, Campbellsburg, Ky.
330. Mrs. Lena B. Lasell, Waubay, So Dak.
331. Mrs. Mary E. McDowell, Friendship, N. Y.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., JUNE 24, 1915 | No. 26

Let our infinite tenderness and sympathy for "Christ's little ones" lead us to keep close to them and to set for them in all things an example safe to follow. Let us win them as workers for our cause today, and as well equipped leaders of the temperance reform in "the glorious tomorrow of National Constitutional Prohibition."

Seven More Minnesota Counties Outlaw Saloons, June 14

Thirty-two Counties Have Entered Dry List Since March 1

Since the Minnesota county option law became effective March 1, thirty-two counties have voted out their saloons. This number includes the seven counties which voted dry on June 14, thereby closing 68 saloons, making a total of 299 saloons closed to date. Minnesota previously had seven dry counties, three through local option elections and four through the terms of Indian treaties. This makes a total of thirty-nine dry counties in the state. In sixteen more counties elections have been set for the near future. Seven vote on June 21, four June 28, four July 12 and one July 19. The greatest victory so far was that of June 7 when nine counties went dry. One particularly gratifying result of the June 14 election was the dry vote in Marshall county which will terminate the activities in North Dakota of four brewery distributing agencies situated in Oslo on the Red river. So far only four counties have voted wet.

The Webb-Kenyon Decision by United States Supreme Court

While many newspapers have led the public to think that the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the Webb-Kenyon law as affecting a certain Kentucky case is adverse to prohibition, as a matter of fact the court did not pass upon the constitutionality of the law nor its construction, and the decision really affects only the Kentucky case.

This case arose out of the importation of liquor into Whitley county, Kentucky, by express, for the private use of a citizen of that county, which is dry. The express company was sued under the Webb-Kenyon law. The case was appealed to the United States Supreme Court, which found that the law cannot be made to prohibit shipments, by individual order, of liquor to be consumed by the buyer and not offered for sale, unless the state into which the shipment is made has a law making it a crime for a person to drink liquor or to have it in his possession. The evidence showing that the liquor expressed to Whitley county was to a citizen of that county, who bought it only for private use and used it only in that way, and that Kentucky is without a statute defining such a purchase and use as crime, the Supreme Court held that it was bound to accept the decision of the Kentucky Court of Appeals that the Webb-Kenyon law was not applicable.

This decision is no surprise to the advocates of the measure, and is in accord with the interpretation of Senator William S. Kenyon, one of the authors of the law, given at the time of its passage by Congress. Senator Kenyon said on that occasion: "The shipment of liquor into a prohibition state for personal use will not be prohibited under the Webb Act, unless the state in question has a law which debars the personal use of liquor. The measure is solely directed against liquor designed for illegal use."

Since the decision by the United States Supreme Court, the attorneys for a liquor company interested in the West Virginia case (also under consideration by the Supreme Court) are reported to have asked leave to file copies of a law passed by the West Virginia legislature on May 24, 1915, providing that it was unlawful to ship into the state liquors for private use. They urge that the West Virginia law previous to that time did not prohibit such transportation and that this amendment is unconstitutional.

Governor Brumbaugh's Committee Forbids Liquor at Independence Day Banquet

"No liquor of any kind shall be provided at the expense of the state at the banquet to be given by the state at the Hotel Adelphia, in Philadelphia, on July 3," is the text of a resolution passed, and unanimously adopted, June 14, by the commission appointed by Governor Brumbaugh to co-operate with other committees in arranging for a Fourth of July banquet.

The North American commenting on the significance of the action as indicating the trend of sentiment, says:

"Coming as it does from a committee of men representing the state government and by one sweeping blow striking liquor from the menu of a banquet at which probably 500 of the nation's most prominent men will participate, the action stands, it is believed, without precedent. The ruling also is absolutely final as the state commission has complete control over the arrangements for the banquet which is to be paid for out of funds appropriated by the last legislature."

From a representative viewpoint the banquet is expected to be one of the most notable ever held in Philadelphia. Either the Secretary of War or Secretary of the Interior will probably represent President Wilson, and Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford, with other men of national prominence, are among the expected guests.

Physicians Commend Action of New York's Board of Health

The action of Dr. Sigismund S. Goldwater, commissioner of health of the city of New York, in inaugurating a campaign against alcohol is being favorably commented upon by members of the medical profession.

"If Dr. Goldwater is going to try to better the health of the people of New York by a war on the use of alcohol, he will have all the support I can give him. It is a most commendable undertaking," said Dr. William M. Polk, former president of the New York Academy of Medicine. "This is the biggest thing ever undertaken by any health officials," stated Dr. Haven Emerson, deputy commissioner of health. "It is a novel fight —health against alcohol—and one that should receive many recruits. I think the people of New York will appreciate what Dr. Goldwater is trying to do for them. Health regulation now does not remove enough causes. We are going after the greatest cause of human ills."

W. C. T. U. Co-operates with State Board of Health

The growing interest during recent years of the state board of health of New York in the liquor evil has been noted by temperance workers with gratification.

One of the chief charts in an exhibit which has been recently prepared by this board shows the relation of alcohol to disease. At the present time it is furnishing to certain papers of the state of New York articles under the title of "Health Hints," which deal with alcohol as a menace to the health of the individual and the community.

For a number of years the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has co-operated with the health department, this co-operation beginning at the time Dr. William A. Howe was in charge of the contagious diseases work and asked the assistance of white ribboners in the appointment of women physicians who would present to audiences of women the dangers of contagious diseases. Five of the eleven appointed were named by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The state department of health agreed to furnish these women physician speakers free of charge wherever the Woman's Christian Temperance Union would make appointments for them. One year the Woman's Christian Temperance Union had them on the programs of all their institutes. The result was that all of these women physicians became white ribboners before the season was over. Through this co-operation there came to the board of health the realization that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is a strong agency for the promotion of health.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, the president of the New York W. C. T. U., who takes occasion to visit the office of the state board of health whenever in Albany, says she has noticed a marked change taking place in the attitude of that department. "When I talked with Dr. Williams, an official of the board, two years ago," said Mrs. Boole, "he remarked that there was a difference of opinion as to whether or not the use of alcohol by parents had any effect on the unborn child. Upon a recent visit a few weeks ago he not only emphasized this truth but said that if the facts were known the use of alcohol had very much to do with the alarming number of deaths among men in middle life and was responsible for many of the cases of kidney disease, pneumonia and also premature old age. He expressed the hope that before long there might be special emphasis placed on the study of alcohol."

Among recent "Public Health Hints" prepared by the department of health and published in the general press one notes such warnings as these:

"Alcohol is one of the most powerful allies of the pneumonia germ and even moderate drinkers show a much higher death rate from this disease than do abstainers."

"Alcohol is perhaps the most important of all factors in bringing on pneumonia and hardening of the arteries, and the other diseases of later life."

"Chancellor Lloyd George estimates that the abolition of vodka will increase the efficiency of the Russian people by from thirty to fifty per cent, and experienced physicians agree that he is right."

Above All Things Refrain From Drink

Prominent among the warnings given in the "official strike order" issued to the employes of the surface and elevated railroads of Chicago previous to the strike which tied up the car lines of that city last week, were the following:

"Do no act that will discredit you with your organization or the association, and above all things remain away from the saloon and refrain from drink until the strike has been settled."

100 Milwaukee Saloon-keepers To Abandon Business

It is reported by the Philadelphia North American that more than 100 saloonkeepers are to go out of business on July 1. This information is said to be contained in the annual report concerning saloons sent to the city council.

"CHRIST'S LITTLE ONES"

Above, below, around and about the many new duties and responsibilities of today, is an undercurrent of love and prayer, constant as the tides, for our W. C. T. U. work among the children. May this issue of The Union Signal, largely devoted to a profoundly important phase of our many-sided work, strongly appeal to each white ribboner, and to every local union in our great society, most aptly termed the "society of organized mother-love."

Deeply stirred by the despicable efforts of the heartless liquor traffic to "create appetite" in the on-coming generation, intelligent through science concerning alcohol's cruel curse upon the innocent child and upon the babe unborn, may no white ribboner ever be found guilty of neglecting our blessed avenues of activity on behalf of the boys and girls. Use every "bright shining lever of God" to lift the children of our nation into the light of a clear and steady brain, a pure heart, and an untrembling hand. Teach them, and share with them, the joy of service as Young Campaigners for Prohibition, in local, state, and national campaigns. Freely circulate our none-such temperance paper for the young folks, The Young Crusader, subscribing for it for all the children in your neighborhood, and placing it in the hands of public school and Sunday school teachers everywhere. Encourage and aid our efficient and devoted leaders, National, state and local, in all the great departments of work affecting child life.

Let our infinite tenderness and sympathy for "Christ's little ones" lead us to keep close to them, and to set for them in all things an example safe to follow. Let us win them as workers for our cause today, and as well equipped leaders of the temperance reform in "the glorious tomorrow of National Constitutional Prohibition."

Anna A. Gordon

IN DEBT TO FOUR GENERATIONS

DR. IRA J. LANDRITH, President Ward-Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn.

Every worth-while man is in debt to at least four generations: To be worthy of his parentage by making his father and mother proud that they bore him; to be a blessing to his own generation by so living and so serving his age that the men and women around him will be stronger and better for his having touched their lives; to be so helpful to his own children and to the children of his neighbors and to the worse than parentless children that never had a chance, that these children shall grow to morally, physically, mentally, stalwart manhood and womanhood; and, finally, to see to it that the next generation, the unborn babies of his own children, shall have worthy parents, well reared and well trained for the sublime parental office. A wide and alluring life mission is that four-fold program, but no smaller or narrower one is worthy of a child of a king.

And yet everybody knows that to the extent that the saloon prospers, every part of this program fails. Let a man become the victim of drink and his father must be ashamed of him, his own generation is injured by him, his children suffer irreparable injury at his hands, and his children's children are in deadly peril from the weak and wicked inheritance that his own vicious slavery bequeaths.

"The Children's Happy Day"
Legioners of Minneapolis, Minn.

Every young man or young woman has the right, aye, the duty, to be able to say "Yes" every time opportunity issues invitations to higher places of service and usefulness; but only the physically strong, the adequately educated, and the morally upright can thus accept the invitations of opportunity. The saloon, when it succeeds with its victim—and its greed for victims is never satisfied, and the brightest and best of our youth are fed into its insatiable maw—always destroys health, shortens the school period of the youth and blackens his character.

The dearest and most vitally necessary institution on earth is the happy, wholesome, God-honoring home in which husbands and wives live in mutual confidence and love and where little children are trained in the fear of the Lord. Give us only such homes and all other problems of society and government will be solved. But no home is immune from assault at the hands of the liquor dealer. He gloats in ghoulish glee over crumbling family altars, laughs in fiendish delight around the ruins of erstwhile domestic trust; dances in Satanic joy over the grave of dead family devotion and fireside peace, and rejoices, like the willing slave of evil that he is, over every despairing shriek of the little children whom his cupidity, aided by our national stupidity, has robbed of their birthright of love and training and care.

The saloon has sinned away its day of grace, and the sovereign people of this republic have decreed that it shall die. Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength let us set as the day of its execution July 4, 1920, the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock in search of what we cannot yet have until we declare our independence from the liquor traffic—personal and religious freedom.

—Excerpt from address delivered as Flying Squadron speaker at Racine, Wis.

TEMPERANCE AFFAIRS IN GEORGIA

MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD, Treasurer Georgia W. C. T. U.

Recently by a large vote the Georgia bankers assembled in convention in Savannah, decided henceforth to banish all intoxicating drinks from their annual banquets. The Macon Telegraph, a leading daily which advocates temperance but not prohibition, had the following to say, editorially:

"The truth about this booze business is that the greatest factor of all has set its face against it—and that is the growing respect for personal efficiency in body and mind on the part of the American man, young and middle-aged.

"The Georgia bankers know that a man who drinks wines and liquors to the slightest excess, even at the dinner table, where it is least harmful, cannot be one hundred per cent efficient the next day. The slight lassitude, the mild headache which comes from the least excess, takes a good two hours to wear off. Those two hours are not producers to the full.

"The bankers know that if their employes toss off a half dozen before going to bed they won't have average efficiency the next day, that their 'peak load' won't be reached until too late in the day to get the best results; the bankers know the same thing applies to themselves as executives, and so they've officially cut it out. Fine."

The movement which resulted in this salutary action on the part of the bankers, while only a crystallizing of their sentiment in favor of efficiency, was started by Mr. W. S. Witham, president of one hundred Georgia banks, philanthropist, temperance leader, teacher of a large Sunday school class for men, honorary member of a number of local W. C. T. U.'s, and last but not least, well remembered by those attending the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Atlanta.

W. C. T. U. Activities Here and There

The Fulton County Medical Association, to which many of Georgia's leading physicians belong, has announced its decision to eschew wines and all intoxicants from its banquets.

At the state live stock convention at Quitman recently, a notable occasion—there were 2,000 visiting automobiles, a lengthy parade, an exhibit of fine animals, industrial, civic and floral floats, etc.—the W. C. T. U. made a creditable showing. It conducted a nicely arranged rest room, from which temperance literature was distributed and the two W. C. T. U. floats were greeted with rounds of applause by the immense crowds. A beautiful white float decorated with a "National Constitutional Prohibition" ensign and filled with fair young girls who sang, "It's a Short Way to Prohibition," attracted attention. Then came the city water wagon upon which rode boys costumed as Iceland and Russia, while John Bull was seen clinging to the back. Uncle Sam rode a mule tied to the wagon which bore the words, "Democratic Party Dry, 1916."

Pupils of the music school at Bremen at the close of the annual recital gave an interesting temperance cantata called, "On To Victory." This was well received.

The Allie Kennedy L. T. L. of Macon celebrated the eighty-second birthday of Madame Yajima, president of the Japan W. C. T. U., with a fine program bearing upon the temperance work in the "sunrise kingdom." The children, dressed in gay kimonos and wearing chrysanthemums, and carrying Japanese parasols and fans made quite a hit. A group of little girls with large dolls, in lieu of Jap babies, fastened to their backs won special honor. Little inverted Jap parasols were the receptacles for the contributions to the Anna A. Gordon Missionary Fund.

Among the resolutions passed by the Philathea-Baraca Association meeting recently in Rome, Georgia, is the following: "That we endorse the principle of total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the state and nation, and that in our meetings for the year we will make a systematic study of the religious and scientific reasons for this principle." This resolution was offered by Mrs. J. W. Calloway, the successful teacher of the large Tabernacle Baptist Baraca class, also the wide-awake president of the Bibb county and Macon W. C. T. U. From Mrs. Calloway's class within the past three years seven young men have gone into the ministry, two of them volunteers for the foreign field. Mrs. Calloway is a most enthusiastic, thoroughly consecrated Christian—a white ribboner who operates the "do everything" policy. The resolutions were printed in leaflet form and widely distributed.

At the time the prohibition oratorical contest was held, in Few Hall, Emory College, Oxford, the room was decorated with large runners reading, "National Constitutional Prohibition," and "We Shall Win," and with many flags big and little. The W. C. T. U. prize of five dollars offered by the Covington union was presented to Percy C. Bray, by Mrs. W. C. Clark in a graceful and fitting speech. Music was furnished by the Young People's Branch.

Georgia is on the qui vive regarding the bill for the abolishment of "near beer" saloons and locker clubs to be introduced at the legislature soon to convene. A great convention of Georgia's representative prohibitionists from all churches and church societies, the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. and other organizations, was held in Atlanta, June 22. The principal addresses were given by Chief Justice Samuel D. Weakly, author of Alabama's splendid prohibition laws, United States Congressman E. Y. Webb of North Carolina, well known for his efforts for National Constitutional Prohibition, Mrs. T. E. Patterson, president of the Georgia W. C. T. U., Dr. L. G. Hardeman and Mr. W. S. Witham, prominent Georgians, Dr. G W. Eicheiberger, president of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, and others.

W. C. T. U. Week at Chautauqua, New York

The great week of the Chautauqua (New York) season for white ribboners is to be July 19-23, inclusive. It will be devoted to special meetings, in charge of Mrs. Mary B. Wilson, who will be the presiding genius at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters for the summer.

Temperance topics will be presented for the Woman's Club by Mrs. Ella M. George, Mrs. Lulu L. Shepard, and Miss Margaret Irwin. Special phases of temperance activities will be presented by Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, and Mrs. Addie B. Parsels. It is hoped that Mrs. Frances W. Graham, our National musical director, can be present.

Twice a week during the regular season, meetings will be held at Kellogg Hall by the unique union known as the Willard Federated union, composed of women from all parts of the country.

Do not fail to call the attention of your friends who intend to visit Chautauqua or its vicinity to the fact that the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union maintains handsome headquarters at Chautauqua, New York, the birthplace of our great organization, and urge them to attend the meetings and to call at Kellogg Hall, where they will receive a cordial welcome from Mrs. Wilson, and will be shown the beautiful Frances E. Willard memorial window, the gift of our royal-hearted comrades, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Martin.

THE LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION---ITS MISSION

MISS MARY B. ERVIN, National General Secretary L. T. L. Branch

Young Campaigners in California Dry Parade Marching from Depot to Pavilion for County Day Celebration

When the Woman's Christian Temperance Union received its divine commission to go into all the world and teach the truth concerning alcohol and all narcotic poisons to every creature, in no particular was its faithfulness to the trust committed to it more apparent, nor its influence more far-reaching than in the establishment of its splendid training school for boys and girls—the Loyal Temperance Legion.

To-day the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is reaping a mighty harvest in return for its efforts expended in this direction. Eternity alone will reveal the work and the worth of the noble-hearted white ribboners who have given of their time and their talents, and best of all, of their mother-love in instilling into the hearts and minds of the youth of our land the principles of purity and sobriety and in firing them with a righteous zeal and enthusiasm.

Ah! yes, the Loyal Temperance Legion has a mission. We find its imprint today on the lives of boys and girls and men and women everywhere. It has manifestly proven itself a valuable recruiting station for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and is universally recognized as one of the most potent factors at work in creating prohibition sentiment, which is to-day sounding the death knell of John Barleycorn.

To-day we hear the voice of our promoted leader, Lillian M. N. Stevens, still appealing in those memorable words to the white ribbon hosts throughout the length and breadth of our land: "I wish the Woman's Christian Temperance Union might solemnly pledge itself to still greater activities for work among the young; work with such radiant possibilities; work that insures the perpetuation of our organization and its never-ending hostility to the legalized liquor traffic."

Truly the Loyal Temperance Legion is a work of "radiant possibilities"—work which is counting not only for time but for eternity. As a training school for practical reformers and as an all-round character builder no organization is superior to the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Some one has said, "Character is not a thing of favor or chance, but is the result of continued effort in right thinking." The Loyal Temperance Legion, because of its strong triple pledge, because of its splendid course of study and because of its many departments of useful work, constantly keeps before its members high ideals and lofty principles with the result that strong, noble characters are erected.

We find to-day in the ranks of the Young People's Branch and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union many who received early training in the Loyal Temperance Legion and who through it have been peculiarly inspired and equipped to take up the work of those who have "kept the faith" for so many years.

A Loyal Temperance Legion, under the guidance of the mother union, does increase the interest and influence of that union and does "insure the perpetuation" of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Can any local union which believes in the sanctity of its calling, and which realizes fully the blessings, present and future, accompanying our children's work afford not to mother a Loyal Temperance Legion?

The products of our Loyal Temperance Legion training are men and women, who to-day are filling places of influence in our legislative halls, leaders in reform and educational movements, fathers and mothers whose hearth-stones are centers from which radiate L. T. L. influence and training.

There have been enrolled in our ranks many temperance heroes and heroines, yet none more worthy nor more active than Richmond P. Hobson of National Constitutional Prohibition amendment fame and Daniel A. Poling. When Hobson and Poling were boys they were trained to say, "Tremble, King Alcohol, We Shall Grow Up," and to-day Old King Alcohol is trembling on the throne of greed and avarice because Mr. Hobson and Mr. Poling and many other L. T. L. boys and girls have "grown up!"

The intent and extent of our L. T. L. training have been forcefully set forth by our beloved National W. C. T. U. chieftain, Anna A. Gordon, World's L. T. L. secretary, and everywhere known as the "friend of the boys and girls," in her declaration that "when through lesson and story God's great truth concerning total abstinence is deeply implanted in the brain and heart of every boy and girl, we shall soon reap the harvest of a nation redeemed from the alcohol curse."

That the day of National Constitutional Prohibition may be hastened and our aspirations more surely realized, a mighty campaign should be inaugurated in every city and hamlet for the enlistment of youthful soldiers as Young Campaigners for Prohibition, who, with the training afforded by our Loyal Temperance Legion army, will develop into citizens who will help make and keep our "nation dry."

Let us give the boys and girls all over our land the "fighting chance" which they deserve and which our Loyal Temperance Legion affords—a training which means purer boyhood and manhood, nobler girlhood and womanhood, and safer conditions everywhere.

The Little People of this Montana Rural Union (which Includes the Whole Family) Are Working for "Montana White on the Map in 1916"

VICTORY! YES, VICTORY!

Tune, "Maryland, My Maryland."

MRS. FANNY ROOT DANSER

We're young in years but we can fight,
Victory, yes, Victory.
With God we'll win for truth and right,
Victory, yes, Victory.
We'll sign the pledge and keep our vow,
Saloons must go, we know not how,
But this we know—the time is NOW,
Victory, yes, Victory.

For prohibition we are out,
Victory, yes, Victory.
We'll sing and work and march and shout,
Victory, yes, Victory.
For God and Home and Native Land,
As Young Campaigners now we stand;
A true and loyal temperance band.
Victory, yes, Victory.

The time is now to strike the blow,
Victory, yes, Victory.
Against King Alcohol, the foe,
Victory, yes, Victory.
Let prohibition be the cry;
Saloons, saloons, saloons must die.
And who will fight them? You and I.
Victory, yes, Victory.

Three Generations of Workers for Temperance: Mrs. Clara C. Chapin, Director of National W. C. T. U. Publicity Bureau, Her Son-in-law and Grandchildren

Prohibition a Topic of All-Absorbing Interest in Alaska

MRS. CORNELIA T. HATCHER, President Alaska W. C. T. U.

The incomparable beauty and grandeur of Alaska's mountains and glaciers, the color and fragrance of her flora, and the unceasing wonderland that entralls the voyager on her 1,000 miles of inland sea, have been told and retold in THE UNION SIGNAL since the first "Editor's Travelogue" in 1909. But Alaska in the throes of a local option election, her beauty, her dignity, her majesty, all blotted out by sights and sounds and smells that lead unerringly to the lair of the alcoholic beast, constitutes a new story, for it is a new experience in life on the last American frontier.

The regulation of the liquor traffic in Alaska is vested in the Congress of the United States—and the execution of its mandates rests in the hands of federal judges. The law provides that "saloon licenses may be granted upon petition, if a majority of all white citizens, male and female, over twenty-one years of age, residing within two miles of the place of business designated, have consented thereto." Heretofore, this consent has been secured by the circulation of a petition in the hands of men paid by the saloon interests, and argument, and persuasion, and threat, were used freely in the canvass. The tentacles of the saloon devil-fish are as long and as grasping in Alaska as elsewhere, and many unwilling signers were secured who dared not, for business or professional reasons, offend the monster. Resentment has been growing apace, and this year the Federal judges of three districts were prevailed upon to allow a secret ballot on the question of license or no-license. The election in southeastern Alaska, (where the writer was on a tour for six weeks), was called for May 24. The judge's instructions provided for a "census" of all legal voters in each town, said census to constitute a registration list; and to carry the election, the wets must secure a majority, not only of votes cast but of voters registered. Provision was made for the "swearing in" of unregistered voters, not only on election day but for a certain length of time afterward; and for a final canvass of registered but non-voting citizens by the wets, in order to secure the required majority. The expense of such election must be borne by the traffic, so the men appointed to take the census, or registration of voters, were its employes, though appointed by the court. In consequence, many dry voters were "overlooked;" at Juneau, where the writer spent election day, the "secrecy" of the ballot was limited to the broad arm of a chair in which the voter sat, encircled by a ring of saloon men who "manned" the polls all day.

Many illegal votes were cast, and boasted of; at Douglas certain denizens of the red light district were allowed to vote without the formality of consulting the registration list, a legal requirement that was scrupulously observed with all dry voters. Reports of similar irregularities come from practically every town. Despite this fact, and the serious handicap put upon the drys by the Commercial Club of Juneau, which issued an appeal for license on the ground that it was necessary in order to avoid municipal bankruptcy, the wet majority in the capital city was but five, in the first official report. Skagway lost by only eleven votes. The result at Petersburg hinged upon four challenged votes. Wrangell was in doubt. Ketchikan voted dry. But in all cases the final decision must come from the Federal judge, after the counting of the "sworn in" votes, which were forwarded to him in sealed envelopes.

Prospective Young Campaigner for Prohibition in Alaska

With two conspicuous exceptions the press of the district was avowedly wet and championed the cause of license with all the usual arguments for revenue and expediency. The exceptions were The Miner of Ketchikan, and The Alaskan of Skagway. The editors of these two papers have "caught the gleam" and will lead on in the campaign next year, while their less astute contemporaries are certain to be "caught with the goods!" For it is freely conceded by friends and foes alike that the territory will vote dry November 4, 1916; in fact, many votes for license this year were cast with that understanding. The arguments were to give the saloon men more time in which to get out of business, and municipalities a year in which to readjust their final budgets. At Douglas the appeal was blazoned forth on a banner: "Vote Wet Just this Once. We Need the Money." The fallacy of the argument is demonstrated by the fact that the towns which receive the largest revenue from saloon licenses are the most deeply in debt!

All things considered, this election marks a step upward in the civic life of Alaska, and it has given great encouragement to the dry forces. Newspaper reports give to the outside world only the record of votes cast, which shows a large wet majority. But the saloon men must have a majority of the number of voters registered, all those not voting being counted dry. This fact prompted many to stay away from the polls, with the result that all the activity on election day seemed to be by the wet forces, a circumstance that has a certain psychic influence upon the doubtful mind and is, therefore, to be regretted. However, the dry forces were by no means inactive. The Dry Club at Juneau and Ketchikan, organizations of men, carried paid advertisements in the daily papers for two weeks or more before election. Men and women watchers were at the polls in Skagway; at Petersburg the women were on duty all day long and the Young Campaigners for Prohibition, in caps and with pennants flying, marched and sang, "Vote for Us," and "It's a Short Way to Prohibition."

The prohibition of the liquor traffic is now, in Alaska, as elsewhere, a topic of all-absorbing interest. Sitka, the old Russian capital, enters upon the second year of local prohibition with a greatly increased sentiment in favor of the law. McCarthy and Chitina, two interior towns, went dry in the recent elections. Many others will follow next spring; and the general trend of public sentiment was beautifully expressed in the welcome address of Mr. J. W. Pritchett to the first territorial W. C. T. U. convention at Skagway:

"When Alaska comes into the great sisterhood of states she will be wearing the smile of heaven on her face, and the white ribbon upon her breast."

Young Campaigners Arouse Enthusiasm On Pacific Coast

MRS. ELLEN A. DAYTON BLAIR, Southern California L. T. L. Secretary

"Young Campaigners, what?
Young Campaigners, who?
Young Campaigners, when and where
And what did they do?"

"They'll make a 'feller' vote California dry whether he wants to or not," said one man to another while watching a demonstration given in a Los Angeles park by Young Campaigners.

"I had no idea you were doing such work as this; it is grand; it is just the way to win voters," said another.

Young Campaigners Highly Commended

On the occasion of the address of the Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson to an audience of 4,000 people gathered in our great Temple Baptist church auditorium, three hundred Young Campaigners, just before he spoke, marched in full regalia across the platform, each band giving a song or its own rally cry, and moving down into the aisles until every spot was filled, then all together shouting many rally cries closing with this rousing one:

"Prohibition for the Nation!
Hobson! Hobson!! Hobson!!!"

As they said the last word the Campaigners swung their caps high in the air. Then they sang our favorite song, "I Love You, California," which had been adapted by Mrs. Hattie C. Young for our recent campaign. The whole audience, accompanied by the great organ, joined in the chorus.

Rev. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of Temple Baptist church, sent the state Loyal Temperance Legion secretary, who conducted the demonstration, the following message: "Let me say that your Young Campaigners made a splendid appearance at our great auditorium meeting the night Mr. Hobson spoke. Their recitations, songs and various stunts aroused the greatest enthusiasm, and were sincerely appreciated by the big audience. You deserve the hearty commendation of all our people for the splendid work you did in educating the boys and girls to oppose the liquor traffic and in training them for the splendid exhibition they gave."

(Continued on Page Seven)

Young Campaigners of South Park, Los Angeles, who were active for many months in the California Dry Campaign

Countless demonstrations similar to the one just described were given all over our state from June until election day in November. Our splendid state secretary of the California Dry Federation, Dr. Guy Wadsworth, who was constantly in the field, repeatedly stated that where the Young Campaigners had a part in his meetings they increased the enrollment and aroused great enthusiasm and interest. No doubt it was for this reason the state L. T. L. secretary of southern California was invited to become a member of the executive committee of the Federation, representing this part of the campaign work which early in the season had been given over to the state Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Our opportunities for service greatly increased thereafter and an extensive correspondence with the Sunday schools all over the state was begun, numerous calls came for helps and suggestive programs for a general Sunday school rally day were supplied.

East Los Angeles Young Campaigners Assembled for a Picnic at Sycamore Grove. During the ride to the park in a large hayrack they sang temperance songs and shouted their rally cries

12,000 Children Enlisted as Y. C. P.'s

Nine thousand caps, pennants and buttons, of our own manufacture, were used in southern California, while northern California secured their regalia from our W. C. T. U. headquarters. It is estimated that in southern California alone fully 12,000 children were enlisted as active Young Campaigners and there were probably as many more in northern California. Many who were not supplied with the regalia did splendid work.

Early in the campaign Los Angeles county issued a card containing the pictures of the grandson of the county president, Mrs. Julia D. Phelps, and the two grandsons of the county vice-president, Mrs. Hattie C. Young. On one side was the inscription, "Vote for Us," and on the reverse side appeared the following appeal:

"Fathers! Mothers! The Saloon Takes One Boy in Nine! Have You One To Give? If Not, Make California Dry, Vote Yes on Amendment No. 2, November 3, 1914."

When this was shown to Mr. Hobson he said it was the best campaign literature he had seen. Many thousand copies of this card were distributed.

We regret exceedingly that we did not have more pictures of the Young Campaigners taken, especially that of our forty Chinese children, who were enthusiastic shouters and singers, but who would not wear the blue caps and pennants because in China blue is the color for mourning. They wore the red regalia.

The picture of colored Young Campaigners which is seen on this page of The Signal, represents them as they appeared in the Baptist auditorium demonstration where, standing before that great audience which was already wild with enthusiasm, with hands on their hearts they plead most pathetically: "Vote for Me, November Three!" and repeated the words as an encore.

Young Campaigners Prominent Everywhere

Even at the present time, at our state and county W. C. T. U. conventions the Young Campaigners are taking a prominent part in our L. T. L. and other demonstrations, thus keeping the fire aglow by arousing an enthusiasm which will be wrought into action in the 1916 campaign.

We are very grateful to our dear National president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, for the splendid help she so generously gave us. Her suggestions were most successfully adopted. It will gladden her heart and that of our National L. T. L. secretary, Miss Mary Ervin, to know that a great effort to increase the number of Loyal Temperance Legions is now being made in Los Angeles county, which contains one-quarter of the population of the whole state. The children will thereby be trained as Young Campaigners to work for state and National Constitutional Prohibition, Miss Tinling's most helpful book entitled, "About Our Country," being used. A salary was pledged to our county L. T. L. secretary by the county convention, that she may devote most of her time to the work. It is hoped that other counties will adopt this plan.

Until California joins the white states the children will continue to march with flying banners, and shouting their rally cry:

"Young Campaigners, why?
Make California dry!
Victory! V-I-C-T-O-R-Y
California Dry! Dry!! Dry!!!"

"Vote for Me, November 3!"

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1 00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, June 24, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

It seems difficult to convince the public that there are now eighteen prohibition states. The last number of The Outlook displays on a prominent page a prohibition map showing only seventeen dry states. A writer in the Atlantic Monthly for June makes the statement that there are now sixteen states which have passed prohibition laws. We suggest, therefore, the frequent publication in the local press of your city of the names of the eighteen prohibition states as follows:

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION DAY

Every local union will consider it a privilege to enthusiastically observe July 21, or some day near it, as Loyal Temperance Legion Day. Such an observance will give joy to Miss Anna A. Gordon, the World's L. T. L. secretary and the National W. C. T. U. president, whose birthday it is. No birthday gift could be more pleasing to her than the enlistment of a large body of Legioners and Young Campaigners, and a shower of Young Crusader subscriptions from every state in the Union.

The winsome laddie whose picture appears on the cover page this week is Herbert Cassius Pierce, the grandson of Mr. Charles E. Smith, a prominent photographer of Evanston, and the artist by whom many of Miss Willard's photographs were taken.

National Constitutional Prohibition Plans for July

Independence Day celebrations afford excellent opportunities for spreading the gospel of National Constitutional Prohibition. If a patriotic meeting is to be held in your community, endeavor to secure a place on the program for a temperance speaker. If no meeting has been arranged, let the Woman's Christian Temperance Union plan a prohibition parade, in which all the churches, Sunday schools, public schools and fraternal organizations shall participate. Let this be followed by a public meeting with a program of patriotic and prohibition speeches and music.

At least twice during the month, the W. C. T. U. would do well to hold in one of its city parks, an out-of-door evening meeting, in the nature of a picnic, inviting to it through the church pulpits and the general press, every citizen of the community. The messages on such occasion should be given by strong-voiced orators and singers. To such a meeting many would be attracted who might not attend an indoor gathering.

July is primarily the month for distributing prohibition literature. Sentiment for our cause may be made by giving wide circulation at Chautauquas, picnics and every kind of summer gatherings to short, breezy, live leaflets on total abstinence and prohibition.

Many influential organizations hold their conventions in July. At all such meetings occurring in your vicinity, urge the passage of a resolution in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition.

HOW ABOUT YOUR BOARD OF HEALTH?

The hope expressed by Commissioner Goldwater of the New York board of health that other cities would follow his example and inaugurate a campaign of education against John Barleycorn, has no doubt found a response in the hearts of all temperance workers. Some state boards have been doing excellent publicity work along this line and others are contemplating it. Why not make a definite effort to secure concerted action on the part of all these guardians of the health of the community?

Without question every board has come to virtually the same conclusions as those announced by Dr. Goldwater, namely, that the drink evil is sadly interfering with the work it is trying to do in conserving and promoting the health of the people. In its effort to reduce the death rate from pneumonia it has found itself handicapped at the very outset by patients weakened by alcohol to a degree that made recovery impossible. In fighting tuberculosis, it has discovered that in a large majority of cases alcoholism has sapped the strength of the white plague victims so that they lacked power of resistance to the disease. In an endeavor to lower the mortality among the children, it has learned that the drinking habits of parents have lessened the vitality of their offspring; that drinking mothers lose twice as many babies as do sober mothers, and that the inadequate and poor food provided by drinking fathers diminishes the chances for existence of the children.

In short, the members of boards of health who have traced to its first causes the high rate of mortality in their respective communities sooner or later face the fact that alcohol is making their work a thousandfold more difficult, if not entirely defeating the ends they hope to attain. Of course, therefore, they are eager to eliminate the factor which spells failure for their health program. All they need to encourage them to take the step is the knowledge that the public will uphold them.

As a matter of fact, the responsibility for advance movements of this character rests not only upon the public officials, but upon the people they represent. Let the Christian people give expression, through the press and the pulpit, to their desire for such an educational campaign on the liquor question, and there is little doubt that the men who have been appointed by them to look after the physical welfare of the community will respond to their appeal.

THE HOPE OF THE FUTURE

The convincing and unanswerable argument for the prohibition of the liquor traffic is the child. He is as well the most important factor to be considered in our future plans for freeing the nation and the world from the drink evil. Some things may be neglected and no serious loss will result therefrom. One thing is imperative—that the children and the young people be trained to carry on to completion the work our organization represents.

Edward A. Steiner, that keen student of life, emphasized a truth of which we need constantly to remind ourselves when he retorted to an acquaintance who boasted that the church to which he belonged was known as "the church of the automobiles": "There is no future for a church like that. The future belongs to the church of the baby carriages." Only the cause that grips the hearts of the little children, only the movement that enlists them in its service while they are in the formative years can be certain of its future.

Why are we today reaping such bountiful harvests of prohibition victories? Because fifteen, twenty, thirty years ago, there were sown in the intellects and souls of the little children a hatred of the liquor evil and a longing to eradicate it.

How about the future mayors, aldermen, legislators, congressmen and senators, who are growing up in your town or city? Are they being instructed and trained in a well-conducted Loyal Temperance Legion? Are they enlisting as Young Campaigners for Prohibition? If not, what assurance have you that the future of your prohibition laws is safe in their hands?

Make the future your debtor by devoting some of your leisure to the work among the children in your community, and winning them to a lifetime of consecrated service for God and Home and Every Land.

CONFERENCE AT WASHINGTON

A conference of the friends of National Constitutional Prohibition has been called to meet in Washington, D. C., July 10, 1915. The purpose of the meeting is a free interchange of ideas as to the wording of the amendment which Congress will be asked to submit to the states for their ratification and to discuss the general campaign for its adoption. The various religious and temperance bodies particularly interested in the success of the proposed amendment will, it is hoped, be represented in large numbers at this conference.

The conference will open at 9:30 o'clock; the exact place of meeting to be announced through the religious and temperance press next week.

Thousands of people will be in the east at this season of the year and a stopover at Washington on their tickets can be arranged without additional expense.

It is suggested that church temperance committees, state and national temperance societies and other similar bodies each name not to exceed five of their officers or members to join others as delegates in the conference and that a proper credential certificate be issued to those appointed.

This call is signed by: The Anti-Saloon League of America, The Temperance Commission of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and The National Grand Lodge of the International Order of Good Templars.

SANTE FE'S VICTORY DEFERRED

The following explanation of the failure of the voters of the city of Sante Fe, New Mexico, to outlaw the saloon at the June 7 election is given by The New Mexican of that city:

"By the proper distribution of a sum of money, estimated at from $7,500 to $10,000, dispensed by experts in the line, and done more cunningly than usual by reason of the sharp watch maintained, a watch which was entirely inadequate, the saloons carried the local option election in Santa Fe by a majority of 132. The result spreads upon the record before the state and the country that the capital city of New Mexico wants legalized dives, wants liquor sold to minors, approves defiance of the courts and the despoiling of citizens and wants to be ruled by the vicious element of its population.

"This impression abroad we cannot help. But the fact remains that the forces of decency in Santa Fe have scored more heavily than they ever did before; that they are united and harmonious as never before, that the men who ostensibly have won this election are scared, and that the beginning of the end is in sight. The fact remains that through the work of the decent citizens, Santa Fe for the first time has had an orderly election, a secret ballot and that for the first time the vote buyers were afraid to do their work openly at the polls."

King Christian of Denmark, on June 5, the anniversary of the signing of the first constitution by Frederick VII in 1849, signed the new constitution providing for equal suffrage. The first election where women will vote on equal terms with men will be held next year.

SIXTY DOLLARS IN PRIZES for Prohibition Posters

The Christian Citizenship department, Mrs. Emma L. Starrett, superintendent, offers $25 for the best poster, $10 for the second best, designed by a college or university student, size 28 inches by 42 inches.

A Frances E. Beauchamp prize of $25 is offered for the best cartoon designed by a student in seventh or eighth grade or high school, size 5 inches by 7 inches.

Prizes are to be awarded at the National W. C. T. U. Convention.

All posters and cartoons submitted should be mailed to Mrs. Starrett, Central City, Neb., by September 9. For further information, apply to Mrs. Starrett.

TESTIMONY NOT TO BE CONTROVERTED

When you meet an individual sincerely skeptical on the value to society of woman suffrage refer him to the resolution recently passed by the California legislature and signed by Governor Johnson. This testifies that "the experience of this state amply justifies the adoption of woman suffrage" and "so successful has been the operation and effect of granting political rights to women that were the question to be again voted upon . . . it would be re-endorsed by an overwhelming majority." Bearing witness to the "acknowledged intelligence and discrimination shown by women voters in settling . . . political and industrial problems at the polls" the legislators say that woman suffrage is "one of the important factors contributing to the marked political, social and industrial advancement made in recent years."

AMONG THE STATES

The Alabama supreme court has held the new anti-liquor advertising law constitutional in all its details. The court further held that its decision abrogated all contracts for liquor advertising and prevented any agency or firm from holding the newspapers responsible for damages resulting from the cancellation of contracts.

The amendments upon which the fight against the liquor traffic will be made in California at the 1916 election have been decided upon. Summarized they are as follows:

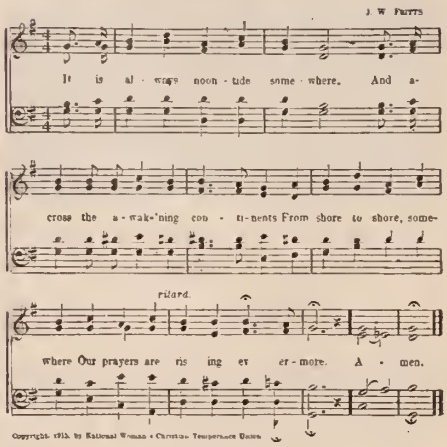
A—Abolishing the liquor business in toto, including wineries, etc., after January 1, 1920.

B—Abolishing the retail liquor saloon after January 1, 1918.

A San Francisco commission reporting on recreation conditions in that city gave it as their opinion that "a primary step toward clearing commercialized amusement from its vicious influence is the absolute divorce of liquor from all recreation."

The Boston Elevated Railway Company, which was the recipient of a gold medal this year from the American Museum of Safety for the excellency of the methods used by it in promoting the safety and health of all employes, requires that "all men engaged in the car and train service must be free from the liquor habit as absolutely essential for the safe conduct of the business."

Time of Prayer—Noontide



"ABIDE WITH ME"

Beside the dead we knelt in prayer
And felt a presence as we prayed.
Lo! it was Jesus standing there.
He smiled, and said, "Be not afraid."
"Lord, thou hast conquered death, we know,
Restore again to life." we said,
"This one who died an hour ago."
He smiled and said, "She is not dead."

"Asleep then as Thyself didst say,
But. Thou can'st lift the lids which keep her prisoned eyes from ours away."
He smiled and said, "She doth not sleep."
"Nay, then though haply she shall wake
To look upon a fairer morn,
Restore her to our hearts that ache."
He smiled and said, "She has not gone."
"Alas! too well we know our loss,
Nor hope again our joy to touch,
Until the stream of death we cross."
He smiled and said, "There is no such."
"But our beloved seem so far.
The while we hoped to feel them near,
Albeit with thee we hope they are."
He smiled and said, "But I am here."
"Dear Lord, how shall we know that they still live.
Nor sleep nor wander far from thee?"
He smiled and said, "Abide with me."

—Author Unknown.

We record here the names of comrades and friends who have recently passed to the higher life:

Dr. W. A. Yantis, Paragould, Ark., for many years an honorary member of the W. C. T. U. and husband of Mrs. M. L. Yantis, a former state L. T. L. secretary. Mrs. Mary D. Meiser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yantis, is the president of the Paragould union.

Mrs. Augusta A. Rowley, Port Allegany, Pa., for more than thirty-five years an active and beloved member of the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Adelia Corson, Monroeton, Pa., a valued member of the local union.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 21—Loyal Temperance Legion Day (Birthday of Anna A. Gordon)
JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP

MRS. EMMA L. STARRETT

As I write the words, Christian citizenship, they seem to have a deeper meaning than ever before. If we study deeply the cause of the present world turmoil we shall doubtless find that the ideal of becoming a world power has dominated the various nations for more than a generation.

Our responsibility for the moral education—or the educating for Christian citizenship—of the youth is tremendous when we realize that any ideal, before it can become an obsession with a nation, must lay hold of it. "What you would put into the life of a nation, put into its schools." There is no more direct way to solve the problems which press upon a nation than to inspire the youth with right ideals and visions. Many educators are realizing the great need of this moral training and instruction, and to this end courses have been prepared and successfully used for the past few years. There are many opportunities for reaching teachers and pupils through temperance placards, posters, blotters, stickers, and through urging discussion and debates on various phases of Christian citizenship. Let us help elect on our school boards men and women of high ideals, and thus secure teachers who realize the paramount importance of forming ideals in youth.

We are urging special effort for law enforcement, that together with our prohibition victories, the enemy may be routed on every hand. A West Virginia judge has said, "If license laws were enforced every saloonkeeper could be put out of business in sixty days."

Shall we not study civics, our laws, and civil government, that we may be well equipped for meeting as Christian citizens the problems and responsibilities so rapidly being pressed upon us for solution.

We have a great opportunity before us to make the Fourth of July an occasion of unusual dignity; to educate the public to the ideal of National Constitutional Prohibition by the use of posters, parades, platform addresses, and articles in the press treating of sobriety as a "builder of nations." Let us impress upon people that the proper, safe and sane observance of our Independence Day is a sincere expression of patriotic thankfulness for our national status. American patriotism should be held sacred, for it has made possible the continued prosperity and peace of our great nation, despite the turbulent conditions prevailing throughout the world. So let us observe the Fourth in accordance with the deeper meaning of independence, liberty and patriotism.

Central City, Neb.

RESCUE WORK

LURENDA B. SMITH

STATE PRESIDENTS AND STATE SUPERINTENDENTS, PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

Any changes or corrections to be made relating to the law in your respective state regarding the "age of consent," you are urged to send at once upon reading this notice. This roster will remain open for ten days after publication of this notice in THE UNION SIGNAL.

Ottawa, Kansas.

AGE OF CONSENT

AGE	STATES
21	Tennessee.
20	Montana.
18	Colorado, District of Columbia, Mississippi, Florida, Idaho, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Wyoming, Nevada, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Utah, Washington.
17	Arizona, Delaware, Illinois, Massachusetts.
16	Alaska, California, Connecticut, Iowa, Arkansas, Kentucky, Ohio, Oregon, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, South Dakota, Pennsylvania.
15	Texas.
14	Indiana, Hawaii, North Carolina, New Mexico, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin.
10	Georgia.

MORE COMFORT BAGS FOR THE SAILORS

MRS. ELLA HOOVER THACHER

En route to Alaska, where many of our good white ribboners have done heroic work, notable among them Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Hatcher, now territorial president, I took dinner with Mrs. Hatcher, Mrs. Margaret B. Platt and Mrs. Margaret C. Munns. What a spirited talk we had about our blessed W. C. T. U. and the wonderful way in which the white ribboners have been led. I found the Seattle comrades filled with enthusiasm and looking forward with great pleasure to our great convention to be held in the city in October. Seattle, with its Puget Sound, its rivers, valleys, hills and beautiful mountains is an entrancing city. What a treat is in store for those who come West next fall and what a warm welcome awaits them.

My mind has been dwelling on the needs of our sailors on the United States ship, "Wyoming," already in commission, and the "Arizona," soon to be ready. I desire very much to provide comfort-bags for these ships. Our membership in the states whose names the vessels bear is so small that the W. C. T. U. women are not able to meet the demand for bags but each state could have a share in the work and in this way the burden would not be a heavy one for any. Many states have fitted out the ships named for them. Will the state presidents please write me, saying that they will help these smaller states? Please do this at once. All communications addressed to me at Florence, New Jersey, will be forwarded. I see the need for this help from the W. C. T. U. now. Please let me hear from you.

"THE EVOLUTION OF A TEACHER"

It will interest many readers to learn of a new book by Ella Gilbert Ives just off the press. "The Evolution of a Teacher" has not to do particularly with pedagogy, though valuable on this line, but is an autobiography, "fascinating and rare," of a beautiful life of exceptional intellectual and spiritual power. It is vivid with humorous touches in daily living and experience that hold the interest from first to last.

The book affords a glimpse of many well known and interesting people. We see Frances Willard in some of her first works, with Anna Gordon; Henry F. Durant, founder of Wellesley College; Kate N. Doggett, founder of The Fortnightly, Chicago; Alice Gordon Gulick, president of the W. C. T. U. of Spain, and founder of the Madrid Institute; Elizabeth Earle Magoun of Mount Holyoke and Iowa College; Robert Hume, India, etc.

Not long after Miss Ives was translated the following came to THE UNION SIGNAL from an Ohio comrade:

"In all the world there is no one who more sincerely mourns the passing of Ella Gilbert Ives than I who have never seen her. No one can commit and recite in highways and byways, in stores and street cars; in city hall and county court house, in every corner of our fair grounds, to all classes and conditions of mankind her humorous, sound-sense suffrage poem, 'The Reason Why,' without loving its author. It surely is a 'winner.'"

The Pilgrim Press, Boston-Chicago-New York. Price of book, $1.00; postage 10c.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION AT SEATTLE, WASH.

Chicago & North Western Terminal Station, Chicago

October is one of the most delightful months in the year to travel. Usually there is little rain, the foliage is gorgeous in coloring and traffic is not so congested as during the summer months.

The purport of this introduction is that a trip to the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Seattle and a visit to the Panama-Pacific Exposition combined will afford an opportunity to see America under the best possible conditions.

From time to time THE UNION SIGNAL will publish details of the trip to be made by the official train. This train will be all steel equipment and will consist of both standard Pullman and tourist sleepers of the best type. The baggage car will be accessible during the trip and ample provision for meals will be made.

The special train schedule will be found on page 15.

The delegates from the East and South will plan to reach Chicago some time on Tuesday, October 5, and a trip to Rest Cottage, Evanston, or a tour of the great Marshall Field store will amply repay any who arrive early in the morning.

Will all who are contemplating the trip write Miss Katharine K. Adams, 1730 Chicago Ave., Evanston, Ill., for information in regard to routes returning, and for detailed information in regard to the trip. It is especially important that we know early how many of those going to Seattle will also take the trip to San Francisco.

The fare from Chicago to Seattle and return, tickets good until December 31, is $62.50. To return by way of San Francisco over any route, $17.50 in addition will be charged. Those preferring to make the water trip on the big boats of the Northern Pacific can do so at the same cost. (Meals and berth on steamer are included in the ticket.)

We will be glad to answer questions and give any desired information.

This story will be continued. The next chapter will tell what the trip will cost.

ELLA A. BOOLE,
Chairman Transportation.
KATHARINE K. ADAMS, Assistant.
Evanston, Ill.

MISSOURI FORGING TO THE FRONT—"OUT" FOR MEMBERS AND EFFICIENCY

MRS. FANNIE L. TAYLOR

Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., each month sends a letter of encouragement and instructions to the district presidents of the state. In the June letter she emphasizes the fact that "we have come to the three-quarter post" in our race to roll up 5,000 Lillian Stevens members. State and district officers are bending their energies to reach the goal by August 31. Many counties have more than measured up to their share of the work. The chief business of this convention season is to gain new members.

Co-operation the Keynote

The Missouri W. C. T. U., through its officers and organizers, is extending the hand of co-operation to all woman's clubs of the state. The state president is spending some of her valuable time in the field. She was a speaker at the conventions of the state suffrage association and state federation of woman's clubs in St. Joseph and addressed several of the local clubs. She also spoke before the Council of Clubs, Political Equality League, Christian Woman's Council and The Atheneum, the largest woman's club in Missouri, in Kansas City. Her message was well received in all instances. A pioneer club woman of Kansas City remarked, "That is the best address ever made before the Council," and the Council expressed appreciation in prolonged applause.

Glimpse of Local W. C. T. U. Life

The annual state W. C. T. U. Flower Mission service was held in the state penitentiary, Jefferson City, Sunday, June 13. There are 2,649 convicts in this, the largest penitentiary in the world. Missouri also has the largest brewery in the world. While loyal white ribboners are sending out "life boats," and relieving and rescuing in every other way possible, they are also laboring unceasingly to change the terrible conditions brought about through the drink traffic.

Kansas City district has a free anti-cigaret and tobacco clinic. Fifty boys and young men have been helped and are very grateful for the service. Girls in one of the high schools have started a war on boys who smoke cigarets.

Clark county unions aroused the interest of clubs, churches, and schools as never before, with six days of special work by Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, National superintendent of Anti-Narcotics. Stereopticon lectures, institutes, public and parlor meetings and meetings in schools were all well attended and won many friends for the cause and the speaker.

Mrs. L. O. Middleton of Kansas City is having a delightful but strenuous campaign in Georgia. She has addressed over 7,000 children and 1,200 teachers, and has organized eleven new unions. Her cousin, Mrs. Sam Jones, is aiding in the work.

St. Clair county unions have been holding most successful medal contests, gaining new members and strengthening weak unions. Matrons' contests are popular. Jackson, the home of Miss Roena Shaner, state vice-president-at-large, voted dry.

Mrs. Amy C. Weech, National organizer and lecturer, is in the state inspiring and helping the unions.

Missouri unions are holding suffrage institutes as one of the state plans.

Every district and local president, every state superintendent and delegate to the National W. C. T. U. Convention must be a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL before she is eligible to office. The "living picture" presented by the Kansas City district in the May festival given by the Council of Clubs showed the W. C. T. U. pinning "dry" states on a white line. The demonstration was effective and the audience applauded vigorously.

NEW JERSEY TO VOTE ON SUFFRAGE OCTOBER 19

MRS. A. SWAN BROWN.

The very air in New Jersey seems surcharged with interest either for or against woman suffrage. While in some places, notably Trenton, the antis are very active, the general sentiment on the subject seems to be favorable. The suffragists are leaving no stone unturned to bring victory in 1915. The vote is to be taken at a special election on October 19, and as New York and Pennsylvania do not vote until November, the outcome in New Jersey is being regarded as of great importance, for as the vote goes there, so, it is thought, it will go in the other states named.

Indoor meetings are being discontinued and effort is concentrated upon reaching the individual voter by means of talks before "ready made audiences," at meetings of men's organizations, street meetings, and by house to house canvassing.

As usual, the liquor forces are combining in vigorous opposition. Both national and state organizations have announced their intention of opposing with all the weapons in their power the suffrage proposition in New Jersey. This very fact has had the effect of causing many men who had not heretofore quite made up their minds on the question to determine to vote in the affirmative next fall, since they begin to realize that by not doing so they would be considered allied with the liquorites.

At places in which the election of commissioners took place in May, the women visited the polling places, securing the signatures of voters as to their attitude on the question of woman suffrage, and in most instances the results indicated that a majority are intending to vote "yes" at the special election.

Senator Hennessy in a recent speech prophesied certain victory for the suffragists next October. Should they fail then, the question could not be brought before the voters for seven years.

A GOOD THING
When It Comes Along Don't Let It Get Away From You

"I really feel that it is hardly possible to say too much in favor of Grape-Nuts as a health food," writes a Chicago woman.

"For 9 or 10 years I had suffered from indigestion and chronic constipation, caused by the continued use of coffee and rich, heavy foods. My ailments made my life so wretched that I was eager to try anything that held out a promise of help. And that is how I happened to buy a package of Grape-Nuts food last spring.

"That ended my experiments. For in Grape-Nuts I found exactly what I wanted and needed. From the day I began to use it I noticed an improvement and in a very few weeks I found my health was being restored.

"My digestive apparatus now works perfectly and chronic constipation has been entirely relieved. I have gained in weight materially, and life is a very pleasant thing to me so long as I use Grape-Nuts once or twice a day. I have found by experiment that if I leave it off for a few days my health suffers.

"A physician in our town has great success in treating stomach troubles, and the secret of it is that he puts his patient on Grape-Nuts food — it always brings back the power of digestion."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MRS. NORTON'S MEDICINE BOTTLE

LORETTA HANFORD, Chicago, Ill.

There had been a slow convalescence after Mrs. Norton's latest nerve collapse. Her strength and interest in life had come back reluctantly; but one bright Sabbath morning she had awakened to gaze critically about her.

Instinctively she missed the old-time atmosphere of orderly sweetness. Somehow her room appeared strangely different. The pretty vase that was wont to hold her favorite flowers, was absent from the dresser, and in its place stood a flat quart-bottle.

"Yes, of course," she murmured; "the doctor ordered it."

For weeks she had lain in her darkened, nurse-guarded chamber. Only rare tip-toed visits had been allowed to her husband and her nearest friends. No one but her child Alice—her "bit of sunshine"—had stolen in and out at will.

Suddenly as the woman's gaze again wandered to the dismantled dresser, memory roused her with the force of a blow. Her heart recoiled with dread at the thought that she must ere long again take up the burden whose weight had made her so weary of life.

"O God," she pleaded, as she turned her pale, drawn face to the shadowed wall, "help me—oh, help me to save him!"

"Only two days more!" sang Alice as she tripped home from Sunday school, "then mother will come down stairs, and it will seem like living again!"

But disappointment clouded the child's face as her eyes sought the upper window only to find it vacant. Mother had always watched for her of late.

"Yu—hu, mother! Where are you, mother?" she called as she ran swiftly up the stairs.

A faint "Here, daughter," came from the inner room.

"Why, mother dear, you have been crying—you are crying now!" exclaimed the distressed child as she gave her affectionate greeting.

"No, n-o, dear. Mother is quite strong to-day," declared Mrs. Norton, making a heroic effort at control. "I have been thinking—just thinking some foolish thoughts—that is all." But even as she spoke, sudden tears came. It was useless to try to conceal the truth that a serious trouble was preying upon her mind.

"Was it father's fault?" the child asked hesitatingly. "Was he—sick again last night? He did act so queer at the dinner table, and he was so very cross! Is that why you were crying, mother?"

There was no answer.

"Is that the reason? Tell me truly. I am not a baby any longer. Tell me, mother," Alice persisted. Her soft arms were around her mother's neck, and the blue child-eyes were looking pleadingly into the grave, unhappy ones. Still there was no answer.

"Mother dear, I ought to know what is troubling you." Now the girlish voice was the one that trembled, and the blue eyes were misty.

"Alice, my child, why should your young heart be burdened with the lessons and the discipline that belong to mature life? They are not for you now, dear. They will come to you soon enough, God knows. Just be my own light-hearted little girl, as you always have been. That is the only thing that will make me happy."

"No, mother. That kind of talk may sound very wise, but you are not to put me off in this way. You must answer my question: Was it father's fault? Yes, or no?"

"Well, then—yes, if you must know. But let us talk about something more interesting. How many were in your class to-day, and did they like their new teacher? You must ask her to come to dinner some day. I always like to know your teachers."

The words had a far-away sound and were uttered mechanically, as if thought were busy elsewhere. The sensitive heart of the child felt their effort.

"Really, you must not treat me this way, mother. You must tell me all about the thing we were talking of," Alice said with a hurt in her voice. "I am father's child as well as yours. What he does and what you do concerns me just as much as it concerns you two. We are all one family."

Mrs. Norton never had thought of the relationship in precisely the way that Alice put it. Perhaps she was right in her view of it. A sudden impulse came to take the child into full confidence. Alice might even prove a help. At least, the burden, shared by one who was so nearly concerned, would be less heavy for her own heart, now weighed down to its greatest endurance.

"Well, child," Mrs. Norton said after a few moments of silence—"you did guess the truth. It was on account of your father that I was crying. I am going to tell you the whole story. But let us go into the front room. It is brighter there."

IT'S A LONG WAY TO PROHIBITION

In response to repeated requests we reprint the following verses, to be sung to the tune of "It's a long way to Tipperary.":

It's a long way to prohibition,
It's a long way to go;
It's a long way to prohibition
To the fairest land we know.

So it's good-bye local option,
High license we'll not spare;
It's a long, long way to prohibition,
But we are almost there.

As Mrs. Norton leaned back in the easy-chair, Alice settled herself among the pretty pillows in the window-seat beside her.

"Your father was a strong character when I married him," the mother began. "He could not tolerate in others the least yielding of principle. He would condemn without a hearing those who fell through weakness, especially through drink."

Alice gave a start. Were the words premonitory? Was that the trouble with father? An undefined fear thrilled her.

"'Judge not,' I more than once quoted to him when he would launch into one of his tirades against some person who, in a moment of temptation, would fall. 'There is no excuse for drunkenness if a man has brain. Leave that sort of thing to imbeciles and degenerates!' he would say. But the time came—oh, how can I tell you, dear?—the time came when he himself needed the same mantle of charity that I had so often thrown over others."

"You don't mean that father drinks!" burst from Alice's shocked lips.

"Until of late, I never would admit it even to myself," was the quiet reply. "I used to call the habit by other names. It seemed so vulgar, so coarse, so horrible to use that word in connection with my husband."

"But, mother, how did he ever get to—to that pass? How did he begin? What made him change into the very thing he had so hated?" asked the young girl all in a breath. She sat up, tense, alert, eagerly awaiting the answer.

"You asked me how it began," the mother answered in a strangely constrained voice. "I think I shall never forget how it began. It was one bitter night in winter when your father came home benumbed with the cold and completely worn out with his long, hard day's work. 'Take some of my brandy,' I said to him. 'It will warm you up and rest you, too. I don't know what I ever should do when my weak spells come on if I did not have that remedy near,' I added, as I saw a look of hesitation on your father's face. 'Take it, of course. It's only medicine. It can't hurt you,' I urged.

"Did he take it, mother?" asked Alice breathlessly.

"Yes, he drank what I poured out for him, and in a few moments he declared that he was warm and comfortable. But, O my child, if I ever regretted anything in the world I regretted that act of mine! Every once in a while, after that, I would find your father standing before the medicine cabinet with my brandy bottle in his hand, and when I would remonstrate with him he would say that it was only a tonic and that he really needed it to rest his tired nerves.

"Many hot words on account of this passed between us as time went on, and finally he angrily declared that he would never touch my medicine again—and he never did."

"Oh, I am so glad!" exclaimed Alice, with a sigh of relief.

"No, he never did," the mother continued, "but the trouble was not ended; it was only begun, for after that he used to take his brandy away from home. He naturally drifted to the very companionship that he formerly had loathed and despised. Things have rapidly gone from bad to worse until now—"

"Don't, mother—oh, don't! You shan't cry again. It will be all right somehow; it must be. Father used to be a good man. He will be good again; it is in him. We will help him. We will save him."

"That is easy enough for your young lips to say. How many times I have made vows like that! It seems to me I have tried everything, but everything has failed."

"There are two things you have not tried, mother."

Mrs. Norton looked up into the eager face, now strangely illumined. "What are they, dear child?"

"You have not tried God's power to save father. Our temperance lesson in Sunday school today was about that very thing. I can see, from what you have said, that you have been trying to save him all by yourself."

"Dear, I believe there you are half-way right," replied the mother in tones of conviction. "But tell me the other thing I have not tried."

"The other thing, mother dear"—the next words came slowly, with pauses between—"you haven't thrown away your 'medicine bottle.'"

There was a crash of breaking glass in the next room, followed by a hissing sound in the grate.

"Your father!" Mrs. Norton sprang up in terror. "Oh, I can't bear any more!" She covered her face with her hands as if to shut out some dreaded sight.

"Yes, it is 'your father,' Alice," came a steady, deep voice from the doorway—"your father, but clothed and in his right mind at last."

There was nothing to fear from the clear-eyed, erect man standing there. "You see I have tried one remedy suggested—he held out the broken bottle—"and now we all will try the other, so help us God!"

From the glad, quivering lips of mother and daughter, very reverently, very joyfully, came the word, "Amen!"

L. T. L. WORK IN RURAL SCHOOLS

MISS HELEN I. ROOT, L. T. L. Secretary New York State W. C. T. U.

In New York state there are many rural school teachers who willingly cooperate with the W. C. T. U. in maintaining Loyal Temperance Legions among their pupils. These little legions are financed by the nearest W. C. T. U. and supplied with literature. They are under the direction of the local L. T. L. general secretary who, in some cases, has four or five L. T. L's to supervise. Once a year she gathers them all together for a splendid, enthusiastic rally.

The best results are secured when some woman in the district adopts the legion as her own and works with the teacher and the general secretary to make it a success. The picture shows the L. T. L. of Kent, N. Y., and its teacher-leader, Miss Esther Miller.

L. T. L. CAMPAIGN SONG

Our legislators legislate,
Against the English sparrow;
And say that beer, too, has its rights,
And we are very narrow.
The rights of beer and alcohol
We find so very many
That sometimes mother and the home,—
They really haven't any.

They say without the "Trade" that we
Will go right straight to ruin;
And that we ought to chain the bear
And not to kill poor Bruin;
We've tried the license chains too long,
And find them useless, very,
And now we'll dig a deep, wide grave
And in it Bruin bury.

We mean the "Trade" shall have its rights—
The right to honest labor—
Sell starch and soap, but not sell beer;
We must not harm our neighbor.
Now men of every clime and creed,
Come, vote for Native Land, sirs;
Come strike a blow for God and Home,
With a ballot in your hand, sirs.

You hear the tramping of our feet,
We're on our way to 'lection:
We're looking after children's rights,
We ask for home protection.
Prohibition is the word,
Sing it loud and hearty.
Prohibition from saloons,
Come join the children's party.
—Mary E. Balch in Marching Songs

A GREAT CITY AND HOW IT FELL

Story Lesson

CHRISTINE I. TINLING

Since the great war began we have heard of many battles and sieges and of the fall of some strong fortresses. Today we are going to have a story about a very great and ancient city and how it was taken by an enemy.

Babylon was built so long ago that no one knows just when it was begun. In ancient times people wrote on bricks and many of these have been found and their inscriptions translated in our days. One of them, written nearly four thousand years before Christ, makes mention of the city of Babylon. It was built on the river Euphrates in Asia. You may find this river mentioned in the very beginning of the Bible.

One of the most famous kings of antiquity was Nebuchadnezzar. He ruled over a large country and Babylon was his capital. He determined to make it the most beautiful city in the world and also so strong that no enemy would ever be able to prevail against it. Other kings had done a good deal to strengthen and adorn Babylon, but Nebuchadnezzar did more than any of them.

The city was built in the shape of a square, with the Euphrates running through the middle of it. A stone bridge spanned the broad river, and at each end of it there was a royal palace. On wet and windy days people could go from one palace to the other by a tunnel instead of using the bridge.

The walls of the city were considered one of the seven wonders of the world. There was an inner wall and an outer one. Outside the second there was a broad and deep moat or ditch. When this moat was made the clay that was dug out was used to make bricks to build the wall. There were two hundred and fifty towers around the walls, and between the inner and outer ones there was room for a four-horse chariot to turn round. The walls were so high that the prophet Jeremiah speaks of them as "mounting up to heaven." He also mentions their high gates. There were a hundred of these gates, all made of bronze, and very handsome. On the inside the walls were lined with enameled tiles, decorated with hunting scenes.

Nebuchadnezzar built himself one specially remarkable palace. The bricks may still be seen. They are very neatly moulded and stamped and the cement that holds them together is as good as any we can make today. Nebuchadnezzar had so many men to work for him that he built this palace in almost no time. A record has been found in which he says, "In fifteen days I completed the splendid work."

But far more wonderful than the palace were the Hanging Gardens. These, like the walls of Babylon, were counted among the wonders of the world. The story goes that Nebuchadnezzar built them for his queen. She came from a land of mountains and forests, a land of cool breezes and green groves, and Babylon was so hot and flat that it made her feel homesick. So Nebuchadnezzar, they say, had an artificial hill made on purpose for her.

High arches were built and on top of these terraces were made. Then the king had plates of lead laid down and earth spread upon them, and trees and shrubs and flowers were planted there. Terrace rose above terrace, and on top of all Nebuchadnezzar built a house for the queen. It was very beautiful and about as high as the lofty walls of Babylon, so that the lady had not only cooler and fresher air than she could get down below, but a wide view besides. The king also had a pump-house erected on the topmost terrace, from which water from the river and canals could be brought up for use in the queen's house and gardens.

Altogether Babylon was a wonderful city, so strong that it did not look as if any enemy could prevail against it and so beautiful that it was the pride of the king's heart.

But it fell, and great was the fall of it. The story of its conquest is told by Xenophon, the Greek writer. You may remember hearing of Cyrus, the Persian boy who refused to touch his grandfather's wine. This Cyrus became a great conqueror and he it was who took Babylon.

The historian says he ranged his whole army round the city and then rode round it himself with some of his friends and advisers. After he had taken a good look at everything he made up his mind that the walls were too high and strong to be broken down and the only thing he could do would be to lay siege to the place and starve the people out.

Gathering together his principal officers he held a consultation with them. One thought they might perhaps get into the city by way of the river. But another said, "The river is of so great depth that two men standing one upon the other would not reach above the water, so that the city is defended by the river even better than by its walls."

When they had had their say Cyrus decided the matter, for a plan was then growing in his mind. "Let us dig a trench," he said, "just as broad and deep as we can." This was soon done, for he had thousands on thousands of soldiers, and "many hands make light work." Then Cyrus built towers here and there, laying their foundations with strong trunks of palm trees. He pretended that he was going to blockade the city. The garrison inside laughed at this, for they had provisions enough to last them for years. Babylon was so large that there were within its walls great tracts of grass land on which cattle could be kept in time of war. So when the people saw the army preparing to besiege them, they did not care, but only laughed. They went on with their work and play as before. They had no idea of the plan in the mind of Cyrus.

At this time Nebuchadnezzar was dead and Belshazzar was reigning in his place. The Bible says he "made a great feast to a thousand of his lords and drank wine before the thousand." When his brain was poisoned by alcohol he did a very wicked thing. He sent for the gold and silver vessels that Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple in Jerusalem, things that were holy to the Lord and only used in his service. They were brought to the palace and Belshazzar and his princes and wives and friends drank wine from them. Then came the hand-writing on the wall, which said, "Thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians." Now the king of the Medes and Persians was Cyrus.

Let us turn back to the historian Xenophon and see what he says about that night. You shall have his exact words as they have been translated by one of our Greek scholars:

"The trenches were now dug, and Cyrus when he heard that there was a festival in Babylon, in which all the Babylonians drank and revelled the whole night, took a number of men with him, and as soon as it was dark opened the trenches on the side toward the river. When this was done the water ran off in the night into the trenches and the bed of the river through the city allowed men to walk along it. When the river was thus prepared Cyrus gave orders to the Persian captains of thousands, of infantry and cavalry, to attend him, each with his thousand drawn up two abreast, and the rest of the allies to follow in the rear, ranged as they were before. They accordingly came, and he, causing those that attended his person, both foot and horse, to go down into the dry channel of the river, ordered them to try whether the bed of the river was passable. When they reported that it was passable, he called together the officers and spoke to them as follows: 'The river, my friends, has yielded us a passage into the city, and let us boldly enter, fearing nothing within, but considering that these people, on whom we are now going to fall, are the same that we defeated when they were all awake, sober, armed and in order. We shall now fall upon them at a time when many of them are asleep, many intoxicated, and all in confusion. When they discover that we are in the city, they will, by reason of their consternation, be yet more unfit for service than they are now. Come then, take your arms, and with the help of the gods I will lead you on.'

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

A GREAT CITY AND HOW IT FELL

(Continued from Page Thirteen)

"Turning to two of his friends, Cyrus added, 'Show us the ways, for you are acquainted with them, and when we are in conduct us by the readiest approach to the palace.' 'Indeed,' said some, 'it would not be at all wonderful if the doors of the palace were open, for the whole city seems tonight to be in a revel, but we shall meet with a guard in front of the gates for there is always one placed there.' 'We must not be remiss,' said Cyrus, 'but march, that we surprise them as little prepared as possible.'

"As soon as these words were spoken they went forward, and of those that met them, some were struck down and killed, some fled and some raised a shout. They found the doors of the palace shut; those who were appointed to attack the guards fell upon them as they were drinking at a large fire, and dealt with them as with enemies. As a great clamor and noise ensued those who were within heard the tumult, and as the king ordered them to see what was the matter, some of them threw open the gates and rushed out. Those who were with the two guides, as soon as they saw the gates unclosed burst in, and pursuing those who fled, and dealing blows amongst them, they came up to the king, and found him standing with his sword drawn. The party of the guides being numerous mastered him; those who were with him were killed. Cyrus sent troops of horse through the streets to tell those who were within the houses to remain within, and to say that if any were found abroad they would be killed. These directions they obeyed."

When day came the people learned that the city was taken and the king dead and so they all surrendered. Cyrus immediately took possession, and we are glad to know that he treated his conquered foes with justice and mercy.

So this is the story of the fall of Babylon. Some writers say that there were traitors within, and that may partly account for its having been taken so easily. But Xenophon over and over again mentions strong drink and the Bible speaks of it too. When men use alcohol they are not fit to defend themselves either from enemies without or from traitors within. To begin with, their brains are too blunted to realize the danger, and when at last they do understand it, they are not strong enough to meet it.

In this terrible war that is making the whole world so sad today, people have come to see that drink is the greatest hindrance to success. The Czar of Russia, as you have heard, some time ago, prohibited the sale of strong drink The King of England has banished wine from his table in order to set an example to the nation. Lord Kitchener, the English minister of war, has done the same, and thousands and thousands of people are gladly giving up alcohol because they have come to see what a hindrance it is to their country in the war. It is said that the president of the French republic has become an abstainer also.

The great war is the most dreadful thing that has ever happened, but some good will come of it if the world learns that in order to be strong and fit it is necessary to let alcohol alone.

It is about twenty-five centuries since Cyrus stole into Babylon by the river bed, while Belshazzar and his princes were drinking at their feast. Strong drink has been spoiling men's brains and weakening their bodies all through the ages between, but it will not do so very much longer, for the nations of the world are beginning to see that it must be brought to an end by prohibition.

THE WEST VIRGINIA W. C. T. U. SIGN BOARD

BLANCHE WHEATLEY, Bolivar, W. Va.

Our tireless state president, Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost, has inspired her women to greater endeavor through an excellent message in the last issue of the state paper. In the same number Mrs. Blanche M. Pickering, state corresponding secretary, gives a most encouraging report.

The Little Mountain State is bending every effort to secure her quota of 597 new members within the year. Reports from local and county unions show great activity on the part of white ribboners in almost every branch of the work. National Prohibition is the theme at all meetings.

In many counties, essay and medal contests, prohibition entertainments, and lectures are being held. We are proud to know that one of our women, Mrs. V. S. Milbourne, state S. T. I. superintendent, of Charlestown, Jefferson county, was joint winner in the National prize essay contest, the other half of the fifty dollar prize going to Miss Ruth Clark of Macon, Georgia.

Mrs. Lora La Mance recently gave our state most satisfactory service in securing one hundred and seven new members. Mrs. Leith, having regained her health, is again ready for organizing work.

The campaign for equal suffrage, under the able direction of Mrs. J. Gale Ebert, has brought good results thus far. Indications point to victory when the question is submitted to voters in 1916.

The unions of Jefferson county, bordering on Washington county, Maryland, are much gratified over a recent decision of Judge Keedy of that county, who turned down no less than forty-seven applications for liquor licenses at the opening of the May court. The sentiment against "John B." in our sister state is rapidly increasing.

Let's all pull together for National Constitutional Prohibition in 1920—a long pull, a strong pull, a never-let-go pull, and we shall land our nation high and dry!

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS

56 & 58 Park Place NEW YORK

PROSPERITY POST CARDS

In English and Foreign Languages

WHAT EVERY MERCHANT KNOWS
PROSPERITY STATISTICS
OF INTEREST TO TAX PAYERS
OF INTEREST TO BANKERS
OF INTEREST TO WAGE EARNERS

This series is now ready in English, German, Italian, Norwegian, Swedish and Spanish.

Price, per dozen, 15 cents; per 100, $1.00

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

JUST FROM THE PRESS

NEW MUSIC

PROHIBITION'S IN THE AIR

Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A stirring quartet for mixed voices. Price, 10 cents.

THE WORLD-WIDE JUBILEE

Words and music by Ella Southworth Clark. A demonstration song to be used either by the Y. P. B. or the W. C. T. U. consisting of solo, mixed quartet and chorus. Price, 15 cents.

PRAYER SONG

Written by J. W. Fritts. The words "It is always noontide somewhere," so familiar to all, beautifully harmonized, to be sung immediately following the noontide prayer. Price, per fifty copies, 15 cents; per hundred, 25 cents

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
EVANSTON, ILL.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by The J. L. Mott Iron Works

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm H. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

Up the Mississippi River

The White Ribbon Special from Chicago will be operated over the Chicago & North Western Railway and Union Pacific system through to Seattle, Wash. The special train will leave Chicago on the following schedule, subject to slight changes:

Lv. Chicago	7:15 PM	Tuesday,	Oct. 5	C&NW
Ar. Omaha	7:45 AM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	C&NW
Lv. Omaha	8:15 AM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Ar. North Platte	3:30 PM CT	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Lv. North Platte	2:45 PM MT	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Ar. Cheyenne	8:30 PM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Lv. Cheyenne	10:30 PM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Lv. Granger	7:15 AM	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OSL
Lv. Pocatello	1:45 PM	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OSL
Ar. Huntington	11:45 PM MT	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OSL
Lv. Huntington	11:00 PM PT	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OWR&N
Ar. Pendleton	6:30 AM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Lv. Pendleton	7:30 AM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Ar. The Dalles	11:30 Noon	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Lv. The Dalles	12:00 Noon	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Ar. Portland	3:00 PM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Lv. Portland	11:00 PM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Ar. Seattle	6:00 AM	Saturday,	Oct. 9	OWR&N

(Occupying sleepers until 7:30 AM)

The round trip rate via the route of the special train, going or returning, is $62.50. The same rate applies returning via Ogden, the D. & R. G. to Colorado Springs and Denver; thence Union Pacific and North Western Line to Chicago. This rate also applies for return via the Northern Pacific, Great Northern or Canadian Pacific Railways. Tickets are good to return until December 31, 1915.

The rate from Chicago to Seattle via the route of the special train, and returning via San Francisco, thence Southern Pacific to Ogden, Union Pacific and North Western Line to Chicago; or San Francisco to Ogden, thence D. & R. G. to Colorado Springs and Denver, Union Pacific and North Western Line to Chicago; or the journey may be extended to Los Angeles, so that both California Expositions may be visited (the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, and the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego), and return may be made from Los Angeles via Salt Lake Route to Salt Lake City, thence direct to Chicago via Union Pacific and North Western Line to Chicago; or the A. T. & S. F. Railway may be used, taking in the Grand Canyon at an extra cost of $7.50, and return made by Colorado Springs and Denver, Union Pacific and North Western Line to Chicago; or the Southern Pacific and its connections may be used from Los Angeles by way of New Orleans to Chicago, at the round trip rate of $80. Tickets are good for final return limit of December 31.

The sleeping car rates from Chicago to Seattle on the special train are as follows:

Standard lower berth	$13.00
" upper berth	10.40
" compartment	36.00
" drawing room	46.00
Tourist lower berth	6.75
" upper berth	5.40

Two persons may occupy a lower or an upper berth at the same cost as for one person. Two, three or four persons may occupy a compartment or drawing room, thereby reducing the per capita sleeping car rate for such accommodations.

Further information as to authorized routes, sleeping car rates, etc., will be gladly furnished by addressing H. A. Gross, General Agent Passenger Department, Chicago & North Western Ry., 148 South Clark street, Chicago.

Route of Travel From Chicago

Special train, which will consist of the highest class of equipment, open section, compartment, drawing room, tourist, dining and observations cars, will leave from the magnificent new terminal station of the Chicago & North Western Railway, corner Madison and Canal streets, Chicago, at which terminal will be found all the conveniences for comfort that any traveler may expect. A large portion of this commodious and palatial terminal is devoted exclusively to the convenience and comfort of ladies. There will be found rest rooms, tea rooms, private bath rooms (the use of the latter at a nominal charge of 25 cents); even an emergency hospital service, in case one is fatigued or ill and desires rest under the competent care of trained nurses.

Booklet descriptive of this wonderful terminal and the facilities offered its patrons will be sent upon request. Address C. A. Cairns, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago & North Western Ry., Chicago.

We use the double-track line of the North Western Line from Chicago, passing through the beautiful suburban district of Illinois, crossing the Mississippi river at Clinton, Iowa, and thence through the wonderful industrial, manufacturing and agricultural centers of Iowa and Nebraska; crossing the Missouri river at Council Bluffs, Omaha; thence through the Platte Valley of Nebraska, passing in succession the populous towns of Fremont, Grand Island, North Platte, Julesburg, Sidney, and Cheyenne, at which latter point a stop of two hours will be made, affording an opportunity for delegates coming from Denver and other points to join the special train at Cheyenne.

The route of the Special, the country traversed and the historic and scenic points of interest, will be referred to in detail in each issue of THE UNION SIGNAL, and long before the time of the meeting our members will be familiar with the territory through which the special train passes.

The route we have selected was the pioneer line from Chicago not only to Omaha and Denver, but Salt Lake City, Ogden and San Francisco, and is today the shortest line of travel between Chicago and the Pacific Coast. Over this route are operated more transcontinental trains than on any other. It is the route of the celebrated "Overland Limited," the only exclusively first class daily train operated by any line between Chicago and San Francisco and saving in time one full business day.

This route of travel is protected by more miles of automatic electric block safety signal device than any other western line; in fact, every inch of the way is protected by safety signals, and the road bed is simply incomparable.

Arrangements are now being made for a special train from Seattle and Portland to San Francisco, stopping en route at Salem and Albany, Oregon, where members will meet the governor and other state officials. The party will remain over Sunday at Roseburg.

Full particulars of the special train arrangement from Seattle to San Francisco and the sleeping car cost will be given in later announcements.

LEGIONERS WIN PRIZES FOR DRAWING PROHIBITION MAPS

Twenty-three members and friends of the Los Angeles (Calif.) Central union recently accompanied Mrs. Ellen Dayton Blair, National organizer and state L. T. L. secretary for Southern California, on the annual all-day visit to the McKinley Boys' Home, an institution where for fourteen years the Central union has supported an L. T. L., providing supplies and a competent leader for a monthly meeting the first Sunday of each month. On the occasion of this visit the white ribboners were again impressed with the opportunity for work among the more than one hundred boys of the home. Three excellent prohibition maps, the work of the boys in response to a prize offer, were given places of honor in the chapel. So good were the maps that the white ribboners awarded, instead of one prize, a first, second and third prize. A temperance spelling match between the white ribboners and the McKinley boys, in which the boys won, interested both the boys and their visitors, while humorous readings by Mrs. Dr. Sanderson added greatly to the day's enjoyment.

Minnesota is making a most auspicious beginning for its 1916 statewide prohibition campaign in the thirty-two white counties which it has gained during the last ninety days with a prospect of still others to follow. A larger W. C. T. U. membership is desirable to properly manage the campaign, and accordingly the state is working to round out a membership of 8,000 before the annual convention this fall.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year

Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.

Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year

Address Evanston, Ill.

THE NEW SUBSCRIBER

Have you, OLD SUBSCRIBER, secured the NEW SUBSCRIBER for the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL and thus become a member of the Win One Circle? If not, will you at once find the NEW SUBSCRIBER so that your name may be enrolled in the 1915 Win One Circle and the NEW SUBSCRIBER have the paper she has needed and ought to have had long ago?

Many are wanting and asking for the information to be found in THE UNION SIGNAL, but do not know where to find it. OLD SUBSCRIBER, you know and can help someone to this information by getting that NEW SUBSCRIBER.

WIN ONE CIRCLE, 1915

332. Mrs. Annie B. Henderson, Ocheyedan, Ia.
333. Mrs. R. D. Fields, Tyro, Kans.
334. Mrs. Jessie C. Butler, Urbana, Ill.
335. Mrs. Sadie Harding, Fremont, Ind.
336. Mrs. Emma Kautz, Shelby, Mich.
337. Miss Lillian O. Eaton, Mt. Vernon, Me.
338. Mrs. C. G. Smith, Rockford, Ill.
339. Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, Atlanta, Ga.
340. Mrs. Melissa S. Fellow, Beaver, Okla.
341. Mrs. Helen H. Crocker, New York, N. Y.
342. Mrs. Loula Pitt Yokom, St. Joseph, Mo.
343. Attie D. Eddy, Preston, Minn.
344. Alice B. Nicols, St. Paul, Minn.
345. Cora A. Young, Gorin, Mo.
346. Mrs. F. G. Udell, Maplewood, Mo.
347. Mrs. C. M. McAllister, Knowlesville, N. Y.
348. Mrs. J. C. Lashley, Steubenville, O.
349. Miss Hattie B. John, Zanesville, O.
350. Mrs. J. W. Tate, Monticello, Ky.
351. Mrs. Mary O. Groesbeck, Round Lake, N. Y
352. Mrs. Lillian Kittoe, Hawarden, Ia.
353. Mrs. Anna B. Hail, Mobile, Ala.
354. Mrs. R. M. Hall, Fitzgerald, Ga.
355. Mrs. N. H. Hyde, Owego, N. Y.
356. Mrs. Annie L. Morrell, S. Windham, Me.
357. Rachel H. Munson, Kerhonkson, N. Y.
358. Miss Mary Clark, Fargo, N. D.
359. Mrs. Susan Page, Fargo, N. D.
360. Mrs. J. F. Mixon, Elbert, Ga.
361. Mrs. Julia Wright, Columbus, O.
362. Mrs. S. F. Willhelm, Columbus, O.
363. Mrs. S. M. Wilhite, Greenfield, Ill.
364. Etta P. Taylor, Parkersburg, Ia.
365. Mrs. Neva Thomas, Springfield, Mo.
366. Augusta Mulcke, Kingston, Tenn.
367. Mrs. P. M. L. Ray, Guthrie, Okla.
368. Mrs. W. C. Bell, Auburn, Wash.
369. Mrs. Jas. Gagen, Antigo, Wis.
370. Miss Ina E. Williams, Burlington, Wash.
371. Mrs. Hattie M. Barnes, Kansas City, Mo.
372. Mrs. Sarah Culver, Albion, Neb.
373. L. A. Carmichael, Beechwood, Mich.
374. Mrs. P. D. Hawkins, Newburg, Mo.
375. Mrs. Bertha Smith, Diamond, Mo.
376. Mrs. H. C. Willett, Woodbine, Iowa.

AMONG OUR WORKERS

Mrs. Abbie B. Hillerman, president of the Oklahoma W. C. T. U., is spending a few weeks with a son in Turlock, California. Mr. and Mrs. Hillerman are taking a much needed vacation and will remain in California until August.

Stuart (Fla.) W. C. T. U., Mrs. C. S. Burnett-Haney, president, is doing excellent contest work. Within a month three contests have been held, with two more well under way. Cradle roll contests with children of four or five years of age have been effective in creating temperance enthusiasm.

Mrs. N. J. McKitrick of 1326 South 27th street, Omaha, Nebraska, writes that she will be glad to take orders for "Pullman caps" similar to those worn by the Nebraska delegation en route to the Atlanta Convention.

A monthly Christian Citizenship meeting is a plan of the union of Liberal, Kans. Such a meeting in June, with an attendance of two hundred, was most interesting. Sixty-five guests attended the reception on June 9 for older women, an annual affair with this union, and the suggestion has been made that this is a fitting way for other local unions to celebrate Flower Mission day. Under the direction of Mrs. Minnie Johnson-Grinstead, president, the union served dinner to the old soldiers on Decoration day.

During the recent seven weeks' visit to Alaska of Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Hatcher, territorial W. C. T. U. president, during which time the first annual convention of the Alaska W. C. T. U. took place, in addition to presiding over the meetings of that body, she visited all the towns in southeastern Alaska, traveling a distance of 2,500 miles. At Wrangell, Douglas, and Sitka she organized unions and during her itinerary gained eighty-three new members, enlisted 250 Young Campaigners for Prohibition and took 171 signatures to the temperance pledge. The convention, among the special features of which were a street parade, the election of Branch secretaries, and the superintendents of seventeen departments, has been fully reported in a previous issue of THE SIGNAL.

Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, National superintendent of Franchise, on a recent occasion addressed 200 men of the Bible classes of her home city, Bangor, Maine, in the Columbia street church, of which Mr. Livingston is the pastor. Although Mrs. Livingston has an international reputation her voice has not been frequently heard in her home city, and her address on suffrage was a revelation to many in her audience. Mrs. Livingston told of the three-fold opportunity for education which has come to women through their connection with church societies and skillful management of them, through the institutions of higher learning to which they were at first so reluctantly admitted, and through their entry into the industrial arena. Woman is naturally religious, said Mrs. Livingston. Her sex outnumbers the other, five to one, in the evangelical churches. Being religious, she has a keen sense of what pertains to the moral welfare of the community. And so, again, she needs the same weapon of defense as man—for the saloon, the social evil, child labor and other great problems cannot be solved without the ballot. Then, too, woman is inherently far more moral than man; only one-third of one per cent of the women in any given community are fallen. Therefore, woman's instinctive thought, on receiving the ballot, would be to rid the city, the state and the nation of great evils that menace the welfare of her daughters.

The speaker told, in an imposing array of statistics, what women of the suffrage states have done in lessening the power of the saloon. "And so," she said, "the women of Maine want the ballot because it will prove a weapon, not only to keep the prohibitory law, but better to enforce it."

Following an address of an hour and a half, Mrs. Livingston answered with lightning-like rapidity the questions which were voiced from all parts of the auditorium. At the close of the meeting she was presented with a box of flowers by the president of the Danforth class, under the auspices of which the meeting had been held.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

A Wave of Prohibition

FACTS AND FIGURES

ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN

(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth by Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

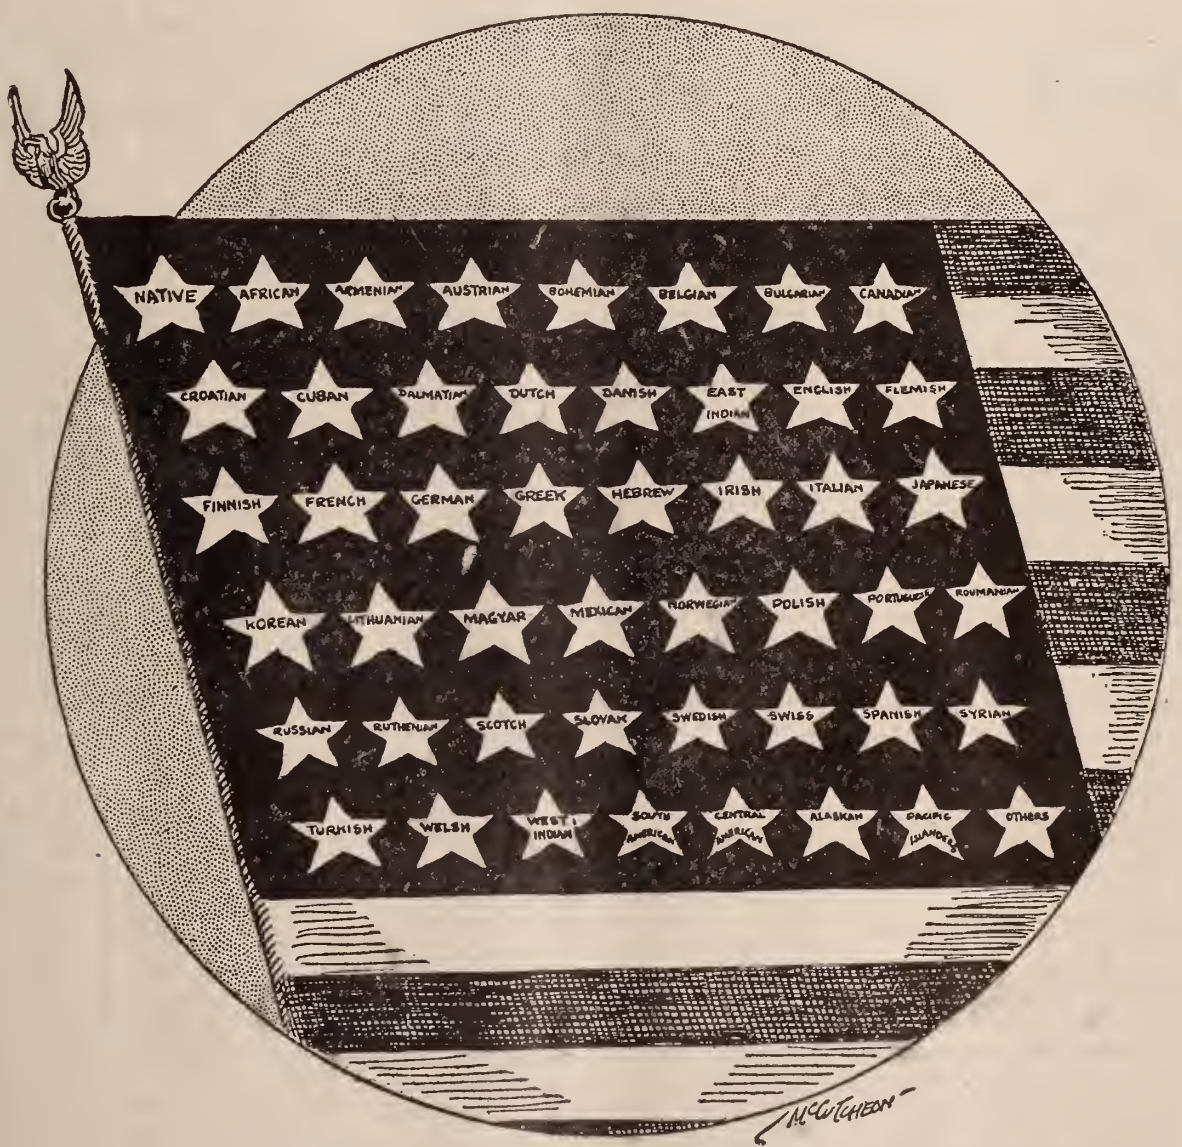
THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., JULY 1, 1915 | No. 27

A Flag for Americanization Day (July 4)



Copyright by John T. McCutcheon in The Chicago Tribune

The principles of total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the nation should be emphasized in the process of Americanizing the many nationalities which make up the citizenship of the United States. Independence Day celebrations afford excellent opportunities for spreading the gospel of National Constitutional Prohibition.

Grand Prize Awarded to World's and National W. C. T. U. Exhibit at Panama-Pacific Exposition

THE grand prize for the finest exhibit in Group 18—"Alcohol, Drugs and Tobacco"—in the department of Social Economy in the Educational section of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, has been awarded to the World's and National W. C. T. U. exhibit. Group 18 has to do with the "physiological and other effects of alcohol, drugs and tobacco; statistics of consumption and economic cost; organized efforts for lessening intemperance and use of drugs and tobacco; also legal regulation of trade in liquor, drugs and tobacco, and private and public management of the liquor trade."

The exhibits in competition with that of the World's and National Woman's Christian Temperance Union were installed by the Anti-Saloon League, the Prohibition Party, the National Temperance Society, the New York Hospital for the Insane, and by Japan and Uruguay.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION SIDE-LIGHTS

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. P. G. Holden of the International Harvester Co., Chicago, on a recent visit to the W. C. T. U. booth for the purpose of examining the literature, requested that samples of all the temperance and anti-narcotic literature and leaflets, including posters, be sent to him in Chicago. His company, he explained, uses millions of pages of literature, and he was impressed with the value of what he saw in the W. C. T. U. booth.

On a recent afternoon a feature of the exposition was a parade showing the transportation facilities from the days of Adam to the present time. In the railroad section a water wagon with "Rule G" in big letters, bore the invitation, "Climb On." This rule, worded by the American Railroad Association and in force in every railroad in the country, reads as follows: "The use of intoxicants by employes while on duty is prohibited. Their use, or the frequenting of places where they are sold, is sufficient cause for dismissal."

Flower Mission Day at the Exposition

At the suggestion of Miss Lella M. Sewall, National Flower Mission superintendent, the state superintendent of Northern California had sent letters to each county insisting that every union take part in observing June 9 as Flower Mission day at the Exposition. Miss Mary Brown had offered the use of her flat for the care of the flowers. Monday evening the first packages came and were cared for. Tuesday morning, shortly after eight o'clock, the expressman came staggering up the stairs with baskets and boxes, saying, "There are twenty-three of them." Boxes and packages had also been left at the booth. By evening there were flowers everywhere. A group of women had been at work at the flat all afternoon and the bath-tub, the laundry-tub, the kitchen-sink, the dish pans, cooking pans, mop-pail, glass jars and clothes-basket, all were full of flowers. Toward nine in the evening the expressman came again, leaving a half dozen boxes which filled the only vacant spots in the flat. Still later in the evening the parcel post delivery man rang the bell and left boxes which stacked the entry to a height of four feet with just room to walk around them. Packages continued to come the next morning both to the flat and the booth. A man was employed to cart the packages from the booth to the flat and carry the prepared flowers from the flat to the booth where the women could fill their baskets and go out with them. All day long he worked faithfully, entering into the spirit of the occasion.

The women first gave bouquets to the gatemen, the roller-chair boys, workmen on the grounds, and the people employed in the booths in the eight or ten large exhibit buildings, and it was late in the afternoon before the last one had been supplied. Between 5,000 and 6,000 floral offerings were distributed. People were so glad to receive them. Men pinned them to their coat lapels and women wore them as corsage bouquets.

San Francisco was not built for homes. With the exception of some special localities, apartment houses, flats and private residences are erected right on the streets and have not even a parking strip. There is no place for the children. Except in a few isolated places they are compelled to play on the pavements. They are starved for flowers and grass and open spaces. Whole boxes of flowers too withered to use on the grounds were pitched from the windows of Miss Brown's flat into the paved court below, in order to give more room for the workers, and it was pitiful to see the children select and carry away all they could find. In the evening they hunted carefully for the blossoms. Miss Brown invited them to come back in the morning, promising them armsful of flowers for their homes and for the people in the neighborhood. They came and helped to tie big bouquets which they carried to people living along pavements having no space for flowers or grass.

That the working people, and not the visitors, were the first to be remembered, seemed to make a happy impression. A woman in the Food Products building said to the white ribboners who gave her flowers, "Oh, I saw something about it in the paper yesterday, but I said they will not find us, and now here they are."

As Scripture verses accompanied the flowers, there were more of them read on the grounds that Flower Mission Day than on any other day of the Exposition, and the Lord's promise is that His word shall not return unto Him void, but shall accomplish that whereunto it is sent. The women prayed as they fashioned the clusters of blossoms and some glad day beside the River of Life may be found some of the fruits of Flower Mission Day at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Converts to Prohibition

A young man of foreign birth, a moderate drinker of light wines and beer, was recently a visitor at the booth. For some time he stood with Miss Brown before the cabinet and she told him of the effect of alcohol on the brain cells which control reason and judgment, and how the moderate use of even beer and wine decreases the efficiency of a man. As he turned from the cabinet, he remarked, "I will never drink another drop," again repeating his promise before he left the booth.

"If these things are true I would better stop now," were the words half spoken, half whispered by a clean-looking man as he examined some of the panels of the exhibit. After a little further study he came over to Miss Brown and talked with her, explaining that he had been a drinking man at one time, but for several years had earnestly worked for prohibition. Within the last two weeks he had begun to take wines and light drinks. The exhibit brought him to his senses and he went away, "clothed and in his right mind."

Six More Minnesota Counties Adopt Prohibition

The election of Monday, June 21, added six more dry counties to the rapidly whitening territory of Minnesota, making a total of thirty-eight counties which have outlawed the liquor traffic since the passage of the county option law by the last legislature. The six counties which voted dry on June 21 are, Pine, Stevens, Faribault, Chippewa, Houston and Mille Lacs, closing 57 saloons; Martin county failed by only 60 votes to secure prohibition and may demand a recount of the ballots. Faribault county, the banner county of the day, won by a plurality of 912 dry votes.

The elections held so far this year have closed approximately 400 saloons.

Kansas Converted Him

Traveling Salesman Won to Prohibition

If you do not believe in the efficacy and benefits of prohibition take a trip through the state of Kansas and you will experience a change of mind. At least, that is what happened to a traveling salesman, G. N. Mahon by name, who lives in Greenville, South Carolina. The People's Voice tells the story. Mr. Mahon was a bitter opponent of prohibition and had heretofore fought the movement because he believed that prohibition was injurious to business.

Last December he made a trip through Kansas and before returning to his home in South Carolina admitted that he was converted. "The facts are so different from the reports that have been sent out by the brewers. I have found business splendid in this state. I find a rustling and a progressive people, and the sight of towns without saloons is an inspiration. I am going right back home and take the stump for prohibition and its strict enforcement, and I am going to tell the folks there the truth about Kansas."

First Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, Ordered to Board Water-Wagon

An evidence of the progress of temperance sentiment in St. Louis, Mo., is the action taken recently by Colonel Arthur B. Donnelly who issued an order declaring that the 1,100 members of the First Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, are hereafter to consider themselves officially aboard the water wagon. The posting of the bulletin announcing the order, which prohibits the use of liquor not only by the officers of the regiment, but by every private, who is to be held to strict accountability for violation, caused a furore of excitement among the regiment members.

Colonel Donnelly said the order was passed because of the youth of a great many members of the regiment. He did not think it was good for the morals of the youngsters to see the older members of the regiment drinking beer, or any other kind of liquor.

Dismissal of officers will follow their violation of the order when in uniform, and rebuke may be expected if they permit any of their men to violate the order either when in or out of uniform.

(From the Chicago Daily News of June 23, 1915.)

1,500 "AD" MEN CHEER FOR CURB ON DRINK

Salute H. D. Estabrook Noisily as He Puts Temperance on Throne with Truth.

SPIRIT OF THE CONVENTION

H. S. Houston Declares the Applause Significant of National Trend of Thought.

Temperance took its place on a throne beside Truth as an ideal of the members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World today. Fifteen hundred advertising men from all corners of the nation stood up and made a deafening demonstration of cheers in the Auditorium theater when Henry D. Estabrook of New York, chief orator of the convention, lauded the action of European rulers and parliaments in curbing the sale of liquor in time of war. A feature of Mr. Estabrook's address, an attack on the archbishop of Canterbury as one responsible for the present grip of whisky on England, was lost sight of in the noisy salute to temperance uttered by the army of advertising delegates.

The dramatic outbreak is said to be a spontaneous reflection of the spirit of the convention, which has been marked by "dry" smokers and official dinners, where intoxicants were barred.

"Russia has forbidden the manufacture of vodka," said Mr. Estabrook. "France has abolished absinthe. But England refused to prohibit the manufacture and sale of whisky, notwithstanding the king, the prime minister and the head of the army eagerly set the example of total abstinence. Why? Because my lord the archbishop of Canterbury is said to have relished a little stimulus with his meals. I hope this story is exaggerated, but there should never have been enough truth in it to exaggerate.

"I observe that the motto of your organization is truth. Is it your purpose to work for it, fight for it, live for it and, if needs be, die for it? Thus you have founded a brotherhood nobler than that of Arthur and his round table, for in their search for the grail another object was revenge. Truth is the holiest name of God."

"The applause given the idea of temperance by the country's advertising men is significant of the national trend of thought," commented H. S. Houston of New York, prominently mentioned as the next president of the associated clubs. "These men are in closer touch with the public feeling and desires than any other class except newspaper men—and perhaps better than politicians. They reflect the general state of mind on a grave problem, and conclusions may be drawn from their attitude."

Census in Russia Shows Popularity of Prohibition

"Remarkable statistics regarding Russia under vodka and Russia under prohibition," says a Liverpool Daily Post special correspondent, "were given at a recent meeting in Petrograd of the Pirogov Society, which takes its name from a famous surgeon and social worker. During the last few years the number of people who had been receiving medical advice, as a result of alcoholic excess, had increased regularly. In 1903 there were 74,500, in 1912 there were 145,000. In the mental hospitals in 1903 there were treated 3,548 cases due to drunkenness. In 1912 there were 9,173. On November 1, 1912, there were 2,363 distilleries in the country. On November 1, 1914, after the prohibition of vodka, there remained only 924.

The Pirogov Society has taken a census on the question of the results of prohibition and replies have been received from 2,167 people. Of these, 92 per cent were peasants, and of these peasants 78 per cent are actual workers on land. Eighty per cent of the replies stated that they had found prohibition beneficial. Twenty per cent declared that they found it rather hard as far as health and feeling were concerned. Eighty-four per cent expressed the desire that vodka should be prohibited forever.

Italy Prohibits the Sale of Strong Drink

Not to be behind the other European countries which have recently restricted or entirely abolished the manufacture and sale of strong drink, Italy, according to an article in The Sacred Heart Review, not long since, without any noise and almost without discussion, passed through its parliament an act forbidding the sale, except within very narrow limits and on rigid conditions, of all liquors. In other times, the article explains, the Italian workman contented himself with his glass or glasses of wine, but of later years he has been acquiring the habit of drinking constantly strong brandy and stronger liquors, and the habit has not improved him either as a citizen or as a worker or as a soldier, and the government has therefore been compelled to remove temptation from his path.

Alcoholics' Families Usually Short-Lived

Report Before French Scientists

In discussion of a report by M. C. Colson on alcoholism before the Academy of Science of Paris, as reported in The Chicago Evening Post, it was stated that after two generations the posterity of alcoholics become extinguished. Raphael George Levy gave the statistics of twenty-four families chosen at random, twelve temperate and twelve alcoholic:

	Alcoholic.	Temperate.
Died in infancy	12	5
Deaf and dumb	2	0
Idiots	8	2
Affected by St. Vitus dance	2	0
Epileptics	13	0
Deformed	3	2
Dwarfs	5	0
Hereditary drunkards	5	0
Healthy	9	50

M. Levy declared that 323 out of 500 persons in houses of detention are alcoholics.

W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS AND REST ROOM AT SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION

The rest room and headquarters of the San Diego W. C. T. U. occupies a beautiful northeast balcony, 26x52 feet, in the Commerce and Industries building, fronting on the Prado, an exceptionally fine point to view the drilling of the U. S. Marines, and the parades occurring almost daily, and within full view of the bands of gorgeously appareled members of many nationalities. The Southern California building is opposite and a little east.

The hangings, rugs and furniture of the rest room are of soft green and russet brown with an abundance of potted and cut flowers. Posters adorn the walls and leaflets of various kinds are provided for free distribution. Dainty, home-cooked lunches are served by white ribboners, who come regularly on stated days to assist during the busy hours. The room has proved deservedly popular, and already upon the register are names of visitors from every state and from several foreign countries.

ADVERTISING ON A DAY'S NOTICE

LORA S. LaMANCE, National Organizer

Scarcely a year passes that does not bring to every union a chance to get a first-class speaker on a day's notice. Something went wrong and the speaker is stranded between two points for just one day. The district president hurries to the 'phone. "Can you use Mrs. Speakwell? It is a chance you ought to jump at. She is extra good, but tomorrow is the only day you can get her. Shall I send her?"

Five times out of ten the union will absolutely refuse to take a speaker on short notice. The other half of the times the union says it will do the best it can.

One time in five the union really does its best. The other four out of every five unions content themselves by writing out a notice and sticking it on the billboard in the post-office lobby, and by sending word of the speaker's presence to a dozen or so parties who are known to be true-blue temperance workers. The result is that sometimes not a dozen adults are present. More often twenty-five or thirty appear, and rarely more than forty come out to these hastily arranged services.

But the other one union in five bestirs itself. Time is money and time is opportunity. If there is a daily paper, a well-written notice appears, and this notice is handed in early or is 'phoned as the case may be. Never wait until a paper is all set up ready for the press before sending in a notice.

Next, handbills are struck off. They do not cost much if medium paper is chosen and if only a few lines in bold print are used. Give just enough to tell who the speaker is and where she is to speak, including an invitation to come and hear her. Get the Christian Endeavorers or the L. T. L. boys to put one in each home, or let ladies stand for two hours at the intersection of the main streets to hand a bill to each passerby. I really believe the latter way is the quickest one to get the handbills scattered widely in a minimum length of time. However, both plans can be used at one and the same time.

'Phone one lady in each church: "Will you please notify every woman in your church who has a 'phone, of Mrs. Speakwell's coming? Other ladies will look after the women of their churches." Many hands make quick work. Sometimes the telephone operator, for a small fee, will call up a special list of names, or will notify friends in the country.

Use every bulletin board in the town, writing the announcement very plainly. Let some one with an auto ride around to the factories, car-shops and mills and get permission to tack up posters or handbills where the men will see them.

In villages of under 2,000 inhabitants the superintendent of schools will usually allow an announcement to be made at school. If the speaker can talk well to pupils—most of our speakers can—send her right to the school to give a short talk. If the boys and girls like her, it is the very best send-off that a lecturer can have. The children are her allies and loyally come themselves and bring their fathers and mothers. Schools are usually glad to listen to something really good.

Sometimes a union sends out its members, mapping out the town and dividing it among them. Each woman takes her beat, visits every house, wet or dry, rich or poor, and personally invites people to attend the lecture. There is no better way. This method always brings out a good audience.

Wonders can be done in a day by the use of printer's ink and woman's tongue. If you have a chance to get a superior speaker, take her if it is only on six hours' notice. Crowd in the work, push the advertising, and set others to doing the same thing. Get the word out quickly. You will get the audience.

ONE WAY FOR LOCAL UNIONS TO SECURE NEW MEMBERS

MRS. LULA LOVELAND SHEPARD, President Utah W. C. T. U.

Why not try a "shower" for the president of your local union? What could be a nicer gift on her birthday than to gladden her heart with a splendid "shower" of new members? An effort might be made to secure as many as she is years old. This plan was tried in Ogden, Utah, by the federated unions in honor of the birthday of their president, Mrs. W. S. Flewelling and resulted in a most substantial gain.

Utah is determined to secure the apportionment assigned to her and more if possible. Mother National must have her 50,000 new members by the time we assemble in convention at Seattle, and our state is glad to share in the plan.

PROHIBITION PROVING POPULAR IN ARIZONA

MRS. IMOGEN F. H. LA CHANCE, President Arizona W. C. T. U.

We are greatly gratified over the reports that are coming to us constantly from counties that voted wet and were at first rebellious and really not inclined to obey the law.

At the second convention of the dry federation a law enforcement committee was appointed and through its direction local law enforcement committees are being appointed and the sheriffs in the worst localities are doing their duty.

Letters are coming to the W. C. T. U. and to the federation from sheriffs saying that though they voted wet, they are convinced that prohibition is of great benefit; that crime has decreased to such an extent that there is no doubt that it is much better for the state to have the law and that they are doing and will continue to do their duty as officers.

Page after page could be filled with statements proving the change for the better since our law was put into operation. Please take notice that we did not wait a year for the law to operate, we gave the liquor crowd from November 3 to January in which to exist and in spite of all which may be heard to the contrary, prohibition does prohibit in Arizona. The liquor traffic feels the force of the law as much as do other outlaws.

Business men and others who opposed prohibition are now delighted with its beneficent influence.

IN PROHIBITION KANSAS

Kansas has $13,000,000 more on deposit in the banks than she had a year ago at this time. And in six weeks she will harvest 120,000,000 bushels more of $1.25 wheat in spite of the fly. She will have for this year $30,000,000 worth of alfalfa, $20,000,000 worth of eggs, $180,000,000 worth of live stock, $75,000,000 worth of corn, oats and other cereals, $50,000,000 worth of fruit and garden sass, $200,000,000 worth of coal, lead, zinc and oil; she will graduate 25,000 high school students, 3,000 finished products from academies, colleges and universities, and, after paying for the gowns and flowers, she will have $204,000,000 in the bank. She will have 100,000 weddings in June, with which to open the marrying season.—Wichita Beacon.

President Poincaré on Alcohol

Writing to a temperance society, M. Poincaré, the president of France, says: "You ask the president of the Republic to follow the example of other heads of foreign states, and pledge himself to abstain from all spirituous liquors during the war. That is a pledge which it is very easy for the president to take, not only for the duration of the war, but beyond it, for the president never takes alcohol."

It is also stated that the president is a non-smoker.

WALT MASON EXTOLS BENEFITS OF PROHIBITION IN LONDON NEWSPAPER

The word pictures of prohibition in Kansas by Walt Mason, recently published in the London Chronicle, ought to arouse in English readers a desire for a similar condition in Great Britain. They are most enticing. He says:

"Kansas is so well pleased with prohibition that no man can hope to attain office in the state unless he is pledged to an absolute enforcement of the prohibitory law. Since both the front and back doors of the saloons and drug stores were closed, there has been an astonishing prosperity throughout the state, and this notwithstanding several years of crop failures. Poorhouses are empty, and gaols are so lonesome nobody likes to live in them. Workmen buy lumber and furniture and own their homes instead of cold brunette bottles. Towns which used to be squalid and frowsy have braced up, and have become as beautiful as a girl at a picnic.

"In the state of Kansas there are no places where men or boys may assemble and spend the night in wassail. And herein lies the beauty of prohibition; for it is the convivial spirit that makes drunkards. Few young men care to drink in silence and alone; they are led into dissipated ways by the desire to hold merry converse with their fellows and to hold such converse a tap room of some sort is necessary. If young men in Kansas would foregather for a festive evening, with brimming tankards, they must skulk to secret places to do it, and the majority of the young men have too much self-respect.

"The drunkard factories are closed in Kansas. The boys are growing up without knowledge of or desire for liquor. They have acquired a profound contempt for drunkards and for drinking. Kansas boys are distinguishing themselves everywhere; 'the man from Kansas' is so conspicuous in all lines of worthy endeavor that the matter has become a national jest. The young man who recently won the heavyweight championship of the world came from a Kansas town, where he had never seen a saloon, and had never taken a drink.

"Now, all the stories about the failure of prohibition in Kansas are based upon conditions as they were seven or eight years ago. They are cleverly presented, so as to create the impression that they describe existing conditions, but they do not. Today the prohibition law is enforced as tightly as is humanly possible in Kansas, and the state is a miracle of prosperity, of cleanliness, of high moral and intellectual achievement.

"The arguments of the anti-prohibitionists are trivial and foolish. If a man is arrested for drunkenness, or a secret joint is raided in Kansas, the opponents of the law, all over the country, point triumphantly to the fact as proof that prohibition does not prohibit. You have laws against murder in England, yet I read in the Daily Chronicle many stories of that crime. Consequently your laws against murder are a failure, and you should repeal them.

"All stock arguments against prohibition are equally absurd.

Liquor is Doomed

"The moral is that prohibition is a great success when it is properly enforced. Close every groggery in Great Britain, and it may cause some suffering to the present generation, which has built up a priceless thirst, but the next generation will be free from the greatest curse in history.

"Liquor is doomed, because it is an anachronism. It was very well in the days of ducking stools and pillories and torture chambers, but it has no true place in an advanced civilization, or in a civilization that is trying to advance. For anything that interferes with human efficiency must go.

"Efficiency and alcohol never did walk together hand in hand, and never will; therefore, as efficiency is necessary, and alcohol is not, the latter has doom written against its name."

PROHIBITION A PRODUCT OF THE PIONEER CONSCIENCE

In an article by Frederick M. Davenport in a recent number of The Outlook on "The Trail of Progress and Reaction in the West," the author traces in a most interesting fashion what he terms "the persistence of the pioneer conscience." He sees in prohibition a practical working out of this pioneer conscience and calls attention to the following illuminating facts:

"The movement did not wait for Russia or France or England or the European war. It was in full swing before the war began. Strangely enough it is no longer primarily moral or sentimental. It is a business and labor issue now. Mining camps went dry in Colorado at the last election which were predicted by everybody to be irrevocably wet. Large numbers of men for the first time decided that their wages would do more good if used for the wife and children than if squandered over the bar and in gambling on Saturday nights. Ten years ago the saloon in the West was looked upon as a social institution that men could not get along without. Now it is looked upon as too dangerous to the family institution and to the state to be tolerated.

"Montana tried an illuminating experiment in September, 1914. My information comes from an official of the state government and from the accident records of the Anaconda Copper Mining company. The city of Butte was the seat of civil war in the summer and fall of last year. It was not a conflict between capital and labor or between employer and employe, but between two divisions of the Western Federation of Miners, one of which believed that its chief representatives were grafters and had betrayed the workers, while the other upheld the old leaders. There were violence and bloodshed, and the militia were called in. From September 1 to September 14 all saloons in Butte were closed tight under martial law. From September 14 to September 24 they were open only from eight in the morning to seven in the evening, and for the rest of the month were open from seven in the morning to ten in the evening. The curve of the number of accidents, and of the number of men who did not turn up at shift, in the first two weeks fell from the usual high average to almost the base line. A minimum percentage of men failed to turn up at shifts, and the number of accidents was very small. During the next four weeks the curve rose steadily with the number of hours during which the saloons were open. I have the records of the Anaconda Copper Mining Corporation before me. During the month of August which preceded the closing of the saloons the number of accidents per ten thousand shifts was eleven and twenty-five hundredths. During September, when for only half a month every saloon was closed tight, the number of accidents fell to four and twenty-one hundredths per ten thousand shifts. Among the rules appearing on the bulletin boards at the mines is the following: 'Never go to work after drinking liquor, and if you must drink, stay at home. Experience has proven that a great many accidents are caused from drinking intoxicating liquors.'

"It is a matter of business efficiency and common sense. Neither employes nor society will stand long for workmen's compensation acts unless liquor is eliminated from the dietary of men at least in every form of hazardous occupation. And between the hazard to the family, and the hazard in the occupation, and the hazard to law and order, the collective power of the state has determined to close in fast on the liquor business in the West.

"I saw in Minnesota a most unbiased and significant and bona-fide letter from a big brewer in Oregon. Oregon had just gone dry. The brewer in Oregon was writing to a large brewing corporation in Minnesota requesting them to buy his surplus hops. In the most straightforward and open manner he related the woes of the business in the West. He labored under no illusion. He realized that the end had come in that section of the United States. As to his machinery, he had been offered hardly ten cents on the dollar. But he thought he ought to sell his hops at a fair figure. And as a warning, and as inside information to the brewers of Minnesota who likewise are facing extinction in their own state, he appended a chart of the rocks in Oregon upon which the brewing business had been wrecked. And these were the dangers against which he warned the brewers of Minnesota: Woman suffrage, the initiative and referendum (by which the people start trouble themselves without intervention of the legislature), lack of organized co-operation in their business, whisky (by which he meant that the liquor men should have been wise enough to let the strong stimulants go, and should have sought to retain the beer and light wines), and finally, the low character of the saloonkeepers who have been their selling agents!"

HOW THEY CELEBRATED INDEPENDENCE DAY

GRACE BOTELER SANDERS, Jamestown, O.

A gay crowd of young men in white flannels, white shoes, and white Panamas dropped from the car at the corner of Lagonda avenue and stopped for a moment to wipe their hot foreheads. A little July breeze, which came whizzing down the railroad track, fluffed pompadours and set neckties waving. It caught, also, the frayed old black tie of the man upon the corner who watched the party so intently with his bloodshot blue eyes that the gaze of the leader was drawn irresistibly to him.

One quiet glance from the top of the loafer's head to his worn old shoes told of untidiness and drunkenness, and the tall young man shrugged his shoulders and turned away from the down-and-outer. "Let's chin the old fellow awhile and ask him how he's enjoying his independence," he laughed. "He looks independent, I must say!"

Old Jim heard and a deep red flush painted his whisky-burned cheeks. He started to flee, for even now all pride had not been smothered, but loud cheering from the ball park, toward which the boys were bound, attracted their attention and they retraced their steps and started the other way.

"Poor old derelict, let him go," suggested a pitying voice.. "It's time for the ball game anyhow!"

Jim, who, when he could get a chance, scrubbed floors and cleaned cuspidors, and drained the glasses in Nick's Place, or any other saloon, before he washed them, watched the party until the tall young man, the counterpart of what he himself had once been, led the others through the gate at the park where a stream of autos, carriages and pedestrians was disappearing. People who knew old Jim supposed that his conscience was dead, but today a curious awakening had filled his muddled brain with pictures of a beautiful past long since melted into oblivion. He felt as if he could not bear the thought of what he had become, and sinking down upon a seat in front of the saloon where for three desperate, unlovely years he had "hung out," he covered his face with his hands and groaned aloud.

Over his head the Stars and Stripes, which Nick had appropriated for decorations in honor of the day, swung gently and brushed the old gray head with pitying fingers. In the ball park the band was playing, "The Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

Oh, the painfulness of these reminders of the past! There had been a time when Jim, among the bravest of the brave, had marched out at the head of his regiment to fight for his country, and then had begun for him a terrible bondage of body and soul. His hands, his feet, his heart, his mind had come under the control of the demon rum. On the battle-field he had taken his first drink and begun the welding of an indissoluble chain of habit. After coming home, where he was lauded as a hero, he married the prettiest, sweetest girl in the neighborhood, with whom he settled down on a fine farm. But he continued to drink, "for friendship's sake." As he grew older he spent the greater part of his time at the saloon. Soon he became a menace to his family, abusing his wife and children. Finally he squandered his property, and when love and light and even the hope of safety were gone, the gentle wife and promising children left him to pursue alone his whisky-soaked path. He had given up all for the bottle. It had brought him to this.

One day the report of his death in a railway accident had lifted from his wife and children the stigma which he had thrown upon them. It was a poor old tramp who was killed, but Jim, knowing that a reconciliation was impossible, concluded that it was better for his family to believe it was he, and he had continued on his way tottering down the path to destruction.

The Grand Army, the Junior Order, and many companies of soldiers, with drum and fife, bands of music and flying flags, marched by on their way to the fair grounds, but Jim did not raise his head. Just as they reached the railroad crossing, just as the long line of hot, dusty men, who had marched miles, came to a standstill, a train slid across the track and blocked their way. The July sun blazed pitilessly upon them as they waited. The little breeze, which had been their only relief, died away. The men shifted from one foot to the other. They waited five minutes—ten minutes. Then they glanced sideways and saw in Nick's Place a pictured beer glass covered with foam. It reminded them of electric fans and cooling draughts, and without further parley they broke ranks and made for the saloon door. How pleasant was the room! The bartenders could not pass out drinks rapidly enough, and the saloonist, who saw Jim nodding by the door, decided that he would enlist his services. "Jim," he called, "get in here and make yourself useful as well as ornamental."

The crowd set up a laugh as the bleareyed old man staggered behind the bar, but they took the glasses from his trembling hands and failed to see in him an object lesson by which they might profit. It was thirty minutes before the train moved on. It was an hour before the marshal could induce the men to go on with the march. In all that time Jim never ceased "slinging" drinks. He was almost exhausted when the party had gone and as he sank into the first chair at hand reached for a glass. The saloonist roughly struck it from his hand. "None of that, fellow," he ordered. "You're Jim-dandy help. You shall drink as much as you like tonight, but now when everybody wants a drink, and the bartenders are about done up, and there's no help to be hired for love or money, I've got to keep you in shape for business. The ball players will be in here pretty soon. They're regular high rollers, and then there'll be some of the folks who watched the game, and others. Oh, we'll be busy as can be. Not another drink until after business hours!"

Jim's hand dropped the glass. Deciding that he did not want the liquor anyway, he settled himself for a rest. Occasionally he heard cheering and strains of music from the ball park. After a while a long line of cars lined themselves up in front for the use of the ball players and Jim sighed when he remembered that custom would soon begin again. He felt old and tired. There was a rush for the great gate as the crowd began to pour out. The saloon quickly began to fill. Jim took his position behind the bar and watched the men fight and push for first place in the line. Coolly, indifferently, the bartenders and Jim handed out drinks and raked in coin, and still the crowd came. But suddenly something happened which made the old man's sluggish blood leap into action. The leader of the players, the light-haired boy Jim had noticed, was hesitatingly, reluctantly following the crowd into the room. "Oh, I don't want anything. I never took a drink in my life," he laughed. "I just came in because the crowd did. No, I won't take anything. I promised mother I never would."

"Mammy's boy!" jeered the crowd. Old Jim's eyes flashed as he watched to see who would win the battle. Still they urged the boy to drink, and one of his companions, his chum, holding a glass to his lips, called him coward and dared him to refuse to be a sport. Then the boy yielded. "Well, if I must," he said with a forced laugh and raised the glass to his lips.

Jim suddenly raised his arm and shattered the glass to atoms upon the marble slab. There was instant pandemonium. The old man leapt over the counter and laid his hand on the boy's arm. "Look at me!" he begged. "See what one drink did for me. Once I was as tall and handsome and capable as you are but one drink drove me on to the gutter and made me what I am. You say you never drank. Go home to your mother and tell her what happened here and never, never enter such a place again—no, not even to please your best friend. O boy, go!"

The young man looked into the pleading, bloodshot eyes and then he said something to the other fellows which made them follow him out of the saloon. It all happened so quickly that there was not time to interfere, if any one had thought of such a thing, but when the boys had gone and a lull had fallen over the place, the saloonist awoke. He rushed for Jim fists clenched. His temper, never of the best, had been fed by liquor until he was madly insane.

"What do you mean, you old fool?" he cried. "Take that—and that—and that—get out of my place forever or I'll 'jug' you. That's where you belong." Jim fell like a log. His heart, weakened by liquor drinking, could not stand the strain. He looked up at his persecutor with hungry pleading eyes. "What made you do it, Jim?" demanded the saloonkeeper suddenly repentant. "'Taint like you to turn traitor. Tell me you'll never do such a thing again and I'll overlook it this once."

Jim, breathing heavily, sighed faintly. "I'm going to die," he gasped. "When it's over tell the boy, when he's alone that I looked just like him thirty years ago and I couldn't see him take the same track. Tell him, Nick—oh, I hate to have you hurt him—but tell him I had to snatch that glass away for I am his father. O Nick, don't forget." Old Jim gave a shudder and lay still in death.

Thoroughly sobered the saloonkeeper turned to his bartender: "If saloons turn boys like that into such products as poor old Jim, I'll close mine," he said huskily. "Everybody's celebrating tonight. I'll join in by shutting Nick's Place forever."

And he did.

GET INTO THE FIGHT

Get into the fight for God and right,
The fight that is on today,
For church increased, in a land released,
From rum's satanic sway.

Get into the fight with heart and might,
For the sake of the weary throng
Of waifs unclad, and women sad,
And brother men gone wrong.

Get into the fight! time wings its flight,
Get into the fight today!
There is work to do, and the call means you.
Get into the fight to stay.

Get into the fight! for the Lord of might
Has bidden His church bestow
Her power and wealth, for the nation's health
And the Kingdom of God below.

Get into the fight! for the dawn is bright,
Of the day not far remote,
When o'er our land from strand to strand,
A "Stainless Flag" shall float.

—The Keystone Citizen.

"THE LITTLE WHITE SLAVER"

REV. DUNCAN C. MILNER, Chicago, Ill.

The past year has witnessed the glorification of the cigaret. Many leading papers and magazines that have cut out all liquor advertisements, have published the most artistic and splendid advertisements of cigarets. There has been a parade of the names of ministers, physicians, actors and actresses who use cigarets. The newspapers have described young women in so-called high society as possessed of jeweled and gold cigaret cases and smoking in public places.

The most noted publicity has been given the cigaret in connection with the war in Europe. There seems to have been a studied effort to give prominence to the use of "the little white slaver" by officers and soldiers. To the soldiers in hospitals and in trenches cigarets have been furnished as if they supplied a need more urgent than that for food and drink. In many cases liquors have been forbidden, but the distribution of cigarets has been encouraged. In one instance it was reported that three thousand dollars had been raised and invested in cigarets to give to soldiers in hospitals and we have had pictures of nurses distributing them. And this expenditure of money when women and children in Belgium and Poland were perishing with hunger! The president of the American Tobacco Company has reported that while the sale of cigars in the last ten years has increased eight per cent, in a little longer time the cigaret trade has increased over seven hundred per cent. It has been suggested that this enormous increase in the use of cigarets was given an impetus by the Spanish-American war, when Americans came into intimate relations with cigaret smoking people.

While there has been this tremendous increase in cigaret smoking, and the boy and young men devotees of "the little white slaver" are seen in increasing numbers on our streets, the opinions of physicians and other experts as to the evil effects of using cigarets have not been modified. Many banks, stores, and manufacturing establishments still announce: "No cigaret smokers employed." Connie Mack and other leaders of baseball say cigaret smoking unfits players for their work. The leaders and teachers of athletics declare that cigaret smoking must be cut out.

William Hale Thompson, mayor of Chicago, in telling how a boy may train for success in athletics says, "He stops smoking cigarets, for his trainer tells him he can not run and smoke."

The number of insane and mentally defective persons is rapidly increasing. Dr. Forbes Winslow of England, who is regarded as among the highest authorities on mental diseases, says: "The true causes of insanity are the vices and not the worries of civilization. I should put the causes of insanity in the following order: Drink, cigaret smoking and heredity. By heredity we merely mean the inherited results of the bad habits of ancestors who drank and smoked."

The officers and teachers of our schools and colleges are almost a unit in the opinion that the cigaret is perhaps the greatest cause of the physical and mental degeneration of the boys.

The civilized nations have aided China in the tremendous work of suppressing the use of opium. Recently some of the leading men of China, backed by the opinions of physicians and teachers, have expressed the conviction that it now seems that the cigaret is becoming a greater danger than opium ever was.

John Barleycorn, A Destroyer of Homes, Has Caused 200,000 Divorces In the United States In Two Decades

WILLIAM N. GEMMILL, Judge of the Municipal Court of Chicago

Booze is the mother of crime. It gives life and sustenance to slums, dives, brothels, gambling dens and "pay-off joints." It nerves to his deed the homicide, the stick-up man, the burglar, the thief and the thug. It fires the brain of the prostitute and the panderer. It feeds and inflames the passions of the weak-minded and the degenerate.

I have tried an army of 50,000 human derelicts, most of whom were booze-soaked. With faces red and bloated, with eyes dull and languid, with bodies weak and wasted, with clothing foul and ragged, this vast army is forever marching with unsteady step to the graves of the drunkard and the pauper or to the prison and workhouse.

I have looked into the tear-stained faces of a still larger army of fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, wives and husbands, as they have pleaded for the miserable wrecks that booze has made. I have seen with this army ten thousand pale-faced, hollow-cheeked, ragged, hungry and starving children, cursed by booze.

A Breeder of Criminals

I have observed that every bandit crew that goes forth to murder starts from a saloon; that every panderer has his rendezvous in a grogshop; that every den of thieves makes its victims drunk before it robs them; that every house of prostitution has its bar or is in partnership with booze; that every gambling den either is in a saloon or sustains a close relationship with one; that the pickpocket "trust" is housed in a saloon; that the "pay-off joint" for the crook and the crooked policeman is in a saloon; that the professional bondsmen and character witnesses for thieves and holdup men are saloonkeepers or bartenders.

Booze has caused 200,000 divorces in the United States in the last twenty years, and adds 25,000 more to this number every year. It divides more homes, fills more jails and empties more churches than all other influences combined.

Judges, legislators, mayors, governors and even presidents sit dumb or quail in the presence of this monster, which enters millions of homes and leaves them desolate.

I have witnessed daily its ravages after it has spent its wild fury upon the helpless bodies of women and children, or after it has reaped for a night, in the public dance, its harvest of virtue, now dead forever. I have observed that the last man to be employed and the first to be discharged is a victim of booze.

Booze never built a park, a playground, a school or a church, but is the enemy of them all.

War may be hell, but where it slays its thousands booze destroys its tens of thousands.—Chicago Herald

South Carolina Preparing For Prohibition

MRS. JOSEPH SPROTT, State W. C. T. U. President

The sentiment in South Carolina not only for state-wide, but also for nation-wide prohibition is steadily growing, and there is little doubt that South Carolina will be the nineteenth state to be hung on the dry line! The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is doing its full share of the work. Advantage is being taken of the special literature offer, and each county where the W. C. T. U. is organized, is planning to carry on a systematic campaign during the summer.

Mrs. Amy C. Weech of Virginia spent nearly two months in the state earlier in the year, and she is coming back in August. We hope also to have the services of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hoge of Virginia for a while in August, and also to hear Dr. Camp of Georgia. Miss Cleo Attaway, our own state organizer, is constantly afield.

The fact that we have a governor who can and does enforce all laws—even in Charleston and Columbia!—is having a most encouraging effect, and many who formerly argued otherwise are beginning to acknowledge that "Prohibition prohibits," when there is a man like Richard I. Manning behind the law.

Our state convention, to be held at Allendale, will take place early (September 2-5) so that before the election, which is set for September 14, its influence may be felt in the county.

At a meeting of the executive board of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Baptist church, held in Columbia, S. C., June 10-11, a resolution was adopted endorsing the state-wide prohibition movement and offering to co-operate with the temperance forces in bringing about a successful election on September 14. The board will adopt the program prepared and sent out by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and give a session, or a part of a session, at all annual missionary rallies between now and the election to discussion of the subject of temperance.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, July 1, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

If you hesitate to talk prohibition to your friends and business associates, hang in a prominent place upon the wall of your office or store or the living room of your residence a prohibition map, and let it do the talking for you.

In planning for the celebration of "Americanization Day" in your city, do not forget to distribute among our New Americans the attractive new "Welcome" leaflet by our National W. C. T. U. president, printed in English, German, Italian, Spanish, Swedish and Norwegian, and having on its first page a beautiful picture, in colors, of the American Flag. Price, per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 25 cents.

Prohibition causes an increase in consumption of alcoholic liquors the dealers in drink tell us. Yet, according to the latest figures of the Internal Revenue department, in the period between November 12, 1914, and May 1, 1915, there has been a decrease of $15,000,000 in revenue due to the falling off in consumption of alcoholic beverages. Which statement will you believe?

"AMERICANIZATION DAY"

The Fourth of July is becoming something more dignified and patriotic than the torpedo-firecracker-skyrocket holiday of the past. Most encouraging results of the efforts to have the day more worthily observed are everywhere to be seen. This year many communities are planning to act upon the suggestion of the commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island and make Independence Day an occasion for welcoming newly naturalized citizens, the day to be known as "Americanization Day." Some will do as did the city of Cleveland last year—invite all the newly naturalized citizens to a reception, where patriotic music and the reciting of the "Pledge of Allegiance," with the presentation to each guest of a little American flag and a seal button bearing the word "Citizen," will be features of the program. In one city a prize has been offered for the best essay on "What America Means and How to Americanize the Immigrant."

In every celebration of this character—and we hope they may be very numerous—the thought to be emphasized will be the privilege, distinction and responsibility of citizenship. Americanization Day will, however, we believe, fail of its purpose if it does not awaken in the hearts of native-born citizens a new sense of responsibility to the men and women who are coming to us from other lands. We may well ask ourselves the question: Are we doing all we ought to make America the ideal "promised land" towards which the liberty-loving people of the Old World look longingly? Must we not with shame admit that at the present time representatives of some of the nations of Europe coming to our shores will find less protection from the liquor evil than they have at home? Can we give to the fathers and mothers whom we are urging to become citizens assurance that in this "land of the free" there is adequate freedom for their children from the temptation of the ever-present liquor traffic?

May "Americanization Day" be a day for registering anew our Declaration of Independence from King Alcohol and determining to work tirelessly to place in the constitution of the United States an amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all alcoholic liquors.

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT(?)

The restriction of the sale of alcoholic liquors to light wines and beers is suggested by The Chicago Tribune as a possible "interesting experiment." We grant that if the treatment of the drink evil were a purely academic question and not a life and death matter for so many people, the experiment might indeed be interesting to people who like that sort of thing. However, since scientists have shown that wine and beer contain, in varying degrees, the deadly poison alcohol, experimenting with it seems a somewhat costly method of procedure. Not in such fashion are latter-day scientists dealing with malignant disease. When men of prominence and authority in the medical profession state it as their professional opinion based on many years' observation that beer is doing more harm and is more prolific in producing certain organic diseases of the liver and kidneys than all other alcoholic liquors, there seems but one way to deal with it, namely, to exterminate it. When life insurance companies compute that the habit of beer drinking shortens life from forty to sixty per cent, and judges in our courts declare that a large proportion of the men brought before them for misdemeanors are beer-drinkers there seems little room for argument as to the undesirability of the traffic.

Why waste time in "experimenting" with a business which is doing incalculable harm to human life and character when it has been conclusively demonstrated that total prohibition of it is possible. How short-sighted to indulge in theorizing on half-way measures when whole states have successfully solved the problem of what to do with the liquor traffic. The only experiment with the liquor evil that is certain to prove continuously and increasingly interesting to all the people of any community is the one that has been tried for many years by the state of Kansas, as a result of which her jails and poor-houses have been emptied, her homes made happy and prosperous and her civic life purified.

ADVERTISING MEN REFLECT BUSINESS SENTIMENT

It was inevitable that a body of men taking as their slogan, "Truth," should look favorably upon the temperance movement. Such a company is the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which met in convention in Chicago last week. The enthusiastic and apparently unanimous demonstration that greeted the remarks of one of the chief orators of that gathering in favor of prohibition spoke eloquently of the attitude of the membership of the organization. This action is tremendously significant as showing the feeling of the business interests which the advertising men represent.

"Any advertising is objectionable that adversely affects the public health, morals or pockets," was the definition given by the chairman of the national vigilance committee of the organization. How well this concise, comprehensive phrase describes liquor advertising. As to the matter of health, no less an authority than the health commissioner of the largest and wealthiest metropolis of the United States has just declared that he believes alcohol to be a menace to the physical well-being of the public. On the ground of morals, criminologists and penologists without number furnish indisputable proof that alcohol is the chief cause of crime and immorality of every type. As to the adverse effect of the drink evil on the pocket books of the public, the charity organizations tell us that John Barleycorn has no rival as a pauperizer.

The growing unpopularity of liquor advertising is well known. Recently the Temperance Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church made an investigation and learned that at least one-fourth of the daily papers of our country refuse all liquor advertising, and since that statement was made there have been many additions to the number.

That this elimination of liquor advertising is not at all displeasing to the reading public is vouched for by many publishers who have rejected this character of business. "It is the observation of newspaper publishers everywhere that the throwing out of liquor advertisements does not result in decreasing receipts," says the Harrisburg (Penn.) Telegraph. "Not only are they convinced that it is the right thing to do but it is now the popular course to pursue."

AMERICA TO BE

(Dedicated to Mrs. Ella A. Boole)

Air: "When the Mists Have Rolled Away"

GEORGIA B. WEATON

When the golden gates of morning
Outward swing to radiant day,
When the dark of night is ended,
And the shadows flee away,
We shall see fulfilled the promise
Of America to be,
When the gates of love swing outward,
And the truth shall make us free.

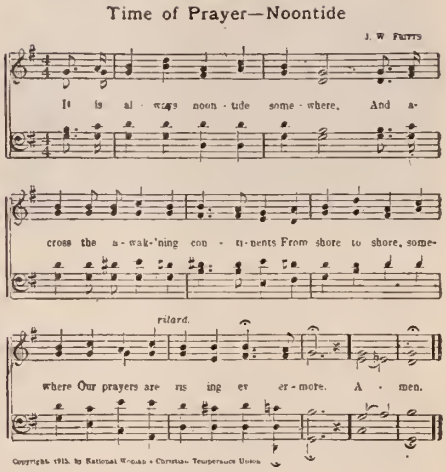
CHORUS:

In its glory we shall see,
Land of larger liberty,
Stainless stars and stripes forever,
O'er America to be,
When the gates of love swing outward,
And the truth shall make us free.

When the golden rule of loving
Measures every civic plan,
As thyself so is thy neighbor,
Brings the golden age of man,
Then the gates of life and justice
Shall swing out in unity,
Government of people ruling,
Home of full equality.

When the golden era dawning,
Flashes joy to all the world,
When the flags of peace and freedom
O'er the nations are unfurled
Then the cords of love earth binding,
Bonds of right and purity,
Shall proclaim the new evangel
Of a world forever free.

Time of Prayer—Noontide



SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Sir Thomas Dewar, managing director of the distillery firm of John Dewar & Sons, and recognized as spokesman of the distilling interests of England, is reported to have recently declared that there had been a marked decrease in the sale of alcoholic liquors in the United Kingdom since the beginning of the war. This decrease has been so great that brewers and distillers will curtail the output.

That sentiment for prohibition is steadily growing in Wisconsin is shown by the fact that 77 of the 142 communities in which the liquor question was an issue this year, voted dry, as reported by the Milwaukee Journal, and 14 of these 77 were towns of 1,000 or more population.

Cato Sells, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has recently awarded prizes to 729 successful contestants among pupils in the Indian schools of the United States, the contest being for the first, second and third best essays written by the Indian pupils on the effect of alcoholism on men, women and children. This contest was participated in by several thousand Indian children and it is believed will have a large influence in impressing upon the students, their parents and other Indians the evil effects resulting from the use of liquor.

Hermosa Beach, Calif., a dry resort, was on June 29 the scene of the picnic of the South Pasadena Chamber of Commerce. In considering the advantages of various picnic grounds, Redondo Beach, where liquor is sold, was passed by in favor of the smaller resort which is dry.

Artesia, N. M., by a vote of 177 to 34, at a recent election, made known its decision to stay in the dry column.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad officials, according to an item in the Chicago Examiner, recently announced that after June 30 liquor-selling will be prohibited on every train of its entire system.

The first question Judge Quinn of Austin, Minnesota, asks in questioning candidates for American citizenship is, "Do you drink?"

Kansas has only forty paupers to 100,000 of its population, according to the 1910 census as compared with an average for the entire United States of 100 paupers to every 100,000 of population.

Eighty-three of the eighty-five prisoners of the Salem (Mass.) workhouse favor nation-wide prohibition according to a vote taken on a recent occasion. The chaplain of the institution says that more than 95 per cent of all prisoners are intemperate, and that 67 per cent of all imprisonments are for drunkenness.

The passage of an injunction and abatement bill for the suppression of vice by the Illinois legislature at its recent session, is a cause for great rejoicing throughout the state. The measure which was patterned after the Iowa statute has within the last few days received the signature of Governor Dunne. It is reported that to date this bill has been enacted into law in twenty states.

"If ever you had a fight before you in Pennsylvania in all your lives, you'll have one from now on," were the warning words of James Mulvihill, a leader in Pennsylvania liquor circles at a dinner of liquor dealers recently. The prediction was received in silence by the diners. It should be enlightening to men who patronize the wares of the liquor dealers to know that on this occasion, as on many similar ones, the dealers themselves drank not liquors, although they were on the menu, but water, the drink of the temperance advocates the world over.

The United States Supreme Court, by a recent decision in the Caminetti case has reaffirmed the conviction of the unworthy son of a high government official and has again established that taking a girl from one state into another for immoral purposes is white slavery, even though the girl is not sold or rented for commercial profits. This decision has cleared the way for the punishment of every one who takes a woman across any state line for immoral purposes.

A toast to President Wilson was recently drank in water by 300 delegates and guests at a banquet of the International Stereotypers' and Electrotypers' union held in the city of Washington.

BEYOND

It seemeth such a little way to me
Across to that strange country, the Beyond;
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond.
They make it seem familiar and most dear
As journeying friends bring distant countries near.

I never stand above the bier and see
The seal of death set on some well-loved face
But that I think—one more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one Over There;
One more to make the strange Beyond seem fair.

And so to me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory.
It is but crossing with suspended breath
And white, set face, a little strip of sea,
To find the loved ones on the other shore,
More beautiful, more precious, than before.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

We record here the name of a comrade and friend who has recently passed to the higher life:

MR. ROBERT MIDDLETON, husband of Mrs. L. O. Middleton, lecturer for the Scientific Temperance Instruction department; and a true friend and helper of the W. C. T. U. Mr. Middleton died suddenly June 21.

There is light for me on the trackless wild,
As the wonders of old I trace.
When the God of the whole earth went before
To search me a resting place.
Has He changed for me? Nay! He changes not
He will bring me by some new way.
Through fire and flood and each crafty foe,
As safely as yesterday.

—Selected

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS FRANCES P PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS E PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
*MRS ELIZABETH P HUTCHINSON EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 21—Loyal Temperance Legion Day (Birthday of Anna A. Gordon)
JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

ACTING TREASURER'S REPORT

FRANCES E. WILLARD MEMORIAL FUND
LILLIAN STEVENS CAMPAIGN FUND

FRANCES P. PARKS

The following contributions to the Memorial and Campaign funds have been received since last report; in each case $2 unless otherwise stated:

Cora Hebert: $0.40.

Tennessee: McKenzie, Watertown, Huntingdon, Lemsburg $10, Springfield, Dickson, Nashville (West Side) $2.10, Maxwell, Petersburg, Kenton, Howell, Nashville (East). Total $32.10.

Wyoming: Burns, Lingle $1.70, Cheyenne, S. Cheyenne $1, Sheridan, Goshen S. S., Casper, Wheatland, Carpenter, Frances Willard, Rock Springs $2.91. Total $21.61.

Texas: $56.70, Donna $2.70. Total $59.40.

Alaska: Skagway $4.

Illinois: Saybrook, Belleflower. Total $4.

East Washington: Washtucna.

Michigan: $140.77, Otia. Total $142.77.

Oklahoma: $14, Crescent $2.25. Total $16.25.

Kansas: Powhattan.

Nebraska: Pierce.

A Friend: $3.

West Virginia: Flatwoods.

Connecticut: Unionville.

Delaware: $20.

Massachusetts: $50, Dorchester $3.05. Total $53.05.

Vermont: Brattleboro $2.50.

Tennessee No. 2: Fisk Univ. Y. P. B.

Montana: $30.

West Geneva: $2.

Ohio: Jamestown, E. Village Y. P. B., Mary S. Powers Y. P. B., Harriet Ogle, Highland Y. P. B., Bloomingdale $1, Chillicothe, Sarah A. Struthers, Beaverdam $1.50, Norwood, West Portsmouth, Kendall Ave. $1, Sullivan, Perry Twp., Lockland, Chase, Jesse Ackerman, Viola D. Romans Union $2.53, Milford, Akron (West Hill), Middletown, Hill Top $1, Blanchester, Coalbrook $1, St. Clairville, Darbyville, Ensign $2.15, Yellow Spring, Newcomerstown, Mingo Jct., Burton. Total $55.78.

Oregon: Albany, Albania, Alpine, Arleta, Ashland, $0.92, Astoria, Aumsville, Baker, Bellfountain, Brooklyn, Brownsville, Chehalem Center, Creswell, Cloverdale, Corvallis $2.20, Cottage Grove, Dallas, Deborah Livingston, Dufur, Dundee, Eagle Point, Elkton, Falls City, Flounce Rock, Forest Grove, Franklin, Gardiner $3, Glengary $1.50, Gresham, Harrisburg, Hillsboro, Independence, Joseph, Klamath Falls, LaGrande, Lebanon, Mattie Sleeth, Medford, Milwaukee, Mountain View, Newberg, Ontario, Plainview $2.46, Piedmont, Pendleton, Pine Grove, Rainier, Riddle, Roseburg, Salem $4, Shedd, Sellwood, The Dalles, Turner, Ukiah, Union, University Park, Willard. Total $118.38.

Alabama: Prattville, Guntersville, Attalla, Birmingham, Orrsville, Boaz, Anniston, Collinsville, Gadsden, Bessemer, Haleyville $1.25, Carrolton, Piedmont, Tuscaloosa, New Decatur, Florence, Opelika $1.40, Birmingham Y Branch, Clio, Gastonberg, White City, Montgomery. Total $42.65.

North Carolina: Wilmington, Waxham, Charlotte, N. Wilkesboro, Elizabeth City, Raleigh, Goldsboro, Milwaukee, High Point, Pineville, Guilford College, Greensboro, Weldon, Margarettsville, Pollocksville $2.45, Anlander $1.10, Woodland $2.50, Reidsville $5, Monroe $2.50, Matthews $2.83. Total $44.38.

Southern California: Inglewood, Los Angeles (Central), Long Beach, Lordsburg, Lucy Hayes, Duarte, Ocean View, Monrovia, Pasadena (East Side), Burbank, University, Washington Heights, Pasadena (Central), Mizpah, Boyls Heights, Glendale, Los Angeles, San Dimas, Whittier, Mission Hills, San Diego, F. E. Willard, La Mesa, National City, Oceanside, El Cajon, Escondido, Coronado, San Diego (Central), Fallbrook, San Diego (Federation), Upland, Highland, Colton, Redlands, San Bernardino, Ontario, Rialto, Del Rosa, Orange, Huntington Beach, Sta Ava, Villa Park, El Modena, Garden Grove, Anaheim, Riverside, East Riverside, Elsmore, Honcut, Corona, Imperial, El Centro, Silsbee, Holtville, Bard, Oxnard, Maricopa, Santa Barbara, Justin, Angliano. Total $122.

Pennsylvania: Pequia, Strasburg, Terre Hill, Lancaster W., Wilmington, Central, West Newcastle, Forty Fort, Kingston, Luzerne, Millnesville, Dorrancetown, Wyoming, Dallas, Larkesville & Edw., Nanticoke, Nescopeck Ex., Parsons, Abbie M. Everett, Central, Newberry, Picture Rocks, Jersey Shore (F. E. Willard) $2.18, Montoursville $3, Rixford, Willard U, Kane U $6.80, Bradford, Coryville, Coldspring, Delaware, Grove City $3, Greenville, Farrell, Mercer, Sharon, Sharpsville, Salem Kennard, Transfer, Lewistown, Stroudsburg, Sunbury, Matamoras, Milford, Dingman's Ferry, Germantown, Bethlehem L. T. L. $1, Olney, Southwest Philadelphia $4, Philadelphia (Frances E. Willard), George's Institute, Fox Chase, A. Elizabeth Thomas, Northwest, Philadelphia $5, Eaglesmere, Forksville, Barnes, Conewango, Clarendon, Pittsfield, Stoneham, Sugar Grove $3, Spring Creek, Sheffield, Youngsville, Tidionte, Warren Central, Columbus, Conewango Heights, Russell, Donora, Claysville, Washington, Eldora, Tylerdale $1, West Alexander, Charleroi, Ariel, Atco, Beach Lake, Clinton Centre, Galilee, Honesdale, Lake Como, Hawley, Lakewood, Scottdale, Seward, West Newton, Monessen, New Florence, Greensburg, Irwin, Vandergrift, Mt. Pleasant, Avonmore, Jeannette, Alverton, East Lynn, Delta, York (Frances E. Willard), Shrewsburg, Hanover $5, Dormont, McDonald, Allegheny, Gayly, Perrysville Ave. $5, Wilkinsburg $5, Camptown, Rome, Milan, Sheshequin $1, Towanda, E. Smithfield, Wyalusing, Sayre, Milltown, Monroeton, Makefield, Newtown, Warrington, Yardley, Tallsington, Quakertown Bensalem, Langhorne, Richboro, Bristol, Wrightstown, Doylestown $1.90, Churchville, Riegelsville, Carversville $1, Butler (Central, South Side), Harmony & Zeilenople, Harrisville, Slippery Rock, Mars, Jacksville $4, Morrellville, Emilie D. Martin, Moscham, Johnstown Central, Lehighton, Center Hall $3, Blanchard, Philipsburg, Bellefonte, Tusseyville, Millheim, Toughkenamon, Spring City, Honeybrook, Ridge, Downington, Fr. Cr. Valley, Parkerford $1, Coatesville, West Chester, Dilworthtown $4, West Grove, Newlin, Abglen $1, Curwensville, Dubois, Penfield, Atlantic, Conneautville, Cochranton, Cambridge Sp., Hydetown, Meadville, Rundell, Titusville $10, Vrooman, Springboro $1, Conneaut Lake, Longsdorf's $1.50, Johnsonburg, Mt. Pleasant, Wilcox, Ridgway, Nebraska $1, Carlisle, Tionesta, Greencastle, Mercersburg, Waynesboro, Dry Run, Chambersburg, St. Thomas, Huntingdon, Saltillo, Ambrose, Blairsville, Indiana, Marchand, Pine Flats, Homer City, Mifflintown, Bart $1, Christiana, Elizabethtown, Fairfield, Leola, Lititz, Little Britain, Manheim, Millersville, Mt. Joy, New Holland, Normal Y., Octoraro. Total $459.38.

New Jersey: Clarksboro, Pitman, Thorofare, Newark No. 3, E. Orange, Montclair, Orange, Irvington, High Bridge, Delanco, Beverly, Boonton, Dover, Harrison & Kearney, Gibbstown, Frenchtown, Lakewood $1, W. Hoboken (Page Y. P. B.) $1, Pleasantville L. T. L., Miss Pelletrean, Soldiers' Home, (Essex Co.), Halsey M. E. Church, Sussex, Hoboken, Bayonne, Jersey City (Helping Hand), Jersey City Heights, Cranford, Dunellen, Elizabeth No. 1, Roseville, Yardville and Groveville, Pennington, Metuchen, Jamesburg, Cranbury, New Brunswick, South Bound Brook, Somerville, Millstone, Hawthorne, Smithville, Palmyra, Deacon's Station, (Addie Parsels), Rancocas, Pleasantville, Mt. Holly (Armor), Jacksonville, Cape May City, Dennisville, Ocean City, Chatham, Morristown, Rockaway, Union Hill (Ellis), Bergen Point, New Germantown, Flemmington, Hurffville, Almonessen, Williamstown, Westville, Barnesboro, Wenonah, Glassboro, Mullica Hill, Mullica Hill Y. P. B., Westville Y. P. B., Woodbridge, South Amboy, Atlantic City (Annie Steelman), Bedminster-Far Hills $5, Metuchen (Florence Randolph) $1, Moorestown $9, Pemberton $5, Trenton No. 1 $5. Total $145.

Total previously reported: Englewood, Demarest, Closter, Alloway, Auburn, Daretown, Elmer, Friesburg, Hancock's Bridge, Salem, Salem (Demarest), Woodstown, Elizabeth (Willard), Rahway No. 1, Wildwood, Wildwood Y. P. B., Camden (L. M. N. Stevens), Merchantville, Blackwood, Haddonfield, Collingswood, Camden (Central), Arlington, Barnegat, Manahawkin, Point Pleasant, Asbury Park, Avon, Belmar, Keansburg, Manasquan, Ocean Grove, Ocean Grove (Willard), Port Monmouth, Red Bank, Asbury Park Y. P. B. (Monmouth), Asbury Park Y. P. B. (Strong), South Bound Brook Y. P. B., Liberty Corner, Peapack and Gladstone, Medford, Beverly Y. P. B., Delanco Y. P. B., Bridgeboro Y. P. B., Absecon, Atlantic Highlands $3, Burlington $3, Matawan $3, White House $1.50, Matawan Y. P. B., $1, Hancock's Bridge L. T. L. $0.50, Matawan L. T. L. (Helping Hand) $1.

Maine: Woolwich, Shawmut, Madison, Maple Grove, Westfield, Caribou, Fort Fairfield, Kittery Point, Ellsworth, Skowhegan, St. Albans, Pittsfield, New Gloucester, South Windham, Portland $3, Mrs. Payson of Portland $5, Hartland, Rumford, Kittery, Kennebunk, Springvale, North Berwick, Old Orchard, Appleton, Camden, Rockland, Windham Center, Freeport $1, Stroudwater, Peaks Island, Calais, Milbridge, Machias, Cherryfield, East Steuben, Dennysville, North Lubec $1, Mrs. Vose of Calais $1, Waterville, Hallowell, Monmouth, Gardiner, China, South China, Westbrook. Total $89.

Wisconsin: Augusta, Beaver Dam, Beloit, Brooklyn, Clintonville, Downing, Eau Claire, Genoa Jct., Lake Geneva, Merrimac, Oshkosh, Superior (Willard), Sister Bay, Sturgeon Bay, Williams Bay, Green Bay $1, Waupun $1. Total $32.

Northern California: Richmond, Palo Alto, Mountain View, Gilroy, East Auburn, Lincoln, Oakland, Vallejo, Fowler, Fresno, Del Rey, Salida $1, Hughson, Denair, Chico, Gridley $0.50, Rudley, Davis. Total $33.50.

W. Washington: Bellingham (North), University, Fredonia, Washington Blvd. $1.15, Seattle (Stevens), Foster, Renton $2.75, Queen Anne, Colby, Arlington, Snohomish, Machias, Marysville, Everett (Stevens), Ross, Puyallup, Blanchard, Olympic Central $3, Logan, Sumas, Stilwel $1.70, Vancouver (Central), Pinehurst $1, South Bend, Coupeville $3, Irvington, Port Angelica $3.50, Seattle (Willard) $2.25, Fremont, Fidalgo, Bellingham (Central), Lynden $2.50, Blaine, Ray, Everson, Ferndale, E. Hoquiam, Bremerton, Felida. Total $80.85.

New York: Buffalo (Cold Spring $5, Lovejoy $0.50, No. 1, West Side $3), Chaffee, East Aurora $2.25, Holland $1, Sardinia $1, Springville $4, Auburn (Central $1, F. E. Willard), Moravia $1, Sherwood, Weedsport, W. Genoa and Five Corners, North Lansing, Little Falls, W. Winfield, Johnson's Creek, La Salle $1, Orangeport, Pekin, Ransomville, Sanborn, Wilson $2.50, Wilson (Willard L. T. L.), Southampton, Wainscott L. T. L. $0.50, Alton, Clyde, Lincoln, Lyons, Macedon Centre, Marion, Newark, Sodus, Sodus Point, Wolcott, Ashville, Brocton, Cassadaga, Chautauqua, Clymer (Mrs. Ziba Brown), Falconer, Forestville, Fredonia, Frewsburg $3, Hanover Centre, Jamestown $10, Kennedy, Levant Y. P. B., Mayville, Stockton, Houseville, Berkshire, Richford, Spencer, Binghamton (Central $3, Charity $1, F. E. Willard, South Side, West End), Endicott, Deposit, Lestershire. McClure, Union Center $1.45, Windsor, Clintondale, Ellenville, Highland, Kingston, New Paltz, Plattekill, Port Ewen, Tillson, Westerville, Wallkill, Glens Falls (Union, Mission $3), Luzerne, Warrensburg $3, Cooperstown, Laurens, Roseboom $1.50, Springfield Centre, West Exeter, Adams, Antwerp, Black River, Carthage, Clayton, Henderson, La Fargeville, Lyme, Philadelphia, Watertown, Bridgeport, Canastota, Cazenovia, De Ruyter, Erieville $1, Fenner, Munnsville, New Woodstock, Oak Hill, Oneida, Union Corners, Camden, Holland Patent, New York Mills, Sauquoit, Taberg, Utica (Somerset), Cattaraugus, Delevan, Ellicottville, Little Valley, Olean, Portville, Castile $5, Dale, Hermitage, Java, Johnsonburg, Perry $4, Portageville, Silver Springs, South Warsaw, Warsaw, Wyoming, Avoca, Bath, Canister, Greenwood, Hammondsport, Hornell, Prattsburg, Copenhagen $1, Lowville, Lyons Falls, North Corning $1, Union. Total $296.70.

CAMPAIGN FUND

Mr. J. K. Taylor: $25.
A Friend: $1.
North Carolina: $28.91.
New Jersey: $21.25.
Southern California: $6.80.
Oklahoma: $42.25.
Ohio: $9.62.
New York: $49.14.
Tennessee: $4.25.
Texas: $3.
New Hampshire: Acworth $1.30.
Virginia: C. H. Nerney $1.
Delaware: $7.
Massachusetts: Mrs. Emma Mayhew, Mrs. Louise Tilton, Mrs. G. H. Hancock, Miss Florence Smith, Mrs. Vida Peakes. Total $5.
Michigan: $33.81, Wickware $0.70. Total $34.51.
North Dakota: $1.
Kansas City Meeting: $102.35.
Pennsylvania: Wilkinsburg $5, 8th St. Presbyterian Church $10, Kaylor $1.85, Makefield $5, Newton $5, Warrington $1, Yardley $3.30, Bristol $5, Wrightstown $5, Butler (South Side) $4.83, Dale $1, Ridge $1, Delaware County $6.20, Christiana $3, Central $1, Jersey Shore (F. E. Willard $5.05, No. 1 $5), Kane U $5.50, Coryville $3.34, Grove City $3, Lewistown $7, Dingman's Ferry $1, Franklin $1, Pittsfield $7.45, Greensburg $1, Sheshequin, Richboro, Churchville, Solebury, Tusseyville, West Chester, Dilworthtown, West Grove, Newlin, Ridgway, Wattsburg, Waynesboro, Leola, Lititz, Kingston, Milnesville, Dorrancetown, Nanticoke, Shickshinny, Abbie M. Everett, Pottsville, Scottdale, Seward, Matamoras. Total $146.52.
Wisconsin: (½ amt. rec'd): Antigo $1.70, Beloit $1, Brooklyn $2.70, Downing $1, Genoa Jct. $0.50, Milwaukee (Willard) $0.50, Omro $1, Oshkosh $1, Springfield $0.50, Waupun $0.50. Total $10.40.
West Washington: Marietta $1.55, Pearson $2, Oakville $1.30. Total $4.85.
Northern California: Palermo $2.45.

HERE AND THERE

A net gain of 2,200 in W. C. T. U. membership in the state of Michigan was one of the causes for rejoicing at the Michigan state convention recently held. Although the convention came so early in the year, Michigan lacked only 300 of the number apportioned to the state by the National W. C. T. U. in the 50,000 membership campaign.

Although the busy president of the Liberal (Kans.) W. C. T. U. with a membership of more than half a hundred loyal women, Mrs. Minnie Johnson Grinstead, National organizer and lecturer, is also the pastor of a country church where she ministers each month and still finds time for the larger W. C. T. U. work outside her home union. Her recent service has included an address at Tyrone, Okla., for the Y. P. B., an address for the Ashland union before a conference of the South Seventh district W. C. T. U. workers; a mothers' day address in one of the local churches and occasional organizing trips. Work in Missouri, Oklahoma and Comanche county, Kans., will occupy the summer months. At a celebration July 3 at Goodwell, Okla., where the Agricultural Institute is located, Mrs. Grinstead will be the speaker at the dedication of the Woman's Building.

The constitution of the Alaska W. C. T. U. provides that the Campaign Edition of THE UNION SIGNAL shall be sent to each white member. Many of the natives cannot read and therefore they are asked only for the affiliation dues to territory and National. As the campaign to make Alaska dry goes forward the circulation of the Campaign Edition is being urged more and more strongly, and in place of starting a new temperance paper for Alaska, as was suggested, it was decided to distribute freely the Campaign Edition.

Through the efforts of the Minnesota W. C. T. U. temperance leaflets were distributed to the boys graduating from the public grade and high schools in Minneapolis. The school board co-operated with the W. C. T. U. in the distribution of educational temperance literature in the schools of that city. The leaflet being given this year to the graduates is entitled, "Alcohol Drinking Hinders Business Success," and gives the opinions of prominent physicians on the subject.

An evening temperance pageant presented June 13 by the primary department of the Roseville M. E. Sunday school at Newark, N. J., was pronounced by those who had the privilege of witnessing it, an immense success. It was given under the direction of Mrs. Minnie Munroe and Mrs. Jessie Brown, daughters of Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, National W. C. T. U. superintendent of Legislation. The part of Columbia was effectively taken by Mrs. Ellis' namesake grandchild, Margaret Ellis Brown. Of the 165 children enrolled in the school 150 were present. When the eighteen prohibition states were summoned by Columbia, who had declared war on the liquor traffic, to appear before her, they were followed by poor little New Jersey clad in somber black. After seventy boys had given their rally cries, Mrs. Brown gave a short, eloquent talk, telling the crowded house that these were Newark's boys, and that the saloons of the city were waiting, watching to allure and catch them, and asking the people what they proposed to do to meet the situation. Many were moved to tears. The jubilee chorus, "A Saloonless Nation in 1920," was greeted with cheers and other expressions of approval. As a sentiment maker it is thought the pageant will prove valuable.

MAKE YOUR RESERVATIONS EARLY

From recent indications it is apparent that the attendance at the Panama-Pacific Exposition is increasing and the capacity of the city will be taxed to care for the visitors. Miss Mary E. Brown, who is in charge of the National W. C. T. U. exhibit at the Exposition, suggests that white ribboners who are to stop at San Francisco, either going or returning from the National Convention at Seattle, will do well to send their names, date of arrival and departure either to Mrs. Anna M. De Yo, corresponding secretary of the Northern California W. C. T. U., or to her, that rooms may be reserved for them. Four or five white ribboners can probably be accommodated at Miss Brown's flat, and there are a number of rooming places in homes nearby where the rates are fifty cents, seventy-five cents and one dollar per day. Every rooming house is full at the present time, but by making reservations in advance rooms within two or three blocks of the Palace of Education may be obtained.

A PROPHECY

My heart prophesies with all a patriot's gratitude that America will win her bloodless war against the awful tyranny of King Alcohol and King Gambrinus, and proud am I to have a part in it, for, thank God, I—I, too, am an American.

—Frances E. Willard.

A NEW DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

W. D. BROWNING, Seabright, Cal.

"I suppose you will all be back to celebrate the Fourth," said Billy O'Keefe, the bartender of the Liberty Bell saloon, as he handed us boys of the rock quarry gang a bottle and glasses for our drinks the morning after the night before.

"I won't say that I will," growled Red Dally. "I came in here last night with two weeks' wages in my pocket and I didn't have the price of a drink on me this morning, and my mouth's so dry that I could walk around in it and kick up a dust."

"Well, you are getting your drink anyway, ain't you?" asked the bartender with one of those oily grins that fellows of his class use to get the cash out of a fellow's pocket and to quiet him down afterwards. Red grumbled something unintelligible, and passed the bottle along to me, and I, filling my glass to the brim, handed it on to the poet. Now when I mention a poet don't you go to picturing a weakly little chap with long hair and an eyeglass. Our poet of the Seacliff quarries was as different from such a creature as Gulliver's giants were from his pigmies. He stood six feet, four inches in his heavy, hobnailed quarry shoes, and weighed close to two hundred pounds of clean muscle and bone.

In the quarry where we were paid for the number of dump-cars we loaded, Rufus Bentley, or the poet, as we nearly always called him, would suffer no one to surpass him in the amount earned in a given number of hours, and in the Liberty Bell saloon, where up to this time we had been fools enough to spend a large part of our earnings, he permitted no one to outdo him in lavish expenditure of hard-earned money. He possessed a fair education and was in our eyes, at least, more of a poet than many of those whose poetry we read in the newspapers and magazines. Energetic and resourceful, he had held a hundred better positions than that of a common laborer in a rock quarry, but drink had downed him, as it will down the best man alive if he does not fight free from its baneful influence.

I knew that the poet tried to fight off his thirst for the stuff. I also had fought and failed and we had talked much together. Once he had read me one of his poems of the sort he didn't read to every one. I liked the poem, but it was sad—sad as the wail of a lost soul.

No one but those who live the rough lives that the poet and I lived because of the influence of drink, can understand how hard we fought to free ourselves of its slavery, fought and hoped and failed and got up and fought again until—on this particular morning when I poured out my drink and passed the bottle to the poet, he pushed it back. "No," he said, "the Fourth of July comes next week and I am going to declare my independence of the stuff."

Well, sir, there was a look in his bloodshot blue eyes that somehow thrilled me, and almost before I knew it, I had emptied my glass on the floor. "I believe I will play this independence game with you," I said. The poet's hand went out to mine without a word, and then together we left the saloon and made our way back to the quarry.

I don't know that our declaration of independence would have lasted if we had been left to fight it out in our own strength, but the incident caused some talk and somehow came to the ears of some good women. The evening before the Fourth the poet and I had a call from three of them, who said they were a committee appointed by the temperance folks of Seacliff to invite us to join them in celebrating the freedom from the drink habit of such folks as we. Of course we were a little embarrassed at first, but they didn't preach at us nor give us advice; just talked to us in a friendly way and seemed to think so earnestly that we had done something really big and worth while that I'll be blessed if we didn't begin to get a little proud of ourselves! Then they talked to some of the other quarry workers and it all ended in our meeting them at the temperance coffee club early on the morning of the Fourth. A dozen or more of us there were, and when the regular Fourth of July parade started, we dropped in, with the poet at our head bearing a banner on which was printed: "Defiance To King Alcohol, Independence Forever!" Believe it or not several drinking men stepped right out of the door of that misnamed Liberty Bell saloon and joined our procession and I know that at least one of them stuck to his resolution and is today a good citizen of Seacliff.

The Liberty Bell saloon changed its name and ownership and finally was voted out of existence by men and women who wanted liberty to live in a town free from the tyranny of King Alcohol. The poet and I are now both married and hold better positions than in the old days when we were common laborers. We often speak of how hard we used to slave to get money to buy liquor and the poet generally ends such talk with a defiant "Independence Forever."

OUR LITTLE WHITE RIBBONER

SUSAN M. GRIFFITH, Chattanooga, Tenn.

We have in our local union several very youthful Crusaders or baby white ribboners—little children who have received the pretty badge and wear it with pride. Among these is a little girl four or five years old—a lovely child, with long, fair curls, and dainty face and form, who always comes to the meetings with her good mother, and who, as far as a baby can understand, seems to take a great interest in the proceedings. From the time when first the little white bow was pinned on her dress she has shown a singular reverence and love for it, and never wants to go anywhere without it. While making preparations to go shopping or calling, she is apt to say to her mother: "Mamma, we must be sure to wear our white ribbons; we mustn't forget them for anything! You know our W. C. T. U. wants us always to wear them to show that we're against the s'loons." So earnest has she been about this, that her mother has made white bows for all their going-out dresses.

It was after we had interested the children in destroying cigar and cigaret stubs, that little boys might not pick them up and smoke them, that the following incident took place: Little Emily and her mother stood one morning on the corner waiting for a car. Two gentlemen were also waiting, and both of them were smoking a cigar. Suddenly Emily said in a low, intense tone to her mother:

"Mama, do you see that cigaret stub right in front of those two men? Somebody ought to stamp on it, don't you think so?"

"I do, indeed," replied her mother, adding with a smile, as she saw the child fairly trembling with eagerness, "I wonder if my little Emily doesn't want to do it?"

Rather shyly, but very resolutely, the little girl stepped in front of the two men with a polite, "Please excuse me," and, planting her daintily slippered foot upon the offending cigaret stub, stamped and rubbed and ground it to powder. The gentlemen looked on with twinkling eyes. "Why do you do that, my dear little girl?" asked one of them.

"Because the little boys will pick them up and smoke them," said Emily, "and our W. C. T. U. wants us to destroy them. I b'long to the W. C. T. U. I wear the white ribbon!"

"I see," said the gentleman who had spoken to her, "and you wear it like a brave little lady. It is a beautiful badge and you honor it. My mother is a white ribboner, too; and I think, Leslie," turning to his companion, "we cannot do better than follow the good example of this little girl." Throwing his cigar on the street, he set his heel upon it and ground it into dust. Then, as the car arrived that instant, he lifted his hat and handed both mother and daughter into the car.

"Isn't he a lovely man?" said Emily, as the car sped along. "I guess he loves the white ribbon bow as well as I do, for he called it a beautiful badge. I do believe that he'll stamp on all the stubs he sees, don't you, mama?"

The mother smiled upon her little daughter fondly, but said no word. In her heart she was pondering a certain saying in the Bible, the truth of which so often proved: "A little child shall lead them."

THE COMING TEMPERANCE MEN

'e hope to grow to manhood,
And mingle in the strife,
nd with loyal, steadfast purpose,
Join the noble ranks of life.
'e'll work a few more summers
As temperance boys, and then
'e'll stand among our elders,
The Loyal Temperance Men.

'es, we're coming to the rescue,
A host of loyal men,
'o fight the foes of temperance,
With the vote or with the pen.
nd we'll shout for right and justice
Till the people understand,
nd this blasting, deadly Upas
Shall cease to spoil our land.
—Selected

THE LITTLE BOY NEXT DOOR

A. MARIA CRAWFORD, Knoxville, Tenn.

For weeks Mr. McGhee only knew Tip 'odd as the boy next door, the little boy 'ho was always happy and in a good umor. But Tip was too friendly to be atisfied with such scant acquaintance, o one day he waited for Mr. McGhee at he corner and walked home with him.

"You don't even know my name, do 'ou?" Tip asked by way of introducing imself to the big, handsome fellow.

"Come to think about it," answered Mr. McGhee, "I don't believe I do."

"I'm Tip Todd, and I know your name."

"Well, now," laughed Mr. McGhee, 'how did you find that out?"

"You go to see my Sunday school eacher and she told me. She asked me o be friends with you," added the boy shyly.

"Indeed, we're friends right now." The all young man reached down and shook ands solemnly with Tip Todd. "So Miss Palmer is responsible for your pleasant 'Hello, Mr. McGhee.' That was not fair. She ought to have told me your name, too. And how do you like that pretty teacher of yours?"

"I love her very much. Look, there's a drunk man!" cried Tip, slipping close to Mr. McGhee as they passed a poor, dirty-looking old man. "I wonder if he has any little boys to cry when he gets home, reeling like that. Miss Palmer pinned a white ribbon badge on me, and I promised her that I would never, never drink a drop of whisky, beer, or anything like that."

Mr. McGhee frowned. He had often argued with his pretty young friend about teaching very little boys the temperance lesson. She taught them before they were old enough to understand the drink question, he told her, but the girl only shook her head and held to her belief that it is never too early to begin teaching children that alcohol is a great curse. Mr. McGhee believed in taking a drink whenever he wanted it, declaring that he could stop whenever he desired, but Miss Palmer knew that if he kept up the habit long, drink would get the better of him. She realized only too well that no man is strong enough to tamper with the deadly stuff.

"I think that it is awful for men to drink," resumed Tip Todd. "Don't you, Mr. McGhee?"

The man looked down at the earnest young face and nodded his head in answer. He could not destroy the boy's faith. It was impossible.

Tip Todd soon acquired the habit of meeting Mr. McGhee every evening and walking the length of the block home with him. Day by day and week by week the friendship grew, until Tom McGhee found himself hurrying home as early as possible to see and talk with the wise little boy who lived next door.

Tip hurled the bottle against the old brick pavement.

One afternoon a crowd of young men asked him to go to the club and have a drink with them, but he refused, thinking of little Tip Todd and his boyish faith. But the men insisted, and after a time, Tom gave in and went. It was almost dark when he stumbled off the car and started home.

"Why, poor Mr. McGhee," cried Tip's shrill voice, "are you very, very sick? I've been waiting here for the longest time for you. Can I help you home? I'm so sorry you're sick."

McGhee laughed foolishly, as all drunken men do. "Oh, I'm all right," he answered thickly.

Tip Todd took a step backward, staring at the strange figure of his beloved friend. "You—you are drunk," he sobbed. "How could you do it?"

Somewhere in his benumbed brain, echoed the question of the boy when they had met a drunken man in the street one day—"I wonder if he has any little boys to cry when he gets home, reeling like that?" And now, here he was, drunk, and dear little Tip Todd was sobbing over him. He braced up and tried to walk straight, but the sidewalk seemed to slip away from him and he was grateful to feel Tip's steady little hand on his arm.

"I'll help you get home," he said bravely.

The next evening when Tom McGhee swung off his car, a handsome new toy in his pocket for Tip Todd, there was no little boy standing there to greet him. He hurried down the street and started in to Tipp's house to ask about his young friend. Then he saw the little fellow sitting quietly on the front steps.

"Why didn't you come to meet me? I've a present for you," he said, sitting down by Tip and opening the box.

"—I just couldn't—after last night," answered Tip courageously.

"I can't blame you," returned Tom McGhee in such a sad voice that Tip's little heart was touched, and he moved over closer beside his friend. "You'll never, never do it again, will you?" he asked eagerly and just then his hand pressed a bottle in McGhee's coat pocket. He reached in and drew it out slowly. Then he stood and held the bottle high in his hand.

"May I break it, please, please, Mr. McGhee?" he begged. "Don't drink this whisky!"

"Break it!" said Tom McGhee, and as Tip hurled the bottle against the old brick pavement at the foot of the steps, and the glass broke into hundreds of pieces, Tom McGhee caught his hand and patted it very gently.

"I'll never touch the stuff again, Tip Todd I don't want any little boys to cry when they see me come home."

And Tom McGhee kept his word.

Popular Books Every White Ribboner Should Read

THE MAN WHO FORGOT, James Hay, Jr. The story of a man's fight for National Prohibition told most cleverly—a book destined to arouse the reader to his responsibility—a book with a definite purpose.

Price, $1.25. Postage 12 cents.

LITTLE SIR GALAHAD, Phoebe Gray. The story of a little cripple boy, who by serenity and triumphant faith, not only finds his way to sturdy young manhood, but casts about himself a beautiful influence for good. A wealth of humor, pathos, romance, skillfully blended with a great moral lesson.

Price, $1.35. Postage, 12 cents.

JOHN BARLEYCORN, the life story of Jack London.

Price, $1.30. Postage 12 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Ill.

Ought the leading nations of earth to pocket with calm complacency the money that comes to them through the sale and taxation of drinks which are ruining for all time the tribes which are entrusted to us to be looked after?

A protest should again be raised, loud and clear, unceasing and courageous, strong to reach every man's ears, pointing out what an injustice it is to allow such a trade to continue—a trade which is fraught with such immense dangers to the tribes of Africa upon which the light had only just begun to dawn, and indeed to every people that is brought into contact with this trade.—Dr. Fisch, West African Missionary

PROSPERITY POST CARDS

In English and Foreign Languages

WHAT EVERY MERCHANT KNOWS
PROSPERITY STATISTICS
OF INTEREST TO TAX PAYERS
OF INTEREST TO BANKERS
OF INTEREST TO WAGE EARNERS

This series is now ready in English, German, Italian, Norwegian, Swedish and Spanish.

Price, per dozen, 15 cents; per 100, $1.00
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

It's a long way to woman suffrage,
It's a long way to go,
It's a long way to woman suffrage
But just see how we grow.

So it's good-by, voteless women
Farewell, oh antis dear,
It's a long way to woman suffrage
But it is almost here.

WE WELCOME YOU!

The new leaflet written by Anna Adams Gordon.

For use at ports of entry and among foreigners coming to our cities. Issued in—

English,
German,
Italian,
Norwegian,
Swedish,
Spanish.

A cordial welcome printed in attractive style, with the United States flag in colors.

Price, per fifty, 15 cts.; per 100, 25 cts.
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

AMONG OUR WORKERS

Mrs. Susanna M. D. Fry, a former corresponding secretary of the National W. C. T. U., has been elected a member of the board of education of Alhambra, California. She is the only woman on the board.

Among the recent callers at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters was Miss Rose A. Davison, National organizer. Miss Davison spent a number of weeks recently in Delaware and New Jersey and reports the membership campaigns and other lines of activity as progressing most encouragingly.

Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh, National organizer and lecturer, has been meeting with gratifying success in her work in the "Votes for Women" campaign in Pennsylvania. The Johnstown Daily Democrat says of her, "She is an unusual woman who tells an unusual story in an unusual way."

June 17 was the day of the whole year for Palmyra, Wisconsin, for it was the occasion of the old settlers' annual picnic. In the parade the local union had a fine float in which the W. C. T. U. officers and members of the L. T. L. rode. A rest room, provided by the W. C. T. U., attracted many visitors.

Thirty good story tellers were used in the Sunday schools of Fort Worth, Texas, on Anti-Cigaret day, June 20, each one giving the history of the great inventor, Edison, as told in one of Miss Tinling's stories. This systematic uniform story telling was made possible through the kindness of Miss Fanny Robinson who supplied the story tellers, most of them her pupils. Mrs. Nannie Webb Curtis, president of the Texas W. C. T. U., writes that this will probably be made a permanent feature in the annual celebration of anti-cigaret day, and the state union is considering a similar plan for World's Temperance Sunday. Mrs. Curtis is now on a Chautauqua circuit which closes September 13.

The convention of the Eleventh district (Fla.) W. C. T. U. at Kendrick May 25-26 was a most satisfactory session. Miss Minnie E. Neal, state president, figured prominently on the program, to the delight of both old and new friends. A medal contest occupied the first evening meeting and the second evening was given over to an address by Miss Neal.

As a result of twenty days spent in Nebraska, Mrs. Sena Hartzell Wallace, National organizer and lecturer, reports two counties and four unions organized and fifty-two members gained. Aided by the W. C. T. U. she helped in the great pledge-signing campaign of the Richardson county Sunday School Association on June 13. The pledge circulated that day was not only for total abstinence, but contained a promise to work for a dry county in 1916. Sixteen boys and three men signed as well the anti-tobacco pledge. Mrs. Wallace also addressed three Sunday schools and five mothers' meetings. One Chautauqua date was missed owing to a terrific storm, a near cyclone, so near in fact that distance would have lent enchantment.

Recently the W. C. T. U. of Dorranceton, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, had a most unique temperance parade. At the close of the demonstration the president of the local union, Mrs. Gwilym Davis, presented to the city council a public sanitary drinking fountain. The exercises included ringing addresses for temperance and for equal suffrage. The floats in the parade represented nation, state, county and local unions. The officials of the borough, the school teachers of the town, the firemen in uniform with their band, drill squad and fire truck, the school children, patriotic orders, boy scouts, business people, with gayly decorated trucks all united harmoniously in making a day long to be remembered by the people of the valley. The presiding officer of the elaborate program was Mr. Benjamin F. Dorrance, the most popular rose grower of Pennsylvania.

PROHIBITION PARAGRAPHS

Six Akron (O.) saloonkeepers, it is alleged, are made defendants in a $5,000 damage suit filed by a woman of that city. She charges that intoxicants were sold to her husband after they had been notified not to do so.

The head of one of the big brewery concerns of Cleveland, O., claims that 75 per cent of the saloons in the city at the present time are not paying propositions. This admission was made in the effort to prevent the raising of the liquor license tax which has been considered by the city government owing to a need of more funds for the running expenses of the municipality.

The Russian Empire has lost a great prohibition leader in the death of Grand Duke Constantine at Petrograd. Although only fifty-seven at the time of his death for forty years he has worked for temperance, and it is said that it was largely through his influence that the Czar was brought to take a stand against vodka. The Grand Duke besides being the president of the Imperial Academy of Sciences and head of the department of military schools, was the president of the All-Russian Union of Christian Working Men. As the proprietor of the city of Pavlovsk he would not allow the sale of intoxicants and under his rule it was the only prohibition city in Russia.

A Chicago window screen firm has brought suit for $10,000 against the publishers of the telephone directory, for listing them as liquor dealers, asserting that because of this error they met "public scandal, infamy, and disgrace" and were thereby "injured in their business and social standing and future prospects in life." The error arose from the careless and illegible writing of the words "window screens" by the canvasser in his entry book, and the transcription of them in the office of the telephone directory publishers as "wines and liquors." And yet is not the business of manufacturing and selling liquors a respectable and honorable employment?

Since January 1, 1915, twenty-four daily newspapers, according to the records of the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal church, have barred from their columns liquor advertisements. This is in addition to the 520 newspapers previously reported to have eliminated liquor advertising.

The 120th Congregational conference of the state of Vermont in session recently at Barre heartily commended the action of the legislature in enacting the statewide prohibitory referendum law and urged voters to cast a white ballot at the polls in March, 1916.

WANTED—Several honest, industrious people to distribute religious literature; $60 a month sure. Nichols Co., Box 14, Naperville, Ill.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. H. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

"WHISKEY AND HEAT"

Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago, in discussing the subject of "Whisky and Heat" in a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune gives the following telling incident:

The scene was a sleeper on a 'Frisco train between Memphis and Birmingham. It was 11 o'clock on a hot morning in June. The thermometer had registered over ninety for several days. A fairly fat passenger sat in the smoking compartment. He was in his shirt sleeves. By taking things easy he managed to keep fairly cool. When the train stopped at Tupelo he bought a lunch from a basket.

"Do your sandwiches contain a whole chicken apiece?" he asked.

"Some of them have a half chicken," was the reply.

"Then give me one with half a chicken in it."

He bought his lunch and returned with it to the smoking compartment.

The "butch" came along and sold ou fairly fat friend a bottle of a non-alcoholi beverage. He opened his grip; took ou a full quart of whisky; poured three fin gers into a cup; filled the cup with th purchased beverage, and drank it down He offered me a pull at his bottle. declined.

He ate his lunch, including the half chicken. Then he began to sweat, an the sweat rolled for fair. In half an hou he was as hot as a broiled lobster, an as wet as a dishrag.

Now, why did he do it? He was no on a jag. He did not have a "still on His mind was as clear as a bell. He kne what he was doing. It was not sociabi ity, or to be a good fellow, or to be swa ger. He did it because it was comin lunch time and he was of the opinion th a nice little drink and a lunch woul make him happy, comfortable, and co tented. His judgment was poor, and h paid the price.

To drink whisky on a hot day is lik throwing kerosene on a fire. Within few minutes the whisky was circulatin in his blood and burning to form hea Furthermore, it was sending the blood i to the skin, and an excess of hot bloc in the skin makes one feel hotter tha he is.

One hundred tons of leaves, used in th manufacture of absinthe, says a recen report, were publicly burned in Por arlier, France, by order of the gover ment in accordance with the legislati suppressing the manufacture of absinth

"THE MAN WHO FORGOT"

The year 1915 has added a notable book of fiction to the works which should be found in the library of every champion of temperance. "The Man Who Forgot," a new novel by James Hay, Jr., a son of Representative Hay of Virginia, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., deals with the final days of the overthrow of the liquor traffic at our National Capitol. While its pages are filled with valuable temperance data this book differs radically from others which have previously appeared in that an absorbing love story and a mystery of unusual interest are so interwoven with the main thought that it is difficult for the reader, whether he be a temperance enthusiast or an out-and-out ally of the liquor traffic, to lay the book aside until he has read it from cover to cover. Through this delightful intermingling of romance with facts of a more serious nature the evils of intemperance and the blighting effect of the liquor traffic on the national government will be brought to the attention of many a person who would otherwise never listen to so clear a presentation of temperance truth. "The Man Who Forgot" might well be placed in all public libraries, by the local union if the library authorities have not already secured the book, and young people should be urged to read it.

The Commoner, of which William Jennings Bryan is editor, makes the claim that this book by Mr. Hay gives one of the most accurate pictures of Washington life ever presented to the reading public, and that the book has met with a cordial reception by men in public life in our Capital city.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

COLORED PEOPLE FOR PROHIBITION

The colored General Baptist Missionary Conference of Georgia, in session in Macon recently, went on record at one of the evening sessions as heartily endorsing and pledging itself to help bring about National Constitutional Prohibition. The resolution was read at the close of a ringing temperance speech, by a visitor, Mrs. Madge B. Merritt, superintendent of the Christian Citizenship department in the state W. C. T. U. Probably two hundred negroes stood to move its adoption, which was enthusiastically and unanimously carried. Twenty-six hundred negroes were present. Five hundred delegates, men and women, attended the conference, among them leaders of their race.

Cruise for Vacation on the Lakes

Enjoy the Beautiful Scenery and Historical Points of Interest in your own country. You can have the many comforts which a large, elegantly equipped steamer affords. You will eat well and sleep well. Peaceful quiet and exhilarating breezes will rest and strengthen you. In sight of land most of the way, you can view some of the grandest scenery in the world.

7 Days Trip 5 Days Trip

The Magnificent Steel Steamship "Minnesota" to BUFFALO (NIAGARA FALLS) AND RETURN $40 Including Meals and Berth

via Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, and historic Mackinac Island, viewing both ways by daylight the beautiful scenery of the Detroit River, and St Clair Flats, stopping at all points of interest. 12 hour stop at Buffalo allows plenty of time to see Niagara Falls. During season leaves Chicago every Thursday at 11:00 a. m.

The Elegant Steel Steamship "Missouri" to KAGAWONG, ONT., AND RETURN $34 Including Meals and Berth

via Mackinac Island, The "Soo," St. Mary's River, North Channel, and the shores of Manitoulin Island, stopping at all points of interest. During season leaves Chicago every Monday at 4:00 p. m.

S. S. "MISSOURI" also makes special trip each week to Onekama, Frankfort, Glen Haven and Glen Arbor leaving Chicago Saturdays at 4:00 p.m.

Our line of steamers offers you the gratest possible opportunity for real rest and genuine pleasure. You can go for a full week or only a few days as you prefer.

The Elegant Steel Steamships
"MANITOU"—"MINNESOTA"—"MISSOURI"—"ILLINOIS"

offer unrivalled service between Chicago, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Bay View, Harbor Springs, Mackinac Island, Ludington, Manistee, Onekama, Frankfort, Glen Haven, Glen Arbor, Leland (via Auto or connecting steamer from Glen Haven) and Traverse Bay Ports, Sault Ste. Marie, and Buffalo, connecting with all lines for Lake Superior and Eastern Points. For illustrated folder and book of tours address

Northern Michigan Transportation Co.
J. C. CONLEY, Gen. Pass. Agt., North End Rush Street Bridge, Chicago, Ills.

INCIDENTS OF LIFE AT ELLIS ISLAND

The W. C. T. U. missionary at the port of Ellis Island finds many opportunities for service, and very frequent are the expressions of gratitude and pleasure voiced by those who have been helped by the white ribboner. In the month of May a Greek woman and child, who had come to this country in search of her "intended husband," and her brother, arrived in New York City. She carried with her the address of some friends. The missionary, Mrs. Athena Marmaroff, wrote several times to the street and number furnished, but no one appeared at the port and the woman was in despair. Finally Mrs. Marmaroff went personally to the home of the friends and found they did not want the woman. She then wrote to the "intended husband" that she might ascertain whether he still cared for the woman, as it had been years since the two had met or corresponded. To her great joy he answered that he was willing to marry her and would come for her. The woman had been excluded by the authorities, but when the man's answer was received the case was reopened and a few days later the woman and child were admitted to the "land of the free" and took their departure. Going to the missionary, the now delighted foreigner thanked her again and again, saying, "You are my savior. I will never forget you nor your kindness."

A Greek girl on her way to her father was detained because her brother, who accompanied her, was a minor. Although telegrams and letters were sent to an address the girl gave, there was no answer. Through the Sunday school agency Mrs. Marmaroff gained information of an address to which she telegraphed. In a few days requisite affidavits arrived and the girl and her brother were free to go on their way. They had been detained a month and wept with joy at their release.

In the ticket room sat waiting a Bulgarian woman with a four-year-old boy. She had paid for her ticket on the other side of the water. While assisting her to change it, the W. C. T. U. missionary discovered that she had paid half fare on the railroad for her child. She spoke to the agent concerning the matter, reminding him that it was against the law to take money for railroad tickets for little children. The agent at first demurred, but finally he returned to the woman $9.87 she had paid for the child's ticket before she left her home across the seas. To show her gratitude the woman offered the missionary money, which was, of course, refused. "God bless and strengthen you" were her parting words.

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

THE NEW SUBSCRIBER

Have you, OLD SUBSCRIBER, secured the NEW SUBSCRIBER for the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL and thus become a member of the Win One Circle? If not, will you at once find the NEW SUBSCRIBER so that your name may be enrolled in the 1915 Win One Circle and the NEW SUBSCRIBER have the paper she has needed and ought to have had long ago?.

Many are wanting and asking for the information to be found in THE UNION SIGNAL, but do not know where to find it. OLD SUBSCRIBER, you know and can help someone to this information by getting that NEW SUBSCRIBER.

WIN ONE CIRCLE, 1915

377. Mrs. Ella Newman, Las Animas, Colo.
378. Mrs. R. J. Strozier, Vienna, Ga.
379. Cordelia Burdick, Clinton, N. Y.
380. Dr. Sarah Brooke, Limaville, Ohio.
381. Laura C. Underwood, Gary, Ind.
382. Mrs. L. L. Thoroughman, Perkins, Okla.
383. Mrs. Jennie Ward, Guilford, Ind.
384. Mrs. Wm. Spencer, Harmony, Minn.
385. Mrs. Clarice Gillmore, Harmony, Minn.
386. Mrs. J. A. Weston, Franklin, Neb.
387. Mrs. Wm. B. Gibb, Washington, D. C.
388. Mrs. James H. Cole, Danbury, Conn.
389. Mrs. Louis E. Darling, Danbury, Conn.
390. Myrta E. Lockwood, Holly, Mich.
391. Mrs. Carrie Lee Carter-Stokes, Los Angeles, Cal.
392. Kittie G. Copeman, Metamora, Mich.
393. Mrs. M. E. Rice, Adams, N. Y.
394. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Clark, Canandaigua, N. Y.
395. Alice Scott Abbott, Bunnell, Fla.
396. Mrs. Robert Hill, Sparta, Tenn.
397. Mrs. Anna Woods, Springfield, Mo.
398. Ollie M. Andrews, Carl Junction, Mo.
399. Mrs. Laura Peters, Yutan, Neb.
400. Mrs. Iva C. Addie, Alta Vista, Kans.
401. Mrs. Sallie Daniel, Wilmar, Ark.
402. Mrs. James W. Ware, Bayonne, N. J.
403. Mrs. A. P. Bartholomew, Ticonderoga, N. Y.
404. Mrs. Nellie M. Walton, Sycamore, Ohio.
405. Mrs. Hattie Leek, Johnstown, New York.
406. Mrs. Rhoda Brunk, Elston, Mo.
407. Mrs. Alvira B. Scott, Shamokin, Penn.
408. Mrs. Josie F. Jacobson, Madison, Minn.
409. Lucinda E. Carlisle, Vergennes, Ill.
410. Mrs. E. S. Redman, Hornell, N. Y.
411. Mrs. E. S. Adams, Shelby, Mich.
412. Mrs. F. M. Cole, Chester, Va.
413. Mrs. M. H. Day, Salem, Va.
414. Mrs. G. F. Honey, Gresham, Ore.
415. Miss Nettie Moffitt, Noblesville, Ind.
416. Annie M. Nordholm, Minneapolis, Minn.
417. Mrs. Emma Madden, Ingersoll, Okla.
418. Mrs. Delia Thompson, Steubenville, Ohio.
419. Mrs. R. L. Gaines, Corder, Mo.
420. Mrs. Charles Mayer, Washington, D. C.
421. Mrs. M. Lehr, Stockton, Cal.
422. Mrs. N. J. Lester, Ceresco, Mich.
423. Mrs. L. L. Lewis, Ceresco, Mich.
424. Mrs. C. E. Fisher, Bluefield, W. Va.
425. Mrs. M. H. Spotts, Winchester, Va.

Popular Posters

18x24 inches

Price, 5 cents each; per 100, $3.50

Printed in black and red on paper

THE LICENSE VOTER GETS—WHAT?

From a Bushel of Corn the Distiller Gets Four Gallons of Whisky

Which retails at	$16.80
The farmer gets	.45
The U. S. Government gets	4.40
The railroad company gets	.80
The manufacturer gets	4.00
The drayman gets	.15
The retailer gets	7.00
The consumer gets	Drunk
The wife gets	Hungry
The children get	Rags
The politician gets	Office
The man that votes license gets	What?

Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also.—Hab. 2:15.

Compare These Figures

Professor Demme of Stuttgart studied the history of ten families of drunkards and ten temperance families for ten years.
This is what he found:

	Drunkards' Families	Temp. Families
Number of children	57	61
Died before six months old	25	5
Idiots	6	0
Stunted in growth	5	0
Epilepsy	5	0
Cured of Nervousness	0	6
Ordinary good health	17.5%	81.5%

The saloon makes drunkards.

The voter makes possible the saloon.

No thinking man can run a saloon and be happy.

No thinking man can vote for license and have an easy mind.

TALK—WORK—VOTE

For State and National Prohibition

National W.C.T.U. Publishing House
EVANSTON, ILL.

A Chat with the Publishing Department

A SUGGESTION TO LEGIONERS

I want to tell you what my L. T. L.'s are doing. They are selling "The Liquor Traffic Must Go" pennants to others for their autos, rooms, carriages, etc.

MRS. G. C. THORPE.
Northfield, Minn.

THE NEW PROHIBITION FANS

Dear National:

I have received an order today that I consider worth reporting to you. For a number of the county conventions where I sent supplies for literature tables I included samples of the "prohibition fans." From one county where they were sent, Tulare, down in the central part of the state, there came yesterday an invitation to the wedding of the daughter of one of our members and today an order for fifteen dozen of the fans to be given to the wedding guests, saying, "I am sure it will do some of the guests (200 are expected) good, and might change their opinion on the liquor question." These people have a beautiful orange ranch, "Rose Villa Ranch" up in the foothills of Tulare county.

A call came over the telephone a day or so ago from the American Trading Co., a big business firm in the city, asking that I give them the list of prohibition states. A fan lay on my desk and I could easily read it off to them, and the increased respect that came into his tone as the list grew in length while I named state after state and told him just when the law became effective in our recently added states, made me bless the prohibition fan.

Yours for service,
ANNA MARDEN DE YO,
Corresponding Secretary Northern California W. C. T. U.

THE PROHIBITION MAP

Readers of THE UNION SIGNAL know there are eighteen prohibition states, but many in your locality, in your Sunday school class, and possibly members of your local union fail to remember the large list of states free from the worst of all curses—the liquor traffic.

To help impress the truth and aid every one in your vicinity to remember this list of states we suggest the use of the prohibition map (size 19x25, price 15 cents), large enough to show the white states most distinctly and not too large to be easily carried and exhibited before your Sunday school class or the boys' and girls' club, at the meeting of the local union and on your church bulletin board.

The map is also reproduced in leaflet form together with dates of adoption of the law in the various states and is sold at the usual price of 20 cents per hundred. Thousands should be distributed at Chautauquas, open air meetings and during "home coming" week.

HOW PROHIBITION AFFECTS THE LIFE

The effect of prohibition upon the life of the individual is shown by the following facts, for the correctness of which Mrs. Mary E. Cartland, honorary president of the North Carolina W. C. T. U., stands sponsor. Such cases could doubtless be multiplied indefinitely:

"John Moyl, a veteran saloonkeeper of Salisbury, N. C., and a man over seventy years old, has been converted and is now intensely antagonistic to liquor. Another prominent man, a city official who likewise became a convert to prohibition and Christianity, is one John Ludwick. The change in the persons named above has taken place since prohibition became a law in our state."

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., JULY 8, 1915 | No. 28

The Temperance Lighthouse

Each life is a boat on an ocean,
Each life is a boat on a sea,
Where surge-covered rocks ever menace,
And no one from danger is free.

But out of the darkness that threatens
Each vessel that sails o'er the sea,
A lighthouse of temperance is standing,
A guide for the sailor to be.

Be saved, we beseech, by this gleaming,
By rays that shine over the sea,
And bear on your pennons the watchword,
"For God and the home of the free."

—Mary H. Mather

SPECIAL ARTICLES IN THIS ISSUE

World's W. C. T. U. Notes—Enlist the Young People for National Constitutional Prohibition—Minnesota's Weekly Contribution to Dry Territory—Intoxicants Bar to Positions on State's Pay Roll—Who are Prohibition Fanatics?

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. NOTES

ANNA ADAMS GORDON, Honorary Secretary World's W. C. T. U.

The Maoris at Rawhitiora, New Zealand, have been visited by Mrs. Woodhead, who has made several tours among them. She was warmly welcomed by Hera Hemana, the president of the W. C. T. U., who, in common with the other members of the union, constantly exemplifies a high standard of Christianity.

Notwithstanding the unspeakable conditions brought about by the war, 985 delegates attended the annual council meetings of the N. B. W. T. A. held in London, April 28-30. The Countess of Carlisle presided. Reports showed that 19,516 pledges have been taken during the year, over $5,000 of literature sold at headquarters, and that 170 branches opened clubs and recreation rooms for the troops, many providing similar facilities for the women relatives of the men. White ribbon stalls were maintained at two London exhibitions. The White Ribbon Magazine has made a profit of over $1,000. On motion of Lady Carlisle the following resolution was carried with great enthusiasm and has since been sent to the king: "The N. B. W. T. A., assembled in council, hails with uplifted heart and with loyal homage, the king's resolve to set an example to his people by giving up the use of all alcoholic drink himself and by banishing it from his royal palaces, and the British temperance women fervently pray that millions of men and women may answer this call from the king, so that he, who deeply loves the country over which he reigns, may realize how great would be the glory of leading the nation, all his life through, whether in time of war or in time of peace, far away from the old drink curse, which has marred England's greatness, into the safe and blessed paths of national sobriety and righteousness."

Other resolutions were adopted urging the appointment and government recognition of women police with full powers, in all cities and towns, with a view to the especial protection of women and girls, and the improvement in order and sobriety in the streets; the entire prohibition by the will of the people of the sale of intoxicants in public houses, clubs, and elsewhere; a special campaign of work among young women with a view to arousing in them a sense of their responsibility at this time of national crisis; that representations be made to Lord Kitchener and the army council urging that the present issue of the rum ration to the troops be withdrawn; recording thankfulness for the hundred years of peace between Great Britain and the United States of America, and that conciliation and arbitration have prevailed to preserve that peace, in face of the grave difficulties which have from time to time arisen; affirming conviction as to the moral and social benefits that will accrue to the nation from the enfranchisement of its women, especially in the direction of temperance reform; and urging the war office to abolish the sale of intoxicating liquors in camps and training centers.

A mass meeting held by the W. C. T. U. during Women Abstainers' week in Copenhagen, Denmark, aroused interest in the work of the World's union.

At the National Executive Committee meeting of the W. C. T. U. of Sweden on May 8 a peace department was created, with Mrs. Nina Anderson of Vesteras as superintendent. Mrs. Anderson attended the Woman's Congress at The Hague as a delegate from Sweden. She is a woman of many gifts.

Pioneer work among the lumbermen of Canada is being pushed with enthusiasm by Miss Sproule, who, in fulfilling the duties connected with her parish of some 100,000 people, has met with marked success. Last year she traveled 8,000 miles in her missionary work. A petition urging temperance canteens has been sent by the W. C. T. U. to Sir Robert Borden, premier of Canada.

We learn through influential and reliable sources that our white ribbon sisters in Jerusalem are greatly in need of aid in their relief work for the poor. Anyone desiring to assist our W. C. T. U. comrade, Miss Brown, can reach her through the American consul at Jerusalem, Dr. Glazebrook.

A fine Young People's Branch has been organized in the Government school at Maymyo, Burma, and also one among the boys connected with the Y. M. C. A. in Rangoon. Scientific temperance lecture courses have been arranged for Miss Flora E. Strout in the European schools and she hopes soon to begin a normal course for teachers. Miss Strout has recently addressed a Bible assembly held in Maymyo—a very important meeting with delegates from every part of Burma. The Maymyo W. C. T. U. held its annual meeting on the conclusion of the assembly. This enterprising society has done splendid work, especially along the lines of Purity, Mothers' Meetings, L. T. L. and Y. P. B. work. Miss May Mack, at the head of the Young People's Branch, is increasingly in demand for addresses and organization work.

"The legislature is still in session and the prohibition bill has been read the second time. It will, of course, be passed," writes Mrs. Cora C. Benedict, president of the W. C. T. U. of Newfoundland. "Now it is up to the temperance people to get 25,000 votes when the plebiscite is taken in the fall. It will mean hard work and we need money to carry on the campaign. The liquor men are organizing, and they will have plenty of money to fight us." Mrs. Benedict reports an encouraging increase in membership—seventeen new members joining the W. C. T. U. at a recent meeting. The five papers of St. Johns give a column to the W. C. T. U. once a week.

On the invitation of the Presbyterian and Congregational missions in the provincial capital city, Paotingfu, Mrs. Chauncey Goodrich, president of the W. C. T. U. of China, accompanied by Miss Chen, a native Chinese white ribboner, recently held some temperance meetings in that city. One meeting was especially called for the official ladies. Mrs. Goodrich writes that "so interested did they seem and so earnest to become active temperance workers, twenty of them decided to form a temperance society. Right then and there they appointed their own officers, all promising to subscribe to the total abstinence pledge. Step by step these ladies will catch the vision of homes and country freed from the evils not only of opium, alcohol and cigarets, but of gambling and lotteries and of concubines and slave girls."

Chinese White Ribboner a Successful Speaker

One meeting was held in the Memorial Temple built for Li Hung Chang—a fine large hall able to seat several hundred and the place where President Eliot of Harvard, and later, Mr. Sherwood Eddy addressed large numbers of students. "I was very proud of Miss Chen as she spoke to several hundred students upon the subject, 'The Thieves of Society,'" writes Mrs. Goodrich. "She speaks forcibly and urgently and back of her words is the fine character which shines in her face. I noted with gratitude the close attention of the girls of the Normal school, who marched in a body into this meeting. When we asked those who wished to pledge themselves against the use of alcohol and the cigaret to indicate their decision, it stirred my heart to see how quickly some of their hands were raised. The cigaret is used quite a freely by women as by men and it was great trial to many who were present not to be allowed to smoke during the addresses. During the Sunday of our visit I made a short address at the regular church service, spoke to a girls' school and held a meeting at which nearly five hundred, most of the number students were present. Three hundred young men in my audience were from the government schools. We held several other public meetings during our visit, forming two societies and fanning into quicker life two others. . . . Miss Chen, our new secretary, wins people everywhere. She was able to give an address at point on our way back to Peking, but hastened on because of my three classes of fifty whom I am training in scientific temperance and home economics."

Mr. Chuan, who has been ably assisting the temperance work in China for the past year, sailed from Yokohama, Japan, June 25. Mr. Chuan has been doing translation work and holding public meetings under the direction of Mrs. Chauncey Goodrich. He comes to this country to study in the Hartford Theological Seminary.

Minnesota's Weekly Contribution to Dry Territory

Three more Minnesota counties voted out saloons on Monday, June 28, making a total of forty-one counties which have voted dry under the county option law, that went into effect March first. The counties voting on June 28 were Wilkin, Mower and Grant.

Governor Capper Settled It!

On the last night before a no-license election in one of the Minnesota counties which recently went dry, a speaker from Kansas City, Mo., was advertised to tell the voters about the failure of prohibition in Kansas. In reply to a telegraphic communication to the chief executive of Kansas, Governor Capper wired the following message, which was printed and circulated:

"Prohibition the greatest blessing that ever came to Kansas. Makes more happy homes, fewer heart-broken wives, less crime, an unqualified success. Our people enthusiastically for prohibition, and would not think for one moment of going back to the saloon and its attendant vices, whatever may be said to the contrary by hired spokesmen for liquor interests.

"Arthur Capper, Governor."

Liquor Banned From Camp of Pennsylvania National Guard by Order of Governor Brumbaugh

For the first time in the history of Pennsylvania's National Guard, a sweeping order affecting the use and sale of intoxicants in camp has been issued by the adjutant general. The order comes through the regular military channels, direct from Governor Brumbaugh, who, by virtue of his office, is commander-in-chief of the militia forces.

"The canteen has been chiefly noticeable by its absence at encampments of the Pennsylvania citizen soldiery in recent years," says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, "and while the camps have not been entirely dry, the falling off in the use of alcoholic beverages among the men has been marked, according to officers."

New York National Guard to Have No Liquor

Intoxicants will be barred in the encampment of the two reinforced brigades of the New York National Guard at Fishkill Plains, July 17 to August 1.

"The use of liquor in any form will be strictly prohibited to both officers and men," is the announcement made by an officer of the guard. "Formerly alcohol was considered essential, but Major General O'Ryan for several years past has made determined efforts to eliminate it, and with great success."

The Decreasing Production of Beer

"During the first eight months of the fiscal year 1914-1915 the production of beer in the United States has decreased more than three million barrels. The cause of this enormous decrease, where under normal conditions an increase would have been only natural, is assigned by some to the increase of prohibition territory; and this is true to some extent."—The Brewers' Journal for June.

Intoxicants Bar to Positions on State's Payroll

Governor Capper of Kansas, in a letter to the new civil service commission, urges that a rule be incorporated in its code "making ineligible for appointment to a state position any person who uses intoxicating liquors in any form."

If the civil service board carries out the governor's suggestion, Kansas will be the first state to take this advanced ground. The Topeka Capital is authority for the statement that every elected officer of the state is at present a teetotaler. The governor's letter is as follows:

"In formulating the rules governing the appointment of state employes under the new civil service law, I desire to suggest for your earnest consideration the desirability of incorporating a rule making ineligible for appointment to a state position any person who uses intoxicating liquors in any form.

"Constitutional prohibition is the settled policy of the state and its object is to promote sobriety and cleaner citizenship. While Kansas can already congratulate itself on having fewer liquor users on its payroll than any other state in the Union, still, there is no good reason for its having any.

"Most of the big corporations and other large employers in this country have adopted the policy of not employing drinking people. In my judgment a state can well afford to follow in such footsteps.

"Public officials and employes are constantly coming in contact with the people and they should be model citizens. No one will question the state's right to employ only men of sobriety.

"Not only should the rule apply to applicants seeking appointment, but should provide that the use of liquor by an employe is sufficient ground for discharge from the public service.

"Trusting that these suggestions may receive your most careful consideration, I am, very respectfully,

"ARTHUR CAPPER, Governor."

Utah's Dry Territory Increases

Utah's dry territory was materially increased by the election of June 29. The towns of Logan, Provo, Richmond and Smithfield continue dry by increased majorities over the previous election. Farmington and Marysvale have changed from the wet to the dry column. Gunnison is also claimed by the prohibition advocates.

Revenue Decrease in Distilling District

The internal revenue for the Peoria (Ill.) district has fallen off during the past year $7,041,816. Collections were $26,493,570 the past year against $33,535,386 for the preceding year. The explanation given is the usual one—decrease in consumption of whisky due to spread of dry territory.

DOES PROHIBITION PROHIBIT? AN UNANSWERABLE REPLY

Net profits of Pabst's Brewing Company, after depreciation, expenses and other losses were paid:

For 1913	$900,605
For 1914	564,946
Loss from 1913-14	$335.659

—From the Economist

No Liquor Selling Along Route of Alaskan Government Railroad, By Order of the President

Instructions approved by President Wilson for the sale of town sites along the route of the government railroad between Seward and Fairbanks, Alaska, stipulate that no liquor selling, gambling or immorality will be allowed on any of the lots, under penalty of forfeiture.

No Saloons in Yosemite Park

Among the rules and regulations being sent out by Secretary of the Interior Franklin Lane is one that states, "No drinking saloon or barroom will be permitted upon government lands in Yosemite National Park."

West Virginia's Prohibition Law Reduces Arrests

Enforcement of the prohibitory law of West Virginia, which became operative a year ago, has cut the number of arrests in thirty-five towns and cities throughout the state more than half—from 14,000 to 6,986—according to statistics made public by the department of prohibition. In 1914 half of the arrests were for intoxication.

Auto Speedway is Dry

The new auto speedway, one of the largest in the world, which was recently completed in Maywood, a suburb of Chicago, has refused to allow liquor on its grounds. During the construction of the course a brisk trade in intoxicants, especially bottled beer, went on inside the enclosure through a special permit from the Maywood authorities. The speedway officials decided, however, that the sale of liquor within the enclosure was attended with too great risks, and an order went forth that every drop of booze must be cleared from the park. "I don't propose to go on record as a prohibitionist," said F. E. Edwards, director of contests, "but I have seen more than one fatal accident on automobile courses, due to the presence of liquor."

Heads of Departments Should Neither Drink Nor Smoke

Cigarets and drink have recently lost caste among the department managers of the Gossard Corset Company, and this is how it came about. At a round-table conference of the managers in the company's office in Chicago, the present and future efficiency of the firm's management was the subject of discussion. Mr. H. W. Gossard, head of the company, after listening to the suggestions of the others remarked, "I hope that I shall, and I want all of you to be working for the H. W. Gossard company twenty-five years from now. Your opinions on the subject of efficiency open the way for my suggestion. I would like the head of every department to be a man who neither smokes cigarets nor drinks. I know those of you who indulge in cigarets and beer or light wines are perfectly competent men and highly efficient, otherwise you wouldn't be here now. My request is made with a view to the future. Is it not possible that without cigarets or drink we can uphold these standards and continue to do so for the next twenty-five years?"

L. T. L. Demonstration at Southern California W. C. T. U. Convention

IMPETUS GIVEN STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION MOVEMENT AT SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

MRS. MARY M. COMAN

While the smoke was still rising from the satisfactory ceremony of burning the last vestige of the mortgage on our state headquarters in Los Angeles, an earnest little woman, with a catch in her voice, rose and, holding up her ungloved hands, told how twenty-five years ago she had vowed she would not wear another pair of kid gloves while there was a debt upon our Temperance Temple. It was an intense and dramatic moment, for we all knew how Mrs. H. P. Anderson had worked and prayed during long, trying years, not only for the loved Temple, but also for the great cause it represented. In a moment the state organization had voted a pair of kid gloves to the brave and devoted worker, and Mrs. King, president of Kern county W. C. T. U., where Mrs. Anderson had done most of her work for prohibition, at once followed that action by saying her county would also present a pair.

While all W. C. T. U. conventions are impressive, instructive and satisfactory, there is a feeling in Southern California that to have a state gathering in beautiful Pasadena is to assure success in every way. The recently held convention was no exception, for never in all its history has the state enjoyed a stronger, better annual meeting than this. Stirring, splendid addresses there were, inspiring and uplifting consecration services preceding each day's work; abundant and beautiful floral decorations, unusually fine music, and, above all, a remarkable unity and solidarity of spirit and purpose.

Following so closely the decision of the temperance forces of the state at Fresno to begin at once preparations for another campaign for state-wide prohibition, there was a special earnestness and seriousness in all that was done. As is already known, two amendments to the state constitution have been agreed upon by the united temperance organizations: the first, straight prohibition, to go into effect in 1920; the second, briefly, to prohibit the sale of liquors in saloons, leaving the wholesale trade to sell in quantites of two gallons or over, the measure to go into effect in 1918. There is a general feeling of hopefulness that both amendments will carry, and, to that end, the white ribboners of all California will work and pray unceasingly from now until the November election, 1916.

Mrs. Stella B. Irvine Elected President

Three of the six officers felt that they could not remain longer in the arduous work at the head of the state organization, so their resignations were reluctantly accepted. Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard, president, had done valiant work during the strenuous campaign, but physically needed a rest. Mrs. Celia M. Noll, corresponding secretary, who has served faithfully at headquarters for three years, also asked to be relieved, while Mrs. Sophia Wood Plimpton, for seventeen consecutive years the efficient state treasurer, resigned, as the recent death of her husband, Hon. Homer Plimpton, had changed her home conditions.

Mrs. Stella B. Irvine of Riverside, National superintendent of Sunday School work, a woman widely and most favorably known, was elected state president. Mrs. Hester T. Griffith, long a state leader, was re-elected vice-president. Mrs. Alice Wortendyke was made corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Hattie Corline Young, for many years an aggressive and capable worker, was re-elected recording secretary, and Miss Ada Cummings, assistant. Miss Mary E. Stewart, a level-headed business woman of Pasadena, was made treasurer.

Reports were most satisfactory and encouraging. The number of unions in Southern California is 138, with an active membership of 4,873—486 honoraries, 15 Y. P. B. organizations, 19 L. T. L.'s; regular meetings, 1,891; public meetings, 293; red letter days observed, 269; amount of temperance literature purchased at headquarters, $507.59; 18 new unions organized during the year. Department reports showed that vital and energetic work had been done and many prizes were given. A strong peace program was given to a crowded house, at the conclusion of which peace resolutions were adopted deploring the present European conditions and commending President Wilson for his statesmanship and Christian spirit.

Following the closing day of the convention, with its most attractive children's demonstration under the capable leadership of Mrs. Ellen Dayton Blair, state L. T. L. superintendent, over a hundred of the white ribboners went en masse to San Diego, where special honor was shown them, both by the Exposition officials and the people of the city. The state W. C. T. U. rest room was inspected and pronounced in every way a success. There was a fitting program of music and speaking in front of the great out-of-door organ, with Dr. John P. Hillis of Pasadena as soloist and Bishop W. N. Bell of San Francisco as speaker, the theme of the latter being, "Radicalism in Temperance Work." A picnic provided by the unions of San Diego county in the beautiful Pepper Grove was a most attractive feature of the day. It was followed by speeches and songs. The well-known refrain of "California's Going Dry" was constantly heard, as well as the almost as popular, "It's a Short, Short Way to Prohibition."

The 1915 state convention will long be remembered for its unusually fine addresses, its excellent reports and its unity of purpose.

WHO ARE THE PROHIBITION FANATICS?

"Prohibition only says to men: 'Thou shalt not sell.' None of those who are commonly branded as fanatics have gone so far as to say to individuals: 'Thou shalt not drink.' The prohibitionists are against the traffic. But there are those who go to the far extreme of saying to men: 'Thou shalt not drink,' and these are the simon-pure fanatics of the prohibition cause. It will be interesting to study the species."

The foregoing is a paragraph from a new book on "The Logic of Prohibition," by Rev. Matt S. Hughes, the prohibition leader of Southern California. His graphic word picture of the real prohibition fanatics of the present day is interesting reading:

"The whirling dervishes of prohibition fanaticism are the men who administer the great railroad systems of the United States.

"They are leagues in advance of the narrow and bigoted preachers, the third-party voters, the temperance union women, and all the other cranks who vote to abolish the traffic. These are only asking that the state forbid the distiller and brewer to manufacture and the saloonkeeper and bartender to sell.

"But these railroad magnates are so fanatical on the subject that they have actually issued orders to hundreds of thousands of free American citizens, saying that they must not drink intoxicating liquors. Indeed, these railroad operators are such prohibition fanatics that they actually discharge their employes if they are only seen going into or coming out of a saloon, even when off duty.

"Here we have prohibition in its most drastic form. These railroad fanatics have established a system of espionage on many of the roads to make sure that their prohibition prohibits.

"The Pennsylvania railroad has its men thoroughly terrorized. It reports that 125,226 observations were made in February of last year to determine to what extent employes were prohibited from drinking or frequenting saloons, and not one man was found who disobeyed the rule.

"Not long ago the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie road discharged 126 men in the enforcement of this rule. And these fanatical outrages are perpetrated in the name of human safety!

"O brothers, this is sad! Here in America, the land of the free, hundreds of thousands of those who have as good right to get drunk as any man, are under a fanatical prohibition that is terrible to contemplate. Level-headed business men at the head of the greatest enterprises have developed a fanaticism exceedingly painful to those of broad and liberal mind.

"Who would have thought that narrowness and bigotry of such a character would be found entrenched in the general offices of the railroad systems of the country? Who would have dreamed that such men as these would have sacrificed the sacred rights of the individual in the supposed interest of safety and efficiency? It is time to view with alarm this action.

"Another band of prohibition fanatics is composed of the heads of great industrial corporations who are large employers of labor.

"These fanatics are fairly running amuck. The operators of many of the great industrial plants are so narrow and bigoted that they will not allow their workingmen to drink intoxicating liquors on or off duty.

"For example, the Cambria Steel Company and the Hershey Chocolate Company have recently gone extra dry and decreed absolute prohibition for their employes.

"The outrages inflicted by these fanatics are of the most flagrant character. In February, 1914, the following notice was posted in the Berwick (Pa.) plant of the American Car and Foundry Company: 'Workmen frequenting drinking places coming to or going from their work will be replaced by non-drinking men as rapidly as possible.' Another blow to liberty!

"The Philadelphia Quartz Company has served notice that total abstainers will receive ten per cent more wages than those who continue to exercise their personal liberty in patronizing the rum shop.

"The frenzied utterances against a licensed and lawful business from these fanatics are painful in the extreme to all sane and conservative minds.

"This contagion of fanaticism has broken out across the seas. The great leaders in the continental struggle all seem possessed of a certain fanaticism in this matter. The Czar has earnestly warned his soldiers against the use of liquor. The German Kaiser has issued drastic orders against excessive drinking among his men. Lord Kitchener sent his British troops oversea with an earnest warning against the dangers of drink.

"Philadelphia is the headquarters of one of the most dangerous prohibition fanatics. He is known all over the country as Connie Mack, the manager of the Athletic baseball team of the American League.

"He says: 'All the umpires together haven't put as many ball players out of the game as has Old Man Booze.'

"Anyone can readily understand the dangerous character of such statements. If the idol of every vacant lot in the country succeeds in getting the American boys to believing that they cannot succeed in baseball if they drink, it means a great loss of custom to the saloon. It is all the more harmful to the great industry on which the prosperity of the country depends, because this man Mack last year succeeded in winning another pennant.

"Time would fail us to point out the real prohibition fanatics. They are to be found in such unexpected places.

"The trainers of prize fighters are among the worst. They will not allow any indulgence to the poor fellows they are training for the ring. They declare that total abstinence is necessary to physical condition and great endurance.

"The trainers of football squads have the same perverted notion. Recently employers in this very city have discharged men who patronize the institution which they say must be preserved in the interest of business.

"So great is the contagion of fanaticism when once it gets a foothold that there are some fanatical prohibitionists of the extreme type among the saloonkeepers—that is to say, they will not allow their bartenders to drink.

"It is like measles or smallpox, no one can tell who will be infected next, and one of the worst features of the whole case lies in the fact that many of the fanatics do not seem to realize that they are the victims of the dread disease—prohibition.

"All of which is intended to illustrate what was said in the beginning, that the real prohibition fanatics are not the bigoted preachers, the ignorant women, the hypocritical reformers, the cranky third-party voters, or even the majorities which forbid the manufacture and the sale of intoxicating liquors in many of our states.

"The genuine fanatics are these people who, in increasing numbers, for various reasons, insist that men shall not drink under such penalties as they are able to visit upon them. The rapid increase in the numbers of these fanatics is cause for alarm—in certain quarters."

WHY NOT A POSTER CAMPAIGN?

During the summer when all the world is out of doors young people will be planning to make a specialty of out-of-door temperance work. Among the many lines of effort for the vacation season, temperance posters should not be overlooked, as they fit in admirably with the out-of-door program.

Mrs. Zillah Foster Stevens, head of the temperance department of the International Sunday School Association, in outlining plans for Sunday school temperance work urges temperance education by poster, enumerating its advantages as follows: It "gives instruction through the eye; presents convincingly the latest scientific facts; educates the whole community. Poster education goes into the open and carries the truth to those who never enter church or Sunday school."

During vacation days high school boys and college young men may have leisure time which can be used for the erection of billboards or frames to hold posters. Billboards can be placed to advantage along main-traveled roads through the country and where they may be seen from railroads and electric cars. Frames to hold posters can be used on church lawns or fastened to the building. Permission for putting up such frame can be secured without difficulty from all churches, and many churches will be willing to provide their own frame. Posters can be changed weekly or semi-monthly by the young people. Small billboards—the proper size for a poster—may be placed on private lawns.

Undoubtedly in your vicinity there is at least one large picnic ground. Would it not be well previous to a picnic to tack on the band stand or wherever possible one or more temperance posters. Possibly a frame for the poster or a billboard might be erected. These posters should be changed occasionally through the summer.

Is there a summer resort in your locality? Posters should be used plentifully for the education of the summer colony. Possibly the ferry boat, which in many localities is a means of transportation for the summer visitors, would be willing to allow the exhibition of posters. In the post-office or general store there might be room for posters, at least it would be well to inquire. Y. P. B. members who will be away at summer resorts this summer may well tuck away in their trunks a few posters, and they will have no difficulty in finding suitable places to hang them.

If there is a Chautauqua in your vicinity, and no one else has supplied the temperance posters, the young people should attend to it. The posters, re-inforced by a strip of cardboard top and bottom, can be hung from wires with Dennison card holders.

Order your posters from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill. They are listed in the catalogue and vary in price from 5 cents to 50 cents apiece. Also see advertisement of poster leaflets on page 16 of this issue.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

"It is glorious to man a Lifeboat, but better to build a Lighthouse"

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER, National General Secretary Young People's Branch, Evanston, Ill.

Enlist The Young People For National Constitutional Prohibition

It is gratifying indeed to know that, contrary to custom, little cessation of effort on the part of our organized young people has accompanied the summer days. In fact, judging from the reports which reach me daily, there has never been so keen an interest on the part of Branch members in Y. P. B. affairs, nor so eager a desire among young people generally to be "of the conflict a part." This is testified to by the splendid gathering together of young people in various portions of the country and the ready response with which our field workers are meeting. There is no stronger evidence of the growing sentiment among our youth and of the increasing popularity of our organization as an outlet for the desire to serve than the fact that where formerly the W. C. T. U. was in search of young women for the field they are now presenting themselves and asking for a place in the ranks. Once the arrest of thought has been theirs, their range of vision is broadened and "the call comes with renewed emphasis that they GO FORWARD,"—and go forward they do right valiantly. Oh, for a clearer call sounded by those who have been all along the way! Young people, rightly inspired and rightly consecrated, are veritable magnets drawing others to them and to the cause they serve.

What a thrice blessed union is that which stands not alone but has the support of two healthy, growing Branches! Never have I been so impressed with this truth as during our recent Missouri Y. P. B. convention, held in Columbia, when the young people were welcomed in turn by the W. C. T. U., the Y. P. B. and the L. T. L., each a thriving and active organization, and each contributing its quota not only to the success of the convention but to the uplift of the community—Missouri's university city. In this, the young people's day, no W. C. T. U. household is complete without the presence of its children, the Y. P. B. and the L. T. L., with their buoyancy and their enthusiasm.

None questions the wisdom of training the child in the way he should go, and least of all white ribboners who have through all these years endeavored to make straight the way for little feet and who see in the young a most valuable asset of the campaign for National Constitutional Prohibition. Realizing this, let us not forget that the way grows infinitely hard at the 'teen age—the Y. P. B. age—and if we would preserve intact the principles instilled during the tender years, and at the same time conserve for our blessed cause the fire and strength, the talent and grace of youth, we must hold the young close through the bonds of the Young People's Branch. In unity there is strength—particularly so for young people who are just acquiring stability.

But I hear some one say, "Young people are so busy." Of course, they are busy and I am glad it is so. God wants the busy man and the busy woman. There is no provision made for the drone in the divine plan of things. And surely in this busiest of all busy campaigns in behalf of the youth of today and tomorrow, we need busy people. Busy young people are worth while—I beg you to cultivate them!

All out-of-doors is calling the young people, for they love life abundantly. Why not meet them half way, local union, with a picnic in the woods or the park, having a good program (and, of course, the "eats" which they so much enjoy) and an informal, heart-to-heart talk concerning the Y. P. B. A hay-ride, placing posters along the way, may be the means of enlisting them in the work permanently, or an al fresco entertainment with a good program and a good speaker may result in a Branch.

The time for conventions is here again and I would urge that you forget not the call of the hour—the call to enlist young men and young women in the campaign for National Constitutional Prohibition. If you have a will to do this, the way is already open to you. Let not this year close without a commendable effort in behalf of the Young People's Branch.

FOR THE SUMMER ACTIVITIES

Why not hold a lawn party with a musical and literary program and light refreshments? Divide the young people attending into groups and let each group be visited in turn by members of the entertaining Branch, if organized, or members of a committee organized for that purpose, or by women of the W. C. T. U., well informed concerning the Branch (if there is no Branch in the community) with a view to securing pledge signers and members. As guests sign the pledge they will move to a place appointed where the "organization group" will be formed. If a sufficient number of signers are secured a Branch may be organized at this time. If such an entertainment is given by a Branch, the members may be divided into sides, a suitable penalty to be paid by the side securing the least number of members during the evening.

The following entertainment given jointly by the Headquarters and Bensonhurst Branches of Brooklyn, N. Y., is suggestive:

During the early part of the evening each Branch held a business meeting. Mr. Allan Van Wart, president of Bensonhurst Branch, sang a tenor solo. After this, Headquarters Branch gave a comical minstrel show. The girls, dressed in white, accompanied by two young men, marched in singing, "It's a Short Way to Prohibition." As they took their places in a semi-circle, three young men as colored minstrels fell down the stairs and into the group. Everything was splendid—the jokes and the chorus and the vocal solos, and in the midst a rousing prohibition speech by Dr. David Park. It was a perfect success.

If there is an Old Folks' Home, Orphans' Home or similar institution in your vicinity this would be an excellent time to pay it a visit, taking along delicacies or flowers and giving an entertainment of some sort.

JULY PROGRAM FROM YEAR BOOK

In this month comes the birthday of our National W. C. T. U. president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, and the day is known as Loyal Temperance Legion Day. Why not give a picnic to the poorer children of the community—making the day as pleasant as possible for the little ones, having one skilled at story telling give the children some good stories (these may be selected from "Temperance Tales," obtainable at the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House), and endeavor, if possible, to organize them into an L. T. L. These children need not be the poor children necessarily—but make it a children's picnic.

CONVENTIONS

Full accounts of the various conventions named will be given later.

The Pennsylvania Young People's Branch held its annual convention in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium at Wilkes-Barre June 21-25. Among the speakers were Dr. Charles Wesley Burns, a former state president, and Rev. Mecca Marie Varney.

The New York Y. P. B. will hold its 1915 convention in Fulton July 2-6. Mr. Daniel A. Poling will deliver an address on the evening of the second, and various other prominent speakers will contribute to the program.

The annual institute and training school for the Ohio Y. P. B. and workers will be held at Lakeside, July 13-16, and will be followed by the W. C. T. U. institute. The National general secretary will be present and deliver several addresses.

The Y. P. B. of Southern California will hold its convention some time during August; but the exact dates have not as yet been announced.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

Missouri Young People's Branch Holds Sixth Annual Convention

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER

The sixth annual convention of the Missouri Young People's Branch was, as the young people had meant it should be, the "best ever"—best in point of attendance, enthusiasm and purpose. This was to be expected, however, since every year marks a great advance in our temperance and prohibition movement, and the young people of Missouri are abreast of the times.

The city of Columbia has for many years past been a veritable mecca for the young people of Missouri because there is located the magnificent state university and several other prominent colleges. It was most fitting, therefore, that the Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U., standing as it does for physical, mental and moral uplift, and offering such splendid opportunities to the college student, should take its "best-ever" convention to that city. The entertaining Branch, of which Mrs. J. M. Windsor is the general secretary and Mr. A. B. Bedford president, organized less than two years ago by the National general secretary while attending the state W. C. T. U. convention, is a fair sample of the progress of the Y. P. B. in Missouri. Organized with but nine charter members, it has experienced phenomenal growth and was this year awarded the beautiful silk flag for having accomplished the best work, according to state and national plans, during the year 1914-15. Older Branches will look to their laurels the coming year, since the gold piece offered by the beloved "Mother" Bentley, for a number of years state general secretary, for the greatest increase in paid-up members, went to the Ashton Branch, of which Miss Erma Meryhew is president and which was organized in March of this year.

A pleasing feature of the stay in Columbia was a delightful social one evening tendered the summer students of the university by the young people's church societies of Columbia, and to which the convention was especially invited. The intermingling of this splendid lot of young people with purpose in their lives and aim in their efforts was inspiring, to say the least. It made some of us yearn, however, to gather them all into our own ranks. Other social features were banquets at noon each day (supposedly lunches served without charge by the local W. C. T. U.), an automobile ride, a picnic supper and a "hike" into the country, but by no means did pleasure supplant business, for each day saw some good done. The acting president, Mr. Gus O. Nations of St. Louis, did credit to himself and the organization as a presiding officer, and the convention voiced its appreciation in the election of officers.

Parliamentary drills, conducted by the Y. P. B.'s able parliamentarian, played a large part in the convention program and aroused visible interest in that phase of our work. The heart of our dear Mrs. Benjamin would have leaped for joy could she have been present.

The annual address and report of the state general secretary, Miss Anna MacZentmyer of Higginsville, was filled with the joy of work well done and of better things yet to come. The number of new Branches reported proved the state secretary a busy one indeed and most faithful to the duties committed to her.

The convention was greatly enriched by the presence of Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, state president of the W. C. T. U., Miss Roena Shaner, state vice-president, and Mrs. L. O. Middleton, state superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction—all gifts to the convention from the state W. C. T. U. Mrs. Burger's story of the beginning, growth and standing of the W. C. T. U. as a world power, and her "call to arms" will be long remembered by the young people. Miss Shaner's offer of herself to the cause of young people made for her a place in the hearts of the delegates and visitors. Mrs. Middleton's address, emphasized by the use of her charts, gave the young people just the instruction they needed to better equip them for service. The stereopticon address of Prof. Alva W. Taylor, president of the Missouri Bible School, one evening, was also most interesting and instructive.

Some of the subjects discussed and presented were: "Is the Study Course Essential to a Successful Y. P. B.?", "How Can National and State Plans Be Adapted to Local Work?", "What Constitutes a Model Branch?—A Model Member?", "Use and Abuse of Official Organs," "The Y. P. B. in the City—in the Town," "How Can the Y. P. B. Best Aid in the Campaign for National Constitutional Prohibition?" The question box conducted by the National general secretary brought forth many interesting as well as practical discussions and many problems of the local Branch were solved thereby. We wish it were possible, for the benefit of all concerned, to give some of the items of work reported by the local Branches—work carried through most successfully and along many lines, but space does not permit, and it can only be said here that the Young People's Branch of Missouri, collectively and individually, is awake to its opportunities and faithful to its obligations. The officers elected for the year are: Mr. Gus O. Nations, St. Louis, president; Miss Lura Hardy, Hannibal, vice-president; Mr. D. B. Curtiss, Kansas City, corresponding secretary; Miss Ruth Searcy, Columbia, recording secretary; Mr. Hugh Mason, Carthage, treasurer.

Toleration of the Liquor Traffic Scored as Penny-Wise and Pound-Foolish

Dr. Herbert M. Towne, health officer of the city of Schenectady, New York, under the Socialist administration in 1912-1913, is contributing to The Citizen of that city a series of very interesting articles on "The Liquor Problem and Its Remedy." In dealing with the physiological effects of the poison alcohol, he says:

"From the continuous use of alcohol structural changes occur throughout the entire system, depending, naturally, upon the amount which is continuously used and the susceptibility of the person using it,—some slight damage, however, being done even in the cases of very moderate but persistent drinking.

"I once heard the chief medical examiner of a large life insurance company say, in a talk before a small gathering of doctors, that there was no denying that a man who has ever used even a tablespoonful of alcohol was a poorer insurance risk than the total abstainer. This statement, moreover, he accentuated by saying that he indulged moderately himself. A statement of this sort, while it may savor a bit of exaggeration, nevertheless has more weight than if it had come from a temperance lecturer or person who was a total abstainer himself. His opinion is especially valuable because his conclusions are based upon a scientific study of millions of cases of causes of death. What this chief examiner was discussing when he resorted to this hyperbole was the effect of the continuous use of alcohol, even in small doses, upon the living animal organism.

"Many poisons have a selective affinity for certain tissues or organs. Although there is scarcely a single organ over which alcohol does not have a deleterious influence, yet it likewise has this special affinity for certain tissues. The protoplasms affected especially through the selective affinity of alcohol are (1) that which enters into the formation of red blood corpuscles and (2) that which is the essential element in nervous tissues. It has been demonstrated by scientific laboratory methods over and over again that there is a gradual destruction of nerve cells to an extent beyond repair. It is equally well established that the red corpuscles are irreparably affected. It is obvious, then, that serious injury to all organs must result when the central controlling station is rendered inefficient and when the nutrient carrier, upon which every tissue and organ depends for sustenance, is seriously interfered with.

"Now add to these direct effects those indirect and more subtle ones of heredity and we have such a combination that there can be no wonder whatever that alcohol is set down as an etiological factor in so many of our diseases, and especially in those classed as nervous affections.

"A year ago the writer heard ex-Governor Dix say that one of the last of his official acts as governor of New York state was to visit all the state institutions for the insane and make a first hand study of conditions. His conclusion was that the Empire state was woefully penny-wise and pound-foolish to receive into its coffers certain revenue from the liquor traffic and expend enormously more for the care of insanity caused directly by that traffic. To one who is familiar with the pathology of alcoholism this comes home with conviction."

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, July 8, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

LET THE PUBLIC KNOW THE FACTS

The suggestion recently made by Alderman Charles E. Merriam of the city council of Chicago that a commission or special committee of seven men be appointed to make a study of the liquor problem is being favorably commented upon by the Chicago press.

Chicago with its seven thousand saloons and forty breweries offers a magnificent field for such research work. If the proposed committee were composed of fair-minded, intelligent men who entered upon their investigation with the sole purpose of learning the whole truth in regard to the drink traffic, the report by them would be invaluable. Indeed its revelations could hardly fail to startle the citizens of Chicago into an activity at the polls that would forever dispose of the liquor problem.

All the most radical advocate of prohibition asks is that the truth and the whole truth concerning alcohol's effects be published; and what the liquor interests fear above everything is that the search-light of truth may be turned upon their business.

While heartily approving the plan of the alderman not only for Chicago, but for every community that has not been emancipated from the liquor traffic, it occurs to us that a self-appointed committee in every city would be an excellent substitute. Young men and women just out of high school or college would find in the task a unique opportunity for the study of economics.

First, secure statistics showing the cost to the tax-payers of the liquor traffic, from the various departments of their city or county government, for example, the state asylums, penitentiaries, jails, hospitals for insane, houses of correction, infirmaries, poor houses, juvenile courts and institutions related thereto, police courts and coroner's office.

Second, get from the associated charities, social settlements, city missions and other church and benevolent organizations, figures showing how many of their respective beneficiaries trace their misfortune to John Barleycorn.

Third, learn from the hospitals, boards of health and physicians what proportion of the illness of adults and of children is due to alcoholism in the patients or their parents.

Fourth, from the municipal lodging houses and employment agencies ascertain the number of out-of-works who can be accounted for by the drink habit.

Fifth, interview the workers in rescue missions and homes, and endeavor to discover what part liquor has played in the downfall of the unfortunate women being cared for.

Having secured this data and classified and arranged it for publication, interest the best newspaper in your city in publishing it. Of course it will cause something of a sensation, but sensations of this character are good for a community. Everybody will read it and talk about it. It will furnish the ministers a theme for sermons and the editors will comment on it in editorials.

What will be the result? A campaign that will end at the next election in a victory for prohibition in your city or county. Try it.

SUPPLYING WHOSE NEEDS?

At a recent meeting of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers in Cincinnati, Mr. Samuel Woolner, Jr., president of the organization, said, "The persons engaged in the liquor business contend that they are simply supplying a want and a need. The demand is here and the people have an inalienable and inborn and God-given right to their product."

The particular section of society which needs alcohol is not specified and we venture the conjecture that the president of the liquor organization would find it difficult to discover any reputable class of citizens which would put itself on record as needing alcoholic liquors.

It would not be the farmers, the producers of the food supply of the country, for have not the granges almost unanimously spoken in favor of prohibition.

Neither would it be the men employed in the factories and great industries, who manufacture the commodities we eat and wear and use in everyday life, for it is common knowledge that they recognize in John Barleycorn the enemy of efficiency, by virtue of which they retain their positions.

The transportation companies, which distribute these necessaries of our common life, would admit no need of alcohol, for they have very emphatically made it known that they consider drink a menace to every branch of their business.

What the advertisers, who have so large a part in promoting activity in mercantile lines, think of the necessity for alcoholic liquors is indicated by their recent utterances at their international convention in Chicago.

The newspapers, the advertising mediums by which the men who supply and those who purchase, are brought together, are known to look with growing disfavor upon drink, and many of them have declared independence of "the trade" by declining to advertise their goods.

The so-called need for alcohol as a beverage is fictitious, and only those whose depraved appetites demand it or who make their living at the expense of other people's health, wealth and happiness will confess to such need.

A CAMPAIGN OF PRAYER

The Ohio liquor interests, in taking an inventory of the forces of their opponents in the coming statewide campaign, find themselves face to face with one element the strength of which they are unable to estimate and the possibilities of which must cause them concern. The ministers representing the churches of Ohio have organized a prayer league and have declared as their purpose "the promotion of moral and religious enthusiasm in the campaign for the abolition of the liquor traffic in the state." They are arranging for meetings of ministers and devout laymen for the purpose of prayer, to be held in each of the eighty-eight counties of the state. These gatherings are distinctly understood to be not for discussion nor for organization, but that the subjective and objective effects of prayer may be made manifest throughout the state, and "to produce a statewide revival of religious fervor in all the churches." As a result of these county-group prayer meetings it is expected that similar meetings will be held among all the laity in all the churches under the direction of their pastors. Individual pledges will be received for the observance of stated periods of prayer daily by the Christian people of the state.

Foundation work of this character is almost certain to insure success all through the campaign. The enthusiasm generated by united prayer cannot fail to result in generous contributions to meet all expenses; it will make certain large and responsive audiences and the enlistment of hundreds of volunteer workers and speakers, and undoubtedly it will find expression next November in the votes of almost the total membership of the Christian churches.

Why not prayer leagues in every state?

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

The Arkansas Bankers' Association has resolved that all its banquets hereafter shall be dry.

The city of Kokomo, Ind., voted out the saloons on June 29, by 133 majority, after a most bitterly contested election.

An official eye-witness with the vodka-less Russians remarks upon "the infinitely superior physique, spirit and endurance of the Russian soldiers, who have made wonderful marches, endured long periods of trench work on short food, and made remarkable recoveries from the most serious wounds."

According to the Champion of Fair Play, "More than one hundred saloon-keepers have wearied of the drink selling profession in Milwaukee and will go out of business on July 1." Poor business, caused by the war, jitneys and cool weather, is given as the reason!!!

How does Kansas City, Kansas, feel about prohibition? This is what the Kansas City Star says about it: "Kansas City, Kans., never was so prosperous as it is now; taxes never were lower; business never better; vacant rooms and houses never so scarce; the population never so great. Once a majority of the business men of Kansas City, Kansas, believed that the saloons were necessary to 'hold the business.' Now ninety-nine out of every one hundred business men in the city insist upon law enforcement to keep the saloon out."

Kalamazoo, Mich., since its saloons have been closed, is experiencing a novel freedom from drunkenness, disorderly conduct and petty crimes. For the first twenty-two days of May, police records show only eighteen arrests for drunkenness as compared with 81 for the corresponding days of 1914. The finance committee of the city council, which this year cut the annual appropriation of the police department, is being convinced of the correctness of its belief that in a saloonless city fewer policemen are needed to protect property and maintain order.

The remarkable change in the attitude of the medical profession toward the use of alcohol in the treatment of disease is shown by the records of the Cincinnati Hospital, an institution among the greatest of its class in the world and located in one of the whisky centers of the United States. For the year 1914 only seven pints of intoxicants were used for its patients for the entire twelve months, while during six months of 1898, although the capacity of the hospital was considerably less, the records show the use of more than seventeen hundred pints of whisky, beer, wine and gin.

CALLERS AT NATIONAL HEAD-QUARTERS

Recent callers at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Howe and son from Cherokee, Kansas, who stopped on their way home from a trip to Niagara Falls and other eastern points, having motored 3,512 miles.

Mrs. E. C. Bowyer, Chicago, and Mrs. P. A. Cleveland, Detroit, cousins of the father of Frances E. Willard, were among the visitors who a few days ago came to Evanston, to visit that mecca for all white ribboners, Rest Cottage.

"Probably 50,000 working men in Massachusetts lose their positions each year as a direct or indirect result of intoxicating liquors," declared ex-Congressman Frederick S. Deitrick of Massachusetts, in a recent address. "It also causes great privation to their families. This is twice the number employed in the liquor business. A prohibition law will greatly aid these 50,000 men in retaining their positions. Thousands of accidents are yearly caused directly or indirectly by intoxicating liquors to our working men and to the women and children.

"Prohibition in Maine would be twice as effective if Massachusetts and New Hampshire did not concoct all sorts of schemes to get liquor into Maine. We here are to blame for practically all the criticism that has been directed against the Maine prohibition law."

The village officers of Iron Junction, Minn., have the courage of their convictions when it comes to the question of prohibition. A short time ago the council voted not to renew the liquor license of the only saloon in the village and Iron Junction became dry. Without the saloon license money, however, the income of the village treasury was considerably reduced. As the need for his services had disappeared with the closing of the saloon the marshal was dismissed. Still the village expenses were larger than its income. The council, accordingly, in order that the village might be properly financed without the return of the saloon, voted to cut the salaries of its members.

The Illinois Glass Company, through Manager Thompson of the Gas City (Ind.) plant recently notified the foremen and other employes of the company that it is the wish of the Illinois Glass Company that saloons be ousted from all cities where its plants are located, as experience has proved that greater output and better satisfied workmen are found in dry towns than in those localities where saloons are operated. Mr. Thompson stated that employes who have the interests of the company at heart will keep this in mind when casting their votes at the forthcoming local option election. Should Gas City go dry it is stated that this plant will be materially enlarged and will be made one of the leading plants of the company.

Alcoholics are very liable to be overtaken by consumption before they can drink themselves to death. A special survey, made by the Cincinnati Anti-Tuberculosis League in four districts where a high tuberculosis death-rate was in evidence, revealed the fact that the average expenditures per family for alcoholic liquors in the four districts were, respectively, $59.80, $86.84, $80.08 and $60.80. Forty-two per cent of the children of Hungarian families drank beer, forty-eight per cent of the Irish, forty-nine per cent of the Italian, and seventy-four per cent of the Russian.

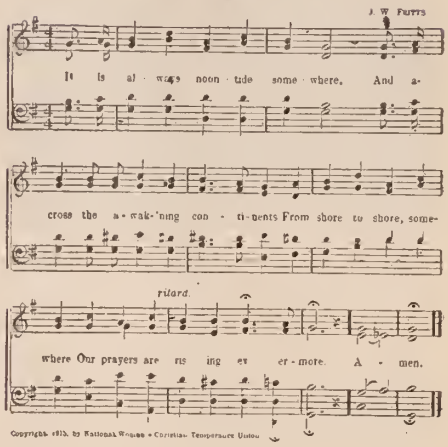
ICELAND'S WOMEN CAN VOTE

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance, has received a cablegram from Briet Asmundson, leader of the suffragists of Iceland, which says:

"King sanctioned constitution bill June 19. Woman suffrage granted."

This is the bill that has been waiting for the signature of the King of Denmark. It grants full suffrage to Iceland's women.

Time of Prayer—Noontide



MEDITATION CORNER

The severe prerogatives of an existence half divine are ours. To wear away life in unproductive harmlessness is innocent no more; with the glory we take the cross; and instead of the slumbering of noon in Eden, must keep the midnight watch within Gethsemane.—James Martineau.

The visible world about us is so terribly engrossing; its business, its pleasures, its promised rewards, are so apt to fill our thoughts, that some of us find it hard to remember things unseen. * * * It is a great help to have some definite time when we shall think of God, and some definite place where we shall think of Him; a part of the fixed program of our life, as invariable as the hour of our breakfast, or the street and number of our place of business.—William R. Richards.

Right in the path of all men stands the cross in some form: Some poverty which narrows and limits life; some duty of forbearance or forgiveness which searches the heart; some pain of body or mortification of spirit; or some denied joy in life, some lot which has neither honor nor solace, must be accepted or refused. As we accept we climb the heights. As we refuse we descend to the depths.—W. M. Clow.

The out-and-out Christian is a joyful Christian. The half-and-half Christian is the kind of Christian that a great many of you are—little acquainted with the Lord. Why should we live halfway up the hill and swathed in the mists, when we might have over our heads an unclouded sky and a radiant sun if we would climb higher and walk in the light of His face?—Alexander Maclaren.

Miss Agnes E. Slack, honorary secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., has the sympathy of the white ribbon sisterhood in the great bereavement which has come to her in the death of her only sister, Mrs. Clay. Marjorie, the attractive daughter of Mrs. Clay, accompanied Miss Slack to the World's Convention at Boston, in 1906, and will be remembered by many who attended that great meeting. She is the wife of Captain Richard Thomas of the Eleventh Cavalry of the United States Army, and lives at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 21—Loyal Temperance Legion Day (Birthday of Anna A. Gordon)
JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

AMONG OUR WORKERS

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Chanute, Kansas, will furnish a program for a "White Ribbon Day" at the Four County fair, October 5, to be held in Chanute. The program will be in the interest of National Constitutional Prohibition.

Mrs. Emma L. Hoyt, a member of the Flatbush W. C. T. U. of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was a caller recently at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters, says that sixteen different churches are represented in the membership of this union, and during the coming year it hopes to arrange for the W. C. T. U. to have charge of the mid-week prayer meeting once in each of these churches.

Mrs. Ida A. T. Arms, World's W. C. T. U. representative at Chile, South America, who is in the United States on a furlough, writes from Tarpon Springs, Florida, of the courageous enforcement of the law by the mayor of that town of some four thousand people. She says, "He has closed the saloons (which, by the way, are all located on one street) from five p. m. till eight a. m. He insists on curfew law after eight p. m. He forbids work on Sunday. He arrested some men who were drawing wood the first Sunday I was here, and now he has made profanity or vulgarity on the streets punishable with fine or imprisonment. Of course the law was there, but he is making it very much known. I have not seen a drunken man in the six weeks I have been here."

The Wellington (Kans.) W. C. T. U., (Mrs. Lottie Frack, president), entertained the boys of the city between the ages of eight and fifteen years on a recent evening at the Methodist church. A delightful program of music, readings and short talks concerning the undermining effects of cigarets on body, mind and character, in charge of Mrs. Laura Rhodes, Anti-Narcotic superintendent, was rendered. One hundred of the 125 boys in attendance signed the anti-cigaret pledge. In celebration of Flower Mission day the local union gathered at the home of the superintendent and made up a great number of bouquets which were distributed at the hospital, county farm, depots, telephone offices and to the sick, blind and aged. Jelly and preserves were also given.

The church in which was held the Kings county (N. Y.) convention echoed and re-echoed with this enthusiastic rally cry of the white ribboners:

"Kings county women,
One thousand strong.
We mean to tell the liquor dealers
Where they belong.
So we'll agitate and educate,
And legislate and operate;
So know your fate, we've set the date,
The liquor traffic now must go."

A resolution in favor of National Constitutional Prohibition was recently passed unanimously by the China, Albion and Winslow district Sunday School Association of Maine at a convention just closed in South China.

The northwestern (Pa.) inter-county W. C. T. U. institute, including the five counties, Crawford, Erie, Venango, Warren and Forest, was held in the M. E. church, Tionesta, Forest county, on June 11, with Mrs. Ella C. Viele, county president, in the chair. An especially interesting suffrage hour was conducted by Mrs. Belle Davis Smith. At the evening meeting Mrs. Mary Harris Armor addressed a large and enthusiastic audience. She was frequently interrupted by applause.

At the memorial service in connection with the annual meeting of the Coatesville (Pa.) W. C. T. U. on June 2, Mrs. Rebecca B. Chambers, former president of the Pennsylvania state W. C. T. U., gave a loving tribute to the life and work of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson, whom she had known for twenty years.

The Flatbush union of Brooklyn, N. Y., is finding contests a successful means of increasing its membership. One contest has recently closed and another will be begun with the opening of the fall work. The members were divided into two groups named, respectively, the "reds" and the "blues," and a certain number of counts was given for securing new members, bringing visitors, gaining subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL or the state W. C. T. U. paper, and for attendance. The losing side is to celebrate its defeat by giving a banquet to the winning group.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION SIDELIGHTS

Two visitors from Japan, Rev. Tokuji Komuro and S. Goto, recently came to the W. C. T. U. booth. Mr. Komuro said that he knew Miss Mary Allen West in Japan and remembered the casting of the bell, and that his friend, who could not speak English, had contributed the silver stem of his pipe toward the metal for the bell. The daughter of the man who made the bell is married and living in San Francisco, and they promised to bring her to the booth.

One day a man slipped into the booth, glanced about, and finally stopped to look at the petition. Miss Brown explained it to him. There was something in his face which indicated that he was not a prohibitionist, but he listened attentively and courteously. "When are you going to make this a national question?" he queried. Miss Brown replied that prohibition might be an issue in the next presidential election.

"Do you think public sentiment is ripe for such a thing?" he demanded. "If it is not it is ripening rapidly," Miss Brown replied. She named several of the important people in public life who have "ripened" and dropped over to the prohibition side, viz.: Ex-Governor Foss of Massachusetts; Attorney Dobyns of Chicago; Major Dan Morgan Smith. Miss Brown quoted the statement that "Regulation protects the saloon; prohibition protects the home." "And," said the man, "there is no middle ground; one has to do away with the whole thing or let it be as it is."

At this juncture the visitor explained that he was a liquor dealer in the wholesale trade, and that he wanted to know the other side of the question, and he concluded, "You are putting up a good fight and are doing lots of work."

As he still talked on Miss Brown drew his attention to the effect of drink upon the children. He seemed to doubt some of the statements. To make her point clear Miss Brown questioned, "What effect does alcohol have on a living germ?" After some hesitation he replied that it preserves it. Then Miss Brown showed him that it kills the living germ and preserves only the dead one, and inquired if it were not apparent that the man who drinks alcoholic liquors cannot provide a healthy life germ for his offspring. He seemed stunned, and murmured something to the effect that the findings of science must be true. As he left the booth he promised to return and have another talk.

Chester county (Pa.) W. C. T. U. mourns the loss of three of its members who have this spring passed from its ranks: Mrs. Ella M. Gordon, for many years county president; Mrs. Louisa M. Miller, and Mrs. S. Jane Hambleton, presidents, respectively, of Downington and Atglen unions since their organization.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

EXPENSES OF THE TRIP

Many conducted trips are being planned to the Panama-Pacific Exposition this summer and fall. These include railroad transportation, sleepers, all meals in dining cars, hotels, etc.

Those who attend the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Seattle and go from there to San Francisco, will have all the privileges of a trip with a conducted party, without being obliged to pay anything except the actual cost for the trip. There are certain fixed charges such as railroad fare and sleeper accommodations. The cost of meals en route and of hotel accommodations varies somewhat. It is safe to estimate $2.00 per day if all meals are taken in the diner, and $5.00 per day for hotels, meals, admissions, etc., in San Francisco.

The North Western Railroad, which will make up a train at Chicago, has promised standard Pullman cars and tourist sleepers of best quality. The train will be electric lighted and all steel equipment. The road bed over the route chosen is the very best.

Exact cost of ticket and sleeper from starting point may be obtained from your own local ticket agent. From New York and some other places there is a difference in cost of tickets over certain roads. For instance, the fare from New York to Seattle over Pennsylvania and N. Y. Central to Chicago is $98.80; over Lehigh, Lackawanna, B. & O., Erie and West Shore, is $94.30. Pullman New York to Chicago and return, $5.00 each way. We quote rates Chicago to Seattle but return by way of San Francisco and Los Angeles, with side trip to San Diego, $17.50 extra for ticket and $7.00 extra for sleeper from Seattle to San Francisco, including cost of stop-over at Roseburg, Ore.:

Railroad fare, Chicago to Seattle	$62.50
Standard lower berth	13.00
Standard upper berth	10.40
Standard compartment	36.00
Standard drawing room	46.00
Tourist lower berth	6.75
Tourist upper berth	5.40

From this it will be possible to estimate the expense of the trip according to accommodations desired, and whether the trip will be made to San Francisco or not. All applications for reservations should state explicitly whether upper or lower berth, standard Pullman or tourist is to be reserved, and names of those who will occupy the same. Also if compartment or drawing room is to be reserved, and the names of occupants.

Request for full details and applications for reservations should be made of Miss Katharine K. Adams, 1730 Chicago Ave., Evanston, Ill.

ELLA A. BOOLE,
Chairman Transportation
KATHARINE K. ADAMS
Assistant

ALCOHOL THE COMMON FOE

PUBLIC HEALTH HINT NO. 50, SENT OUT BY THE NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, HERMANN M. BIGGS, COMMISSIONER

Public health authorities are becoming more and more positive that alcohol is an important factor in causing preventable disease. The increasing death rate from degenerative diseases at ages over forty-five is due mainly to disorders of the heart and blood vessels and kidneys to which alcoholism is often a chief contributory cause. These degenerative diseases finally come on in the natural course of things. They are diseases of old age. What we see too often, however, is premature old age brought on in the forties and fifties by excesses of various kinds. A recent examination of a group of prisoners at Sing Sing made by the state department of health showed that over one-third of these men, who were almost all young and should have been in their prime of vigor, had the high blood pressure which is associated with hardening of the arteries, one of the chief signs of premature old age.

The question whether small amounts of alcohol may be oxidized in the body is a purely academic one. Its value as a food is altogether negligible, while the poisonous effects are serious and important. It is well established by the records of insurance companies that even moderate drinkers (those who habitually consume alcohol equivalent to one glass of whisky or two glasses of beer a day) show the evil effects of the drug by an increased death rate. Alcohol hardens the arteries, injures the kidneys and reduces the resistance to diseases like tuberculosis and pneumonia. The records of the General Provident Institution of London show a thirty-seven per cent higher death rate among non-abstainers than among abstainers.

The campaign against alcohol is one of the most important forces making for the development of national vitality. America has the chance as never before to lead the world, but if it is to do so it must not be hampered in the tasks of peace any more than the European nations can be hampered in the tasks of war by the clogging influence of alcohol.

STRONG PRAISE AND PROPHECY

MRS. CARL M. BILBY

A noted French writer and statesman, Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, in his book, "America and Her Problems," about to be issued by the MacMillans, has the following to say regarding the American woman's present work for temperance and her future work for peace:

"I wound up my day by a university (University of Illinois) dinner, to which the leading professors of the state and its environs had been invited. It was much more like a communion of ideas than a banquet. The toasts were settled beforehand, each being allotted to a speaker and printed on the menu.

"Before the speeches began I could not refrain from expressing my surprise at seeing that, as was the case at the luncheon, nothing but ice water was drunk. This remark, which I had frequently made elsewhere, greatly amused the guests, and I was told that I was in a 'dry territory,' which means that all distilled and fermented drinks are forbidden at Urbana.

"'Forbidden?' I asked. 'How? By consent or by law?'

"'By law.'

"This required explanation. It was that the sale or offer of wine, beer, or spirits is illegal in Urbana and Champaign, and not a drop of them is to be had. The restriction is absolute, and whoever is convicted of an infringement is severely punished.

"'How did you manage,' I inquired, 'to pass this restriction into law and make it operative?'

"Like many other laws this one was the outcome of a public demand. One always gets what one really wants; the difficulty is to want it. Do you suppose it was easy to prevent people from drinking in the streets and cars and befouling the city? Do you imagine that a mere municipal regulation would be sufficient to uproot bad habits once acquired? Certainly not. The persons principally interested had to set to work. And who are they? They are the women, the first to suffer from lack of education and laxity of conduct and particularly from the drink habit. Drunkenness on the part of husband, father, brother or son reduces the women to mere slaves or accomplices.

"Here they declined to put up with such degradation of themselves, their homes and their country and they protested. They had first to contend with the public authorities' force of inertia.

"In the United States, as in other countries, drink is a great source of revenue for governments and for a great many individuals. Politicians cannot venture to offend both the authorities and the voters. * * * *

Victory for Women

"Here again righteous wrath and energy have succeeded in unsetting the established order of things. The mothers took united action—there are mothers' associations in the United States—and gradually assembled an army of women around them.

"The soldiers of this army lost no time in futile complaints. They stirred up the children and the young who are always ready to support bold initiative. The army took the field, gave no quarter, won over the church, the intellectuals and the great bulk of public opinion, and eventually became so powerful as to be able to defy public authorities, the politicians and their supporters, and to compel the legislature at Springfield to take a referendum on the question. It led to the victory, the result of which I have just recorded.

"This victory is only a prelude. As soon as women realize that violence in all its forms, including those due to the intoxication of drink and of war, is the real danger to themselves and to civilization they will abandon their attitude of reserve and humanity will be indebted to them for yet another benefit.

"Is it conceivable that mothers have so long neglected to take an active interest in the cause of peace?

"Can it be that they have no use for their courage except to endure the calamities which it lies with them to prevent?

"Joan of Arc gave her life to drive the invader out of France and American women will not confine themselves to the war on liquor. Their civic influence will increase in proportion to their consciousness of their own strength."

ELLEN STRONG'S CANTEEN

NETTIE LOUNSBURY CURTIS, Ossining, N. Y.

Before her marriage Ellen Strong, a golden-hearted woman of strong vitality and vigorous intellect, a six cylinder in power and endurance, had dreamed of being a foreign missionary. When Jonathan Strong, with his kindly voice and appealing air of loneliness, had appeared upon her horizon, Ellen had married him and made him happy.

Now that Jonathan had died, she pondered much as to the channel into which she should direct her energies. One day, as she was returning from a visit to the cemetery beyond Tullyville, a mining town whose unexpected discovery of mineral deposits on its outskirts had given it a mushroom growth, the absorbing question of occupation wholly engrossed her thoughts.

"You seem lost in reverie, neighbor," called Mrs. Spalding, as she encountered the widow and turned her steps in the direction she was going.

"Why, Mary Spalding!" smiled her friend. "I was deep in thought. Do you know, I fancy that I have discovered my next field of labor."

"Really, Ellen! Do tell me all about it." The tone was full of friendly interest and sympathy.

"Mary, I want to open a kind of canteen over in the new part of Tullyville." Mrs. Spalding looked at her friend in incredulous surprise, but Ellen Strong's eyes were tranquil and her mouth as resolute as if in readiness for a photographer.

"A canteen!" repeated Mrs. Spalding. "Do you mean something similar to the places for soldiers at military posts?"

"Exactly," nodded Ellen. "I want it to have a touch of sweetness and light and love. In time I would develop it into a post-exchange, a community center to rival the fifteen saloons I passed this afternoon in walking eight blocks."

"How dreadful they are!" exclaimed her friend. "But, Ellen, you are well provided for, are you not? Jonathan took good care of that, I hope."

"My, yes; mine will not be a money-making venture, I assure you. It will take my money, though; but I cannot rest when humanity calls. The sights I have seen in Tullyville sicken me. Why, Ellen, as you know, there are no churches in that section, not even a mission to offset the influences of the ever-ready drinking places.

"I have seen evidences of great wretchedness and poverty. Half-clad, anemic-looking children of all nationalities swarm the streets. What wonder, when the husband's wages vanish in the iniquitous saloons?"

"Of course, Ellen, it would be noble and generous of you to do as you have planned; but surely you will do nothing in a hurry," commented Mary.

"Why not?" was the quick retort. "The devil is a great hustler, why not the social worker? Indeed, I already have the refusal of a new, well lighted store next to the most popular saloon in the district. As proprietor of 'Paradise' I mean to damage my neighbor's patronage. By inference his place shall be a 'purgatory.'"

"Ellen Strong, you will be doing true home missionary work to finance and conduct such a scheme," declared Mrs. Spalding with emotion, as their ways parted.

A month later "The Paradise" was ready for business. Mrs. Strong had had the entire place painted white and that purity and paradise might be correlated in the minds of her patrons, those engaged in active service with her were also dressed in white. She spent a mint of money in advertising, and in artful, clever ways obtruded her canteen upon the notice of the male population about her. Whenever possible, she applied a humorous touch to her notices; for humor sometimes strengthens an appeal.

One Saturday afternoon as the men were filing out from the pay office of the largest mine in Tullyville they were met by boys in white suits who handed out invitations to a free lunch at "Paradise." There was no mistaking the invitation. It was written not only in English, but in Italian, Polish, German and Greek. A ready interpreter likewise stood by for the enlightenment of those who could not understand.

When the sense of the thing penetrated the slow intellects of these sons of toil, the effect was magical, as if the sun had suddenly burst through dark clouds. They came in droves—big, brawny fellows with shy manners, and greasy, tired faces; small, wiry men, keen, alert, half-insolent. All were captivated, some even to the point of timidity by the spacious white room, with its numerous pots of blooming flowers, the singing of many canary birds swinging happily in their gilded cages, and the general air of dainty comfort.

Hot coffee, warm buns, and small iced cakes in fantastic shapes were handed out to the men. They devoured the good things with keen zest, and were directed out by a side entrance, where as they filed past they were confronted with signs, reading: "Save your dimes for the babies;" "Give your sweetheart a square deal," etc.

After that initial reception Ellen began to serve a wholesome midday meal for five cents. It was plain but hot, appetizing and abundant. Her "five o'clocks" were arranged for tea, coffee or cocoa with buns, for two cents.

Before the end of three months her rival, "Purgatory," was sensible of an appreciable falling off in its nefarious trade. The race with evil was a steady one. Ellen's courage did not fail. She began to see results. Her ingenuity in attractive devices to lure patrons to "Paradise" was quicker than that of the "ancient foe." In time this good woman came to know scores of the men personally. She even won a foothold in their homes and learned to know their wives and children. Through the little ones she taught sanitation to the mothers.

At the end of the first year, to Ellen's unbounded surprise, she discovered that her canteen was a financial success. Elated at this unexpected result, she leased the entire building. Her desire for a real post-exchange began to loom up before her in tangible shape. She added a general store, a recreation room well supplied with reading matter and games, and a kindergarten. She made up her mind that she would always spend the yearly profits on the extension and improvement of the work itself.

When the men began to speak of her as "Mother Strong," a glad light stole into her eyes. Her heart was thrilled with deep joy. Henceforth, discouragements, disappointments, failures became stepping-stones to greater achievements.

"I am a foreign missionary now!" smiled Ellen in conversation with a friend, as she looked down on a group of swarthy-faced mothers whom she and her assistants had gathered into a sewing-class. "I shall be a Wall street financier before I get through. The men have begun to bring me their savings instead of spending them in 'Purgatory.'"

There came a day when Ellen Strong was told that her next door neighbor had given up his lease because her competition in that district was too strong for his business. Turning aside that her emotion might not be visible, she remarked: "If all women hated saloons as much as some women do, their existence everywhere would be short-lived."

PROGRAM MATERIAL

FOR YOUNG CRUSADER SUBSCRIPTION DAY

Birthday of Anna Adams Gordon
July Twenty-first

Life Sketch of Miss Gordon by Eva Kilbreth Foster
Price 3 cents each; per 100, $1.00

Five Little Glimpses of Anna A. Gordon
Price 2 cents each; per 100, 35 cents

Biographical Sketch of Miss Gordon, by Mrs. Mary Tomlinson
Price 10 cents each

Young Crusader, June and July issues
Price 5 cents each; per 100, $1.50

Song—The Children's Happy Day
Price 5 cents

Latest Photograph of Miss Gordon
Price 50 cents

Young Crusader Subscription Songs (words only), adapted to popular airs, furnished for postage, 10 cents per 100

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

FREE METHODISTS TERM LIQUOR EVIL "SUM OF ALL VILLAINIES"

The general conference of the Free Methodist Church of North America, recently held in Chicago, declared in the following emphatic language against the liquor traffic and kindred evils:

"We emphatically declare for a single standard of morals for man and woman and a white life for both. One glance into that maelstrom of moral corruption, physical pollution and remorseful despair known as the white slave traffic is enough to convince one that there has been something wrong in our social relations for centuries. No slave block ever broke so many hearts as that of the procurer. No heathen altars ever tortured to their hopeless death so many mother's daughters. And this amid the intelligence of the twentieth century! And this in Christian America! It is hard to believe there is no complicity of officials in this most awful crime. Perhaps the greatest fostering influence of this combination of greed and lust is that other gigantic evil known as the liquor traffic. No institution is more inflammatory of every motive and impulse to sin and crime, especially of the most revolting types, than is the licensed saloon. We stand for a temperate use of that which is right, total abstinence from that which is wrong and absolute prohibition of that which is criminal.

"There is no ground in reason of decency for the tobacco habit, no panacea for the ills of life in the degrading and enslaving use of drugs and opiates, no justification for forming or continuing the appetite for the cup that inebriates, and least of all is there any plea for that 'sum of all villainies' known as the liquor traffic. It strikes its serpent fangs into the home and heart and beslimes the very Christian church with guilt. It crushes in its relentless toils every sacred hope of man and pours its flood of misery and wretchedness o'er all the world."

From west to east, from south to north,
We boys and girls are marching forth
To lay the liquor traffic low.
With happy hearts we are afield,
We're boys and girls who never yield,
The liquor traffic now must go!

Chorus:
In Nineteen Twenty comes the day,
Comes the children's happy day;
In Nineteen Hundred Twenty
There'll be prohibition plenty
When Columbia drives the drink away.
—A. A. G.

GEORGE'S NEW SACK

SARAH N. McCREERY, Burlington, Ia.

George Reynolds counted his marbles carefully, then he left them in a pile on the floor while he began to search through closets and drawers in the hall, dining-room and living-room.

"What are you hunting for?" asked his Uncle Elliott Grant, who was visiting his sister, as the boy pushed in a drawer with a bang.

"I want a cloth sack that I can tie to keep my marbles in and I can't find anything but a paper one," was the rather impatient answer.

Mr. Grant went upstairs to his room and in a few minutes he returned with an empty tobacco sack in his hand. "I just happened to remember that I had this, George. It draws up with a string and that will be better than one you could tie.

George's face brightened as he thanked his uncle. The sack held all the marbles and there was room for more, so he was satisfied as he ran out to play games with some friends.

The next afternoon, Mr. Grant found his little niece, Carrie Reynolds, in the living-room sewing very busily. "What are you making?" he inquired. It was this uncle's interest in whatever they did that made Carrie and George enjoy his visits so much.

"A sack for George's marbles," was the reply.

"Why, I gave George one yesterday. There it is on that table!"

"I know it." Carrie's voice was low and her face colored quickly.

"Well, didn't that sack suit?" Uncle Elliott looked puzzled.

Carrie shook her head. "It's a tobacco sack," she faltered.

"I can't see what difference that makes. Isn't a tobacco sack as good as any other kind?" he asked.

Carrie looked up into her uncle's face earnestly. "No, my brother shall not keep his marbles in a tobacco sack. Mother has showed me just how to make this one, and she gave me a nice, pretty piece of goods for it. Father doesn't smoke and I don't want my brother to advertise tobacco like that sack would with the picture and the name on it. Then the marbles smell like tobacco and so do George's hands when he plays with them. I am going to wash the marbles and put them in this new sack and burn the other one before George comes home. You know, Uncle Elliott, tobacco isn't good for anybody. The superintendent of our Sunday school says so. It has nicotine in it that poisons the system and makes the blood impure. It injures the heart and nerves and does lots of other things that I can't remember now."

Mr. Grant made no reply to his niece, but he could not forget her words. He found himself asking the question, "If a tobacco sack is not fit to keep marbles in, how about taking tobacco into a fellow's system?" He had never given the subject serious thought before, but that very afternoon he went to the library and read a number of articles by medical and scientific men telling of the effects of tobacco on the human system.

"Carrie, I want you to come to my room with me for a few minutes," he told his niece after supper. "You taught me a lesson today, Carrie," he said to her a little later, "so I want you to burn my sack of tobacco and my pipe. I have made up my mind to quit smoking. It will be hard, but I will be given strength to win the fight and I will be saving my health and my money, too."

Carrie flung her arms around her uncle's neck and gave him a hearty kiss. "Your breath will not always smell like a smoky chimney now, when I want to kiss you," she told him. "I am so glad. I am going right down to burn up the horrid tobacco things and bring a pledge for you to sign. I know George will never smoke when his father and his very nicest uncle don't do it," she said happily as she started down stairs.

"PIZEN"

GERTRUDE STEVENS LEAVITT, Portland, Me.

"Paper, paper, lady?" piped Jim Norton's cheery voice, as one very cold night in December, he accosted a handsomely dressed lady hurrying along.

The lady smiled into the bright face eagerly lifted to hers.

"Yes, I'll take one, please," she said.

She placed a dime in the cold little hand and still smiling said, "You may keep the change, my boy. That is," she added quickly, "if you do not use any of your earnings for cigarets."

Joe was a small lad, but he straightened himself so suddenly that he appeared really tall. His bright face wore a look of intense resentment as he replied at once, "Guess I don't spend any money for cigarets. I don't use such things; teacher says they're pizen."

"Teacher is quite right, my boy. They are poison and lads who use them do not grow into strong, healthy, happy men," cautioned the lady as she went on her way up the city street.

A young man who had been listening to the conversation, now approached the newsboy. "I'd like a paper, too," he said, and laughingly added: "So you think cigarets are 'pizen,' do you? Well, you and your teacher are mistaken. I have used them a good many years and I'm just as strong and happy and well off as if I had never touched them." The words were disconcerting enough, spoken by the well-dressed, handsome young fellow who condescended to talk a minute to the humble little newsboy, but the air with which they were uttered made them well-nigh unbearable to sturdy little Joe. He was quick-witted and proved it by saying at once, "I'll tell you one thing cigarets have done to you. It is what that great man, Neal Dow, told a young man once who bragged just as you are doing—they have made you rude to women, so now, just as teacher says they do. Look behind you and see."

The young man turned quickly with a flush of embarrassment. Close to him stood the prettiest and dearest girl he knew. She was coughing and looked disturbed. Yes, the boy was right. Cigarets had made him rude and as he thought of the girl's sweetness and beauty and purity and saw again the look of annoyance on her face, he tossed his cigaret away.

"You're right, youngster, I guess," he said abruptly, "I am rude, but I'll quit using cigarets and see if—" The pretty girl smiled, put out her hand and together they disappeared from the sight of the boy, who chuckled softly to himself.

"She's a winner, all right," he said, in his street parlance. "She ought to win something better than a pizen-using guy, and maybe she won't have any more fuss with him and the old cigarets. Paper, paper, sir!" and the lad mingled with the crowd on the noisy street.

Cold Water Boys and Girls Are We

Cold water boys and girls are we,
God make us strong and pure,
And from intemperance keep us free,
A victory to secure.

Dear friends, when we have older grown,
And come to take your place,
We hope that you may proudly own
We're free from rum's disgrace.
—Marching Songs.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

BRANCHES ORGANIZED IN WYOMING

By MRS. LINNIE CARL, Y. P. B. Field Secretary

Wheatland: Twenty-eight members, Miss Frances Goff, president; Mrs. Emma McDonald, general secretary. Douglas: Eleven members, Miss Hattie Hicks, president. Jireh: Twenty-seven members, Mr. Judson Watson, president. The Jireh Branch is organized in Jireh College. Basin: Eleven members, Miss Kathleen O'Neil, president. Sheridan: Fourteen members, Miss Alma Oliver, president. Gillette: Mrs. Laura Kinnaman, president. Moorcroft: Eleven members, Miss Dorothy White, president.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S AGE

Mrs. Hubbs of Georgia writes:

"I have been much impressed with the fact that our young people are literally crowding things together in their busy lives.

"Why not? This is the young people's age. Their position and power in religious, social and political life was never realized so keenly as it is today. As I write I see visions of our boys and girls just finishing high school. I see them tripping to and fro in dainty graduating frock or evening suit, arms laden with sweet-scented flowers, and I thank God for their splendid training for future service, and for the fact that they give so freely of their time, love and money to our cause when once they understand the need. Now, when our boys and girls lay aside school work for awhile let us not fail to enlist their time and energy in a larger work for temperance.

"Let me urge our local Y. P. B. presidents and workers generally to get our young people's work before all conventions or other gatherings of young people."

Y. P. B. NOTES

Miss Esther Winchester, Y. P. B. secretary of Maine, has been doing very acceptable work in Pennsylvania counties. Osceola Mills (Pa.) Y. P. B. is preparing to present Miss Willard's picture to the public schools. North Towanda Y. P. B. issues a paper known as the Y. P. B. Times, which is read at each meeting. The Allentown Y. P. B. has presented to the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. a new phonograph record, "De Brewers' Big Horses." The Y. P. B. of Oil City was made the recipient recently of a flag presented by the W. C. T. U. In response, the members sang "Take Away the Stars and Stripes from the Saloon." Twenty new members were gained at the meeting.

New Burlington City, Ohio, has a new Branch of eleven members, with Miss Mary Stanfield as president.

Mrs. L. V. Smith, Y. P. B. secretary of South Dakota, has been working most faithfully throughout the year among the district W. C. T. U. presidents, providing demonstrations for conventions and giving other helps. Mrs. Smith is now in the field and much good is expected from her trip.

The April edition of the South Dakota White Ribbon Journal, a Y. P. B. number, was filled with good things for the "Y's."

The Y. P. B. of Watertown, S. D., held a most successful Christian Citizenship rally during April, enlisting the help of all the young people's church societies, and as a close to the campaign month the same Branch gave an informal reception to the young people of the city. Several hundred invitations were issued and as a result many new members were added to the Branch enrollment.

Mrs. Maude Perkins, Y. P. B. secretary of New York state, recently spent several days in Hampden county, Mass., her route being arranged by Mrs. Rhena Mosher Holyoke, the county Y. P. B. secretary. An enthusiastic county Y. P. B. rally was held in Springfield, and at Chicopee Falls the young people were enlisted and Mrs. Holyoke has since organized a Y. P. B. there. Mrs. Perkins, by her sweet personality, consecration and practical suggestions, enthused and helped the young people and made them proud to be enlisted in such a cause.

MORE L. T. L.'S

There should be no more natural or pleasant work for any Branch than the organization and maintenance of an L. T. L. As the "mother" union enlists the services of the young men and young women, they in turn should enlist the services of their younger brothers and sisters. Why should not every local Branch that does not already maintain a legion organize one this month as a tribute to our National W. C. T. U. president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, reporting the same on a post-card to Miss Gordon. She would ask no lovelier birthday gift. Write your state L. T. L. secretary for instructions as to organizing.

A LAST APPEAL FOR THE Y. P. B. MISSIONARY FUND

MRS. FANNIE ROOT DANSER, National Promoter

I wish to thank you for your very hearty response to my appeal for funds in behalf of the temperance work in other lands. One thousand of the Y. P. B. Missionary Fund coin cards have been distributed by our state secretaries throughout our nation, and I am sure the returns will be gratifying, for we are all co-workers and interested in the circulation of temperance truths among the young people of all countries. As members of the Y. P. B. the Master depends on you to do this work. Ours is the opportunity and obligation to serve others.

Our challenge is the temperance challenge, and it is not enough that we help to free the town in which we live from the liquor traffic. To us of the Y. P. B. comes the challenge to help free the whole world from this deadly curse. To do this we must begin now. Scores of opportunities for Christian work are opening up as never before, and side by side with evangelistic effort should go our work in the interests of temperance.

May you go forth from your state convention, institute or rally, to your local Y. P. B.'s filled with a desire to pray more earnestly for our workers in other lands, and determined to give of your means to carry on this work. Each Branch must aim to contribute at least one dollar to temperance missionary work.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM COLLEGES

MRS. L. A. DILLARD, College Y. P. B. Secretary for Georgia

State Normal School, Athens

The most unique method employed by the temperance committee, of which Miss Elizabeth Smith is chairman, has been to have a series of lectures on "The Liquor Problem From the Point of View of the Different Professions." The speakers were men and women of note.

Georgia Normal and Industrial College, Milledgeville

The president of the college and other members of the faculty are much interested in the work and their influence has been of aid. This college sent five delegates to the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Atlanta and observed Frances Willard Memorial day by giving the play suggested in THE UNION SIGNAL.

Wesleyan College, Macon

In answer to a question as to what plan, means or method had been most helpful in advancing the temperance cause this year, Miss Mozelle Tumlin, chairman, mentions "The Study of the Effects of Alcohol and Narcotics in the Senior Physiology Course." The college is ordering several new temperance books for its library.

Piedmont College, Demorest

Miss Annette Jackson, a member of the faculty, is the general chairman of the temperance committee of this co-educational college. It leads the state from year to year in essay contests, and keeps most of the leading temperance periodicals in the reading room. New and up-to-date temperance books are added to the library from time to time.

LaGrange College

Miss Frances E. Black, chairman, writes, "The temperance committee has done very good work this year." A steady pledge-signing campaign goes on.

Vashti School

Miss Myrtle Bailey, of the faculty, writes: "Almost all of our commencement program is to be strictly temperance subject matter."

Pennants, Hats and Buttons

for National Young Campaigners

The PENNANTS are 18 inches long, made in red, white or blue felt.

The HATS are made of blue felt, with the letters Y. C. P. in white.

The BUTTONS are red or blue, with letters.

PRICES

1 pennant,	1 hat,	1 button	.$ .20
25 pennants,	25 hats,	25 buttons.	4.00
100 pennants,	100 hats,	100 buttons.	15.00
1,000 pennants,	1,000 hats,	1,000 buttons.	130.00

PENNANTS

10 cents apiece $7.00 per hundred
8 cents each if 25 are ordered.

HATS

10 cents apiece $8.00 per hundred
9 cents each if 25 are ordered

BUTTONS

3 cents each 100 for $1.50
25 for 50 cents 500 for $5.00
1,000 for $9.00

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS

56 & 58 Park Place NEW YORK

WHY SHOULD A MINOR INTEREST BE A MAJOR NUISANCE?

The liquor cranks are excited because the anti-booze agitation threatens "properties valued in the aggregate at perhaps $2,000,000,000." It may comfort them to reflect that this "perhaps" total of theirs is almost exactly one-ninety-fourth of the estimated wealth of the United States, but it causes an altogether disproportionate part of the total crime, disease, suffering, and waste with which our country is afflicted. The rest of us pay mighty heavy taxes in all these ways to keep up their "values." Booze wealth is the most selfish, and wooden-headed form of property known to our civilization, and it ought to be possible to scale its fraction down (and out) with perfect safety and great gain. Why should a minor interest be a major nuisance?

—Collier's, July 3, 1915.

There is every indication that the experiment of nation-wide prohibition is going to be tried. Opponents of the plan might as well face the facts and get ready for a drouth.—The Chicago Journal.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. E. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

Will You Come Home Sober, Papa?

A NEW TEMPERANCE SONG BY REV. J. C. HARRISON

of the ALABAMA CONFERENCE. This is one of the best Temperance songs written in years. Its beautiful story of a young girl's plea to her father is really a Temperance sermon, while its melody is one of the sweetest ever written. Ask your music dealer for it, or send 10c to the publisher. P. J. Howley Music Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York. Special rates on quantities to Societies or Temperance Organizations.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

S. T. I. NEWS NOTES FROM SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

MRS. BERTHA PHELPS ALLEN

At the Orange county teachers' institute a rest room was maintained by the W. C. T. U. with the local and county S. T. I. superintendents in charge. The walls were decorated with posters, charts, leaflets and other temperance helps for the school-room. Conspicuously placed were the 120 posters made by hand in the Santa Ana high school, and the model editorials on "Why California Should Vote Dry," by pupils in the English classes of the same school. An address by Mrs. Augusta C. Bainbridge, who has filled various all-day engagements in California schools, going from class to class, was a feature of the institute program.

San Diego county is to be commended for systematic essay work. To each union the county W. C. T. U. superintendent sent a triple letter, including a personal letter of explanation, a letter from the county superintendent of schools calling attention to the law regarding temperance teaching and urging essay writing, and a copy of the essay rules with additions for San Diego county. As a result 2,600 essays were written. This busy superintendent had her letters prepared on the neostyle by the pupils of the local high school. In this way she was enabled to send out 450 letters to the unions and teachers of her county this year.

All pupils from the third grade up in the Indian schools of Inyo county wrote temperance essays this year, also the boys of the George Junior Republic at Chino in San Bernardino county.

The local union at Redlands obtained reduced rates for all pupils in the university, high and grade schools of the city to the photo play, "John Barleycorn."

The local S. T. I. superintendent at Santa Ana gave a talk, illustrated with experiments, before the county Parent-Teacher Association, on "Beer Not Liquid Bread." This address was also given at two schools.

At Redondo, Hon. Richmond P. Hobson addressed the pupils of three towns.

During the dry campaign last fall the state superintendent with about twenty helpers placed in the hands of each of the 7,000 teachers in Southern California an envelope containing a leaflet specially prepared by her as an appeal for the welfare of the children in the fight against alcohol. This was accompanied by other timely leaflets.

The Chesapeake & Ohio railroad discontinued the sale of all intoxicants on its dining and buffet cars June 30, as on that day the licenses under which intoxicants were sold on these cars expired. No intoxicants have been sold on cars in West Virginia since the adoption of the prohibition amendment, but in other states traversed by the lines of the railroad sales have been continued. The order is the result of the widespread adoption of prohibition, which is making the saloon on wheels unprofitable.

The subject of temperance is one which is increasingly popular at the present time, and there are few great meetings which have to do with religious, moral or economic questions, or the consideration of public health where the liquor traffic is not denounced in more or less scathing fashion. Such a condemnation of the liquor traffic was a feature of the annual conference of the Macon (Ga.) district of the M. E. church, South, in Jeffersonville. "The time has passed," said C. B. Quillian, in his report on "Temperance and Social Reform," "when a man can say 'I come from a long line of illustrious ancestors, from one of the best families, and therefore the hoi polloi must overlook my peccadillos and temporary moral lapses.' This is an age where the watchword is efficiency and the question is not where you came from, but what you can do. A few years ago the people looked with more or less toleration on the man who sold blind tiger whisky fifty-one weeks of the year and served on the grand jury the other week. Now such a man is a pariah on whom contumely and scathing criticism are heaped."

A Wave of Prohibition

FACTS AND FIGURES

ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN

(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth by Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

THE NEW SUBSCRIBER

Have you, OLD SUBSCRIBER, secured the NEW SUBSCRIBER for the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL and thus become a member of the Win One Circle? If not, will you at once find the NEW SUBSCRIBER so that your name may be enrolled in the 1915 Win One Circle and the NEW SUBSCRIBER have the paper she has needed and ought to have had long ago?

Many are wanting and asking for the information to be found in THE UNION SIGNAL, but do not know where to find it. OLD SUBSCRIBER, you know and can help someone to this information by getting that NEW SUBSCRIBER.

WIN ONE CIRCLE, 1915

426. Mrs. Abbie K. Burnham, Chicago, Ill.
427. Mrs. A. S. Persen, Appleton, Minn.
428. Mrs. Agnes Rannings, Newfield, N. Y.
429. Mrs. H. S. Drake, Butler, Ky.
430. Mrs. Annie Coffel, Diamond, Mo.
431. Anna E. Hooton, Marshfield, Mo.
432. Elizabeth H. Goodwin, Greenwich, N. J.
433. Mrs. Ida Schoepf, Appleton, Minn.
434. Mrs. Milton H. Cooley, Brockport, N. Y.
435. Mrs. R. H. Talbott, Washington, D. C.
436. Mrs. Susan Vosbury, East Windsor, N. Y.
437. Mrs. N. C. Turney, Johnstown, N. Y.
438. Mrs. K. Fickle, Orosi, Cal.
439. S. Savinia Ackerson, Newton, N. J.
440. Mrs. L. M. Kelly, Atchison, Kans.
441. Mrs. Martha McCarty, Delaware, O.
442. Mrs. C. E. Lindsay, Albany, N. Y.
443. Mrs. Sarah F. Kenney, Cohoes, N. Y.
444. Mrs. Flora Gackel, Florida, Ohio.
445. Mrs. Minnie Whitmer, Liberty Center, Ohio.
446. Mrs. Nora B. Pontious, Napoleon, Ohio.
447. Mrs. Faith Parrott, Martinsville, Va.
448. Mrs. W. D. Weaver, Waynesboro, Va.
449. Mrs. Bessie L. Scovell, Minncapolis, Minn.
450. Mrs. Iva M. Innis, Mendon, Mo.
451. Mrs. Chester L. Coombs, Bridgeton, N. J.

A TWENTIETH CENTURY MALADY—"ENTHUSIITIS"

A lady at an institute said she had taken THE SIGNAL off and on for twenty-five years; that she did not take it now because her health is poor and when she reads a copy she becomes so enthused that she at once goes to work and then she overdoes and gets sick, so she thought she would better not take it for awhile.

WHAT COULD A WELL READER ACCOMPLISH!

CIRCULATION MANAGER.

BIG BUSINESS AND BOOZE

Ferrero, the world's greatest historian, in a recent article in the Sunday North American, said that the most striking and the most beneficent result of the war has been the banishing of booze from the continental nations. He suggested that if these nations after peace has been achieved still keep out the demon—and he thinks they will—the war will have proved worth all its tremendous cost.

It is a curious thing that the overshadowing lesson supplied by these warring nations in driving alcohol from their borders has made so little impression on the champions of booze on this side of the ocean. They regard the action of Russia and France and the pleadings of Lloyd George as purely war measures, having no relation to the welfare and happiness and prosperity of a nation at peace.

The fact that Russia has exiled vodka may not mean much to these liquor advocates; but how will they square their attitude with that of the Carnegie Steel Company, of Pittsburgh, which lately distributed among its thousands of employes a pamphlet warning all workmen against the use of alcoholic drinks because, as the pamphlet forcefully says, this habit lessens efficiency and is the most prolific cause of accidents in its mills.

They may appear to disregard President Poincare's executive order making permanent the temporary order against absinthe, but how can they get around such a statement as the following, recently posted in all its mines by the Anaconda Copper Mining Company:

"Never go to work after drinking liquor; and if you must drink, stay home.

"Experience has proved that a great many accidents are caused from drinking intoxicating liquors. It will be remembered that from September 1, 1914, to September 14, all saloons in Butte were closed; that from September 14 to September 24 they were open only from 8 o'clock in the morning to 7 o'clock at night, and that for the remainder of the month they were open from 7 o'clock in the morning to 10 o'clock at night.

"The accident records of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company show the following significant figures: Number of accidents per 10,000 shifts; July, 6.22; August, 11.25; September, 4.21; October, 7.58; November, 6.07."

What Lloyd George says about liquor being the worst of all the enemies Great Britain has to fight may be thrown into the wastebasket, but what are they going to do with the recent action of the Illinois Steel Company, the Hershey Chocolate Company, the Diamond Match Company and several branches of the Standard Oil Company in forbidding the use of alcoholic beverages among employes, or offering bonuses to those who will promise to become total abstainers?

What are they going to do with a statement like this, lately made by Dr. W. Stewart Whittemore, factory inspector for the New England Confectionery Company in Boston:

"Small quantities of alcohol, such as would produce no visible signs of intoxication, are yet sufficient to interfere with mental alertness. The effect of these small doses on the consumer is that he is unable to concentrate his mind as closely on his work as when he is free from alcohol. He becomes careless and is apt to take chances which he would not think of taking in his natural condition. The result is that the wage-earner who has a 'drink or two' on his way to work is making himself liable to injury."

Of course, those who have followed medical and scientific progress during the past few years and those who have interested themselves in the new science of human efficiency know why such cold-blooded commercial organizations are taking this stand. But does it not seem strange that these marchers behind the booze banner should so willfully close their eyes to the changed attitude of the "Big Business" interests, which heretofore have commanded their willing subservience!

Can't they see that Big Business already has broken with booze?

—North American of Philadelphia.

The Complete Poems OF Mary A. Lathbury

POET LAUREATE of CHAUTAUQUA and a loyal and devoted member of the WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The book contains all of her lyrics and hymns and also
Portraits of the Author
Introduction by Bishop JOHN H. VINCENT
Foreword by Dr. W. GARRETT HORDER of England

Price, $1.25 Postpaid

THE NUNC LICET PRESS
920 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, Minn.

NEW LEAFLETS
For General Distribution

The Brewer's Slaves (Illustrated)
Behind the Bars for Life
Prohibition's Effect Upon Revenue and Business
Size 6x9 inches
Price per 50, 12 cents; per 100, 20 cents
Consumption of Liquor Decreasing
Drink and Divorce
Size 3½x6 inches
Price per 50, 10 cents; per 100, 15 cents

POSTER LEAFLET SERIES
Reproductions of posters in small leaflet form

1. Which Will You Protect?
2. Do You Know These Facts?
3. Alcohol
4. Beer
5. Drink Robs the Working Man
6. The License Voter Gets What?
7. Attention Voters!
8. Figures Tell
9. Saloons Increase Taxes
10. The Trouble Manufacturing Co.
11. Compare These Figures
12. Boys and Girls
13. Not by My Vote
14. State Prohibition and Local Option
15. Railroads and Alcoholic Liquors
16. The Factory and Alcoholic Liquors
17. The Man Who Drinks
18. A Business Proposition
19. The Liquor Traffic Must Go

Price per 100, 10 cents

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon
Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., JULY 15, 1915 | No. 29

See Page 10

Courtesy of North American of Philadelphia

Now's the Time for You

Men who vote, your time has come—
Wave the flag and sound the drum,
Save the cause of God and Home
And your native land.
Now's the day and now's the hour,
Let the snowflake ballots shower,
Bury 'neath a freeman's power
Liquor's cruel band.

Hear the children while they plead,
Pity all the hearts that bleed,
Bless the tempted in their need,
By your ballot true.
Prohibition is our prayer,
Hunt the lion in his lair,
Let no horrid dramshop dare
Look for help to you.

— Frances E. Willard

CAMPAIGN EDITION

"A SALOONLESS WORLD IN 1930"

SLOGAN OF INTERNATIONAL AND WORLD'S CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION MEETING IN CHICAGO, JULY 7-12

"Let all who want to see this nation dry, rise to their feet," cried Mary Harris Armor at the close of an impassioned address before the International Christian Endeavor Convention, in the Coliseum at Chicago, last Saturday evening, and in an instant 15,000 young men and women were standing, waving handkerchiefs, and declaring their enthusiastic desire to have a part in the campaign for National Constitutional Prohibition.

The demonstration was one of many which occurred during the six days of the great meeting. A Chicago newspaper reporter facetiously remarked that a sure recipe for a tempest at the convention was, "Say something about killing the demon rum."

Daniel A. Poling, citizenship superintendent for the United Society for Christian Endeavor, and now acting president of the organization, on the first day of the convention, sounded the slogan not only for "A Saloonless Nation in 1920," but as well for "A Saloonless World in 1930." He said,

"Millions of people of America are now fully persuaded that by 1920 the legalized liquor traffic in this country will be a black memory of a barbarous past. We have already sounded forth the battle cry of 'a saloonless nation,' and while it met with ridicule at first, that cry has swept the country. The predictions and indications everywhere are that it will be fulfilled.

Urges Plans for Conquests

"But we must not lay down our arms. Now is the time to take another advance step. Even before one victory is completely won let us lay plans and aim for further conquests. With Russia under prohibition, and drastic regulations in England, Germany and France, and with the United States dry by 1920, we can go forward in ten years until there is not a legalized saloon on the face of the earth.

"It is for us, the young people of the world, 3,000,000 strong, to sound forth the new battle cry. God will give us the victory if we pray and fight. Let us push forward until there is not a legalized saloon on the face of the globe. We can do it by 1930 if we will. And 'trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength,' as our convention motto says, 'we will'."

> "The patriotism of Christian Endeavor is practical and addresses itself against the foes of the state. It is discriminating, for it recognizes two foes of civilization and of the Kingdom of God that overtop all the others.
>
> "These foes are intemperance and war. Against them in the name of brotherhood and freedom and for Jesus' sake, the young people's movement hurls the flower of the world, the youth of the kingdom."—Daniel A. Poling

That Mr. Poling's prophecy found a ready response in the hearts of the mighty army of young folks was indicated by the tumultuous applause reference to the new slogan always received. Optimism of the most radical type on the prohibition question characterized the utterances of the officers and speakers at every session. "There will be nation-wide prohibition, I believe, in the next ten years, and moreover I don't think it reckless to predict that the entire continent of North America north of the Mexican border will be without a single saloon," said William G. Shaw, general secretary, and who, by the way, is a candidate on a prohibition platform for governor of Massachusetts.

"My keenest present concern is to see Uncle Sam go early and permanently out of partnership with John Barleycorn," said Dr. Ira Landrith, former president of Ward-Belmont College, and one of the speakers, "and I believe that on or before July 4, 1920, this republic will issue a new emancipation proclamation destroying forever our national liquor slavery."

"Service" is the watchword of Christian Endeavorers and the reading of the message sent from his sick bed by the beloved and honored president, Dr. Francis E. Clark, marked the launching of a "millionaire movement" for the societies. It called for

A million new converts
A million new church members
A million new Endeavorers
A million new dollars for missions
A million new members for the peace union

"You are not millionaires in money but you are in numbers, in opportunities and in the strength which Christ, your leader, provides," were the ringing words of the founder and leader. "Think in millions, work for millions, achieve millions."

War and alcohol, militarism and intemperance, peace and prohibition were the popular themes of the convention and rarely does one have the privilege of listening in the short space of one week to so many brilliant and uplifting as well as practical addresses from men and women of national reputation. Mary Harris Armor and Clinton Howard were the leading speakers on the liquor problem. Mr. Howard dealt with the economic waste of the traffic in his customary forceful, convincing fashion. He said, in part:

(Continued on Page Nine)

ECHOES FROM ATLANTIC CITY CONVENTION

HOSTS OF PROHIBITION CHAMPIONS ASSEMBLE AT ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE MEETING, JULY 6-9

The widespread and unqualified success of prohibition in every section of the United States was the theme of a notable company of advocates of the movement at the great Anti-Saloon League convention, held in Atlantic City, July 6-9. The subject was presented from every point of view and by men of varied experience. United States Senators and Congressmen, governors, ex-governors, sociological and medical experts, former friends of the liquor traffic, educators and military men, all dealt sledge-hammer blows at John Barleycorn from the platforms of the auditoriums on the million-dollar pier, where the meetings were held.

Among the speakers were United States Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas; Governor George A. Carlson, of Colorado; ex-Governor Eugene N. Foss, of Massachusetts; ex-Governor Malcolm Patterson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Richmond P. Hobson, of Alabama; General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A.; Gifford Pinchot, of Washington; Booker T. Washington, of Alabama, and Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U.

That the scope of the war against alcohol might be world-wide, Captain Richmond P. Hobson, in one of the notable addresses, suggested that a petition be presented to Congress for a special appropriation for an international anti-alcohol conference to be held as soon as peace is restored in Europe. Taking as his subject, "The Grand Strategy of the Fight," he urged as agencies by which we may speedily win the victory in the nation the enfranchisement of women everywhere, the incorporation of churches and all varieties of Christian organizations bodily into the anti-liquor campaign, and a special effort to secure the full co-operation of the business world.

A convincing answer to the question, "Will the workingman lose his job and his personal liberty if the saloons are closed?" was contained in the address by Charles Stelzle, the sociologist and author, who said in part:

"The workingman fears being out of work more than he does going to hell. He knows what it means to walk the streets looking for a job. The liquor interests have capitalized this fear, and by presenting a staggering array of figures which seem to prove that a calamity will follow the abolition of the liquor traffic they have persuaded large numbers of workingmen who never enter a saloon to vote for its retention.

"But the argument that the workingman will lose his job if the liquor traffic is abolished is based upon the absurd proposition that if the liquor dealer fails to get the money now spent for beer and whisky nobody else will get it. It is assumed that the farmer who now sells his grain and grapes, his apples and cherries to the liquor interests will be compelled to destroy them, when the fact is that figures furnished by the United States government clearly indicate that the ability of the American farmer to raise enough grain to supply this country adequately is gradually decreasing.

Says Railroads Will Not Suffer

"Neither will the railroad man suffer. Only about two per cent of his freight business is furnished by the liquor industry. He will get as much business and as much money for the transfer of a given amount of grain, whether that grain is shipped to a brewer or a baker. As for the transportation of a finished product, as well as the raw materials which the liquor industry now furnishes there is no doubt that other industries will benefit from the transfer of trade from liquor to some other commodity.

"More workingmen lose their jobs because saloons are open than would be the case were the saloons to be closed. It is better that the saloonkeeper should lose his job and get a better one than that dozens of his patrons should lose their jobs and be unfitted for any job."

Dan Morgan Smith, assistant United States district attorney in Chicago, and formerly an attorney for the liquor interests, summed up in epigrammatic form what he called "The Price of a Drink." He said:

"If the results of drinking were purely personal the complaint of the wets that the anti-liquor forces are trying to interfere with the personal liberty of drinkers

(Continued on Page Nine)

Homeopathic Physicians Favor National Prohibition

"Homeopathic physicians are ready to espouse the cause of national prohibition," said Dr. E. Arthur Carr, in an address before the members of the American Institute of Homeopathy which met recently in Chicago.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland of New York at the same meeting expressed a desire to see the Harrison federal anti-narcotic act amended to include all intoxicating beverages.

In a plea for instruction in the public schools on the problems of regeneration, Dr. G. D. Cameron of Chagrin Falls, O., urged that sex hygiene and the dangers of alcoholism be taught. He said in part:

"An error of school methods is to be found in a neglect to teach the destiny-dealing nature of heredity and environment. We teach and believe these laws in the breeding of the hog and the hen, and the cat and the cow, but only pray fervently that some miracle will make our children what they ought to be."

Would Have Alcohol Assailed

Dr. Cameron said that while alcohol was "one of our three fates," and the schools had touched on the subject somewhat, it remained for the European war to set forth "the true relation of this demoralizer of human efficiency."

"The utter desolation alcohol creates in the home makes it like war," the speaker asserted. "Like war, it digs the untimely grave. It pauperizes. Through heredity it creates the neurotic. It damns and degenerates wherever it comes in contact with the human tissue. It paves the way for tuberculosis and is first assistant in disseminating the diseases of vice. Yet the schools do not manifest the strong interest in this subject which its importance in social science deserves. Let the forces of enlightenment array themselves where the enemies of society are making their strongest attack. The schools should teach that good health is life's greatest asset."

State-wide Prohibition in Effect in Alabama

"Alabama has determined to live and do business without any revenue from liquor and to cut out that business altogether within her borders," is the way the Birmingham (Ala.) Ledger announced that at midnight, June 30, 1915, the prohibition law went into effect. The new law, it will be remembered, was passed last January by both houses of the legislature, was vetoed by Governor Henderson, and passed over his veto.

The law went into effect with practically no opposition or disturbance and law enforcement officers throughout the state have pledged their best efforts to prevent violations.

"There will be no rest for blind tiger keepers," declared the head of the prohibition squad of the sheriff's office at Birmingham. "We intend to go the limit in enforcing the law, and I believe it can be done." "You can say for me," said the chief of police of Montgomery, "that I expect to use every power of the police department to enforce the prohibition law."

Liquor Dealers to Engage in Legitimate Business

In reply to inquiries made by newspaper men, some of the leading liquor dealers told of their future plans. One wholesale liquor firm will engage in the wholesale grocery business and it is stated unofficially that the present building of the firm will be used for a grocery building.

A prominent liquor dealer stated he had been given a responsible position with the Mutual Life Insurance Co., and will have twenty-five Mutual agents under his supervision. Another leading man of the trade expects to engage in the real estate business.

The Birmingham Ledger voiced the feelings and expectations of the people of the state in its statement of the situation under the changed conditions:

"There will be a falling off in revenue in Birmingham and Montgomery, and the state will lose a considerable revenue. On the other hand, it is probable that crime and court costs will be reduced. A little real money will leave the state, and there will be some more vacant houses, but, on the other hand, the several hundred thousand dollars that have gone regularly out of the state for liquors and wines will stay at home and go into the tills of grocers and dry goods dealers. It is hoped that the liquor money will be at once diverted into other channels where women and children may get more and the distiller in Kentucky get less."

FROM CHICAGO TRIBUNE OF JULY 9, 1915

STRIKE WHISKY OFF DRUG LIST

No 'Nip' to Be Got in Pharmacy Next Year Unless It Has Saloon License.

(By a Staff Correspondent)

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—A blow has been dealt to the "blind pig" that has its habitat in many drug stores throughout the country.

The National Pharmacopœia committee, composed of fifty-one of the leading physicians of the country, has cut whisky and brandy from the new edition of the United States Pharmacopœia.

This means that whisky and brandy have been declared officially to be neither drugs nor medicine. The new edition of the Pharmacopœia will be issued about January 1, 1916, and after that time brandy and whisky cannot legally be sold by druggists as medicine.

It then will be necessary for the druggist to meet the local requirements—i. e., take out a saloon license if he wishes to sell "nips" behind the counter.

Blow to Liquor Traffic

The action of the pharmacopœia committee is recognized as a severe blow to the liquor traffic, particularly in dry districts, where it is next to impossible to obtain spirits except in the guise of medicine at drug stores. The step also will put out of business a number of patent medicines which practically are little more than whisky or brandy and are chiefly valued for that character.

It is known that one of the main reasons why the revision committee took action as it did is that comparatively few physicians now prescribe liquor even as a tonic.

Kansas State Civil Service Commission Bars Users of Intoxicating Liquors

Acting on the suggestion of Governor Capper that any person who uses intoxicating liquors in any form shall be ineligible for appointment to a state position, the state civil service commission has adopted a rule to that effect. The wording of this requirement is as follows:

LIQUOR USERS ARE BARRED.

"No application will be considered except from persons of good moral character, of good habits, and who are not addicted to the use of intoxicating beverages."

Another Evidence of Awakening of Business World to Economic Value of Prohibition

Evidence is constantly accumulating that the entire business world is awakening to the fact that strong drink and efficient service do not go together. A corporation is said to have no soul; but it has a purse, and an employe made inefficient by the use of intoxicants may any day cause the corporation purse to be depleted by many thousands of dollars. Hence, for financial reasons corporations are insisting upon total abstinence from liquors on the part of their employes. Business has been a long time in reaching this decision but the various sections of the financial world seem now to be arriving quite rapidly at the same conclusion.

The Seattle Electric Company recently posted in its car barns the following notice:

"Employes must abstain while on duty from smoking or chewing tobacco, and from the use of intoxicants. The habitual use of liquor, the frequenting of places where liquor is sold or carrying liquor about the person while on duty or about the premises of the company is forbidden.

"It has been necessary during the past few months to remove from the service several trainmen who have not observed the above rule. As we have stated many times before there is no place in the railroad business for any one who drinks intoxicants. We will certainly not tolerate the use of liquor by trainmen either on or off duty, if we can prevent it, as a train man needs every faculty he possesses to be able to do his work efficiently.

"May 17, 1915. Rule 6, page 8 of book of regulations.

"D. HENDERSON,
Superintendent Transportation P. S. T. L. & P. Co."

Such action as this on the part of employers will go far toward making prohibition effective. The wonder is that every employer does not realize the great advantage to be gained by employing only total abstainers.

New Mexico's Governor Would Close Saloons

Governor McDonald of New Mexico has become an enthusiastic advocate of the movement to eliminate the saloon from his state, and is proclaiming from platform and through the press, "The saloon cannot be controlled by law. Since it cannot be regulated and cannot be made to obey the law, take the steps which you know will be effective and close it."

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE SALOON

MRS. MARGARET B. PLATT, President West Washington W. C. T. U.

The saloon has been for many years entrenching itself in the political, social and financial life of our people. Doubtless for years to come thoughtful men and women will be grappling with problems which have grown out of the saloon's presence. What now is to take the place of the saloon is a question agitating many minds.

Man is a social being and one solution of the problem presented will be found in the use of those means that will offer best opportunities for the gratification of wholesome social instincts free from degrading accompaniments. We may take it for granted that places where men may eat and sleep will not be lacking. The commercial instinct will not be oblivious to the possibilities for honorable gain therein contained. The saloon has not posed as a lodging house or a restaurant but as a lounging place offering certain so-called social attractions. The Dawes hotels, or similar institutions now becoming popular, will supply every real need to which the saloon has ministered, and add many attractive features for the benefit of their patrons. The problem is not here.

Saloon Poses as Amusement Center

Conditions have been such that the public has come to accept the saloon, plus its abominations, as an easy means of providing social halls and amusement centers for any and all who choose to avail themselves of its privileges. From a hostelry where a guest might procure needed refreshment, with or without strong drink, and pass on, has been evolved the modern saloon whose object has been to sell as much intoxicating drink as possible to all comers, and the so-called attractions and conveniences offered by the saloon have simply been means used toward gaining the one object desired—namely money, plus power!

Years ago government seized upon this excrescence and lifted it to a certain plane of dignity and vantage, by making it a contributor to the expenses of the national household, a partner in governmental affairs, and by no stretch of imagination can we think of it as a silent partner. From the very nature of the case the accumulation of results could not be other than it is, and at last, having discovered that the whole business is "a cancer on the body politic," and an unmitigated pest to society the people have determined to abolish it in toto.

The Saloon a Rival of the Home

The saloon has ever been the rival of the home. In the fight for supremacy the home has often been badly worsted; not always because the one to whom the duty of home-making has been committed as life's paramount object did not in the main realize the presence of unfortunate conditions and attempt to overcome them, but because of that one's utter unpreparedness and consequent inability to wage a winning battle.

Many women have striven eagerly and toiled laboriously to "make home attractive," only to find their best efforts futile, their hearts and highest hopes flouted. Home-making is a partnership business, and needs the co-operation of both partners. Neither can afford to be silent or inactive. Lack of the necessary partnership of thought and service, and comradeship in hope and sacrifice has too often driven the home firm into bankruptcy, the divorce court has dissolved the partnership and the former partners, embittered and undone, have gone out into the world again less able than before to undertake the duties of true home-making.

> For the saloon with its atrocious evils and its cruel arrogance we shall substitute the home, pure in its impulses, holy in its influences, and regnant in the hearts of the people.

Home-making is the serious business of life, and is a field in which no rival should be allowed. Because the rival saloon has been assured of protection, and given permission to do its worst, it has been possible for it to win from the home the presence and the support of the natural home protector. It has offered attractions quite foreign to the home—attractions, to be sure, tainted and besmirched, but some have a relish for such, and others soon become accustomed to the flavor. As a meeting place for men where obscene and profane language and an altogether vicious moral atmosphere has prevailed, the saloon has been unrivaled, and it is too sadly true that many who have been blessed with decent homes and faithful wives have shown their preference for the saloon.

Let Us Give Thought to Home-Building

Our whole concept of the case as worked out in law and in custom, has been wrong. Now that the saloon is to become a thing of the past let us devote thought and endeavor to home-building. In all our relations toward the home and toward society let us strive to become constructive. Let us as never before dignify the occupation of home-making. May not society encourage both partners in the home firm to strive to work out together a correct solution of the varied problems that confront them? Under right conditions the lure of the world of business and pleasure will not outrival the lure of home. May not the science of home-making be wisely and profitably taught in high school and college?

Great help may be found in the back-to-the-country movement. In creating a spirit and love of home-making few factors can excel the possession of a plot of ground and a house even though it be most unpretentious. A tent or a "shack" may well answer the purpose at first. A bit of ground well tilled may make the "down and outer" self-supporting and self-respecting. Even a tent may be improved and decorated and permeated with the spirit of true hominess as far removed from the saloon atmosphere as heaven is from its opposite, and with this new atmosphere will come to many former habitues of the saloon undreamed-of hope and courage. The home is the best substitute for the saloon.

"Movies" May Aid as Saloon's Substitute

The moving picture house may aid as a substitute for the saloon by providing chaste productions which are both interesting and educational. The picture film may familiarize people with history and geography and take the entire family on a series of trips around the world at a cost much less than the average man would expend in an evening in the saloon. The moving picture may yet become a laudable factor in contributing to the education of the public, combining such factors with those of a strictly amusement nature.

School Buildings and Churches as Social Centers

School buildings and churches may be used as social centers. The church here has a wide field of opportunity and service which it is hardly yet beginning to realize, and of which it should take speedy advantage. Local libraries, easy of access, and made comfortable at all seasons, may provide means of passing an idle hour innocently and profitably. Many small parks, with amusement fields, lounging rooms, baths and gymnasiums will add their quota of general helpfulness. Neighborhood improvement clubs may well absorb some of the time and means formerly wasted in saloon patronage. Towns, small and large, may have their social or recreation hall where the natural social impulses of the human heart may be ministered to. Night schools, either free, or requiring a small tuition fee, may be inaugurated where those who have been deprived of or have neglected early opportunity may improve their education along either special or general lines, and with these might be incorporated manual training. This, even if maintained at public expense, would cost less than has formerly been paid for that portion of police and court expenses for which the saloon was primarily responsible, and the potential benefit accruing can hardly be estimated in dollars and cents.

The Saloon's Great Substitute—the Home

Gradually we will come to understand that with the elimination of the manufacture and traffic in intoxicants will come vastly different social conditions. The use of alcoholic drink has played such a large part, and by so many avenues has its blighting effect been felt that life will assume an altogether different aspect when that evil factor has disappeared. With the alcoholic poison eliminated not only from channels of trade but from the blood and fibre of men and women we shall see changed conditions that will mark a revolution among our people. Not every wrong will be righted; not every evil will be destroyed; not every human impulse will be clean and holy, but a long step forward will have been taken. Doubtless sin and wrong, ill temper, envy, lust and jealousy will continue as long as human beings exist on this mundane sphere, but because we are, even at our best, so intensely human, it behooves us to do as the great English statesman advised, "Make it as easy as possible to be good and as hard as possible to go wrong." Heretofore we have done exactly the opposite, and "by applying hot and rebellious liquor to our blood," have put whip and spur to the lowest passions and have regarded the resultant carousal and devastation with non-interfering complacency or impotent indignation, according to the quality and depth of our convictions of right and wrong, or our power of resistance and sense of personal duty. For the saloon with its atrocious evils and its cruel arrogance we shall substitute the home, pure in its impulses, holy in its influences, and regnant in the hearts of the people.

GOVERNOR OF GEORGIA IN INAUGURAL ADDRESS ADVOCATES PROHIBITION

MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD, Macon, Ga.

Amid the acclaim of his people who love and honor him, Judge Nat E. Harris, lawyer, philanthropist, chivalric Christian gentleman, was inaugurated on June 26.

The impressive ceremony at the capitol in Atlanta was witnessed by people of prominence—legislators and visitors from all sections of the state. The largest visiting delegation came from Governor Harris' home city, Macon. Two thousand persons, headed by the drum and bugle corps, three military companies, 100 members of the bar association, the Rotary Club, chamber of commerce, city officials, Masons and other friends, were in the procession.

Prohibition Salutary, Reasonable, Economic and in Aid of Good Government

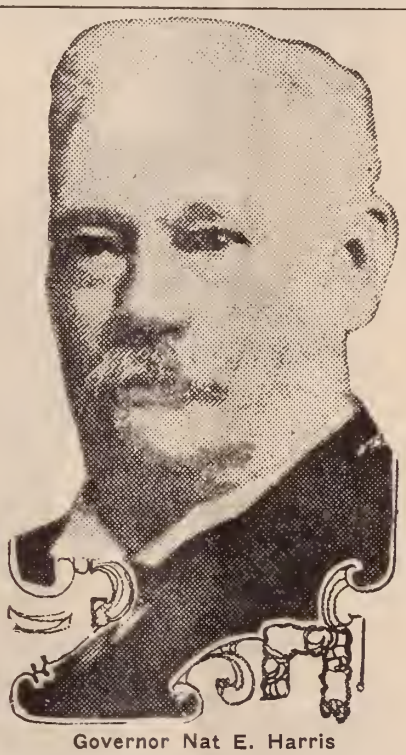
Referring to Georgia's prohibition law in his stirring inaugural address, Governor Harris said:

"During the campaign for governor I told the people of the state that if elected I intended to try to enforce all the laws of the state, and among others, mentioned the laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the state.

"I may be a little old-fashioned in my notions, but I believe that the laws of the state are enacted to be obeyed."

After discussing the expediency of enforcing the prohibition law, the governor stated:

"I believe the prohibition law is salutary, reasonable, economic, and in aid of good government. It is only one way of bringing about temperance in the commonwealth. It is a strong auxiliary in the crusade for the betterment of the race, for its uplift and reform. The nations of the earth are fast coming to a realization of the evils of intemperance. The safety of the state—its very life—is concerned. The fate of the living and of millions yet unborn hangs on the work of this age. Statesmen, soldiers, great thinkers, great legislators, are busy with this problem. It reaches far beyond the demands of human liberty; it is concerned with the very lives of the people themselves."



Governor Nat E. Harris

Strengthen or Amend, if Need Be

Then addressing himself to the members of the legislature, he continued:

"Georgia, in many communities, has been somewhat lax in the enforcement of this law. It is a time for investigation, for consideration, and for determination, and the matter is in your hands, gentlemen of the legislature. If the law needs strengthening see that it is done. If it needs amendment in any direction so that it may be easier of enforcement, see that this is done. Above all—more than all—let the people be on an equality. With regard to this matter, and in your legislation, keep in mind the greatest good for the greatest number, and the executive will be with you to share your responsibilities, and God willing, to execute your wishes."

Turn Liquor Loose, and Our Farms Would Be Unproductive and the Community Unsafe

The governor further said: "In one of our counties where the colored element predominates, an intelligent citizen said to me during the canvass: 'Judge Harris, we can't afford to have any question as to how a candidate stands on this issue. It is a matter of life and death with us. Turn liquor loose in our county and our farms would soon be unproductive and the community would not be safe for our wives and children. Then we would be forced to emigrate.' Police protection would be required in the country as well as in the city, and a vast revenue would be required to keep up a constabulary large enough to deal with such a case."

Strengthening Bills Introduced in Legislature

Although the Georgia legislature has only been in session a few days, several bills have already been introduced looking toward the strengthening and perfecting of Georgia's prohibition law.

HOW THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES REGARD THE MODERATE DRINKER

When the life insurance companies class liquor dealers among the most hazardous risks and even very moderate drinkers as unsafe, the world stops to listen to their reasons for this classification. Samuel Wilson writing on the subject in a recent issue of The Outlook gives the result of inquiries he has made of forty life insurance companies as to their attitude toward insuring liquor dealers and liquor drinkers. From their replies he comes to the conclusion that every reputable company either refuses entirely to insure liquor dealers or treats them as a hazardous class and imposes extra premiums and limitations. He says the actuary of one very prominent eastern company writes:

"Retail dealers are excluded.

"Wholesale dealers limited to favorable cases.

"Employes in distilleries are excluded.

"Grocers, having bars, are excluded.

"Saloonkeepers and bartenders are excluded.

"Restaurant-keepers who sell liquor are not desirable. Special cases only are considered.

"Traveling salesmen for liquor houses are excluded."

A Philadelphia company answers: "We do not accept any liquor retailers, and only a limited number of those who are brewers or wholesale dealers," and, "We prefer total abstainers to those who imbibe even moderately."

A Canadian company answers: "The practice of this company is to require an extra premium wherever an applicant is engaged in the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors. The extra, as a rule, is $10 per $1,000 insurance."

"We do not write saloonkeepers, bartenders or proprietors of hotels where the bar is a prominent feature of the hotel business; brewers or liquor salesmen, except that we sometimes write wholesale liquor dealers who do not themselves drink or have direct charge of the stock," is the reply from a prominent company in the Middle West located in a city in which brewers and saloonkeepers are a great political power. This same actuary says: "This company has from time to time investigated the mortality upon this class as compared with those whom we regard as abstainers, and the result of each investigation indicates that the mortality is heavier among drinkers than non-drinkers."

A Southern company answers: "This company does not insure the lives of persons engaged in the sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquors."

The answer is practically the same from New England, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, California, and Canada—liquor dealers and liquor drinkers are undesirable citizens from the viewpoint of life insurance.

CARING FOR LIQUOR VICTIMS COSTS FIVE TIMES LIQUOR REVENUE

Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, Poor Directors Issue Formidable Report Showing Economic Loss and Distress Due to Rum

A most significant document has been given to the public by the county board of poor directors of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. This report announces that the care of the victims of alcoholic liquors in the almshouse costs the county, including the city of Harrisburg, more than five times the public revenue from the saloons.

The revenue that is received by the city and county each year from licenses is $34,315, while the two governments spend $186,000 in partially remedying the ruin liquor has wrought.

Ninety Per Cent of Inmates Brought to Almshouse by Alcohol

The report states, "According to information acquired during a year's management of the almshouse, the steward states that ninety per cent of the inmates are in the present plight through the use of liquor.

"Of the twenty-five families lately made dependent upon the directors of the poor for support, wholly or in part, the condition of twenty-two of them is traceable directly to drink."

This report not only has been made public, but has been sent directly to the liquor dealers of the county with a letter in which the directors request their aid "in reducing the pauperism which has filled the almshouse to an unusual degree and which is increasing to an alarming extent the misery and suffering among dependent children throughout the country."

ARE LIQUORLESS RESORTS UNPOPULAR?

A dire calamity with which the liquor forces threaten a community or state which is so oblivious to its own interests as to contemplate or enter a prohibition campaign is the loss of patronage of its hotels, thus cutting down the transient population and entailing a loss to the city of the money ordinarily spent by travelers. In this connection they loudly proclaim that conventions choose always a wet city and pass by, no matter what its other attractions may be, that metropolis which has no saloons. It would seem to be the point of view of the liquor men that a gathering of citizens of the United States, regardless of the avowed purpose of its meeting and the character of its personnel, is made up of those who attend merely for an opportunity to secure without restraint liquor in unlimited quantity.

So much for the argument of the anti-prohibitionists. The real facts in the case are that with the increasing army of business and professional men who avoid the use of intoxicants, the choice of a convention site is determined by other considerations than the knowledge that a city offers an unstinted supply of alcoholic beverages. Eighteen states have endorsed prohibition. Any large body of people from these states would be unlikely to avowedly select for a convention a city which freely offers as its chief attraction the very thing which they have abolished from their home state.

Conventions Go to Dry Cities

Atlanta, Ga., is the largest dry city in the United States, and entertains more conventions than any other city in the United States, wet or dry, a most disconcerting state of affairs to one inclined to the views of the liquorites. Likewise it is a matter of record that conventions have passed by the attractions of Denver, a city which heretofore has offered its liquors with lavish hand, to meet in dry Atlanta, despite the fact that Denver actively bid for the entertainment of the conventions. Howard Gelbert, secretary of the Ad Men's Club of Atlanta, made this statement some little time ago: "We handled the Shriners, 40,000 of them, during their convention a few weeks ago without a single kick. We cite you the fact that since prohibition went into effect in the state of Georgia, Atlanta has had over five times the number of conventions, all greater in importance and attendance, than the previous conventions which we had before prohibition went into effect. Thinking people do not attend conventions to drink whisky." The Shriners stand at the head of a list of organizations as to the amount of money spent per capita by its delegates. Denver, with longing eyes, saw this coveted convention awarded to dry Atlanta.

How About Pleasure Resorts?

The claim that prohibition kills the pleasure resort business is another fabrication of the anti-prohibitionists equally without foundation. The map of the United States, with the exception of a few liquor strongholds, is surprisingly white. Are the people who believe in prohibition f . their home towns and states in search of a pleasure resort saturated with liquor?

Signs of The Times, Mountain View, Calif

Maine is a state of delightful summer resorts, and the prohibition of the sale of intoxicants has not interfered with the coming of visitors to enjoy its wonderful scenery and climate. During the term of Hon. William T. Haines as governor of Maine, he said:

"It is estimated that we shall take from people living outside the state during the present year for entertainment on our seashore and inland lakes and other ways in which we serve a large tourist population annually, over fifty million dollars."

"It is widely known that the hotels of Poland Springs, Me., have always been conducted without the sale of liquors, and in accordance with the law of the state," is the testimony of the management of Poland Spring House, South Poland, "The development of the property and its very large patronage during the past forty years is sufficient proof of success.

"The same policy has been carried out at the Samoset, at Rockland Breakwater, Maine, since it came under the firm fourteen years ago; and the same i true of the new Mount Kineo House, at Moosehead, Maine, both of which are now controlled by the Ricker Hotel Co., of which Mr. E. P. Ricker is vice president, our policy of the strict compliance with the liquor laws going into force at these hotels when they came into the hands of the Ricker Hotel Co."

Concerning the tourist business c he state of Maine the Portland Evening Express has said:

"There are now fifty-four summer camps in Maine for boys and girls. This is a feature that is gaining rapidly and large amounts of money are being brought into the state yearly to develop these camps and establish others. In addition to this there are 1,265 hotels and boarding houses that cater especially to s mer tourists. They represent a combined capacity of 69,083 guests. There are now about 500,000 people spending their summer vacations in Maine and the amount of money brought into the state from these vacationists amounts to $34,357,500 yearly."

Satisfaction with the resort business is the keynote of a signed communication from Annie F. Palmer and Arthur Palmer of Guernsey Villa, West Harpswell, Me., dated October 9, 1914. It says:

"We have just finished a very successful season. We were obliged to turn away many tourists on account of our house being filled to overflowing nearly all the season. We entertain people from all parts of the United States and they are all delighted with our beautiful scenery of country and sea combined. Of course, you understand that Guernsey Villa is a strictly temperance house, which fact we find is particularly pleasing to the high class patrons that we entertain."

MAKING MINNESOTA WHITE

ROZETTE HENDRIX, President Minnesota W. C. T. U.

Minnesota's county option law went into effect March 1, 1915. Prior to July 1, elections were held in forty-seven of the eighty-six counties of the state, and forty-one resulted in victories for prohibition.

The election in two counties on April 26 set the pace by outlawing the saloons, and after that on every succeeding Monday of May and June the anti-liquor forces were triumphant at the polls.

During May, fourteen counties came into the dry list. The first great success being May 17, when Clay county voted thirty-one saloons out of Moorhead. Eight brewery branches and wholesale houses also were closed, and the saloons stopped business when their licenses expired, June 30.

The next great victory was May 21, when, after a bitter campaign, Polk county joined the dry forces, putting thirty-one saloons, twelve brewery distributing depots and one brewery out of East Grand Forks, and twenty-one saloons, two brewery distributing depots and two breweries out of Crookston. This eliminated the heaviest liquor interests in the state outside the twin cities. It is estimated that the business in Polk county amounted to about $1,500,000 annually.

On May 31, four counties went dry, but on that day the temperance forces met their first defeat, when Jackson county voted wet.

The banner day was June 7, when twelve counties voted and nine outlawed the saloons, Pipestone county losing by only four votes. June 14, seven counties voted dry. On that day Oslo, in Marshall county, a distributing point for shipping liquor into North Dakota, became dry territory. One of the bitterest, but unsuccessful fights, was waged in Pennington county.

Minnesota's 45 Dry Counties

The map takes account of no white territory other than entire counties.

June 21, seven counties voted and six were won for the dry column. Martin county, in which our state convention is to be held, lost, but Fairmont, the convention town, voted out its six saloons last April and so will remain dry. One victory on that day was Stevens county, where every town in which were saloons went dry.

On June 28, four counties voted, and three joined the dry forces. On that day the last stronghold of the liquor forces on the western border of the state slipped from them, when Wilkin county voted dry, closing the saloons of Breckenridge.

County option so far has put out of business 406 saloons in the forty-one counties that have voted dry. Forty-seven of the eighty-six counties of the state have held county option elections and only six have been won by the liquorites. Adding to the forty-one counties dry through county option the four entirely within the territory made dry by the Indian treaty, we find over half the counties of the state are now saloonless.

A campaign for a dry Hennepin county is now under way. The securing of signatures on the petitions began June 28, and in one week 7,000 of the 12,500 names necessary had been secured. The election will occur in October. The temperance and liquor forces of Minneapolis are preparing for a hotly contested battle. The campaign is to be an educational one, both sides say, and the voters of Hennepin county will have an opportunity to study the saloon question from literature presented by both temperance and liquor forces. If Hennepin county goes dry Minneapolis will be the largest city in the United States to abolish the saloons.

No one can tell what will be the outcome of this local fight, but if Minneapolis goes dry, Minnesota will soon have state-wide prohibition. A campaign for state-wide prohibition will be launched by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at its state convention, to be held in Fairmont, August 24-27.

FROM THE POINTED FIRS TO THE "OPALINE SEASCAPE"

ACHIEVEMENTS OF MAINE WHITE RIBBONERS

ELIZABETH P. GORDON, National W. C. T. U. Organizer

"We've won! We've won! They've run the white ribbon up the flag pole! Two-thirds majority—and a lot to spare!" This is the prophetic climax of James Hay's dramatic novel, "The Man Who Forgot"—a novel that discusses in a lively and masterful manner, the vital question of National Constitutional Prohibition. While en route on a soul-stirring trip, in the prohibition state of Maine, how satisfying it was to read a new temperance book that will undoubtedly grip the conscience of the young voter. The atmosphere of the reading world is certainly electric with the thought of nation-wide prohibition.

The prohibition state of Maine still grandly leads! From Portland's pointed firs, to Bar Harbor's "opaline seascape" —and all the way along—the white ribbon entwines the Stars and Stripes. I heard leading statesmen like Hon. Carl Milliken, a former president of the state senate, reiterate the inspiring slogan, "National Constitutional Prohibition a Patriotic Necessity." A prominent city journalist, in an interview with the writer, observed optimistically that in spite of the difficulties of enforcement in cities, under the present administration, and with license states adjoining, the voters of Maine were never more firmly opposed to license than they are at the present time; and never again would the liquor people approach the vote that they obtained in the campaign of 1911. They did their best, or rather their very worst at that time! The business men and the farmers of Maine are now more alert, more alive to the tactics of the enemy, and see the necessity of registering their convictions at the polls. They are cheered by the marked change in the business world, for the substantial men of Boston whom they visit, do not, as in former years, invite them to drink. The National vision has come to Maine men, as well as to Maine women. "On to Washington!" is their cry.

Boston distillers send their rum to hundred-harbored Maine as they do to the west coast of Africa, where three die every minute—for it is one long bar-room. Only this last spring there sailed out of the port of Boston, a vessel bearing 200,000 gallons of New England rum, for the degradation of the native African. Here might be a worthy target for a submarine! The distiller would like to make it as easy to sell in Maine as it is in Africa, but in the Pine Tree state the voters realize that they are in a position to command the enemy—and the enemy well knows it!

Harvard University recently has conferred on Bela Lyon Pratt, Boston's eminent sculptor an honorary degree, because he has "taught bronze and marble to whisper his secrets of beauty and power." The white ribbon women of Maine, led by their able, beloved, and indefatigable president, Mrs. Althea G. Quimby, deserve to have high honors conferred upon them because of their achievements—for they are carving on the immortal souls of Maine's boys and girls, young men and young women, the truths regarding total abstinence, in order that the lives of these young voters and home-makers may be living statues that radiate beauty and power. At the enthusiastic, well attended county conventions, reports of successful work were given, and a determination to add to the membership gain already made was evinced. The organizing institute projected by Mrs. Frances Damon gives zest to the work.

In loving, reverent remembrance of their promoted leader, Lillian M. N. Stevens, and with loving loyalty to their devoted president, Mrs. Quimby, the Maine W. C. T. U. is making a splendid record. Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt not only ably edits the state paper, The Star in the East, but is herself a helpful guiding star in the solution of state problems.

In 1916 the women of Maine will be voting citizens! So it is predicted, and Deborah Knox Livingston is a much appreciated leader in this forward movement. In a certain Maine community, the women are in the habit of picking blueberries to earn money with which to pay their husbands' poll taxes. These women remind one of the "cheerful giver" of holy writ. A distinguished theologian says "cheerful" in that connection really means "hilarious." If it makes one hilarious to gather blueberries on a hot July day how still more hilarious it is going to be when these dutiful wives can use some of the berry money to pay their own poll taxes—as well as those of their weaker halves!

Yes, the white ribbon will run up the flag pole, and the white ribboners of Maine will be in the front rank of those who on that great, victorious day shall sing, "Praise the Lord who helped us, our nation has gone dry!"

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, July 15, 1915

National Constitutional Prohibition Plans for August

The subject of National Constitutional Prohibition should be brought to the attention of every attendant at county and state fairs held in August and September. Make early arrangements for space on fair grounds, adorn with telling and conspicuous posters and a prohibition map, and distribute generously prohibition fans, Union Signals, Young Crusaders, and other temperance literature.

At all conferences, conventions, camp meetings and chautauquas, try to secure a place on the program for the discussion of and addresses on National Constitutional Prohibition, and favorable action on a resolution in favor of the Hobson amendment.

August is essentially an out-of-door month and it will be difficult to coax people into halls for meetings. Plan a series of open-air meetings in parks or on the lawn of some member of the W. C. T. U.; decorate with Chinese lanterns and illuminated prohibition posters; have a good program of brief addresses and music, and if possible, an orchestra and chorus. A prohibition song by the Young Campaigners for Prohibition in costume would be an attractive feature. Get the women's church societies to serve ice-cream or lemonade at small charge.

Prohibition fans placed in the seats of the churches during the hot months would help to swell the wave of prohibition sentiment.

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

NATIONAL PRESIDENT IN WASHINGTON

Miss Anna A. Gordon, National W. C. T. U. president, left Evanston, Thursday, July 8, for Washington, D. C., to attend a conference of the united temperance forces. This gathering of leaders of the various anti-liquor organizations of the country, including church temperance societies, will consider the form of resolution to be presented to the Sixty-fourth Congress for a referendum to the states on the question of National Constitutional Prohibition. Campaign plans will also be discussed. Miss Gordon will remain in the East a week or ten days after the conference to fill other engagements.

"A SALOONLESS WORLD IN 1930"

The Christian Endeavorers assembled in their international convention in Chicago last week sounded a new slogan for the youth of America, "A Saloonless World in 1930." In the light of the wonderful triumphs of the past twelve months who shall say that the words are not prophetic, and that in the next fifteen years we may not see the nations of both hemispheres redeemed from the curse of drink. The banishing of vodka and later of all alcoholic liquors from Russia, and the exterminating of absinthe from France were so spectacular that they have attracted the attention of the world, but the fact that other nations have quietly and unostentatiously been climbing on the water wagon may have been lost sight of. Last January Iceland outlawed the drink traffic and "as long as water stays on the sea" the women of Iceland are reported to have said, "liquor will be barred from Iceland." The Roumanian government has cut down the number of saloons in its country nearly fifty per cent. The parliament of Italy has passed an act forbidding the sale, except within very narrow limits and on rigid conditions, of all liquors. In Holland the number of saloons has been reduced nearly one-half and campaigns for nation-wide prohibition are now being urged in Sweden and Norway, Australia and New Zealand.

In fifty countries of the world the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has its representatives or organizations through which it is creating sentiment which will help mightily to a fulfillment of the prediction, "A Saloonless World in 1930."

HE WOULD PAY THE TAXES

The little fiction about prohibition causing increased taxes and liquor revenue being necessary to pay the expenses of a municipality, a state or nation, is still popular with liquor orators, and we regret to say seems to have more or less weight with many tax-paying voters. As a matter of fact, abundant statistics are available to show that taxes in dry cities average lower than in saloon-burdened communities, but even were the case otherwise, what lover of his fellows would care to have his taxes decreased at the expense of the victims of the drink evil? What the men who would be glad to be freed from the temptation of the diabolically accessible saloon think of the high tax-argument is illustrated in the following incident told by a writer in the Chicago Daily News: "I was going down on a street car from dry Huntington, W. Va., to wet Catlettsburg, Ky., and several men in the car were arguing on the temperance question. One asserted that he owned property in Catlettsburg and complained angrily that if it went dry his taxes would be doubled. In the corner of the car half asleep sat a man who quite evidently spent much time in Catlettsburg. He asked, 'Mister, how much are your taxes?' 'I pay $8 taxes every year,' was the reply. 'All right,' replied the man in the corner, 'you vote Catlettsburg dry and I'll pay your taxes. I spend about $10 a week down there. If you will vote the town dry, I'll gladly pay your taxes.'" He could with truth have added, "And I could well afford to do it."

Every patriotic citizen should in this matter have the spirit that found expression in the decision of the United States Supreme Court, "If a loss of revenue should accrue t the United States from a diminished consumption of ardent spirits, she will be the gainer a thousandfold in the health, wealth and happiness of her people."

THE LESS SAID THE BETTER

At the time of a great temperance campaign in the city of Pittsburgh, a liquor advocate was asked why he did not advance some arguments to offset those presented by the anti-alcohol workers. "We have no arguments," the man replied, "the less we say the better." It would have been well for the president of the Wholesale Liquor Dealers had he taken the advice of this astute gentleman before making his speech at the recent convention in Cincinnati, at which he is quoted as having said: "The persons engaged in the liquor business contend that it relieves more misery than it causes; that it produces more joy than sorrow; that it adds to the efficiency instead of taking away from it; that it is a tonic and a stimulant for the body, producing stronger and healthier minds.

One would think that even an audience of liquor men would have resented such an insult to their intelligence as these absurd statements. Certainly they could not safely have been perpetrated without protest before any other body of men. Imagine alcohol being exploited as a reliever of misery and a producer of joy before a company made up of criminologists, charity workers or judges of the divorce or domestic relations courts. Picture if you can the reception that would be given to a definition of alcohol as a promoter of efficiency by a group of railroad managers, industrial leaders or military experts; or as a health-producing tonic by the committee of fifty-one distinguished physicians who have just eliminated whisky and brandy from the national pharmacopeia.

The day is long past when an intelligent public will take seriously such palpably foolish statements concerning the character of the racial poison—alcohol.

All who are planning to attend the National W. C. T. U. Convention, at Seattle, Wash., should carefully preserve the articles which have been published in THE UNION SIGNAL of June 24 and of July 8, also those in the present issue. Other articles will appear at frequent intervals, all of which should be carefully read and filed for future reference.

"A SALOONLESS WORLD IN 1930"

(Continued from Page Two)

"The largest single item of expenditure by the people of the United States is for intoxicating drink. The $700,000,000 we pay for education from kindergarten to university would pay the direct cost of drink for only three months. The entire cost of the federal government would pay the direct cost of drink for only six months.

"Millions in money now wasted in drink diverted into wholesome channels of trade will give the overstocked nations a home market for their own goods larger than their foreign market over the whole world.

"Arbitration and prohibition will sheathe every sword, spike every gun, demolish every fort and sink every submarine."

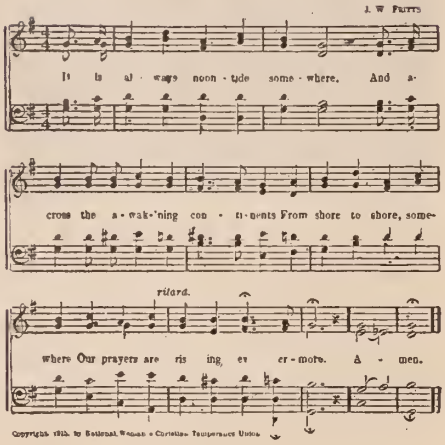
Mrs. Armor, who had been scheduled to speak only at the Sunday afternoon mass meeting for women, was asked to take the place which was to have been filled by Hon. William J. Bryan on the Saturday evening program at the Coliseum. Her address evoked repeated and exuberant approval from start to finish, and caused Dr. Howard Grose, the presiding officer, to assure the vast audience through a megaphone, that having heard both Mr. Bryan and Mrs. Armor, he was confident the company had no reason to regret that Mr. Bryan felt compelled to cancel his engagement to speak for the convention; to which remark the audience gave vociferous assent.

Greeting the Christian Endeavorers as "comrades in the long war against the accursed liquor traffic," Mrs. Armor pleaded with them not to relax their efforts because the desired end seemed almost at hand. "The air rings with our victorious battle cry, the conflict is growing so fierce on every side that every rumseller in the world is holding his breath for fear," declared Mrs. Armor. "So far as the liquor dealers are concerned, there is absolutely no power that can turn the tide of victory for the home against the saloon; they cannot turn back the mighty prohibition wave that threatens to overwhelm them. There is one company and only one that can stay its onward sweep, and that is the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. If we should rest on our arms, if we should beat a retreat, then we might lose, then it might be that Jesus Christ might weep over us as He wept over Jerusalem, saying, 'Ye knew not your opportunity.' Although victory — nation-wide, world-wide—is within our grasp, do not think we have beaten the enemy, for they have millions of dollars with which to continue the fight and they are as unscrupulous in using it as Satan himself." But "to doubt the issue is to doubt the sanity of the race and the power of God," was the assurance with which she prefaced her closing plea for greater determination and consecration to the cause of prohibition for the nation and for the world.

While almost every class of interests in Chicago extended a most hearty welcome to the delegates, they found no favor in the eyes of the liquor interests. One of the evening papers reported that at the urgent insistence of the brewery element of the board of trade the Christian Endeavor decorations which adorned the front of the building were torn down. "If this report is true," declared Vice-President Grose, as he read the clipping to the convention, "then Christian Endeavor has had paid to it one of the finest compliments it has ever received."

The significance of the enthusiasm for prohibition, missions and international peace of this remarkable body of young Christians cannot be overestimated. It serves notice upon all the forces of evil in the nation and in the universe that there is rapidly coming into power a body of voting citizens who are sacredly pledged to their Divine Master and to one another to annihilate the legalized liquor traffic, to evangelize the world and to hasten the coming of peace among the nations, "trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength."

Time of Prayer—Noontide



ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp reports that a number of books have already been contributed for the Elizabeth P. Hutchinson Memorial library to be established in the Portland Surgical Hospital, Portland, Oregon. Mrs. Kemp expresses her willingness to help in the selection of volumes for this library and, if desired, will expend money sent for that purpose in the purchase of suitable books. The following books have been received: "Every Man a King;" "Pollyanna;" "Pollyanna Growing Up;" Martha by the Day;" "Everybody's Lonesome." All books should be sent and correspondence addressed to Mrs. Kemp, Dekum Bldg., Portland, Oregon.

Echoes From Atlantic City Convention

(Continued from Page Two)

might carry with it some force, but drink is sold on the installment plan; first payment is made when you get the drink, the others when the drink gets you!

"The greater part of the payments are made by those who do not drink.

"The price of a drink ranges from a dime to damnation—the drinker pays the dime and humanity pays the damnation.

"Enforcement of local or state prohibition depends upon the inclination, energy and honesty of local authorities, but you can make prohibition prohibit—any one of you—by a persistent prosecution of those officials who fail to prosecute the violators of the dry law."

Strong testimony to the efficacy of the prohibition law in West Virginia was given by Fred O. Blue, tax commissioner for the state. He said in part:

"West Virginia has now experienced one year of prohibition. It has been demonstrated that prohibition will prohibit, and that a prohibition law can be enforced.

"Let us take this occasion to say to any man or any association of men, that when the state voted intoxicating liquors out of it, it voted them out forever. The state will never again permit the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages and the state will never again enter into a partnership with the liquor business.

"The further result is that hundreds of men in the state have learned that they can do without intoxicating liquors, and we are having peace and order in the state. The only legal way that citizens of the state can procure intoxicating liquors for personal use is to go after them in person; if the quantity thereof exceeds one-half gallon, he must plainly label, on the top and side of the container, the quantity and character of the contents.

"Experience has demonstrated that men who some months ago really believed they must have liquors, have found out that they can get along without them. I have it from many men that, while they were opposed to such legislation when the legislation was enacted, they are today glad that the law was enacted, and because thereof, like the prodigal son, they have come to themselves."

One of the biggest ovations of the convention was given to Gifford Pinchot, the pioneer missionary of conservation. Taking as his text "National Efficiency," he said, in part:

"If it is our duty to secure efficiency by the conservation of coal and oil, of the forest and the soil, of water power and the navigation of our streams, what shall be said of our duty to conserve as well the greatest of all resources, the men, women and children of the United States?

"There is no higher obligation. That is why I believe so heartily in the purpose of this great convention, and why I am an ardent opponent of the traffic in drink.

"We demand that the people of the United States be allowed to say where they stand on this question as a nation. We demand it because the people have the right to declare their will, and because we are convinced that no step can be taken which will so greatly increase the national efficiency as the national prohibition of the liquor traffic.

"The argument of the liquor interests against this position in effect comes down to this: 'We need the money.'

"The nation may well reply: 'We need the men.'"

Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., was vigorously applauded and apparently struck a responsive chord when she predicted that in the event of woman suffrage becoming universal, the prohibition battle would soon be won.

The message of the convention, which found expression in every address and discussion, was that the men and women of the nation must not rest on their arms trusting too confidently in victories already won, but tirelessly must press the battle against the liquor traffic in every town, township, county and state, until National Prohibition shall be written into the Constitution of the United States.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 21—Loyal Temperance Legion Day (Birthday of Anna A. Gordon)
JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

TEMPERANCE AND LABOR
MAE M. WHITMAN

The principle of temperance and the activity of labor, are two essentials in every well-ordered life. It is our privilege to have a part in helping to shape the ideals of the labor movement so that quality of work shall be its chief ambition. Here the Woman's Christian Temperance Union may do a great work—may bless and be blessed. A golden opportunity is before us that we can not afford to miss.

A study of the Temperance and Labor department ethics and plans is a liberal and beneficial education for those who will make thorough use of it. When we shall become so interested and informed as to make the department the power it is possible for it to be state and National Prohibition will not be far away.

Local Unions Can Aid

Would not a department program, given by each local union at the earliest date practicable give a fresh impetus to the work?

Get twelve children to give a little exercise demonstrating "What a bushel of corn will give" from the leaflet, "Facts for Mechanics and Farmers." Children's exercises always attract. Since we are hearing much these days about the economic peril of the war in the loss of trained and capable men who make up the armies, let us, on our part, emphasize the economic loss of the trained and capable men made incompetent or ruined for life through the ravages of strong drink. Emphasize, also, the wonderfully beneficial economic results obtained where prohibition has gone into effect. Among others, quote the following items: "The extensive building of the Seattle Brewing Company is to be turned into a railroad shop. Bellingham brewery is to be turned into a butter and cheese factory, employing four times the old number of laborers. Yakima brewery is to become a grape juice factory and the Aberdeen brewery changes to a clam cannery. The Olympia brewery goes into a creamery." These new conditions, bringing changes of occupation and necessitating the employment of a greatly increased number of laborers, will benefit the state of Washington beyond all estimate.

On the program have a good reader, preferably a mother, give portions of the leaflet, "Industrial Womanhood Versus Purity." If practicable get a business man to speak on "The Business World is Going Dry." (See department leaflet upon the subject.) In opening and closing its program the union might use "Responsive Reading" and "Quiz."

Let the unions begin preparations for Labor Day, for which the leaflet, "Saving the Day" contains valuable suggestions.

All leaflets may be secured at the National W. C. T. U. Publishing house, Evanston, Ill.

Will the state superintendents please send their reports to me by September 1?

98 Central Ave., Campbell, Calif.

PEACE AND ARBITRATION
Notice to Superintendents
HANNAH J. BAILEY

All state superintendents of the department of Peace and International Arbitration are requested to gather reports from their subordinate unions and to incorporate them into a report for the National superintendent to embody in her report for the National Convention, to be held at Seattle in October. Please kindly attend to the compilation as soon as possible and send your reports to the National superintendent as early in September as convenient.

Winthrop Center, Maine.

OUR COVER PAGE

The picture on the cover page shows Mrs. Hugh Munro, known as Mother Munro, self-appointed godmother of Philadelphia's babies, and some of the little people under her care. For seven years Mrs. Munro has conducted a baby-saving campaign, and more than 2,000 babies have been kept well and happy as a result. Every week through the year the Cohocksink Mothers' club meets to aid in this important work. A baby contest for July and August, with prizes for the little ones under two years of age who show the greatest improvement and who have had the best care during the hot months, has attracted the attention of mothers, and many babies have been entered.

AMONG OUR WORKERS

A new record in medal contests has been established by Mrs. G. D. Washburn, local superintendent for the Ocala (Fla.) union. On Anti-cigaret Sunday, anti-cigaret contests were held in the Baptist, Methodist, Christian, Presbyterian and Union churches by boys of the respective Sunday schools. Two other contests were held during June, making a total of seven for the month, with another on July 5.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Mary Jennings as house-to-house worker, Richland county (O.) W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. Frances Waite Leiter, National superintendent of the Health department, is temporarily president, has made a gain of four hundred regular members. One union was re-organized and one new union promises a large membership in the future.

The Albion (Neb.) union, Mrs. Ellen S. Watson, president, has this year doubled its last year's membership of twenty with three to apply on the third lap. Memorial day was observed with a sermon by Rev. F. C. Barrett, and services in the cemetery, where the graves of white ribboners were strewn with flowers.

The federated W. C. T. U. of Pueblo, Col., under the leadership of Mrs. C. S. Gardner, held a successful Fourth of July service at the First M. E. church on the night of Independence Day. The white ribboners were seated in a body in the front of the church, the president of the district among them. On the left wing were the children and their teachers from the colored orphanage, who gave two selections. Mrs. Harris, the church chorister, sang in a tender, heartfelt manner, "My Mother's White Ribbon," the W. C. T. U. joining in the chorus. Mrs. Lora S. La Mance, National organizer, gave an address on "The Spirit of '76," and the W. C. T. U. joined in the chorus of the patriotic solo that she sang. Pueblo has three orphan asylums, Catholic, Protestant and colored. Mrs. Eliza Peterson, National superintendent of Work among Colored People, organized an L. T. L. among the colored orphans, and they have done credit to their leaders. There is a wide field of activity before Pueblo because of its railroad and manufacturing interests, its many foreigners and large colored population, and right loyally the W. C. T. U. is rising to the occasion.

The children, as well as older people, find Rest Cottage fascinating and enjoy visiting it. Recently a dozen or more Loyal Temperance Legioners from the South Side L. T. L. of Chicago, under the leadership of Mrs. Maybelle Tindolph, were among the guests welcomed at National Headquarters.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

Any one who has made a trip to a National W. C. T. U. Convention on the official train will never forget it, for it is always a memorable occasion, but when such a trip means not only attendance at the Convention but a visit to the Panama-Pacific and San Diego Expositions, it will be all the more memorable.

Delegates and visitors who plan to attend the forty-second annual convention of the National W. C. T. U. should reach Chicago on Tuesday, October 5.

Should it be convenient to arrive in the morning, a visit to Evanston, to see National W. C. T. U. Headquarters and Rest Cottage will be more than worth while, and many will enjoy a personally conducted trip through the great department store of Marshall Field & Co.

Trains for Evanston leave the Chicago North Western station at 10:20 a. m. and 2:00 p. m., returning at 1:06 and 4:08 p. m.

Parties desiring to visit the Marshall Field store will meet at a place to be designated later, at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., where guides will be prepared to conduct them through the store.

It will aid materially in arranging for these trips if those who contemplate taking one or both of them will notify Miss Katharine K. Adams, stating their preference as to time.

The official train will leave the North Western station at 7:15 p. m., October 5. Get your dinner before boarding the train.

The diner will be attached early the next morning, but as our train will stop at Omaha a half hour, 7:45 to 8:15 a. m., passengers may have breakfast either in the diner or in the station restaurant. At this point delegates from Nebraska, South Dakota, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma will join us.

Wednesday evening we are scheduled to reach Cheyenne, Wyoming, where our train will stop two hours, long enough to meet our friends and to hold a meeting. Delegates from Colorado and other states may join us here.

Friday 11:30 to 12 noon we spend at The Dalles, Oregon, and will arrive at Portland at 3 p. m. Wonderfully beautiful scenery is to be seen on this part of the journey.

Many things are being planned for our entertainment and pleasure at Portland. Our train leaves at 11 p. m. and the following morning, Saturday, will find us in Seattle. We can remain in our sleepers until 7:30 a. m.

Delegates will be assigned to places of entertainment on arrival. The convention will close on Thursday night, October 14, to be followed by Official Board and Executive Committee meetings on Friday.

Those who do not go to San Francisco can return home from Seattle by any preferred route, but the route must be designated when the ticket is purchased.

It is possible to go by boat to San Francisco, the boats sailing from Astoria on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays each week. The cost for meals and berth is included in the additional fare of $17.50, which is charged on all tickets with return via San Francisco. The time of making the trip is about the same as by train.

It has been decided that the official party will go by train, stopping over Sunday at Roseburg, Oregon. The charge for sleeper is $5 with an extra charge of $2 for side-tracking sleepers over Sunday. Tourist car rates will be somewhat cheaper.

The official party will arrive in San Francisco, Monday evening, October 18. Arrangements will be made whereby all can go to the same hotel, if they so desire.

Tuesday, October 19, day and evening will be spent at the Exposition, for all will want to visit the Palace of Education and see the exhibit of the World's and National W. C. T. U., which has been awarded the grand prize. The exhibit is in charge of Miss Mary E. Brown.

Wednesday, October 20, is the date set for the National Temperance Congress. This meeting will bring together the leaders of many temperance organizations. It will hardly be possible to hold our party together longer than this, for the length of stay in San Francisco will vary, but we will later outline an itinerary which will include four days in San Francisco, a visit to Los Angeles, and the San Diego Expositions. A ticket to San Diego is included over most routes without extra charge, if arranged for at the time the ticket is purchased, also a stop at the Grand Canyon, a few hours at Albuquerque, and a day at Colorado Springs, then back to Chicago.

Applications for reservations sent to Miss Katharine K. Adams, 1730 Chicago avenue, Evanston, Ill., should state kind of reservation desired, Pullman or tourist, upper or lower berth, compartment or state room, names of those who will occupy the same, whether return will be via San Francisco by boat or train, and whether hotel reservations are desired in San Francisco.

Preserve your UNION SIGNALS for reference as to transportation. Information in regard to details will be cheerfully furnished on application.

ELLA A. BOOLE, Chairman Transportation.
KATHARINE K. ADAMS, Assistant.

INSANITY FROM ALCOHOL IS VERY RARE IN KANSAS

HARRY BOWMAN, MEMBER OF STATE BOARD OF CONTROL, "SHOWS UP" CHARGES MADE BY BREWERS

To the oft repeated charge made by the liquor interests that prohibition is responsible for a large number of insane in Kansas, Mr. Harry Bowman, a member of the state board of control, replies as follows:

"The percentage of insanity caused by alcohol, in Kansas, is very low; while the total number of insane in the state insane hospitals is comparatively high," notes Mr. Bowman. "The first is due to prohibition, and the last is due to the fact that state care for the insane is carried to an extreme in Kansas. The laws of Kansas require the state insane hospitals to take care of all persons adjudged insane, and also require the state to pay each county so much per week, for the care of every insane person refused admission for want of room. This causes the county to send to the state insane hospitals defectives who are dependent upon the county and who are properly only almshouse charges. The result is that Kansas has the greatest number of insane in state insane hospitals per 100,000 population of any of the prohibition states and more than a few of the liquor states.

Some Striking Comparisons

"Kansas, a prohibition state, has 172 insane in state hospitals, including sane epileptics, while Oklahoma, a prohibition state, has but 67 per 100,000 population. Nebraska is usually classified as a near-prohibition state and it has a few less insane per 100,000 in the Nebraska state hospitals than Kansas, but has 2½ times as many insane per 100,000 population as Oklahoma.

"The census bureau incorrectly states that in 1910 the insanity of 70 patients admitted to the Kansas state hospitals was caused by alcohol, and that the insanity of 20 of the patients admitted to the Nebraska state hospitals was caused by alcohol. We are at a loss to know how the government report got the figures 70. The correct figures are 24. The government also missed something very important in compiling the Nebraska figures.

Laws Differ in the States

"The Kansas figures of 24 include the inebriates who are sent to the state insane hospitals as insane, while in Nebraska inebriates are committed under a different law and are not included in the census report of the population of the Nebraska state insane hospitals. The inebriates go to the same institution as the insane and are mixed and mingled in the same wards, whether admitted as insane or as inebriates. On page 115 of the biennial report of 1912 of the Lincoln, Neb., state hospital for the insane, the superintendent states that from July 8, 1905, to November 30, 1912, 1,172 men and 52 women were committed as inebriates. This would be an average of almost 174 a year, in addition to the 20 insane with "alcoholic psychosis."

"The number of persons committed to state insane hospitals in the prohibition states and the near-prohibition states is very much less than the number committed in the license states. According to the tables of the Kansas State Temperance Union, based upon the federal census of 1910, the number of persons committed to state insane hospitals averaged 118 in the prohibition states, 150 in the near-prohibition states, and 276 in the license states per 100,000.

"Notwithstanding the extent of state care in Kansas, only 3.2 per cent of the cases admitted are forms of alcoholic mental disorders. The superintendent of our largest state insane hospital has figured the percentage on the cases admitted to the state hospitals in Massachusetts, Virginia, Illinois, Wisconsin and New York, and it runs from 8.2 per cent to 14.8 per cent."

A TEMPERANCE PAY-DAY

W. D. BROWNING, Seabright, Santa Cruz, Cal.

"This drinking is all a habit," grumbled Jimmy McCabe.

"Why don't you quit it then?" queried Bert Lang. "There are lots of other habits more beneficial that you drinking chaps might form, and I challenge any of you to mention a way that you can spend more money and have less to show for it the day after."

"Nobody is disputing that, Bert," broke in Bob Forest, the educated member of the Redwood logging camp, "but it's just as Jimmy says, it's a habit that has a hold on us and until some other habit gains more complete control, I suppose we will continue to drink."

Bob and Jimmy McCabe and several others of the logging gang had just returned from Black Point, where, as was their custom, they had squandered their month's wages in a few hours of uproarious revelry, and were now suffering tortures more keen than those who lead sober, well-ordered lives can well imagine—the physical and mental torments of the day after.

Bert Lang glanced along the table at the bloodshot eyes and white, drawn faces of his companions and felt a tug of pity at his heart. Hard-working, good-hearted chaps they were, most of them, with but one fault almost to a man—the drink habit.

"I'll tell you, boys, what I'll do," he said slowly. "You know I don't drink. Guess I might be said to have the temperance habit and yet I have what I call a good time pay-days. The fact is I hardly see how I could have a better time than I had yesterday at Gem City. Now if you chaps would only go with me just once and try a temperance pay-day—." He paused and glanced along the table with more anxiety than he dared to show. He himself had in years past been a slave to drink and knew each bitter pang of the after effects that his companions were now suffering. From the depths of his heart he pitied them, and longed to help them to gain their freedom and self-respect. He was prepared to do anything in his power for them but first they must be willing to be helped, he reasoned.

Bob Forest was the first to break the silence. "I will go you on that proposition next pay-day for a trial, Bert," he promised, a slight ring of hope in his voice.

"I'll make a second one to try your temperance pay-day. I don't feel as if I could stand another of the other kind, anyway," sighed Jimmy McCabe. Several others assured Bert Lang that they would test his plan and still others came to him afterwards and told him that they also wanted to be counted in with the temperance pay-day crowd.

Bert concluded it was worth while to take the night train into Gem City about a week before pay-day to consult the kindly little lady who ran the temperance coffee club in the place. "Being one of the boys, and having been a drinking man myself, I know just about how they feel," he told her. "It won't do to have things too quiet; they want life and action, or they will say my attempt to show them a good time was too tame. They won't stand for much preaching, either. Of course they need it, we all do, I reckon, but my idea is to just show the boys as much real enjoyment as I can without drink cutting into the deal in any way whatsoever. Do you get me, ma'am?" Mrs. Pringle, the manager of the coffee club, was one of those rare individuals endowed with the spirit of eternal youth and she smiled up into the face of the young logger and answered that she understood in a way that assured him that what she could do to make his plan a success would be done.

And so it came about that on the evening of the next pay-day at the Redwood logging camp the white-aproned bartenders of the saloons at Black Point polished and re-polished their bars as they vainly waited like hungry spiders for the flies that were then buzzing around in Gem City all ready to try a pay-day without liquor. The experiment was a success from the start. Following a suggestion of Bert Lang each of the loggers had, during the week preceding pay-day, written down a list of the things he had wished to purchase for months and even years, but had ever yielded to the temptation to buy a few drinks instead.

"We are going to get them this time," declared Jimmy McCabe, as he made a note of a violin he had promised himself every pay-day for eighteen months.

"Sure thing!" said Red Dorset enthusiastically. "I'll have my camera yet."

Bob Forest had been silent while all this planning had been going on, and the others had respected his evident desire to keep his intended purchases secret. With a small outside income and with an education and talents which fitted him for a different life, Robert Forest occupied a unique position among the rough loggers—he was one of them in some ways; in others he stood alone. Almost as soon as they reached Gem City he wandered away from the rest and did not return until anxious Bert hunted him up and brought him to the temperance coffee club where the rest of the "bunch" were impatiently awaiting him.

"Hey, there, Bob Forest," called some one, "don't you ever get hungry?"

"I certainly do," replied the young man. "The fact was I was so hungry for a certain thing that I forgot all about eating." He did not say what the "certain thing" was and each of the others was so busy telling his neighbor what he himself had bought that no one thought much about Bob's purchase just then.

It would not be possible fully to describe the joyous, almost boyish spirit, with which these rough-bearded men entered into the celebration of what to some of them was the first pay-day they had ever enjoyed free from the baneful influence of drink. The men forgot to talk, yes, almost forgot to eat when Mrs. Pringle and a group of temperance workers began to sing old-fashioned songs. They were such as many of the loggers had heard in their boyhood days, with the grave and the gay interspersed like the sunshine and showers of an April morning. After each song, roughened and calloused hands eagerly clapped for an encore, and the singers were gratified to observe that when they sang "Nearer My God to Thee," the applause was just as energetic as when they sang "Annie Laurie" or other songs of a general nature.

After supper the loggers went to view a temperance moving picture play that Mrs. Pringle had persuaded a local manager to put on for that particular night. For an hour and a half the men breathlessly saw all too truly pictured the lives of men who lived as they themselves lived, and drank as they themselves drank. At first there was some merriment and a whispered, "That's you, Shorty," or "That's the way you act, Red," but as the play proceeded, and it was brought home to them how men with brain or muscle weakened through drink, failed in crises that brought death to them and their fellows, or, worse still, became drunken wrecks when they should have been in the prime of life—as they saw all this thrown on the screen with a fidelity that was as brutal as such a life itself, the most joyous of them grew remorsefully silent. After the movies they went back to the coffee club where some of the boys partook of cake or pie, while some endowed with a healthier appetite, insisted on ordering a complete second supper. Then there was more singing until the men were forced to hurry off to catch their train. The sweet words of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," echoed in their ears like a benediction.

"Everybody have a good time?" asked Bert Lang as the train gathered speed and bore the men back toward their mountain home.

"Best ever," chirped Jimmy McCabe. "I have my violin at last and a new suit of clothes from my toes up, and the best of it is there will be no headache after this kind of a day!" A dozen voices joined in a gratified agreement that it had been the best pay-day ever experienced, and one after another declared his intention to enjoy more of the same kind. Bob Forest alone was silent until Bert Lang, waiting until the others were busy talking, asked quietly, "What did you buy, Bob?" Robert Forest silently slipped the cover from his purchase and showed the surprised Bert an almost new typewriter of standard make. "I gave every cent of my month's wages for it," he said, "but its purchase marks the beginning of my fight back to respectability. In my college days I used to write some, and I am going to try my hand at the art again, and I think the very first story I attempt will tell of this temperance pay-day."

WHAT IS IT TO YOU?

"'Tis nothing to me," the beauty said,
With a careless toss of her pretty head;
"The man is weak if he can't refrain
From the cup you say is fraught with pain."

It was something when, in after years,
Her eyes were drenched with burning tears,
And she watched in lonely grief and dread
And startled to hear a staggering tread.

"'Tis nothing to me," the mother said;
"I have no fear that my boy will tread
In the downward path of sin and shame
And crush my heart and darken his name."

It was something to her when her only son
From the path of right was early won,
And madly saw in the flowing bowl
A ruined body, a sin-wrecked soul.

"'Tis nothing to me," the merchant said,
As over his ledger he bent his head;
"I am busy today with tare and tret,
I have no time for fume and fret."

It was something to him when over the wire
A message came from a funeral pyre;
A drunken conductor had wrecked a train,
And his wife and child were among the slain.

"'Tis nothing to me," the voter said;
"The party's loss is my only dread."
Then he gave his vote to the liquor trade,
Though hearts were crushed and drunkards made.

It was something to him in after life;
His daughter became a drunkard's wife,
And her hungry children cried for bread,
And trembled to hear their father's tread.

It is something for us to idly sleep,
While cohorts of death their vigils keep,
To gather the young and thoughtless in,
And grind in our midst a grist of sin.

—Exchange

FLAG OF THE FREE

Oh, raise the starry banner high,
And let it wave o'er land and sea;
It stands for truth which cannot die,
The glorious emblem of the free.
Secure beneath its sheltering sway,
In safety let the people dwell,
That coming generations may
Its glory to their children tell.

Oh, raise the banner of the free,
Above the schoolhouse and the home,
And in the islands of the sea,
Across the mighty ocean's foam;

But only when in justice strong
Should freedom's banner ever wave,
It never should protect the wrong,
It never should the free enslave.

But soon we'll hail the better day
Of which our fathers never dreamed;
The dramshop outlawed, swept away,
A spotless flag, a land redeemed.
Then shall the glory of our land
Be blest to nations far abroad;
We'll give this world a helping hand,
And uplift mankind toward God.

—MATTHEW T. LINDSAY

FOR THE HONOR OF CARLTON

SUSAN M. GRIFFITH, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The two youthful combatants stood acing each other in the grounds of 'arlton Academy, resolute, defiant, roud. There were no blows struck, ept the blows of words, but no two-dged sword cut deeper or wounded nore sorely.

"Stanton Sprague," said Charles Grant, n a slow, steady, unflinching tone, cold s ice, "your father's a drunkard!"

The other responded sharply and uickly, "I know it, and your father's he man who has made him a drunkard."

The boys grouped about as witnesses ave vent to an appreciative shout.

"That's the time you got it back, 'harley," they exclaimed. "Better cry uits! You're even."

A dark flush crimsoned young Grant's ace. "Quits, nothing!" he said sullenly. Sprague's father has made himself 'hat he is; his own will has made him a ommon drunkard. He was not obliged o put a foot into my father's saloon; obody forced him to it. I say that e has made himself a low, no-account runkard, and his son has no right to ome here to Carlton as a student. This s a high-toned, high-priced school, Stan-on Sprague; you can't come here for othing, this is no charity academy. Vho's going to foot your bills? I eckon it won't be your dad."

"No, it will not be father who pays ıy school expenses," said young 'prague, in a cool, nonchalant manner nd with a pleasant smile. "But they re already paid for the whole year, so on't worry about them, Grant. I hap-en to have an uncle who has become ecurity for my education. Come, now, 'harley, let's drop this silly quarrel and e reasonable. I can't help being the on of a drunkard, and you can't help eing the son of a drunkard-maker. I now you are just as ashamed of your eritage as I am of mine. What's the se of mincing matters; let us be honest nd square and business-like about this 'hole affair, and make a solemn league nd covenant never to follow in the ootsteps of our fathers, but to climb to igher ground and make a name for urselves that shall be above disgrace. t seems to me this is the sensible thing o do. Will you clasp hands on it, 'rant? Will you?"

"I say, Charley, that's fair enough!" aid more than one of the boys. "Sprague s right. You didn't choose your dads, nd you're not to blame for what they re. Join hands and make different ıen of yourselves. It is up to you to o it, Charley—for the honor of Carlton, f not just for your own."

"Those are good words, boys, splendid vords, and I thank you," said Stanton Sprague. "For the honor of Carlton! Shall we not respond, Grant? Do let us have the strength and courage to rise above our fatal inheritance and create a new and respectable manhood. Let us help destroy the 'trail of the serpent.' Come, don't let your foolish pride have the victory, Charley; let's be friends and coöperate; take my hand and the thing is done."

For a second or two, Charles Grant still stood and studied the ground. He did not want to give way; he did not want to humble his pride by placing himself upon an equality with Sprague, whom he had scorned as an inferior, though he knew, if he had only admitted it, that, intellectually, as well as morally, Stanton was above his own level. The esteem of his school-mates, however, was to be taken into consideration; he could not afford to lose that, and he saw that they had, to a man, sided with Sprague. Then, secretly, he did really despise his father's calling. He had resolved to rise above it, to get beyond it, to get entirely away from it; and the attitude and appeal of young Sprague had shaken his very soul, and aroused all the manhood within him, it was so honorable, so manly, so noble, and it is a very low order of boy who does not appreciate a stand of that kind. So he lifted his head, stepped forward, and held out his hand. "It's a bargain, Sprague," he said, in a choked voice and with considerable effort. "You and the fellows are right. It is 'for the honor of Carlton,' and I am willing to sacrifice what I consider my rights for the school." Amid the cheers of their admiring comrades, the two lads clasped hands, and the "hatchet was buried."

This struggle between the two boys being ended, another and a more worthy one at once began. To prove which could gain the highest standing, not only as mere students, but in intellect, morals, courage, and manliness, and be a leading influence—this was the growing ambition of both. The rivalry was a pleasant one, however, for they had formed a sincere admiration and friendship for each other which was destined to endure for life.

The academy watched the two with absorbing interest; they began to be talked about; the men about town got hold of the incident, and circulated the fact that the two young students had publicly renounced the occupations and dissipated lives of their fathers, and were endeavoring to lay the foundation of an entirely different manhood. At last, the fathers of the boys were approached on the subject by a moderate drinker, as they were gathered in the saloon, together with a company of men: "I reckon you two men have heard—you, Grant, and you, Sprague—of how your boys have come down on your trade and your making sots of yourselves? It's making a big noise all over town, and their praises are in every mouth. I do say that I am mighty proud of them myself; young fellows that can make a stand like that, are worth something.

"You see, the Carlton Academy chaps are mighty proud and jealous of the honor of their fine school, and when Stanton Sprague was entered as a pupil there, your boy, Grant, came down on him pretty rough for being the son of a drunkard, and Stanton returned the compliment by calling you a drunkard-maker. So, after some pretty serious talk, they agreed to live down the shame of belonging to you two, and took a solemn vow that they would never follow in your steps; and, I tell you, they are having no end of influence over the whole school. They are even having pins made of sterling silver engraved with the words, 'For the honor of Carlton,' and no boy can wear one unless he takes the pledge of honor. I call that mighty high-toned, and you two fathers ought to be no-end proud of your sons. Everybody's talking about it, and saying if they stood in your shoes, they'd feel like mending their ways. It's made me ashamed of myself; so ashamed that I've decided to quit living the sort of life I've been leading. I ain't exactly a drunkard, but I'm a drinking man all right, and I drink a heap more today than I did a year ago, and I'll be a drunkard if I don't quit; there's no question about that. If those two boys can agree to live white for the honor of their school, I reckon I ought to do the same in honor of my wife, and my two girls, and I'm going to do it, the Lord helping me."

What a sensation this made among the frequenters of that saloon! Sprague slunk out like a whipped puppy, and went home fairly sober. As for Charley Grant's father, he looked as if he had received his death-blow. He could not look his son in the face, and after a week or two of inward struggle, he closed his saloon and entered a more respectable line of business.

Three years later, the two boys graduated from Carlton with equal honors. It was a subject of remark that, in the vast audience, side by side, sat their respective fathers, clean, honorable, respected men of business, and as their proud gaze rested upon their brilliant sons, it was said: "All this has not been just 'for the honor of Carlton'; it has been the salvation of two of the most hopeless men in town." And so it is:

A looking upward after God;
A reaching out for better things,
Draws others in its train.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention, Seattle, Washington, October 9-14, 1915

The White Ribbon Special from Chicago will be operated over the Chicago & North Western Railway and Union Pacific system through to Seattle, Wash. The special train will leave Chicago on the following schedule, subject to slight changes:

Lv. Chicago	7:15 PM	Tuesday,	Oct. 5	C&NW
Ar. Omaha	7:45 AM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	C&NW
Lv. Omaha	8:15 AM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Ar. North Platte	3:30 PM CT	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Lv. North Platte	2:45 PM MT	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Ar. Cheyenne	8:30 PM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Lv. Cheyenne	10:30 PM	Wednesday,	Oct. 6	UPRR
Lv. Granger	7:15 AM	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OSL
Lv. Pocatello	1:45 PM	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OSL
Ar. Huntington	11:45 PM MT	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OSL
Lv. Huntington	11:00 PM PT	Thursday,	Oct. 7	OWR&N
Ar. Pendleton	6:30 AM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Lv. Pendleton	7:30 AM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Ar. The Dalles	11:30 Noon	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Lv. The Dalles	12:00 Noon	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Ar. Portland	3:00 PM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Lv. Portland	11:00 PM	Friday,	Oct. 8	OWR&N
Ar. Seattle	6:00 AM	Saturday,	Oct. 9	OWR&N

(Occupying sleepers until 7:30 AM)

$62.50 is the round trip fare via the route of the special train. No extra charge for privilege of traveling via Denver and Ogden (including free side trip to Salt Lake City) either on going or returning trip. A choice variety of other routes returning is available.

$80.00 is the round trip fare via the route of the special train, returning by way of California, affording an opportunity to visit the Expositions at San Francisco and San Diego.

In either case the final limit of tickets will be December 31, 1915. They must be validated at destination, not to exceed one day in advance of departure of passenger, for which a fee of 50 cents will be collected by joint agent who will attach validation certificate to ticket. Tickets may also be validated at certain points intermediate to destination, information concerning which will be furnished on request.

The sleeping car rates from Chicago to Seattle on the special train are as follows:

Standard lower berth	$13.00
" upper berth	10.40
" compartment	36.00
" drawing room	46.00
Tourist lower berth	6.75
" upper berth	5.40

Oneonta Gorge, Oneonta, Oregon, To Be Seen from the Union Pacific System

Two persons may occupy a lower or an upper berth at the same cost as for one person. Two, three or four persons may occupy a compartment or drawing room, thereby reducing the per capita sleeping car rate for such accommodations.

Further information as to authorized routes, sleeping car rates, etc., will be gladly furnished by addressing H. A. Gross, General Agent Passenger Department, Chicago & North Western Ry., 148 South Clark street, Chicago.

Route of Travel From Chicago

Special train, which will consist of the highest class of equipment, open section, compartment, drawing room, tourist, dining and observation cars, will leave from the magnificent new terminal station of the Chicago & North Western Railway, corner Madison and Canal streets, Chicago, at which terminal will be found all the conveniences for comfort that any traveler may expect. A large portion of this commodious and palatial terminal is devoted exclusively to the convenience and comfort of ladies. There will be found rest rooms, tea rooms, private bath rooms (the use of the latter at a nominal charge of 25 cents); even an emergency hospital service, in case one is fatigued or ill and desires rest under the competent care of trained nurses.

Booklet descriptive of this wonderful terminal and the facilities offered its patrons will be sent upon request. Address C. A. Cairns, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago & North Western Ry., Chicago.

We use the double-track line of the North Western Line from Chicago, passing through the beautiful suburban district of Illinois, crossing the Mississippi river at Clinton, Iowa, and thence through the wonderful industrial, manufacturing and agricultural centers of Iowa and Nebraska; crossing the Missouri river at Council Bluffs, Omaha; thence through the Platte Valley of Nebraska, passing in succession the populous towns of Fremont, Grand Island, North Platte, Julesburg, Sidney, and Cheyenne, at which latter point a stop of two hours will be made, affording an opportunity for delegates coming from Denver and other points to join the special train at Cheyenne.

The route of the Special, the country traversed and the historic and scenic points of interest, will be referred to in detail in other issues of THE UNION SIGNAL, and long before the time of the meeting our members will be familiar with the territory through which the special train passes.

The route we have selected was the pioneer line from Chicago not only to Omaha and Denver, but Salt Lake City, Ogden and San Francisco, and is today the shortest line of travel between Chicago and the Pacific Coast. Over this route are operated more transcontinental trains than on any other. It is the route of the celebrated "Overland Limited," the only exclusively first-class daily train operated by any line between Chicago and San Francisco and saving in time one full business day.

This route of travel is protected by more miles of automatic electric block safety signal device than any other western line; in fact, every inch of the way is protected by safety signals, and the road bed is simply incomparable.

Arrangements are now being made for a special train from Seattle and Portland to San Francisco, stopping en route at Salem and Albany, Oregon, where the members will meet the Governor and other state officials. The party will remain over Sunday at Roseburg.

Full particulars of the special train arrangement from Seattle to San Francisco and the sleeping car cost will be given in later announcements.

PROHIBITION BREEZES FROM NEW JERSEY

Special Correspondence

"It has been contended by the secretary of a Paterson, N. J., brewing company that Billy Sunday had nothing to do with the recent closing of thirty-three saloons in that city. He says some of them went out of business before Mr. Sunday arrived in Paterson and the end of the others was decided upon by the excise commissioners several months ago." So reads an editorial in the Newark Sunday Call, which adds, "A more significant part of his statement is the claim that brewers wanted objectionable saloons closed and had long been working to that end. A companion to this claim is found in The Outlook. The writer says he saw a letter written by an Oregon brewer stating that the triumph of the prohibitionists in that state was due in part to the low character of saloon keepers who were the selling agents of the brewers. The writer gave this as a warning to his fellow brewers in other states. It will not be doubted that the warning will be heeded. Eighteen states have adopted Prohibition and others are soon to vote on the question."

On July 4 one hundred speeches were made in one hundred cities and towns of New Jersey by speakers of wide reputation, under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League.

The union at Passaic, N. J., is erecting in front of its hall a drinking fountain, which when completed is to be presented to the city with appropriate ceremonies.

The New Jersey state convention is to be held in September at Montclair.

At the summer institute at Ocean Grove, July 20-21, addresses are to be given by Dr. Anna Shaw, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and Mr. Donald Laurie, private secretary of Thomas Mott Osborne, the noted warden of Sing Sing prison, who is to speak on "Common Sense in Prison Reform."

New unions are constantly being organized throughout the state. Many unions are carrying on successful poster campaigns, while others are specializing in the securing of suffrage speakers. Everywhere New Jersey is wide awake, and the increase in prohibition sentiment is most encouraging.

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

GERMAN TEMPERANCE LITERATURE.

The following German pamphlets are issued to help enlist as many as possible of the German-Americans in the fight against the drink habit and the liquor traffic. They appeal to them in their native tongue and on lines which will most easily influence them. Speed the cause of national prohibition by distributing these pamphlets widely.

1. "THE BIBLE AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE." 32 pages, 2d edition, ten thousand now issued. Price 5c each, 25c a doz., $1.59 a hundred, postpaid.
2. "THE GERMANS AND THE DRINK QUESTION." 8 pages, forty thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a dozen, 50c a hundred, postpaid, $4.00 a thousand by express.
3. "CHRISTIANITY AND PROHIBITION." 8 pages, twenty thousand now issued. Same price as No. 2.
4. "THE AIMS AND RESULTS OF PROHIBITION." 12 pages, 3d edition, thirty-five thousand now issued. Price 2c each, 10c a doz., 65c a hundred, postpaid, $5.00 a thousand by express.

Of this last a new revised edition has just left the press. It also embodies the latest statistics and statements concerning prohibition in Kansas by the Governors, Stubbs, Hodges and Capper and by the legislature of the state. Send orders to

J. G. EVERT, BOX B, HILLSBORO, KANS.

Michigan Comrades Gather at the "Soo"

REJOICE IN GAIN IN MEMBERSHIP OF 2,263

Special Correspondence

The forty-first convention of the Michigan W. C. T. U. was held in Sault Ste Marie in June. Only once before in the history of the Michigan union has it met above the straits. "Beautiful for situation" is this city, lying as it does on the St. Mary's River near the outlet of Lake Superior, and famous it is for St. Mary's Falls canal with its immense locks—the largest ship canal in the world. Nearly three times as many boats pass through this canal annually as through Suez Canal. The delightful trip, the beautiful surroundings, the invigorating climate, the loyalty of the delegation to the cause we represent, and the cordial hospitality of the "Soo" people gave assurance from the first that this was to be the banner meeting of the Michigan W. C. T. U., and white ribboners realized more than ever before the meaning of the words given them by the president of the Michigan W. C. T. U., and so often repeated:

"Michigan, Michigan, lakes galore,
Timber, copper, iron ore,
Salt and sugar, fruits to can,
No other state like Michigan."

The atmosphere of the convention was "happy co-operation," a united body with one object—state-wide prohibition in November, 1916. Forty years of organization has seen a growth of from thirty unions in 1875 to 439 unions with 15,261 members in 1915. Notwithstanding discouragements, belated dues, and the failure of certain local unions to pay dues, we shall go up to the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Seattle rejoicing in the magnificent net gain of 2,263 members, singing as we go:

"Wolverines, wolverines, here are we,
Taking part in the jubilee;
Standing solid in the van.
Michigan, my Michigan."

The program was full of interest from the first stroke of the gavel to the farewell song. Rev. Etta Shaw delivered the Sunday sermon and Mrs. Edith Smith Davis a masterful address Sunday evening to a full house, her subject being, "The Vision the World Needs."

Speakers filled all pulpits on Sunday morning. Services in charge of Mrs. Webb, superintendent of Jail and Prison work, were held in the jail. A banquet and welcome addresses filled Wednesday evening, when magnificent music was furnished by Professor Holgate and his splendid vested choir from the Canadian Soo. A diamond medal contest was held Thursday evening, and forty-three members were gained for the hostess union. At a platform meeting held Friday evening, Mrs. E. L. Calkins told of the hearing on the Hobson resolution and the attitude of Michigan in Congress. She said, "We have many reasons to be proud of our state, not the least of which is that in the third session of the sixty-third Congress all but two members from Michigan voted for prohibition." Mrs. Maude Glasner spoke on "Alcohol a Racial Poison." "Alcohol is a fertilizer for a crop of wild oats," she asserted. Mrs. French recited "The Legend Beautiful," and Miss Sproule told of her work as missionary in New Ontario, Canada.

Saturday evening a demonstration of each department was given. Uncle Sam was at the tub and showed the growth of the dry states on the line. The most striking feature of all was the march of the counties—the wet ones dressed in black, the dry in white—each led by the president of the district. Two entire districts were white and were led by Mrs. Calkins and Mrs. Carley. The state is nearly two-thirds dry As a close to the evening's entertainment the entire delegation sang from the platform the song composed by a county president, Mrs. Zella Barnhard, and sung to the tune, "Tipperary":

"The temperance men of Michigan and women, so they say,
Have united all their forces to put whisky out the way;
So to the liquor business,
They have loudly said goodnight;
And we'll not give up the battle,
Until Michigan is white.

Chorus:

"Oh it's glory! hallelujah! our state is going dry,
Oh sing glory! hallelujah! this shall be our battle cry;
So goodbye, Mr. Brewer, farewell whisky, too,
In the great, wide state we love so dearly,
There is no place for you."

Fine work has been done all along the line. Twenty-three counties gained more than fifty members. Chippewa, the hostess county, made the greatest gain. Lapeer county takes the banner for the largest net gain. Pontiac, Oakland county, has the largest local union.

The state W. C. T. U. officers for the new year are: Mrs. E. L. Calkins, president; Mrs. Stella B. Roben, vice-president; Mrs. Norma Mudge, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Myrta E. Lockwood, recording secretary; Mrs. Matie W. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. Lenora Holcomb is the L. T. L. secretary and Mrs. Agnes Rich Y. P. B. secretary.

Seventy-three members were added to the "Soo" union during the convention.

Twenty saloons in Pueblo, Colo., closed their doors July 1, rather than take out licenses for the remaining six months before the state-wide prohibitory measure goes into effect.

By a vote of two to one, Washington township, Ind., outside of Martinsville, voted dry at a local option election July 2.

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

MASSACHUSETTS' AIM MORE SUBSCRIBERS TO OFFICIAL PAPERS

Massachusetts is endeavoring to increase the number of subscribers to the official papers. It is hoped that its progress in that direction may compare favorably with its efforts to add to its membership which has grown in marked degree during the past few months.

The largest county W. C. T. U. in the state recently adopted a rule that each local union must subscribe for at least one copy of the weekly UNION SIGNAL for its officers, and the state has set aside a philanthropy fund, which is to be used to send the Campaign Edition of THE SIGNAL for one year to each local union in the state whose officers are not upon the list of subscribers, this to include sending the Y. P. B. edition to each new Young People's Branch in the state.

In order to influence sentiment the Campaign Edition is also sent to ministers and to educators in places where there is no local temperance society.

The Young Crusader is sent by many of the local unions to the L. T. L's and also to the grade school teachers to assist them in teaching scientific temperance.

We are thus endeavoring to do our best to aid the temperance cause by furnishing the tools necessary to accomplish the spread of prohibition sentiment throughout our state.

WHAT OUR FRIENDS SAY

Find herewith two subscriptions for the weekly edition and fifteen for the Campaign edition of THE UNION SIGNAL from Yutan, Nebraska. This is a small town of six or seven hundred population. The union has thirty paid-up members, representing twenty-five families, and THE UNION SIGNAL has a place in sixteen of these. Oh, the inspiration THE SIGNAL brings each week! What would it mean to our campaign if every union in Nebraska followed the example of Yutan.—Nebraska Subscriber

I am always talking our National papers and I find that the union that does not accomplish things is the one that does not take and read THE UNION SIGNAL. I could not get along without it, nor could any up-to-date reform and temperance worker.

Mrs. Nettie R. Chipp, president Southern Idaho W. C. T. U.

"I am enclosing check for $1.00 for THE UNION SIGNAL to be sent to an old subscriber. Bless our paper! It enriches the moral and spiritual atmosphere of every home it enters. I have a vision of a time in the near future when THE UNION SIGNAL shall be taken by every woman who wears the white ribbon. Those who cannot 'win one' should donate a copy to a comrade who is unable to pay her subscription."

A SUBSCRIBER AT WAYNESBURG, PA.

PUSHING PROHIBITION PLANS IN SOUTH CAROLINA

State Votes September 14

MRS. J. L. MIMS

South Carolina is in a campaign for state-wide prohibition, the first in her history. The prohibitionists and church people are sure of victory in the conflict. The W. C. T. U. is working along many lines.

A most beautiful spectacular entertainment, in which one hundred and twenty-five persons had a part, took place in the Edgefield Opera House in April when the cantata, "A Saloonless Nation in 1920," was given. There were various groups in costume, the different nationalities and classes of people in the United States appearing in their own distinctive dress, and even the suffragists, most gorgeously arrayed, saying from a South Carolina platform, "We want woman suffrage; we want a saloonless nation and a stainless flag."

Just before the presentation of the cantata, by way of advertising and for the purpose of arousing public interest, a poster parade was arranged, in which over a hundred boys and girls, led by three drummer boys with their instruments, took part. This demonstration created quite a sensation, and the people had plainly put before them many striking facts. The merchants expressed views favorable to the prohibition question in the following striking and terse statements: "Eat more bread and drink less booze," and, "We believe in National Prohibition." An enthusiastic Flower Mission meeting, an afternoon song service, "The Saving of Daddy," given in the first Baptist church, a membership contest, and many other activities are making sentiment. Gatherings of all kinds are taking advantage of the opportunity to present the subject of prohibition and temperance, and prohibition speakers are being placed upon every program of both women's meetings and mixed assemblies.

At a recent executive session in Columbia of the South Carolina Woman's Missionary Union, the largest organized body of women in the state, resolutions for state-wide prohibition were unanimously adopted, and the programs prepared and furnished by the South Carolina W. C. T. U. were accepted and sent out from the W. M. U. headquarters. This was also done by the Methodist Woman's Missionary Conference. Programs will be given all over the state at union services of all denominations. In addition, at the larger district and county gatherings of these same bodies the subject will be considered.

Mrs. Joseph Sprott, our state president, goes to Allendale in a few days to make preparations for the state convention.

A very successful membership contest was held at Aiken, one of the dispensary strongholds; sixty-eight new members were gained and there is said to be great change of sentiment in the county, which is thoroughly organized under the efficient leadership of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Augusta Fly is president of the Aiken union.

Thirty-two thousand prohibition buttons have been ordered for voters whom it is the aim to enlist on our side of the fight.

A series of medal contests and song contests has been arranged by one county, and the contestants will visit the community centers with a view to making prohibition sentiment.

Have you heard the great prohibition song, Count On Me? 90,000 sold. Send ten cents for 96 page hymn book containing it. Wm. H. Marks, 1603 West St., Wilmington, Delaware.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

PROGRAM MATERIAL

FOR YOUNG CRUSADER SUBSCRIPTION DAY

Birthday of Anna Adams Gordon
July Twenty-first

Life Sketch of Miss Gordon by Eva Kilbreth Foster
Price 3 cents each; per 100, $1.00

Five Little Glimpses of Anna A. Gordon
Price 2 cents each; per 100, 35 cents

Biographical Sketch of Miss Gordon, by Mrs. Mary Tomlinson
Price 10 cents each

Young Crusader, June and July issues
Price 5 cents each; per 100, $1.50

Song—The Children's Happy Day
Price 5 cents

Latest Photograph of Miss Gordon
Price 50 cents

Young Crusader Subscription Songs (words only), adapted to popular airs, furnished for postage, 10 cents per 100

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

NEW LEAFLETS

For General Distribution

The Brewer's Slaves (Illustrated)
Behind the Bars for Life
Prohibition's Effect Upon Revenue and Business
Size 6x9 inches
Price per 50, 12 cents; per 100, 20 cents
Consumption of Liquor Decreasing Drink and Divorce
Size 3½x6 inches
Price per 50, 10 cents; per 100, 15 cents

POSTER LEAFLET SERIES

Reproductions of posters in small leaflet form

1. Which Will You Protect?
2. Do You Know These Facts?
3. Alcohol
4. Beer
5. Drink Robs the Working Man
6. The License Voter Gets What?
7. Attention Voters!
8. Figures Tell
9. Saloons Increase Taxes
10. The Trouble Manufacturing Co.
11. Compare These Figures
12. Boys and Girls
13. Not by My Vote
14. State Prohibition and Local Option
15. Railroads and Alcoholic Liquors
16. The Factory and Alcoholic Liquors
17. The Man Who Drinks
18. A Business Proposition
19. The Liquor Traffic Must Go

Price per 100, 10 cents

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

"High Joe" or The Logger's Story
By J. BURRITT SMITH
Striking, pathetic, convincing—and a vote-maker. Called "The Uncle Tom's Cabin of the Temperance Reform." Sixteen editions issued.
Paper, 35c; cloth, $1.00
Busy World Publishing Co.
22 S. Henry St. Madison, Wis.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI EVANSTON, ILL., JULY 22, 1915 No. 30

NATIONAL PROHIBITION WILL BENEFIT LABOR

IRVING FISHER

Professor of Political Economy at Yale University

Economically the workmen lose immensely more than they gain by the existence of the liquor industry. The fallacy of the workmen in this, as in many other fields, is what we call in economics the "make-work" fallacy.

The "make-work" fallacy arises in this case from the fact that it seems to the workman, if the alcohol business continues, so many jobs will thereby be kept in existence—that is, that so many jobs will be "made"—whereas if this business is prohibited so many jobs will cease to be. But the workman does not stop to remember that the money now spent for alcohol, would, if the business were prohibited, be spent for something else, and that whatever that something else was must also be produced, and must therefore employ labor.

The workman would not only not be injured by prohibition, but he would be benefited by the wiping away of all the liquor industries. He would be benefited:

First, by saving him from the physiological poison of alcohol, thus increasing his working (and therefore producing or earning) capacity.

Second, it would lengthen life and increase the working period of life for workmen.

Third, it would save for productive and useful ends the vast amount of grain and grapes which are now worse than wasted. Whatever is saved to society as a whole is saved to labor as well.

Fourth, it would enable the workmen now engaged in these lines to turn their attention to producing in other more useful and more beneficial directions.

Even the dislocation which would be caused by sweeping away the production of alcohol is, I believe, much less than workingmen imagine, for many of the industries associated with the production of alcohol could be continued without much jar by adapting them to somewhat related lines.

—The Outlook

ALCOHOL, THE DESTROYER

DR. GOLDWATER
Commissioner of Health for New York

Alcohol impairs the tone of the muscles and lessens the product of laborers; it depreciates the skill and endurance of artisans; it impairs memory, multiplies industrial accidents, causes chronic diseases of the heart, liver, stomach and kidneys, increases the death rate from pneumonia and lessens natural immunity from infectious diseases.

PROHIBITION TESTED FOR A QUARTER OF A CENTURY

JUDGE CHARLES A. POLLOCK TELLS HOW IT CONVERTS ITS ENEMIES

"The sentiment of the business men of North Dakota has changed. They have found that money can be made without the help of the liquor traffic," says Judge Charles A. Pollock, in an article on "A Quarter Century of Prohibition in North Dakota," published recently in The Christian Advocate of New York. "It is interesting to hear those who spoke loudest for the saloon now declare their opposition to its return. Indeed, they see and admit that conditions are better without than with the sale of intoxicating liquor; that rents have increased rather than diminished, and general prosperity prevails."

Of the growth of the state under the prohibition law, Judge Pollock says:

"When prohibition was adopted in North Dakota, we had a population of about 180,000. It was urged that if the prohibitory system was engrafted upon our statute books, the state would not develop. This statement, like others from the saloon source, has been shown to be untrue. We now have a population of about seven hundred thousand, and the per capita wealth of our people is approximately two thousand dollars—the highest of any state in the union. South Dakota, when admitted to the Union, had something like two hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants. After having had prohibition for four or five years it returned to the license system. That state now has a population of less than six hundred thousand. With us as the saloon interests decrease in a community, the banks and trust companies increase. The last reports from our banking interests show a constant and healthy development, the aggregate deposits mounting up into the millions. Statements of the banks in Fargo alone show an aggregate of about ten million dollars. Fargo has grown from a city of six thousand under the license system to one of twenty thousand under the prohibitory. It has all modern improvements, like heat, water works, paved streets, street cars, electric lights and every convenience attendant upon city life."

Insisting that prohibition has been a wonderful success, Judge Pollock gives interesting facts to prove it:

"Many of those who were most bitterly opposed to prohibition have been won over and are now planted firmly upon the side of the present system, convinced, it is true, against their will, but now firm in their new position because they cannot put aside what they see and know to have been fully demonstrated. They have in a large number of cases been manly enough to step forward and give utterance to the unshaken faith which they now possess. They declare that under no considerations ought we to permit the saloon to return to our borders. I have the written statement of most of our leading business men, speaking from their special viewpoint of the beneficial effects of prohibition. Many of them were determined opposers of prohibition when it was adopted. Under these conditions it is the height of impudence for the liquor men to assert that our law has been a failure, and, therefore, we ought to cause its repeal. If it is a failure it is because liquor has been sold in larger quantities, and if that be true the vendors of such liquor do violence to their own interests by attempting to destroy such a valuable field in which to carry on their traffic. The simple answer is that prohibition has been a marvelous success. One method usually adopted by the liquor men in discussing the question is to find some spot in our state where law enforcement has not been very successful, exploit that through the press and insinuate that the whole state is alike affected, therefore a failure. As well might you say that a person is a cripple and of no vital force simply because upon one finger is a wart. The warts upon our body politic are fast disappearing, and if the people at large will pass the National Constitutional Amendment, making it unlawful to manufacture and sell intoxicating liquors as a beverage, we will then prove to the people of this country that North Dakota will be among the very first to demonstrate fully the great blessings attendant upon living under the prohibitory system.

"One result of prohibition in North Dakota has been that many persons who formerly sold liquor have been forced out of a bad business and are now respected citizens engaged in legitimate employments. Many such cases have occurred. I know one man who was about down and out, when he was finally thrust out of the saloon trade, and today is probably worth over a half million dollars made in a legitimate business. Besides, he has the respect of, and has been honored politically by his neighbors and friends. Big of heart, his hand is always open to aid the needy, and the greatest enjoyment comes to him in helping to advance the best interests of the state. In a private letter to me he said: 'In response to what you ask about prohibition in our city (Fargo) and state, let me say that in my judgment it was a fortunate day when the prohibition law was adopted. When the question of changing from a license system to prohibition was first proposed in 1884, and for several years afterward, I was bitterly opposed to prohibition, but I am now glad that the change was made and there is no man in the state of North Dakota that would fight the return of the saloon in any guise stronger than I would, should the occasion arise, and I do not believe the people of North Dakota will ever permit the saloon's return to our state.' These words speak volumes.

"Where can the license system furnish such a fine example of redeemed manhood? That system which makes men and places them where they and their families can attain advancement morally, intellectually and financially ought to be preferred by every true lover of our republic."

BUSINESS MEN OF SOUTH CAROLINA MAKE APPEAL FOR PROHIBITION

An appeal to the voters of the state of South Carolina, issued by the Business Men's Volunteer Committee, is being favorably commented upon by the papers of the state as logical, dispassionate and convincing in its arguments. It asks the earnest consideration of the people to the fact that "Prohibition is no longer a debatable issue in our politics, because it is now seen to be a factor of first importance in the promotion of the industrial efficiency of our people and the fullest development of our resources.

"The idea of a stable commercial prosperity being based upon the sale of liquors is contrary to a proper conception of business, as well as being incorrect from an economic standpoint. The highest development of business proceeds from economical utilization of all the resources of the state, the greatest resources being sober, vigorous, productive citizens.

"Alcohol as a beverage has been prohibited by some of the nations at war because their armies must have the highest degree of alertness to be efficient. That being true of war, why should not the business of achieving happiness or wealth, or both, have the same consideration?

Economic Argument

"The use of liquors unfits a man for business, impairs his health, beclouds his mind, shakes his resolution, loosens his moral fibre. We especially urge young men to contemplate this, not only as we represent it, but as it is illustrated in numberless instances. Such indulgence being without benefit, and an almost certain obstacle to advancement in the competition of business, they would be wise to abstain absolutely.

"We hope the men of the state will consider this question carefully in its relation to the happiness, productiveness and efficiency of our people on the one hand, and the prevention of waste of great sums of money and the toll of unhappiness which attends it, on the other."

Alcohol Potent Factor in Causing Insanity

The physicians are dealing solar plexus blows at John Barleycorn nowadays and no class of men are better informed from actual knowledge of his true character. The part he plays in driving far too large a fraction of the human family into the insane asylums was testified to last week by Dr. C. C. Ellis of the state infirmary at Dunning, Ill., in a meeting of alienists and neurologists being held in Chicago.

"Alcoholism brings on one of the worst forms of insanity and the alcoholic patient is one of the most dangerous," said Dr. Ellis. "It is impossible to record the number of assassinations, murders and suicides due to alcoholism."

"From the victories achieved by public hygiene over the scourges of smallpox, typhoid fever and tuberculosis," continued the speaker, "I feel that it is only a few short steps to the efficient control of alcoholism. Some cataclysm equal to the European war may be necessary to loosen the last hold of the commercialized aspect of it.

"This war has subjected alcoholism to a stupendous test and it has been found wanting. If it is personal liberty we cherish, we can forego at least this much to set our weaker brother and his children free and lessen our own burdens as his keeper."

Prohibition Well Enforced in Arizona

"There has been a development of a trait of character in Arizonians greatly to their credit," comments The Arizona Republican—"a disposition to obey the law, even though they may not like it. We have the case of a prominent Yavapai citizen in mind who actively opposed prohibition last fall. He does not yet believe that it is the best thing for the state, but after the law was passed he declined to follow the example of many citizens who laid up a private stock of liquors against a rainy day, for while that was not forbidden by the law, the law contemplated an abandonment of liquor drinking. This citizen is now one of the most ardent advocates of the enforcement of the law.

"The enforcement of the prohibition amendment appears to be proceeding in all parts of the state, notwithstanding the fear that in those counties where the sentiment is not very pronounced in favor of prohibition, the administration of the law would be rather lax. There were, by the way, only four counties which cast majorities for prohibition. In two counties—Cochise and Yavapai—the majorities against it were heavy. Yet those two counties are taking the lead in its enforcement. We mean, rather, that in those counties more convictions have been obtained than in any other. That may be the result, in part only, of the vigilance of officials and, in part, of the early, mistaken assumption by law-breakers that the majority sentiment in those counties would be with them.

"Greenlee county also voted against prohibition, but the law is being applied vigorously there. We believe that officers everywhere are generally vigilant and earnest in their efforts to make prohibition prohibit.

"This is the more remarkable in view of the fact that the amendment without supplementary legislation leaves officers almost free to do as they please."

Prohibition Empties the Jail

"It has surprised even the strongest advocates of prohibition to see the effect that law has had in preventing crimes and misdemeanors in Greenlee county," says the Clifton (Ariz.) Journal.

"For many years the courts of this county have been occupied with a multiplicity of cases, mostly resulting from booze, and the several justice courts have been kept busy sentencing prisoners to jail or fining them. For years the jails have been crowded to capacity and the fines have often run close to $1,000 in a single justice court in one month. But conditions have changed since the first of the year. The jail has been empty at some places a good share of the time; cases have been few and far between, and most of them were slight misdemeanors."

John Barleycorn the Primary Cause of Crime

"The curse of the use of liquor has been shown to be the primary cause of many of the minor crimes, and also of the more serious ones—even murder—the large number of which would never have been committed otherwise."

The above is not an excerpt from a temperance orator's address; nor a resolution passed by a prohibition society. It is a paragraph from the report of the June grand jury of Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania.

The jury's bitter condemnation of the liquor business was made after an inspection of all public institutions in the city, a careful survey of inmates of asylums, jails and reform institutions and observations of more than seven hundred cases coming before them.

Du Pont Powder Plants Forbid Booze

The use of intoxicating liquor by employes of the Du Pont Powder Company at Carneys Point, N. J., has been prohibited as part of a program to insure efficiency of workmen and to prevent Pennsgrove from becoming a mecca of crooks and "floaters."

Hereafter workmen seeking employment either as common or skilled laborers will be subjected to a critical physical and mental examination. "A man with a bottle of whisky in his possession" says an official of the company, "is as dangerous around a powder plant as a bomb thrower."

Cannot Give Away Liquor in West Virginia

It is a violation of the Yost prohibition law to give away intoxicating drinks in West Virginia. Criminal and circuit courts of McDowell county have so decreed, and the supreme court of the state has upheld their decision. The case in point is that of Don Tittivi, who handed a bottle of beer from the window of a passenger train to a friend upon the depot platform as the train stood at the Kimball station in McDowell county. The criminal court of the county found the defendant guilty and he was sentenced to sixty days in jail and fined $100. The circuit court of McDowell county, to which he appealed, affirmed the former decision, and not long since the supreme court of the state refused Tittivi a writ of error, thereby affirming the action of the other courts.

Two More Minnesota Counties Outlaw Liquor Traffic

On Monday, July 12, four Minnesota counties voted on the liquor question, Freeborn and Anoka counties casting their ballots against the saloon. Sherburne is claimed by both sides, but Goodhue county seems to have given a majority for the liquorites. By the election ten brewery branches and three wholesale houses are put out of business at once; the thirteen saloons involved have six months grace. This makes forty-three counties dry by county option.

Cleveland's Health Commissioner Approves Dr. Goldwater's Anti-Alcohol Campaign

"Teaching the effects of alcohol is a public health function, and the New York health department's attitude in this matter is entirely proper from every standpoint," Health Commissioner C. E. Ford, of Cleveland, Ohio, is reported to have said the other day, in defending the policy of Dr. Goldwater. "There is nothing more important than this question," continued Dr. Ford. "Our department cannot take up this work because of the press of other duties, but I see no reason to criticize Dr. Goldwater for the stand he has taken.

Ohio Sunday Schools Enthusiastic for Prohibition

The 9,000 Sunday schools of Ohio are enlisted to outlaw John Barleycorn from the state next November. At the state Sunday school convention held in June the following ringing resolution was unanimously and enthusiastically passed:

"The whole force of this great organization, touching 1,500,000 attendants upon the 9,000 Sunday schools of this state, should be thrown with terrific and persistent energy against the saloons of Ohio.

"An ancient orator closed every address he made, no matter what the theme, with the ominous sentence, 'Carthage must be destroyed! Carthage must be destroyed!'

"We suggest that a motto be placed on the wall of every Sunday school, and that at the close of each session from now until the vote in November it be used as a 'death shout!'

"After the dismissal let the school stand at attention and, with the superintendent leading, salute the Stars and Stripes and shout in unison. 'The saloon must go!'"

Des Moines' Prohibition Experiment Successful

Interesting data has been collected by the police force of the city of Des Moines, Iowa, concerning the effects of the operation of the prohibition law. As reported by the Council Bluffs Nonpareil they are as follows:

"First and foremost there has been a big decrease in court costs. There has been a large decrease in the cost of prosecution for crime. Arrests for drunkenness have decreased more than one-half. Perhaps the most significant fact disclosed in the record is that only about one-half as many applications for divorce have been registered during the time since the saloons were closed as were docketed during an equal number of months before the dry regime began."

CALIFORNIA FACING TOWARD PROHIBITION—STATE CONVENTION LAYS BROAD PLANS FOR VICTORY

MRS. DORCAS J. SPENCER, Alameda, Calif.

California now has a blind pig abatement law giving the same power of abating a nuisance of that kind that the red light law gives for abatement of illegal practice under that act, and has another good law making possession of an internal revenue receipt prima facie evidence of guilt in certain dry territory. The name of another bill passed has a queer sound—"Prohibiting sale of liquor at school-houses," but it is not so strange as it would appear. Under the state law school-houses may be used under certain restrictions for the purposes of a social center, thus providing opportunities that are often needed in rural districts. In some out-of-the-way place a neighborhood party had been given in a school-house and according to usage elsewhere, wine and beer had been sold. This naturally startled some people; hence, the law.

The work of one legislature is hardly over until work in the next is under consideration. The defeat of the prohibition amendment last year did not interrupt the effort to secure dry ground under the local option law. Two supervisoral districts of Monterey county, two in Fresno county and one in Mendocino all voted dry, making the latter county all dry except its four incorporated towns. In several other counties the wets have brought on an election, hoping to overcome the dry vote of the preceding election. In all such, the dry majority has increased.

Interest has centered in the state convention held at Fresno, June 2, to plan for the next state-wide prohibition campaign. Fresno is practically at the center of the state, and about 600 accredited delegates from forty counties assembled there from near and far, representing all the varied temperance organizations, and discussed with most intense earnestness every plan presented. The personnel of the meeting was striking for it was made up of representative men and women from all walks of life—thinking people. The recent lieutenant governor of the state, Hon. A. J. Wallace, presided, and Congressman Randall served as vice-chairman.

After full, free and thorough discussion of many plans, it was decided to offer for submission to the people two constitutional amendments. The first, amendment "A," provides for absolute prohibition, January 1, 1920. The other, amendment "B," will close all saloons and bottle houses, and will prohibit the selling or keeping of liquor in any place of public resort after January 1, 1918. These were adopted by a majority and then by motion of members representing the minority it was made unanimous and is harmoniously accepted by the various elements of the Dry Federation. This means work for all concerned—for a long pull, a strong pull, and a steady pull, as well as a pull together!

The season of greatest activity in the unions is now interrupted by the annual vacations in the cities, and the resistless demands of the ripened fruit in the country. In this fruit growing state, fruit has the right of way when its harvest time comes.

The great exposition is bringing tourists from everywhere and it is good to know that the booth of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in the Educational Building, is an active missionary and educational factor. Miss Brown, with her local assistants, entertains and instructs throngs of people every day.

The death of our state treasurer, Mrs. I. M. Holston, like the passing of the National treasurer about the same time, has been a painful shock to our women. Mrs. Holston was a woman of exceptional aptitude for her office, and a sister well beloved for the Christian graces that adorned her life. Her place is filled for the remainder of the year by Mrs. Ina Orvis, who had long been the state auditor.

It was not good news that the state of Washington is to dump its biggest brewery on California when it goes out of business under the prohibition amendment, and it looked somewhat rash to our hopeful reformers when a very large sum was paid for a site in San Francisco, but it transpires that the great building now under construction by the brewing company before mentioned, is being erected on plans drawn for a great cold storage plant, but it will receive the machinery and apparatus for making beer, when the Washington law takes effect, and go on with the business until California also shall prohibit the manufacture of its product when presto! change! it will be ready for cold storage. Truly, the brewer is getting "cold feet," and chills.

Mrs. D. S. Dickson, for seven years president of Sonoma, a rich wine growing county, where her fine efficiency and devotion were strong influences for righteousness, has been promoted to her heavenly home. In 1892 a state department of Work for the World's Union was established with Mrs. Dickson as superintendent, in which her broad vision and ardent enthusiasm enlisted the interest of others in the world-wide mission of the white ribboners.

WHEN EQUAL FRANCHISE WINS

(Air—"Battle Hymn of the Republic")

O'er the fairest hills of promise, comes a sound of victory song,
'Tis the Jubilata chorus of a great advancing throng,
'Tis the onward march of progress of a people free and strong
When Equal Franchise wins.

CHORUS

Victory of Equal Franchise,
Victory of Equal Franchise,
Victory of Equal Franchise,
When votes for women win.

See the scales of justice balanced, and the torch of truth held high,
See a stainless flag reflected, in a purity of sky,
Hushed the voice of nation's wailing, and the fearful battle cry,
When Equal Franchise Wins.

Comes the laugh of happy childhood, from its birth-right land of play,
Comes the tramp of youthful footsteps over life's unfettered way,
Comes the parenthood rejoicing in the home's protecting sway,
When Equal Franchise Wins.

—Georgia Barnard Weaton.

(Written for Otsego County (N. Y.) Convention.)

INDEPENDENCE DAY AT FT. WAYNE

Ft. Wayne, Ind., was the scene on Independence Day of a monster temperance demonstration under the auspices of the Associated Christian workers and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The big event of the morning was a temperance parade, the greatest ever witnessed in the city, in which 120 floats and gaily bedecked automobiles and vehicles participated. The line of march through the business and southwestern residence districts of Ft. Wayne was thronged with spectators. The afternoon and evening celebration was at Foster park, where the city and visiting bands provided stirring music. Upwards of 10,000 people attended the evening meetings and witnessed the display of fireworks.

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Stanley, vice-president of the Indiana W. C. T. U., and Rev. Ira Landrith, were the speakers both for the afternoon and evening and in addresses appropriate to Independence Day showed the relation of prohibition to the highest type of patriotism and pointed out that before our land is indeed a nation truly free, the slaves of the rum traffic must be freed.

W. C. T. U. Float in Cranford (N. J.) Independence Day Carnival

Float of the Quitman (Ga.) W. C. T. U. at the Time of the State Live Stock Convention

BRITAIN'S ROYAL AND EMINENT TEETOTALERS

CHARLES E. BAILEY, Wheatley, Doncaster, England

King George V of Britain was born on June 3, 1865, and accordingly has just completed his fiftieth year. To temperance reformers it is of considerable interest to note that he attained the jubilee of his career, and also recently commenced the sixth year of his reign as a personal teetotaler, and as a practical prohibitionist. At the end of March he decided that during the period of the war's further continuance he would himself relinquish all use of alcoholic beverages, and would banish, too, all intoxicants from his household. This highly commendable action of Britain's king recalls that of the Swedish monarch, Oscar, several decades ago. While the queen and he were attending a temperance meeting they were so impressed with the cogency of the arguments adduced against the liquor system that they at once became adherents of the movement for national sobriety, and King Oscar additionally offered special inducements to the Swedish distillers to forego their manufacture of alcohol. Similarly King George, convinced that the drinking proclivities of some of his subjects were proving an obstacle to the full success of his country's cause in the present European conflict, resolved to give his people the regal example of entire abstinence from intoxicating indulgence. A kingly deed, truly!

Previously to his present decision, King George had displayed in several directions his temperance and kindred sympathies. In 1904 as Prince of Wales he urged a number of naval lads to remain true to non-alcoholic habits. Some years prior to this, when acting as naval lieutenant, he was the means of a reprobate sailor's transformation. Repeatedly punished on another ship, the man was transferred by force of circumstances to the prince's charge. Giving him a clean sheet in regard to all past offenses, and handing him a sovereign in lieu of the pay which had been stopped, Prince George in kindly tones advised and encouraged him: "You know as well as I do what you ought to do, and what you ought not to do. God help you to do the right, and keep you from the wrong." The sequel was that the sailor, overcome by the royal clemency and sympathy, conquered his vicious tendencies, and rose to be a petty officer.

On accession to the throne in 1910, King George continued the prohibition inaugurated by his father, Edward VII, of all ordinary facilities for purchase of liquor on the royal estate in Norfolk county. Regarding the king's personal position on the temperance question, the late Mr. W. T. Stead wrote at that time: "George V is probably the most abstemious king who has ever ascended the English throne. I do say with confidence, on the authority of men who know him intimately, who have lived with him, dined with him, supped with him, that although he sometimes takes a glass of wine, his usual beverages are distilled or mineral water and milk. As he is now so he has been all his life—sober, temperate, abstemious." It is almost superfluous to add that in his actions, personal and public, promotive of national sobriety, the king has had the whole-hearted support of his beloved and greatly esteemed consort, Queen Mary.

Naturally the example of total abstinence on the throne has had exceptional influence in many of Britain's circles. In numerous leading households alcohol has been banned. At not a few important functions, where usually wine was plentifully provided it is no longer seen. All the members of the cabinet, it is understood, followed the king's example.

The United States ambassador, Mr. Walter H. Page, decided that henceforth no liquor should be served to his household in Grosvenor Square, London. Practically all the officials of the powerful Cambrian Coal Combine in South Wales are now for similar reasons total abstainers, and in Scotland's commercial center, Glasgow,—likewise in other localities—thousands of citizens have been induced to sign the temperance pledge in appreciation of the example set by the king.

Long, however, before the definite pronouncement by George V of his adoption of total abstinence principles, pre-eminent leaders were to be found in various circles of British society who had for considerable periods entirely eschewed alcoholic beverages. Lord Alverstone, until recently for more than twelve years the occupant of the high position of Lord Chief Justice of England, amid all the manifold strenuous duties of his arduous legal career, never had recourse to stimulants. Mr. Justice Rentoul, another of Britain's distinguished men of the law, testifies to the benefits of his prolonged practice of teetotalism. Outspoken in his utterances against the liquor traffic, he has in unmeasured terms especially denounced the participation of Christian churches and professed Christian members in drink profits through acceptance of donations from brewers and distillers for religious purposes. "It was the smile of the church on the liquor trade that gave that trade an air of respectability. To trade in that which all admitted degraded and brutalized one's fellowmen was a poor sort of occupation. It is not out of these that peers and members of Parliament should be made, and the Church ought to say so in no uncertain language. Let them condemn the rich trader, and let them say of his money as was said by the priests of Jerusalem, 'It is the price of blood, and we will not take it for the service of God.'"

On both sides of the Atlantic the names of Sir Victor Horsley, Sir Alfred Pearce

(Continued on Page Six)

W. C. T. U. Achievements In the "Sunrise Kingdom"

THIRTY-YEARS OF TEMPERANCE PROGRESS CELEBRATED IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

MRS. ETSU SUGIMOTO

The twenty-third annual convention of the Japan W. C. T. U. held in Kyoto was honored by the presence of some of the city's most notable personages. The governor of Kyoto Fu attended in person the educational meeting, and his wife read the "Shikuji" (congratulations) at the opening meeting. The mayor of the city sent a representative, and there were short addresses on the first day by the principals of several government schools, the head of the Salvation Army and other city organizations, and by the editors of newspapers.

Although this was the twenty-third convention, the union is really thirty years old, and the world has seen what it has accomplished during these years. This year's list of delegates, seventy-seven in number, coming from every part of the land, was the largest in the history of the union.

One of the most practical of the meetings was at the gathering of the delegates the first evening when three-minute talks on plans, suggestions and exchange of experiences were given. The very air vibrated with animation and good fellowship.

The second day began with a sunrise prayer meeting. In the morning session the election took place. The work of the old officers had been so efficient that they were all re-elected.

In the afternoon, such an enthusiastic "Y" meeting was held, that it impressed the whole audience with a strong conviction of the importance of encouraging this department of young people upon whom so much depends for the future of Japan.

The latter part of the afternoon was devoted to the teacher's general meeting. To this had been invited all the teachers of the schools of Kyoto—governmental, private, Christian, Buddhist, also any other persons who were interested in educational matters and over 600 were present. The speakers were Prof. H. Takashima, and Miss Tetsu Yasui. Prof. Takashima, who is considered the greatest authority in the land on the study of Child Psychology, took as his subject, "Alcoholism and Inheritance." Miss Yasui is the head lady teacher of the Imperial High Normal school for girls. She was once governess to the Court of Siam, and her position, as well as her much reverenced personality, gives weight to her words. She is an enthusiastic white ribboner, which was plainly seen in her fine talk on "Public Sentiment, and its Influence on a Girl's Education."

Madam Kaji Yajima, President of the W. C. T. U. of Japan

In the evening, groups of white ribboners scattered all over the city, attending prayer meetings in the different churches.

An open meeting was held on the evening of the third day, in the city assembly hall, and the room was packed to its fullest capacity. Colonel Yamamuro of the Salvation Army, gave a strong, practical address. Prof. Takashima followed with a list of scientific facts. Madam Hirooka, an aristocratic lady of rank and position, who has also made a record in Japan as a banker and a capitalist, was the next speaker. She is an earnest Christian, and her talk was the relation of her own religious experience, and its application to her ambition for her sex.

The last meeting of the convention was held Sunday afternoon and was attended by about 1,200 children, for this was the meeting of the L. T. L., under the leadership of Miss Moriya. The important event of the day was the medal contest. Seven very small, but very enthusiastic, orators advanced to the stage, and, one by one, presented very seriously, their opinions. Earnest words from innocent children always attract attention, and these speeches of the three little boys and the four little girls, had a wonderful effect on the audience. One boy and one girl, who were judged to have most ably presented their pleas, had the honor to receive copper medals, presented by Madam Yajima. Then Mr. Kurishima appeared upon the platform, and the room echoed with a storm of applause from hundreds of little hands, which clapped a welcome to the

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

Britain's Royal and Eminent Teetotalers

(Continued from Page Five)

Gould and Professor G. Sims Woodhead are known for their eminence in the medical profession, and their conspicuous success as surgeons and physicians. Lifelong abstainers themselves, their researches and extensive hospital experiences have additionally proved to them conclusively that not only is alcohol very deleterious to health, but it has exceedingly little, if any, value as a medicinal aid.

Amongst those who take front rank position in the naval and military services of Britain are not a few personal teetotalers. Such are Sir John Jellicoe, the chief of the North Sea fleet near Heligoland; Sir Ian Hamilton, commander of the allied forces in the Dardanelles operations; Prince Louis of Battenberg, the naval expert responsible in the early weeks of the war for the disposition of the British forces on the sea, and Sir Robert Baden Powell, the famous originator of the Scout movement. Upon one occasion in a recent year, three admirals' flags were flying at the same time in the neighborhood of the Thames, and each of the admirals was a total abstainer.

Of prominent parliamentarians in the British House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. John Burns and Mr. Walter Runciman are conspicuous examples of those who entirely shun alcohol. The first named was for three years, until the formation of the present coalition government, the leader of the conservative party in the elected chamber, and is now secretary of state for the colonies. "Mr. Bonar Law was forty-two when he was elected a member of Parliament, and in ten years has become leader of the opposition, with a possible premiership before him. Is it possible that the rapid rise is due to that coolness and strength that belong to total abstinence? We see no reason to doubt it." Mr. Burns, who is a typical working class representative, was previous to August last a member of the liberal cabinet and continuously engaged in schemes for the betterment of the people. "I can only say," to quote his words, "that in the course of a strenuous life, in youth and manhood, in the workshop, the municipal council, the imperial parliament, and in all the active and varied phases of a notably vigorous career I have done what I have for the poor in so far as I have avoided liquor and tobacco, and have combined hard work and high thinking with simple tastes and simpler drinking." Mr. Runciman is similarly a cabinet minister. It was as a total abstainer that Mr. Lloyd George, whose extraordinary abilities are now acclaimed by all parties in the state, obtained his practically unprecedented rise to high parliamentary position, and achieved success after success in the roles both of fearless, impassioned critic and of constructive statesman. Almost the last addition to the House of Commons, the Hon. Alexander Shaw, son of Lord Shaw of Dunfermline, elected but a few weeks ago, is a lifelong abstainer.

Many scholars of great distinction also have been, and are, fully identified with the temperance movement in Britain, and enthusiastic advocates of its principles. Of particular note among these is Sir James A. H. Murray, the preëminent editor and part author of the stupendous work of erudition, "The Oxford English Dictionary." Since 1878 he has been engaged upon this work. Soon after attaining the age of threescore years and ten he referred to the fact that he had never used alcohol to excite brain action. "For thirty years," said he, "I have worked as hard as any man has done, never less than twelve hours per day per week regularly for months." Throughout the whole time he had not once required a stimulant for the purpose, and therefore could witness what the practice of total abstinence had enabled him to do. Appealing to the intellectual classes for definite personal acceptance of temperance principles, he has urged: "It is a battle between plain good and plain evil, and no man has a right to stand neutral. The help that is asked of you leaves you no poorer, no less happy, no harder worked for giving it. It is one step of moral courage, and one daily recurring act of small self-sacrifice. Face that and you will then at least have given your strength, great or small, to lessen human suffering; you will have taken one step, slight and easy in itself, which men have taken by thousands before you, and which, if men only would take it by millions instead of thousands, would mean the redemption of your country from misery, and a long, sure stride towards the abolition of all our crime."

VIRGINIA'S MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

MRS. SARA H. HOGE, President Virginia W. C. T. U.

Even before the appeal from the National W. C. T. U. officers to each state to endeavor to raise its respective proportion of the 50,000 new members for this year, the Virginia W. C. T. U. had set as its goal a gain of twenty-five per cent in its membership. If this is accomplished we will have secured a larger number than Mother National asked of us.

Early in the year a letter was sent to each local union asking that a special effort be made to have dues for as many members as were paid for last year, in the hands of the state treasurer by March 25. As a recognition of the accomplishment of this, a premium copy of the state paper was offered. When March 25 arrived thirty-eight unions were entitled to claim this premium.

Unions were asked also to aim for a gain of at least twenty-five per cent and to those having dues showing this gain before July 1, a premium copy of THE UNION SIGNAL was offered. Forty-three unions are now on the Honor List for this premium SIGNAL.

One county claimed its premium of ten copies of the state paper for a paid-up membership by June 1 equal to that of last year's entire membership, and several are likely to have the twenty-five per cent gain by August 1 and win the five premium copies of THE UNION SIGNAL.

One union—Pamplin—made a gain of seventy-five in a membership contest, and other unions have used this method successfully. Another union has held an attendance contest, resulting in both increased attendance and increased membership.

Special effort was made for definite observance of Membership Week. The state treasurer is encouraging the unions and Virginia is confidently expecting to have a good gain in membership when the year's accounts are closed.

ANTI-ALCOHOL WEEK AT CHAUTAUQUA

Temperance Week will be celebrated by Chautauqua Institution, Chautauqua, N. Y., with a long list of speakers representing the prohibition interests. The pros and cons of nati nal prohibition will be discussed fully. Ex-Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee, who was for years closely allied with the liquor interests, will tell "Why I Changed Front on the Liquor Question." Hon. J. Denny O'Neil of Pittsburgh will discuss "Prohibition from a Business Man's Point of View," showing its results as reviewed by a county commissioner. Governor George A. Carlson of Colorado will speak on conditions in his state.

STATE W. C. T. U. CONVENTION CALENDAR

New Mexico, Albuquerque, July 21-22.
South Carolina, Orangeburg, 2nd week in September.
Maine, Skowhegan, Sept. 14-16.
Missouri, Sikeston, Sept. 14-17.
Oklahoma, Oklahoma City, Sept. 15-17.
Kentucky, Bowling Green, Sept. 17-22.
Wisconsin, Eau Claire, Sept. 17-21.
South Dakota, Ipswich, Sept. 17-22.
Colorado, Denver, Sept. 22-24.
North Dakota, Carrington, Sept. 23-27.
California, (Northern), Oakland, Sept. 27 to Oct. 1.
Montana, Livingston, Sept. 28 to Oct. 1.
Kansas, Newton, Sept. 28 to Oct. 1.
Maryland, Rockville, Sept. 29-30.
New York, Ithaca, Sept. 30 to Oct. 4.
Tennessee, Martin, Oct. 1-4.
Pennsylvania, York, Oct. 1-4.
Oregon, Newberg, Oct. 5-7.
Washington, Seattle, Oct. 8.

BEER A DANGEROUS BEVERAGE

I consider with eminent German authorities of enormous experience that beer is exceedingly injurious and dangerous as a beverage. It has no scientific medical endorsements of which I know.—Dr. Howard Atwood Kelly, Johns Hopkins University.

ADVERTISE YOUR SPEAKER!

LORA S. LaMANCE, National W. C. T. U. Organizer

Your union is to have a speaker. Suppose you help to make her coming a success. There is to be a dramatic reader at the Opera House the same evening. Really, that reader cannot hold a candle to your speaker. But the reader's posters are seen in the window of every bank, grocery store, dry goods store, millinery shop, hardware store, bakery, livery stable, hotel, printer's establishment, drugstore and lawyer's office. The reader's bills are ten times as numerous as are those of the W. C. T. U. speaker. Why not have printed five hundred handbills, with headlines strong and taking and place one of these in every home of the residence district? The picture show secured publicity by chalking its announcements on walks. The Y. M. C. A. has next Sunday's speaker advertised on its bulletin boards. The good roads speaker has a long, personal writeup in each of the leading papers of the town. The W. C. T. U. has the best speakers in the world, and yet we advertise them very little. How often an inch paragraph, "Mrs. Blank, National W. C. T. U. organizer, will speak in such-and-such a church at 8 p. m. on Sunday, such-and-such a date," is the only notice which appears in the papers. Is there anything about it to awaken interest in the speaker and make people want to go out to hear her?

Turn over a new leaf, comrades. Put life into your advertising, using not one, but two or three announcements. Get somebody who knows the speaker or has heard her, or who has a reporter-like knack of writing, to furnish a personal sketch of her. This should be made lifelike, snappy, "catchy." If she was once a social worker under Jane Addams, this fact should be exploited. People know who Jane Addams is, and will be eager to see one identified with her. If the speaker was once a trained nurse in the Orient, or a former missionary to Africa, why not tell it? There is something real about a person of whom we know something. Did she help make Colorado dry? Has she spoken under three flags? Was she the former president of a great state? Is she an ordained minister? Is her brother a bishop? Is her husband a president of a college? Is she a chalk talker? Has she addressed more schools than any other one person in the United States? Was she once captured by bandits? Is she a well known writer? Tell the public something that will make people feel like going to hear her.

Mark these words: Proper publicity and plenty of it will always insure an audience, barring, of course, accidents or storms which may keep people at home.

Add to the newspaper notices other forms of publicity. Supply each pastor with a written announcement to be read from the pulpit. In towns where there is a ministers' alliance bring the matter to their attention and get them to endorse the speaker and work up an attendance at her meeting. Do this in ample time.

Use the telephone. Get each member who has a 'phone to invite six people to hear the speaker. Do not be afraid to invite those in the country. In these days of automobiles, distance is an item hardly to be considered. It will do no harm if two or three people call up the same person, and perhaps will insure his or her attendance.

Use the bulletin boards. Personally invite editors to send a reporter to the meeting. Ask temperance leaders to be present. Have a special solo or a fine quartet, or possibly a selection by a band, but do not so overdo the musical part of the program that the evening is far spent and the audience yawning before the unfortunate speaker gets a chance to be heard.

Invite the neighboring unions to come in a body, and urge each W. C. T. U. member to wear her white ribbon pin or badge. Any one can speak better to a crowd than to a handful of people. If you have tried again and again and only succeeded in getting a few to attend, and they the very ones who do not need temperance teaching, then try the house-to-house plan, choosing from six to twenty bright, likable women to visit the homes and invite people to come. Let each cover a certain teritory.

Try in the ways named to secure an audience for the speaker and she will be better prepared to deliver her message.

A PLEA FROM A SALOONKEEPER'S DAUGHTER

No class of people would rejoice more heartily to see National Prohibition the law of the nation than would the wives and daughters of the liquor dealers. The following appeal from the daughter of a saloonkeeper tells something of the agony of spirit endured by these women. By request the names of places referred to are left blank. EDITOR.

June 22, 1915.

I see by the ————, that the ———— Business Men's League is strenuously endeavoring to have ———— and ———— continue wet. Why? So their wives and daughters may still have the saloonkeeper's family to snub. What cowards are men who would vote for and uphold a business that down in their hearts they consider disgraceful.

Who for fear of business losses or higher taxes would condemn through the weakness of husbands and fathers for easy money women as cultured and refined as their own to ostracism. Even they would not make it an honorable business, but would keep it on for the sake of license money. Fie on them!

Do you think I will ever forget the day when I was but a child of seven, the daughter of an influential voter for the licensed saloon said to my chum and seatmate: "Don't play with her, her papa sells beer." I did not know what beer was. I did not know my papa sold it—but the scorn of her look and the tone almost broke my childish heart, and the sting has followed on through the years.

I am far away from my former home now, and very, very happy—but even yet, when a woman from there comes here to visit, the first thing she seems called upon to say is: "How strange, she seems to be somebody here; you know she was only a saloonkeeper's daughter." Yea, verily, all things else are forgiven.

I know they argue as a rule the saloonkeeper's family is of a type that cares only for the comforts secured. It is not true. Nine out of ten would prefer rags and respectability. Oh, fight it, drys—fight it! Not only for the sake of the drunkards, but for the heart-broken wives and daughters of them who sell it. These people do not suffer from the drys nor the drunkards, but from the inhumanity of the families of the business men who vote wet. I was a victim for fifteen years, and I KNOW!

A SALOONKEEPER'S DAUGHTER

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, July 22, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

ANTI-LIQUOR LEADERS IN CONFERENCE AT WASHINGTON

At a conference of the leaders of the various anti-liquor organizations held July 10, in Washington, D. C., the National W. C. T. U. was represented by Miss Anna A. Gordon, National president; Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National vice-president-at-large; Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, who was made assistant secretary of the conference; Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, National assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, National Legislative superintendent, and Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U. Miss Gordon was made vice-chairman and presided during a part of the time. Her ringing utterances in accepting the office on behalf of the National W. C. T. U., were heartily cheered. Dr. A. J. Barton, of Waco, Texas, one of the most popular preachers of the South, was elected chairman. Plans for the year's campaign were discussed.

Are you going to the National Convention at Seattle? If so, begin now to help make the music of that great gathering a superb success. Read the article on page 11 by Mrs. Frances W. Graham, our National Musical Director.

"NO PLACE TO GO"

The rapidity with which the state of Minnesota, heretofore thought by advocates of personal liberty to be a comparatively safe abiding place, is going dry, must be disconcerting to the people who have fled to it from prohibition communities. It behooves them to very early and promptly seek a new home, but where will they go? They will find themselves in the predicament of the man who on the evening of a certain presidential election found the party to which he had long pinned his faith, left far behind in the race in his own state. He went home and told his wife to pack up their goods preparatory to leaving what he termed "this benighted state." Returning to watch the election returns he discovered to his dismay that not only his own state but the whole nation had, according to his notion, voted for the wrong candidate, and hastily returning told his wife to unpack their goods, explaining "there ain't no place to go."

Alas, the men who consider the saloon, the brewery and the distillery necessary features of the landscape of their county or state are learning that it is quite useless to move from one state to another. Before they are located in their new homes the section may have voted dry.

The liquor men glibly talk of receding waves of prohibition, but in their heart of hearts they know that the movement to exterminate their business is founded on the conviction that the liquor traffic has no place in the divine scheme of things; that because it represents a degenerating and retrogressive force, which is defeating the evolutionary plan for the development of the human race, it must be destroyed.

It is foreordained that the human race shall be freed from this handicap to progress, which "reverses the processes of nature and sets back the purposes of creation" and no temporary defeat or delay of the movement can dismay or discourage the advocates of prohibition. The liquor traffic must go!

TRANSFORMING JOHN BARLEYCORN

The brewers of Indiana announce that they are about to enter into competition with the temperance forces in reform enterprises. There is nothing new or original in their program. With growing frequency, similar ones are being published by the friends of "personal liberty" in many states. Realizing that the liquor traffic exists only by the sufferance of the public, the men behind it are trying to make the public believe that an elimination of certain features of their business will transform John Barleycorn from an angel of darkness into an angel of light. In other words, they are planning to push legislation providing for the serving of alcoholic drinks over the tables of cafes and restaurants, instead of over saloon bars. It is not, however, contemplated that the crime-producing, character-corrupting, health-destroying qualities of the commodity in which they deal shall be eliminated, yet they claim that by so changing the appearance and form of their business they will be catering to the demands of the people who, they admit, have come to look with disfavor upon the saloon as an institution. If they are rightly interpreting the desires of any considerable number of people—and we do not admit that they are—then there is a definite and good-sized task before the temperance workers. It must be admitted that there is a body of citizens who either from lack of information or from sheer indifference may support legislation of the character mentioned.

How are we to win them to our side? How are we to enlighten them and impart to them our vision of what the destruction of John Barleycorn would mean to the nation?

These people are not coming to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union or to any other temperance organization begging to be informed; they will not throng the churches to secure instruction, nor will they burden the mails with appeals for literature to relieve their deplorable ignorance. This teaching of the deadly nature of alcohol and the diabolical effect of its use on body, mind and soul must be dealt out to them almost without their knowing that they are receiving it. It must be skillfully woven into articles which will appear in their favorite daily paper; it must be brought to their attention through the medium of their children in the public schools, who are taught the truths of science concerning alcohol, and it may be impressed upon their minds by the wise suggestions of their family physician. The poster displayed in conspicuous places where they will see it morning and evening on their way to and from their business; the leaflet which they find convenient to their hand at the railroad or interurban waiting station; the occasional tactful word dropped in conversation—these are some of the indirect agencies that will reveal to them the true nature of John Barleycorn—the conscienceless race destroyer.

It is the privilege of white ribboners in every village, town and city to keep in motion these educative influences all through the summer days and the winter days, until the people shall know the truth concerning alcohol and that truth shall make the nation free from the legalized liquor traffic.

POPULARIZATION OF TEMPERANCE

Although the liquor problem as exemplified in human experience has always possessed great possibilities for the writer of fiction, until very recently it has found little favor in the eyes of the editors and publishers of popular magazines. A marked change is to be noted in the attitude of these purveyors of literary pabulum to the public. In the July number of the Century is to be found the story of a victim of an inherited appetite for alcoholic liquors who seeks refuge in a district where he will be free from the liquor evil in the form of the saloon.

McClure's for July begins a series of stories dealing with the tragedies of the drink evil, opening with a narrative full of dramatic situations, entitled, "The Woman Behind the Bottle."

Everybody's for June, in "The Hero Business," makes the idol and hero of the school children of his town, whom he had saved from death by fire, afraid to indulge his appetite for drink because of its influence on his childish adorers.

While the ideal short story dealing with John Barleycorn has yet to appear, the growing popularity of this class of reading in our popular magazines emphasizing the right point of view is not without value in making sentiment among those who would not read anything dealing with the question in a serious fashion.

Do not fail to read "The Vision Realized" on page 12. White ribboners who are engaged in membership campaigns will find it most suggestive and helpful.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

The Illinois Steel Company, which is well known for its efforts to promote temperance among its workmen, is arranging for a series of lectures on the liquor question to be delivered before its employes by physicians and chemists.

In a recent interview reported by a Chicago paper, United States Senator A. B. Cummins, a Republican presidential possibility, expressed the opinion that because of the growing sentiment in this country in favor of abolishing the liquor traffic, which he believes is destined to put an end to the saloon, "the political party which takes the most satisfactory position on the question in 1916 will have an advantage in the campaign."

"The existence of the rum shop is one of the master blots on our present day civilization," declared former Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts, in a recent address. "It engenders more degradation, more misery and more sorrow than any other agency."

"The world is handing John Barleycorn his hat," says a contemporary, commenting on the revolt against liquor which has been intensified by the war. "In years to come, when we read the history of this decade," says the Kansas City Star, "the red streak caused by the upheaval in Europe may be no broader than the white one which will represent the world's severing of polite relations with John Barleycorn. If the military madness of Europe does result in the liquor sanity of the world, the war may be hailed as the greatest blessing to mankind since the advent of Christianity." The above is from the North American of Philadelphia.

"Prohibition here," is the inscription above a still surmounted by a keg which is on exhibit on the court house lawn of Lauderdale county, Ala., chained to a tree. Sheriff W. A. Romine of the county, a staunch prohibitionist, has kept the lid on both before and since the statewide prohibition law went into effect.

"When the number of arrests are slashed in two in one year it is pretty conclusive evidence that prohibition prohibits not only liquor selling but crime as well," is the comment of the Youngstown (Ohio) Telegram on the remarkable decrease in arrests in the state of West Virginia since prohibition became the law of the state.

Newfoundland is to vote next fall, on the prohibition issue. In Canada as in the United States, half-way measures like local option are going out of fashion and the question is to be dealt with in the larger and more satisfactory way.

The Metropole, Majestic, and Windsor-Clifton hotels in Chicago have joined the no-Sunday-liquor movement.

The Boston & Maine railroad company has forbidden the serving of liquors in dining cars.

The Kenyon Red-light law, by which the segregated district of Washington, D. C., was abolished, has been pronounced constitutional by the District of Columbia supreme court.

The Alabama supreme court has found constitutional the law which restricts the quantity of liquor which may be shipped to consignees in the state of Alabama within prescribed periods. The law also fixes the amount which may be kept in the possession of individuals.

A bulletin has been posted by the superintendent of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas R. R. forbidding the smoking of cigarets by all company employes while on duty.

The Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, at its recent convention in Marion, by a vote of 203 to 99, declared for woman suffrage. The resolution reads: "Whereas, the question of political equality of man and woman is today a vital problem under discussion throughout the state of Massachusetts, therefore, be it resolved, that the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs give the cause of political equality its moral support by recording its earnest belief in the principles of political equality, regardless of sex."

Jess Willard, champion pugilist of the world, was a Kansas boy and was taught, as Kansas children are wont to be, the evils of intemperance. This no doubt accounts for the fact that he is a total abstainer and believes that the drinking of intoxicants is unnecessary to success as a pugilist. Because he is the first world champion to be a total abstainer he has recently received for a history of his life the sum of $26,000.

Ten thousand signatures to the petition calling for a vote on state-wide prohibition for Ohio have been secured in Cincinnati alone, a city which last year was largely responsible for the anti-prohibition vote. These names are in excess of the requisite number, as sufficient signatures had already been secured in other parts of the state.

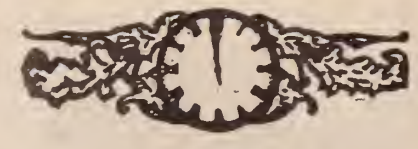
Dr. William G Shaw, general secretary of the United Society for Christian Endeavor, had just finished an appeal for missions at one of the meetings of the great convention in Chicago, when a white faced woman in the audience arose and pointing a shaking finger at the chairman, cried:

"Close the saloons and I'll have some money to give."

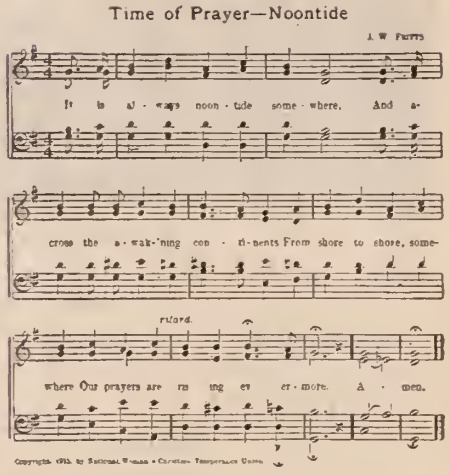
"Amen," shouted Dr. Shaw. "We'll close the saloons; we're going to close the doors of every grogshop in Christendom."

The passage by the Illinois state legislature of seven of the nine social welfare bills endorsed by the woman's legislative congress is looked upon by Chicago women as an index to woman's power in politics. The measures passed are: Compulsory support by every husband of wife and children; effectual suppression of houses of prostitution; the abolition of the fining system in dealing with prostitutes; state care for feeble-minded; raising the age of consent from sixteen to eighteen for girls; compulsory birth registration; better care of the blind, and the punishment of adults causing delinquency or crime in children.

Montpelier, Ind., the last wet district in Blackford county, voted out its saloons on July 6. Montpelier has had saloons for more than seventy years.



Time of Prayer—Noontide



MEDITATION CORNER

I have had many things in my hands and lost them all; but whatever I have been able to place in God's hands, I still possess.—Martin Luther.

The things that are passing and not permanent are the terrible things, the horrid, repulsive and dreaded things. Read the list—tears, death, sorrow, crying, pain and, further on, the curse. The bad things and the fearful things are to pass and perish. The good and beautiful things are to remain. Death is to pass, life is to abide. Sorrow is to pass, joy is to remain.—Charles Brown.

And this is my reading of the signs of the times. There is a sense in which the world upheaval we are witnessing today is an advent of Christ. It seems the very opposite, but that matters little. What is really happening is that most of the delusions of our commercial civilization are being destroyed. The immensities and eternities have suddenly opened afresh under our very gaze, and mankind is being thrown back upon God. "The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple, but who may abide the day of his coming?"—Reginald J. Campbell.

Wrong is on its way to ruin. Sin spells disaster and defeat. The Infinite Power behind all is on the side of right and truth. Our hands hang down and our knees are feeble oftentimes as we note the slow progress of our work and the seeming impregnability of wrong and evil. Sursum corda! Lift up your hearts! The Lord reigneth! Righteousness is on the throne, and the final triumph is sure.

"For right is right since God is God,
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

—J. D. Jones.

Pilgrim whose faith has been halting,
O heart overburdened with fears,
God sendeth thee strength in thy weakness,
A rainbow to shine through thy tears;
Each May-time that comes is a token,
A gift from the Father Divine,
Who holds the round earth in His keeping,
Who guards it in shadow and shine.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

CO-OPERATION WITH MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

LOUISE C. PURINGTON, M. D.

It was a great disappointment that we could not have the recognition and representation we wished for at the Congress of Missions at the Panama Exposition. However, we were not left without a witness, as is evidenced by the following letter from Jennie Lind Redfield, state superintendent for California:

Dear Dr. Purington—

The women, many of them, were very much disappointed that temperance did not in any way enter into the program of the "Congress of Missions" just closed. I understand the program was made up in the East.

I had the privilege at one session, June 9, of presenting flowers for the state to the Congress. I spoke of the relation of our work to theirs; that we were the largest missionary society in the world, our work was identical as related to the coming of Christ's kingdom in human hearts; to accomplish this, we must make men sober; that I wished God would give the women of our churches a vision of a saloonless nation (its meaning) when the crying needs of our mission fields would be met and the difficult problems solved. That was the only word akin to temperance on the program. But the audience was in hearty accord and cheered the saloonless nation.

I think so much of the little poem or verse you put in THE SIGNAL some time ago. It just reaches the situation. We are having a truly marvelous Exposition.

This and other departments will have exhibits at the Congress of Reforms August 16-20.

Achievements like the above, taking the missionary congress all unawares! and winning favor, are specially telling in our work.

It should be added that the National superintendent sent a large supply of literature, including charts, post cards, booklets and leaflets to make a special appeal for co-operation, and the largest showing possible of the relation of temperance to missions.

Among other tokens of progress and something to be specially noted is the editorial promise that co-operation will have considerable space in the August Life and Light, the able, influential organ of the Woman's Board of Missions (Congregational). Mrs. Joseph Cook, always one with us, furnishes a special article on North China, a part of the field cultivated by Mrs. Chauncey Goodrich.

God's hand is upon us and there are many "open doors" if we will but have the grace and courage to enter.

I cannot close without special mention of a book, "The Evolution of a Teacher," by Ella Gilbert Ives, your former National superintendent in this department.

The manuscript was ready for publication at the time of her translation and it has been my precious task these recent months to bring it out.

Her beautiful personality, besides her work as superintendent, made her a beloved member of W. C. T. U. ranks and the story is not inapt for any calling of life.

The book is now in print, published by The Pilgrim Press, Boston, Chicago, and New York. It may also be ordered through me. Price, $1.10 including postage.

NOTE.—As the National Convention at Seattle meets this year at an earlier date, I bespeak earlier reports from state superintendents. They should be in my hands by October 1, at the farthest.

23 Allston St., Dorchester, Mass.

CALL FOR CONTESTANTS FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION MEDAL CONTEST

MRS. ADELIA E. CARMAN

A grand diamond medal contest will be held at the annual convention of the National W. C. T. U. at Seattle, this year. The states west of the Rocky mountains which wish to be represented by a contestant will be given the preference as the distance to a National convention, when held in the East, prevents their entering contests. The first applicants will be listed until six are enrolled. Contestants must be recommended by the state officers, also the orations or selections used, which should be up-to-date and preferably, stirring arguments for National Constitutional Prohibition. Contestants may write or compile their selections from recent addresses provided they are submitted to the state officers and approved. They will, however, be judged only on the five points stated in the rules and should not be longer than 1,000 words. We wish to receive the names of contestants and their subjects before August 15. West Washington, Oregon and Northern California have already applied and contestants have been entered. We want to make this contest the best ever given at a National Convention and feel sure this pleasant rivalry will bring out unusual talent.

5414 Broadway, Chicago, Ill.

RELIEF WORK FOR WAR VICTIMS

LELLA M. SEWALL

The department of Flower Mission and Relief Work of North Carolina has contributed $28.25, in recent days, to the Belgian Relief Fund, with the request that it be used for food. An appreciative letter from Mr. Redington Fisk, manager of the New England Belgian Relief Fund, says: "We wish to thank you most cordially for your kindness in forwarding this check which coming at this time is greatly appreciated."

In June Miss Charlotte T. Hill of Massachusetts contributed $2.00 through this department for the relief of the suffering Poles.

The needs of all these unfortunate people, women and children especially, innocent victims of this heinous war, are still upon the hearts of the American people, and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, through its department of Flower Mission and Relief Work, is most grateful that it is privileged to lend a helping hand.

WHITE RIBBON MISSIONARY DAY

Many local unions will this month be celebrating White Ribbon Missionary Day, the birthday of Mary Allen West. It would be fitting on such occasions to read in connection with some account of the heroic pioneer work done by Miss West in Japan, portions of the report of the last W. C. T. U. convention held in Japan, (see page 6), showing the marvelous progress which has been made in the "sunrise kingdom." The words spoken by Mrs. Chika Sakurai at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Chicago in 1893 were truly prophetic of what is now taking place in Japan. She said: "Although Mary Allen West has been taken away from us so suddenly, her death has made a lasting impression. Her visit to my native country has not been in vain, and the seed she has sown, perhaps in tears, will one day bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God and the salvation of many precious souls; her influence was felt wherever she went, and she was much beloved by all our people. We thank God that ever Miss West came to Japan and we trust and pray that many more like her may be called by God to follow in her footsteps, for there are a great many who have become interested in her work."

We record here the name of a comrade and friend who has recently passed to the higher life:

MRS. MARY F. R. HOBBS, Cheney, Wash., a faithful pioneer who for more than twenty-eight years has given generously of time and energy to the upbuilding of the W. C. T. U.

Music at the National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM, National Musical Director

During the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Seattle, Wash., a fifteen minute song service each day will precede the opening of the meeting. This plan has worked admirably in past years and is of three-fold advantage. It helps us to become familiar with "The Temperance Songster," Miss Gordon's best compilation for convention use; it brings together the singing delegates who help form a chorus, which in addition to aiding in the song service, assists in singing the opening hymns; and last, but not least, it serves to call the delegates in, so that they are in their places and ready for the opening exercises. There is also an advantage to the singers themselves in the closer acquaintance and comradeship, both musically and personally, which will be a certain result of such an arrangement. A rehearsal will precede each opening song service.

We hope this year to do better chorus work than ever before. To that end the following list of songs selected from "The Temperance Songster" will be published from time to time, in THE UNION SIGNAL, and in all state papers, so far as possible. If local unions will use these songs at their regular meetings, that will insure good music for county, district and state gatherings, and all will become familiar with them, thus aiding national chorus work. It will be a help to feel that local, county and state white ribboners are all using the same songs during these intervening months.

No. 1 Invocation.
No. 8 Prohibition's Comin'.
No. 17 In the Name of Christ as King.
No. 20 Oh, Sound the Jubilee.
No. 24 When Prohibition Wins.
No. 25 The Home Guard.
No. 32 The Temperance Lighthouse.
No. 36 We March to Victory.
No. 46 Some Glad Day.
No. 51 A Place in the Ranks for Me.
No. 64 White Ribbon Rally Song.
No. 76 To Show My Love.
No. 83 The Rally Song.
No. 92 In His Name.
No. 104 Crown Him King of Kings.
No. 112 Hark, the Temperance Bells.
No. 128 Out for Prohibition.
No. 131 Crusade Glory Song.

CO-OPERATION OF RHODE ISLAND'S TEMPERANCE FORCES

Special Correspondence

The allied temperance committee of Rhode Island, a body consisting of representatives from the W. C. T. U., Anti-Saloon League, Prohibition party, Y. M. C. A. and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, is holding a street forum in the city of Providence. These meetings are in the interests of National Constitutional Prohibition, and are held on the corners of the busiest streets and addressed by speakers of the allied committee. Mrs. Jennie L. W. Rooke, president of the Rhode Island W. C. T. U., is chairman of the committee and a popular and emphatic speaker.

Americanization talks are being held in the city of Providence conducted by the Y. M. C. A. They are illustrated with motion pictures and lantern slides and are for the education of the latest arrivals in the city from foreign lands. The subjects of the talks embrace "Health," "Better Babies," "Safety," scenes from Italy, Poland and Portugal and are shown with descriptive talks in the language of the hearers.

A good work has lately been accomplished at the state penal institution through the efforts of one of the leading daily newspapers. It is the establishment of a library of more than 6,000 volumes. These have been contributed by people throughout the state and comprise books by standard authors as well as those of modern writers. Governor Beeckman has given the prison a moving picture machine. Warden Davis is hoping to have the best prison in the country from a standpoint of discipline and believes the better the surroundings the more easily this can be accomplished. Flowers are in the yard and between 4,000 and 5,000 quarts of strawberies were raised this year and served to the prisoners.

"TELEPHONE DAY" FOR NEW YORK SUFFRAGISTS

The suffragists of New York state have selected a day in July as "telephone day." On this day they propose to use their telephones almost exclusively in appealing to their fellow citizens to vote for the woman suffrage amendment.

OUR ORGANIZERS AND LECTURERS

Miss Christine I. Tinling, National W. C. T. U. lecturer, is receiving a most cordial reception in the six summer Normal schools of Tennessee where she is ably presenting the subject of scientific temperance.

As a result of two months spent in Minnesota Miss Roena Shaner, vice-president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., and National organizer and lecturer, organized five unions, gained 183 active and 35 honorary members, assisted in one no-license and two street rallies, secured 37 subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL, 13 to the Campaign Edition and 22 to The Young Crusader. She encouraged the old unions and made friends for the cause wherever she went.

Mrs. M. E. Patterson, National organizer and lecturer, recently spent a week in La Clede, Idaho, speaking six times under the direction of the W. C. T. U. Accompanied by Mrs. Emma Wood, state superintendent of Literature, she visited a lumber mill and logging camps in the woods where the men enthusiastically received her message. The pastor at La Clede, and the owner of the mill also expressed great satisfaction with her work.

Montana is to have Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh, National organizer, for a few dates as she returns to her home in Oregon from a most successful tour of Pennsylvania. The president of the Montana W. C. T. U. writes that Mrs. Unruh has done excellent work in Montana as lecturer and organizer and will be the convention speaker at Livingston in September. She will also speak for the W. C. T. U. in the great convention of all temperance and prohibition organizations of Montana which will be called in Helena, September 22, during state fair week, when speakers of national importance will talk on "A Dry Montana." It is expected at this time to form a federation of all prohibition forces.

MAKING POLK COUNTY, MINN., DRY

Polk county, Minn., is but one of the many counties in Minnesota which has recently gone dry. In order to bring about this result a campaign was carried on for four weeks previous to the election. For that month special headquarters were maintained at Crookston by the W. C. T. U. where temperance literature was distributed. Many visitors came to chat and look over the posters; Miss Rozette Hendrix, state W. C. T. U. president, was in the city for a week, and delivered a lecture each day. The Citizens County Option League co-operated with the W. C. T. U. Eight big temperance meetings, two street parades, a medal contest, and the district convention at Warren with a picture show portraying the evils of alcohol helped make dry votes. Of all the means employed to create prohibition sentiment, the parades were perhaps the most effective. In the first one the members of the W. C. T. U. and one hundred and twenty-five children belonging to the Loyal Temperance Legion marched with banners and flags to the music of a band. In the second parade, the weather being more favorable, two hundred children and many W. C. T. U. members participated. The L. T. L. furnished a float, and forty automobiles carried the chorus of one hundred who sang during the parade and later at the armory, where a splendid lecture was given by Congressman Halvor Steenerson. All of these features, in connection with the great interest shown by each person, helped carry a most thrilling campaign to a successful issue, making Polk county dry by 1,100 majority.

BUILT A MONUMENT

The Best Sort in the World

"A monument built by and from Postum," is the way an Illinois man describes himself. He says:

"For years I was a coffee drinker until at last I became a terrible sufferer from dyspepsia, constipation, headaches and indigestion.

"The different kinds of medicine I tried did not cure me, and finally some one told me to leave off coffee and take up Postum. I was fortunate in having the Postum made strictly according to directions on the package, so that from the start I liked it.

"Gradually my condition changed. The old troubles disappeared and I began to feel well again. My appetite became good and I could digest food. Now I am restored to strength and health, can sleep sound all night and awake with a fresh and rested body.

"I am really a monument built by Postum, for I was a physical wreck, distressed in body and mind, and am now a strong, healthy man. I know exactly what made the change; it was leaving off coffee and using Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal — the original form — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum — a soluble powder — dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

A VISION REALIZED

PART I.

The National W. C. T. U. Convention had been held in one of the hustling western cities, and the members of the great national body were hurrying back eastward and southward in small groups. Many had planned, either coming or going, to pay the usual short visit to Evanston, that mecca where Rest Cottage attracts the loyal soul and the National Headquarters gratifies both ambition and pride.

The state president was one of a group of four or five who had made the pilgrimage, and by some chance she sat alone with the president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union in her private office. With never-failing eagerness for knowledge of anything which makes for the advancement of the temperance cause, the state president plied the head of the national organization with pertinent questions relative to successful states and their methods of procedure. At last she asked: "What can my state do this year that will most help itself and the National?"

The National president knew the situation in the state of which her friend was president, knew it as well as though she lived in it, and her keen mind sped over the achievements and failures of the past, dwelt upon the action of the legislature at various times, upon the measures likely to be sprung by the liquor interests, upon the "unclaimed territory," and finally canvassed the special qualifications of the woman before her.

"Keep up the work at every point, along every line you have undertaken," she said, "and come to the next convention with a gain of 2,000 members." The state president gasped and suddenly sat back in her chair, while the expression in her eyes was not unlike the look that goes with fear. "But—how?" she managed to ask.

"Oh—how?" repeated the older woman. "That remains with you. There are as many ways as there are women—almost. Each state president evolves her own plan." Rising, she stepped over to the state president and placed a friendly, sympathetic hand upon her shoulder. "You know your state," she said, "and you know your women. Any service I can render will be gladly given—advice, suggestion and aid in securing, so far as possible, your choice of workers—but if I understand the situation at all, you will do your best work by making it a sort of family affair." Others came in just then and the conversation ended. When at parting the great leader shook the state president's hand, she said, "I am going to depend on you," and the woman addressed replied, without the least intention of doing so, "You may!"

An hour later, on the train, the state president suddenly turned to her secretary and said, "I have no idea how it came about, but I am under the uncomfortable impression that I promised our leader 2,000 new members this year!" The secretary reached over and felt of the president's pulse with a truly professional air. "That last sip of Chicago water has evidently gone to your head," she said.

It was a week before the state president got down to a "bed rock" consideration of her problem. Then one morning she cleaned her desk of its accumulation, propped up her state map before her, got out her treasurer's latest financial report and the new state minutes and went to work. On the walls of her office hung the friendly pictured faces of most of the National General Officers, her own state officers and the six state organizers. After a swift glance around, the president sighed and took up her pencil. "It is my problem," she said aloud. "I can depend on most of my women to carry out plans, but it falls to me to do the planning." By noon the president had thought her brain into a confusion of aches, but she had deduced a number of startling facts that had never before occurred to her. The first astonishing thing she discovered was that while her state claimed a population of over 4,000,000 and had 1,000,000 women of an age to influence voters, only 5,500 were members of the W. C. T. U. What were the other 994,500 women doing towards solving the temperance problem? How were they training their boys? What were they saying to the voters in their families?

Another thing that came home to her with startling force was the fact that while her state had eighty-two counties within its borders, almost every one operating under the license law, only fifty-seven had unions in them. How was the battle going in the "unclaimed" territory? Who was waging the prohibition warfare in those twenty-five counties where woman's voice was not, to the state president's knowledge, raised in defense of the home and its kindred institutions? How could those counties be expected to send clean men to the legislature to fight the allied liquor forces if there were no organizations in them to demand of politicians that their morals be of the best?

Concord (N. H.) W. C. T. U. Float in the Civic Parade, June 8, at the Celebration of the 150th Anniversary of the Granting of the Charter of Concord by the Provincial Government

The president groaned aloud, but pushed ahead with her court of inquiry. Next she found that while she had unions in fifty-seven of the eighty-two counties, only twenty-one were regularly organized county units of three or more strong unions, and that of the remaining thirty-six, twelve counties contained but one union each. Seventeen contained two, and the other seven contained three separated unions, some of which were so weak that they held meetings but once a quarter! And of the sixty-seven unions existing in the thirty-six pre-empted but unorganized counties, forty-eight had failed to pay dues, probably because there had been no county treasurer to demand it!

An examination of the state treasurer's report revealed the fact that the state, under present conditions, could spend but $400 in field work, without seriously hampering departmental and legislative work that must be carried on at all hazards. With her able pencil the state president soon found that the amount she was positively able to expend would give each county in which there were no unions sixteen dollars' worth of service. This did not include traveling expenses for the workers, nor one cent for the upbuilding of the work in the counties where it was weak and needed coaxing.

Whimsically, the president took from their respective hooks the small framed photographs of her six organizers, and stood them in a row along the back of her desk. "How much can I expect of you?" she asked them, sweeping her glance down the line of rather handsome middle-aged women, but not one replied! She studied them one at a time. Mrs. Thaxton, a mild-faced, quiet little woman, was the first to be considered. "Your health is good," soliloquized the president. "I believe you would be glad to put in six solid months' work if I could give it to you. Perhaps I will. At any rate I'll use you all I can." Then came Marion Warner, an unmarried woman, possessed of much skill in reaching people through personal work. "You will do," said the president. "I can trust you to win members." Mrs. Lamar came next, a widow of considerable means, whose time was given to the temperance cause in an effort to offset the evils her father's bar had done in days gone by. She had gone out for short trips on several occasions and had proved a marked success. She was added to the president's list of useful ones. The serviceability of Jane Prescott was next considered. Miss Prescott was a splendid speaker, the best in the group, but—and here the lines around the state president's mouth tightened—nothing ever suited her and if she ever suited any person who entertained her the state president did not know it. She expected a heated bathroom in a five room farm-house, five miles from the railroad; she objected to home-cured meats and feather beds, and absolutely refused to go into new territory and work up her own meetings, or to call on women who lived in plain little homes. The president looked sadly into the calm pictured eyes of Miss Prescott and sighed. "You will do in cities where our strong organizations can pay for their speakers," she said, "but not in a gleaners' campaign."

"A gleaners' campaign"—what had given her that thought? Instantly she knew that the plan was to be just that—a careful, thorough going over of the ground to gather up every available bit of humanity for the great temperance harvest. Exalted in some strange way, the state president returned to her examination of the workers. A fifth, Barbara Fenton, was chosen for occasional short trips or one-day meetings in the institute or convention season, and to speak at Sunday schools when a temperance speaker was requested. Another seemed to have in her just the right material. Of her the president thought, "If you sleep in a hayloft and live on a diet of cold pancakes no one will be the wiser." And thus it came about that without any effort on their part six women were chosen for the gleaners, because nature, the gifts of God, sorrow or gladness had fitted them for the hard, laborious tasks of the field worker.

It was after lunch, while the state president was taking her coveted forty winks, that she had her vision. For three days she wrote personal letters to her fellow officers and her organizers, drafted a letter to the sixty-seven unions in the pre-empted but unorganized counties, and sent a letter to the presidents of her organized county units.

"The twenty-one well-organized and well-officered counties with their dozens

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

BOY AND BAR

Wanted!—Wanted!—a boy for a licensed bar!
Give him, at once, as the bar demands!
Home, where the mother and sisters are,
Cease to withhold him with tender hands!
Church, that would guide him in days of youth,
Yield him where curses and crimes begin;
School, that would teach him the ways of truth,
Give him to teachers of shame and sin!

What is the home, when the bar must be?
What is the boy, when the bar must be?
Who should the mother defend, when she Hears the home robber command her —"Give,"
Give—of the blood of her inmost heart;
Give—of the life of her throbbing breast;
Give—of her body and soul a part;
Give—at the home robber's bold behest!

Nay! by the pain that the mother knew,
Giving the boy to enrich the state!
Nay! by the hope in her heart that grew,
Holy and strong, for his manhood great!
Nay! by the crown that the father wears—
King in a nation of kings indeed—
Silence forever the man who dares
Bid for the boy in his grasping greed!

Close the saloon, with its ravening cry!
Silence the men for the bar who stand;
Lift the white banner of manhood high,
Ever, for home, with a Christian hand!
Banish the foe of the soul and brain,
Stand for the right as you bravely can;
Go not with robbers for greed or gain!
Cast a clean ballot for boy and man!

—ALPHONSO ALVA HOPKINS

TAG DAY AND TIP TODD

A. MARIA CRAWFORD

Tip Todd found it a wonderfully inspiring experience to help his mother on Tag Day; it was hoped to raise a fund for the benefit of the wives and children of the drunkards of the town. Tip stood on the corner that had been assigned to him and was pleased to find his money box growing very heavy as the morning passed. When his mother came to him at noon and said that it was time to go home for lunch, he looked up at her pleadingly.

"Please, mother," he urged, "let me stay in town and get a cup of chocolate and a sandwich! It will save so much time and I can catch the business men as they pass here going home or down to that big club house in the next block. I want to make a lot of money to-day to help poor Sammy McNutt and his sisters. They had to quit school, mother, because their clothes were worn out and Mr. McNutt drinks up all the money he makes."

"All right, son. Make all you can for the little McNutts and the dozens of other children here who have drunkards for fathers. I'll take what you have already collected. My, your box is heavy, isn't it?"

"Mr. Craig Browne gave me five dollars for his tag and said that if it had not been for good temperance women like my mother, he would have been numbered among the drunkards and I would be begging for his little children today. Mr. Frank Sutton gave me two dollars. They were pretty good prices, weren't they, mother?"

Just after his mother had started home, Tip saw "old McNutt" as the boys called him, come lurching down the street. He was not drinking that day but his lagging gait was the result of habit and of the long, terrible sprees in which he indulged.

"What you selling, Tip?" he asked when he reached the corner where Tip stood.

"Tags for the Temperance Union, Mr. McNutt. Want to buy one?"

"How much?"

"Anything you want to give me," returned the boy. "We are trying to raise money for the children and wives of men who drink. Some of them are starving and we are glad to get anything that we can for them. Beggars can't be choosers, you know."

"Beggars? Maybe somebody calls my

Tip Todd

Sammy and Kate and Martha beggars. Do they?" he demanded fiercely.

Tip Todd faced him without flinching although McNutt looked angry and in a mood to strike. "Aren't they hungry, Mr. McNutt?"

The drunkard stared down into the sweet, guileless face of the boy before him. He was healthy, strong and well clothed. He shut his eyes and saw the thin, colorless faces of his own children, saw the rags that hung on their wasted bodies and knew that he was cheating them out of a chance to even live.

"I have no money to buy a tag, Tip, and if I could buy it, I ain't fit to wear it." He turned away, brushing his sleeve across his eyes.

"Here is something you can wear, Mr. McNutt, and it will make us all proud and happy to see it on your coat." Tip held up a white ribbon badge, that beautiful sign of the saving grace of God. "See how lovely and white it is. Wear it, please, for your children's sake."

Young Campaigners for Prohibition, Spanish Boys of Gardena, Calif., Who Helped in the Dry Campaign

"I will," said the man and the bent figure known as "old McNutt" straightened up, as if by magic, "and I'll sign the pledge today." Tip's right hand went out in brotherhood.

"Good for you, Mr. McNutt." The boy smiled up in the eyes of the man and reached into the breast pocket of his little Norfolk jacket, buttoned up under a rain coat that was to protect him in case of the threatened shower. "Here's a pledge right here and a pencil."

McNutt's hand shook as he held the little cardboard against a telephone pole and signed his name. "I'll take the ribbon now," he said, and put his thumb under his shabby coat lapel, holding it for Tip to pin the white ribbon bow in place. "I guess it'll kind of surprise the folks at home, won't it?" he asked wistfully, and Tip, child though he was, somehow sensed that love for fellowship that is in all our hearts at crucial times, and slipping his tags in his pocket, he said, "I'll just walk along with you. We'll tell Sammy together. He sat with me at school until he quit."

"Please God, he'll go back to school again," said the new McNutt.

That night while Tip's mother counted the coins and bills that had flowed into the little boy's box, his father reached across the table and picked up the pledge card signed by McNutt.

"Wasn't it wonderful, father," said the boy quietly, his face lighted by some fire within until it shone like an angel's, "wasn't it wonderful for Sammy's father to sign the pledge. I went home with him and he cried like a baby, he said that he was so ashamed of what he had done. I know that he is going to live right now." There was conviction in his boy's voice.

"If that card had been the only thing that was dropped into your box to-day, it would have been a red letter day for you, son, wouldn't it?"

"A red letter day for the McNutts, father, and a red letter day for me," he said.

Tip Todd's father looked at the sweet, serious face of his son, little dreaming that McNutt was the first of thousands of men that his boy would lead to the everlasting plains of peace.

Prohibition Pen Points From Pennsylvania

KATHARINE DEY HAUCK

Pennsylvania is having a rousing time with public meetings addressed by the best speakers. Woman suffrage is the theme most discussed just now and it is gratifying to hear how the rank and file regard the question. It is seldom a word is said against it by the plain, ordinary folk who are earning their living.

The star speaker, who has lately visited the eastern part of the state, is the National W. C. T. U. superintendent of Franchise, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, who has captured all hearts by her sweet, womanly personality, and has greatly advanced the cause by her logical statement of facts and conditions. At one of the meetings addressed by Mrs. Livingston, twenty girls representing the seven countries and thirteen states (counting Alaska), which have woman suffrage, gave her a royal welcome by singing a song composed by her. They all wore crowns as a symbol of their triumph.

Mrs. Lulu L. Shepard will be with us later and will address an audience at Willow Grove, the most popular music resort near Philadelphia. Mrs. E. P. Greist, state superintendent of Franchise, keeps the county workers well supplied with suggestions and information.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor received a warm welcome from audiences earlier in the season and many white ribbons were donned as the result of her work.

"The Flying Squadron" gave three days to Philadelphia on its final trip. Philadelphia county convention adjourned in the evening to attend in a body a mass meeting at the Forrest theater. Words fail to express the power and might of the addresses there delivered.

Reports at the Philadelphia county convention showed an increase of 315 members, making a total of 1,815. This does not meet the increase promised by the state but it is better than none. However, the feeling is growing that Pennsylvania will close the year with 50,000 members as planned at the convention of 1914.

While many unions adjourn for the summer months it is gratifying to know that work will not cease. One union armed its membership with literature which the women promised to use effectively for suffrage during vacation time.

The thousand and more unions in the Keystone state are always at it, doing some "pretty thing" or holding a helpful meeting.

Here are a very few of them:

The annual reception of the Temperance Light Bearers of College Hill W. C. T. U., held at the home of the state president, Mrs. Ella M. George, was a delightful success. The largest band of this division of work, Mrs. Jean Hagerty secretary, now has 525 members. The socials held by this worker and her "babies" are something to remember.

The institute held by Bucks county W. C. T. U. at Penns Park was interesting and helpful. Mrs. Sylvia B. Norrish, state corresponding secretary, was an efficient helper and the speaker of the evening. Mrs. Addie B. Parsels, vice-president of the state, figures frequently in reports from counties. In Jefferson county lately this eloquent speaker added 274 names to the list of members. The "peerless" Mrs. Mary Harris Armor gave a number of addresses throughout Luzerne county to appreciative audiences. Lycoming county expresses its appreciation of the work done by Mrs. S. C. Wilson. Clinton county tells of a delightful mothers' meeting held in the home of Mrs. William Callahan in Flemington.

Mrs. Olive Pond-Amies, state superintendent of Parliamentary Usage, entertained an institute at her beautiful country residence in Secane, near Philadelphia. Fifty guests partook of a delightful luncheon on the lawn. The feast of reason provided by the institute was equally satisfactory.

Madame Layyah Barakat has been engaged to give the Friday evening lectures before the Lehigh avenue branch of the Y. M. C. A. in November. This popular white ribboner will spend the summer in Old Orchard, Maine.

Slippery Rock W. C. T. U. held a silver medal contest which netted nearly fifty dollars profit and produced much favorable sentiment.

Mrs. Mary V. Stringer, president of Philadelphia county W. C. T. U., will start on a trip to the Pacific coast, July 9.

Mrs. Frances T. Woods, state treasurer emeritus of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., departed this life May 1, 1915. Mrs. M. Ella Stewart, state superintendent of Railroad Work, county corresponding secretary, president of the Jennie E. Niles union of York, and chairman of the Hospitality committee for the state convention, entered into rest April 27, 1915.

A VISION REALIZED

(Continued from Page Twelve)

of capable women are the grown-up children of the state union," she decided in the way she had of reducing every proposition to its easiest method of consideration. "They may engage workers from out of the state, if they wish, or may call on the state workers who are disqualified for the campaign, but they must not ask for an organizer this year. The thirty-six counties in which the work has been started, counties with one, two or even three unions but no county organization, shall be the wards of the state general officers, and each shall have a visit from two of us during the year. The twenty-five unclaimed counties must be divided among our four organizers as evenly as possible, and I must pay the money into the treasury to keep them at least two weeks in a county. Twelve dollars and fifty cents per week was the stipend paid to field workers in this particular state, and while the president felt that it was little enough, she realized to the full the enormity of the undertaking of raising $800 or $1,000 through her own efforts and prayers. The financial outlay of the officers would be more than quadrupled and the organizers would be at constant expense for at least four months, though the collections at public meetings could generally be counted on to cover the expense of travel.

By the end of the week replies to letters had begun to come in, and because the plan was seemingly of mystic origin, and because its novelty and practical form appealed to them, every worker in the state agreed to do her share!

(To be continued.)

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS

56 & 58 Park Place NEW YORK

HERE AND THERE

Mrs. Lillian Mitchner, president of the Kansas W. C. T. U., has been in charge of the Child Hygiene Exhibit at the W. C. T. U. Cottage at the Winfield Chautauqua, and the exhibit proved most interesting to visitors. During the last session of the legislature Mrs. Mitchner was instrumental in having passed the child hygiene bill, three new liquor laws, the law governing juvenile courts, that raising the age of consent from sixteen to eighteen years and the widow's pension law. She spent eight weeks at the legislature working conscientiously for the betterment of humanity and conditions.

Mrs. Nannie Webb Curtis, president Texas W. C. T. U., who is speaking for the Lincoln Chautauqua System this summer, writes of the young ladies who are conducting the playground work at each tent and the junior chautauqua held each afternoon, with a story hour from three to four. Mrs. Curtis has been talking to the young folks about "The King and His Wonderful Castle" and giving them some of Miss Tinling's temperance tales. At her own expense, she has ordered one of Miss Tinling's books for each young lady teacher. She also has a list for character-building for boys and one for girls. All the books in the series for girls are from our publishing house.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position. J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

The Complete Poems OF Mary A. Lathbury

POET LAUREATE of CHAUTAUQUA and a loyal and devoted member of the WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The book contains all of her lyrics and hymns and also Portraits of the Author

Introduction by Bishop JOHN H. VINCENT

Foreword by Dr. W. GARRETT HORDER of England

Price, $1.25 Postpaid

THE NUNC LICET PRESS

920 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, Minn.

Pennants, Hats and Buttons

for National Young Campaigners

The PENNANTS are 18 inches long, made in red, white or blue felt.

The HATS are made of blue felt, with the letters Y. C. P. in white.

The BUTTONS are red or blue, with letters.

PRICES

1 pennant,	1 hat,	1 button	.$ .20
25 pennants,	25 hats,	25 buttons.	4.00
100 pennants,	100 hats,	100 buttons.	15.00
1,000 pennants,	1,000 hats,	1,000 buttons.	130.00

PENNANTS

10 cents apiece $7.00 per hundred
8 cents each if 25 are ordered.

HATS

10 cents apiece $8.00 per hundred
9 cents each if 25 are ordered

BUTTONS

3 cents each 100 for $1.50
25 for 50 cents 500 for $5.00
1,000 for $9.00

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

"The brewing press refers to the Progressive party as the 'Prohigressive' party. We congratulate our friends, the Progressives, and confidently look forward to the early establishment of a 'Prohicrat' party and a 'Prohiblican' party',' says the bulletin of the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

NEW LEAFLETS

For General Distribution

The Brewer's Slaves (Illustrated)
Behind the Bars for Life
Prohibition's Effect Upon Revenue and Business

Size 6x9 inches
Price per 50, 12 cents; per 100, 20 cents

Consumption of Liquor Decreasing
Drink and Divorce

Size 3½x6 inches
Price per 50, 10 cents; per 100, 15 cents

POSTER LEAFLET SERIES

Reproductions of posters in small leaflet form

1. Which Will You Protect?
2. Do You Know These Facts?
3. Alcohol
4. Beer
5. Drink Robs the Working Man
6. The License Voter Gets What?
7. Attention Voters!
8. Figures Tell
9. Saloons Increase Taxes
10. The Trouble Manufacturing Co.
11. Compare These Figures
12. Boys and Girls
13. Not by My Vote
14. State Prohibition and Local Option
15. Railroads and Alcoholic Liquors
16. The Factory and Alcoholic Liquors
17. The Man Who Drinks
18. A Business Proposition
19. The Liquor Traffic Must Go

Price per 100, 10 cents

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Some person has said that alcohol will remove stains from clothes, which may be true. It will also remove the clothes; likewise the furniture, the provisions, the smiles, the happiness, the character, the reputation, the position, the self-respect, and the life. As a remover of things, alcohol has no equal.—Exchange

SUMMER ACTIVITIES OF THE MISSISSIPPI W. C. T. U.

MRS. FANNIE SCOTT

On the eve of a general state election in Mississippi our minds are naturally set on things political. The aspirants for office from constable to governor are many and varied, advocating many methods and measures of government.

Though not having yet attained unto the high estate of suffrage the faithful band of white ribboners of Mississippi is wielding the power accorded the "hand that rocks the cradle," to ascertain and publish abroad the position of prospective law-makers in regard to the liquor traffic, child labor, juvenile reformatory measures, Sabbath desecration and the white slave traffic. We hope to see the next legislature strike a definite, fatal blow that will sever these millstones from the necks of our people and enable us to eradicate, to a large extent, poverty, ignorance, misery and crime, and substitute therefor prosperity, enlightenment, morality and happiness.

The state president, Mrs. S. E. Stanley, returned from the Interstate Campaign Conference at Jacksonville, Fla., imbued with new ideas and plans, new aspirations and ambitions for the work in our state, and these she is passing on with encouragement and enthusiasm to the rank and file of her faithful followers.

Miss May Russell, National organizer and lecturer, is again afield, organizing the unoccupied territory, adding recruits to the white ribbon army and turning the searchlight of truth upon the dark places of error, prejudice and sin.

The summer Normal season is being utilized as a special opportunity for emphasizing the Scientific Temperance Instruction work before our school teachers.

The Press department secured a hearing before the state press association and received hearty assurances of sympathy and co-operation on the part of this assembly. Leaflets were distributed explaining the ready-print and plate service and the monthly clip sheet sent out by the National W. C. T. U. Bureau of Publicity. We have reason to believe a good harvest will result from the seed thus sown and the scope of our influence through the press be greatly extended.

In the departments of Purity, Mercy, Medal Contests, in fact in most of the twenty-three departments organized in our state, faithful and effective work is being done. No report from Mississippi would be complete that failed to make mention of the splendid advance of the Y. P. B.'s and L. T. L.'s under the gifted leadership of the commanders of these soldiers-in-training.

Uppermost in our hearts and minds and all-pervading in our supplications to the Father above are the two great hopes and ideals toward which we, as an organization of Christian women, strive—National Constitutional Prohibition and permanent universal peace. May God grant us a speedy realization of our hearts' desires.

W. C. T. U. ACHIEVEMENTS IN THE "SUNRISE KINGDOM"

(Continued from Page Six)

man who is loved by all the children of Japan. As he stood looking smilingly down upon the audience of gay flowers and bright butterflies, he said, "I have the honor to speak to many innocent souls in shapely temples, but who are not yet entirely safe from a future slavery to King Alcohol."

Mr. Kurishima is a strong advocate of total abstinence, and the beautiful and instructive story which he told the children, was one full of humor and pathos, with, at the heart, a strong plea for temperance.

During the business session two important resolutions were passed. The first was a pledge of all the members to use every possible influence to have women of doubtful character kept in the background during the approaching coronation festivities; the second, a pledge to work for the abolition of the entire brothel system by the end of the next six years. These two resolutions, together with a written message from the premier, Count Okuma, expressing his hearty approval of this wish of the women of the convention, was presented by Madam Yajima, to the governor, the mayor and the head of the police, accompanied by a request that these gentlemen use their influence for the same object.

A generous gift of Madam Yajima of Yen 2,000, a thank-offering which had been presented to her by her old pupils, and which she wished to consecrate to her life-work, the cause of temperance, aroused the enthusiasm of the women. This money is to be applied toward the Yen 6,000, which are being raised to purchase land for a site for a W. C. T. U. headquarters building in Japan. There was in the treasury before the convention Yen 2,000 for this fund, and with the addition of Madam Yajima's contribution it was necessary to raise only Yen 2,000. The Japanese white ribboners have been heavily taxed in keeping up the regular work of the organization, and the raising of this large amount seemed almost impossible. But enthusiasm can overcome almost insurmountable obstacles, and in the week following the close of the convention almost Yen 1,000 was pledged, leaving only Yen 1,000 still to be raised.

Ten years ago Amberg, Wisconsin, was the heart of the lumber jack region and the saloon was the most prominent institution in the place. This year Amberg had a "dry" Fourth of July celebration.

Iowa farmers had a good deal to do with the change for many Iowa young men have taken up old timber land in Wisconsin and transformed a vista of charred stumps into a farming paradise. These Iowa farmers were instrumental in voting the saloons out of Amberg and in instituting the first "dry" celebration held in the county.—Des Moines (Ia.) Capital.

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year

Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.

Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75

Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year

Address Evanston, Ill.

WHILE ON YOUR SUMMER VACATION

While on your summer vacation bear in mind THE UNION SIGNAL. First of all have your address changed so that your paper will reach you promptly during the vacation season. After reading, pass it on to others. As your friends gather for an afternoon chat, mention some article you have read and a pleasant discussion will follow, one line of thought suggesting another; you, a reader of THE UNION SIGNAL, will be able to speak with authority on these occasions, having gained your information from this reliable source. There is hardly a doubt that before the end of the vacation season you will have so interested at least ten people in our work that they will want the official paper for themselves. Try this plan. Interest those about you, first by loaning them your paper, and then through informal discussion. Secure the ten subscriptions and as a premium let us send you that invaluable biography, "The Life of Frances E. Willard," written by Anna Adams Gordon. We also suggest that this volume be presented to your school library at the very beginning of the school year.

YOUNG CRUSADER SUBSCRIPTIONS

Let us remind you that when planning your birthday or picnic party in celebration of Young Crusader Subscription Day, the birthday of our beloved Anna A. Gordon, the children's friend the world around, you do not fail to order early copies of The Young Crusader. The issues of May and June that you will wish to use as souvenirs of the happy day are $1.50 per hundred, while copies of back numbers for use in securing subscriptions will be furnished free.

Why not have a subscription contest of one week in honor of this red letter day? Each Loyal Legioner working in a live, earnest subscription contest of one week can obtain scores of subscriptions for the best juvenile temperance paper published —The Young Crusader.

THEY RECEIVED "THE LIFE OF FRANCES E. WILLARD"

The following persons have secured "The Life of Frances E. Willard," by Anna A. Gordon as a premium for sending ten subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL:

48 Mrs. Fannie Van Gelder, Ithaca, N. Y.

49 Mrs. M. A. Reichenbach, Oakdale, Cal.

50 Miss Helen Olmsted, Milford, Pa.

51 Mrs. Emma Madden, Ingersoll, Okla.

52 Mrs. Joseph Grover, Red Bank, N. J.

53 Emma M. Davidson, Milton, Dela.

54 Mrs. D. A. Shaffer, St. Edward, Neb.

55 Mrs. Bessie Lathe Scovell, Minneapolis, Minn.

"PROHIBITION FOR VERMONT" IS THE CRY

Vote To Be Taken March 1916

Special Correspondence

The series of county conventions which began in Vermont the last of April extended to Miss Lillian Phelps of Niagara Falls, N. Y., the principal speaker, a most cordial welcome. Her address, "The Church, the School and the Saloon," has been characterized as "magnificent." Vermont's state W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. M. L. Pearson, accompanied Miss Phelps and has been a power for good wherever she has spoken. In her own county, Orleans, of which she is president, a company of one hundred Young Campaigners for Prohibition, the first organized in Vermont, gave a demonstration which added much to the interest of the convention.

The Loyal Temperance Legion Branch, under the present state secretary, Mrs. A. F. Smith, president of Bennington county, is taking on new life. Mrs. Smith has issued blotters in red, white and blue, on each of which is printed a strong sentiment against the use of cigarets. These are being ordered by the different counties for use in the schools.

The executive committee of the Allied Temperance Forces of Vermont is working steadfastly to secure a decisive verdict at the polls, March 7, 1916, for the prohibition of the liquor traffic in Vermont. This committee includes the president of the state W. C. T. U.; the superintendent of the Vermont Anti-Saloon League; a member of the executive committee of the Prohibition party; Chief Templar of the Grand Lodge of Vermont I. O. G. T.; the president of the Vermont Sunday School Association; the master of the state grange and the secretary of the state Y. M. C. A.

In direct opposition to the opinions of the Allied Temperance Forces, a Vermont local option league has been organized with a prominent attorney as president and a vice-president in each county, all claiming to be true friends of temperance, but differing as to the method of its promotion.

This will necessarily be a year of constant, earnest work in Vermont, which should be conducted in a spirit of good will, accompanied by prayer to the source of all wisdom for power rightly to discern the true from the false.

DR. WILEY'S "HOT WEATHER DO'S AND DON'TS"

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley has promulgated a few "hot weather do's and don't's." Here they are:

"Eat everything, but moderately.

"Abstain from alcohol and tobacco.

"Drink plenty of cold water, but do not gulp it.

"Never drink with meals, but immediately after.

"Eat plenty of fruits and vegetables.

"Abstain from sweet soda fountain drinks, unless the syrup is used sparingly in them.

"If you eat moderately and refrain from drugs, do not be afraid of sunstroke."

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

Crepe Paper Napkins

Gold or Pink Border with W.C.T.U. Monogram in Gold

Use These for

Luncheons
Porch Parties
Sociables
Picnics

Price per 25, 20 Cents. Per 100, 75 Cents

Drinking Cups

A Folded Cup Made of Wax Paper

Price per Dozen, 10 Cents. Per 100, 50 cents

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House
Evanston, Illinois

A Wave of Prohibition

FACTS AND FIGURES

ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN

(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth by Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

"High Joe" or The Logger's Story

By J. BURRITT SMITH

Striking, pathetic, convincing—and a vote-maker. Called "The Uncle Tom's Cabin of the Temperance Reform." Sixteen editions issued.

Paper, 35c; cloth, $1.00

Busy World Publishing Co.
22 S. Henry St. Madison, Wis.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI EVANSTON, ILL., JULY 29, 1915 No. 31

OUR CONVENTION CITY

Photo by Curtis and Miller, Seattle

See Page 2

The Sky Line of Seattle, Washington,
Olympic Mountains and Puget Sound

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH.
OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SEATTLE, THE "QUEEN" CITY, OUR 1915 HOSTESS FOR THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

HELEN N. STEVENS

The whole state of Washington will join in welcoming the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention in October.

Who has not heard of Seattle, the pride of Washington state and the metropolis of the Northwest? Seattle, with its young past, its happy present and its promising future; Seattle, which having no hoary past to live down by reason of having been born in the twentieth century, is fortunately in a position to avoid the mistakes of the old order of municipalities and to build a glorious city, morally and materially. To the tourist who has not visited the Pacific coast the facts regarding the growth and development of this western city seem too fanciful to be true, but seeing is believing. So come west, dear delegates to the 1915 convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and view in the making a city of more than 300,000 people.

Situated on Puget Sound, the American Mediterranean, the town was founded in 1852, but was almost eliminated by fire in 1889, from which event its rapid growth dates. In a half century Seattle has developed from a pioneer settlement to the second city, in importance, west of the Rockies, the twenty-first city in the United States, and the first in the state of Washington. This city stands not on one hill, but on many; it commands the most magnificent views of ocean, mountains, lakes and valleys and has a climate unsurpassed. Seattle's western boundary is the salt-water beaches of the Sound, attractive and strategic; Lake Washington, thirty miles long, is on the east; Lake Union, in the center, and Green Lake within its northern boundary. The city views the Olympic mountains to the westward, the Cascades to the eastward, Mount Baker on the north and Mount Rainier on the south. An automobile ride ten miles to the north and an equal distance to the south will still be within the confines of the city.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention, Seattle, Washington, October 9-14, 1915

Seattle in 1913 imported and exported, through its ocean traffic, cargoes valued at $124,000,000. It is estimated that this traffic will reach fully $150,000,000 during the present year. Seattle has thirty miles of city boulevards, thirty-eight city parks, twenty-two children's playgrounds, with a public bathing pavilion on salt water; a public library with nine branch libraries; a university with a campus of 355 acres; a Government assay office; three hundred churches; six high schools and sixty-four graded schools. Seattle is the best lighted city in the west, with municipally-owned water, light and street-railway utilities. Seattle is the distributing point for Alaska and the Orient, with seven transcontinental railroads and sixty steamship lines. It is a cosmopolitan city, the mecca for tourists and the pride of the Northwest.

In order to familiarize the expectant visitor with the convention city's attractions, THE UNION SIGNAL will each week publish an article on one of these features. As the needs of the children appeal most strongly to members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union the playgrounds of Seattle will form the basis of the story for the next issue. In the matter of juvenile amusements this western city has taken a leading part.

PROHIBITION IN WEST VIRGINIA EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS OF FRIENDS

West Virginia is becoming about as famous as Kansas as an "unanswerable argument" in favor of prohibition. Decrease in crime, better collections, larger sales of necessary commodities and general prosperity are evidences of the success of the experiment.

One of the many witnesses giving testimony to these facts is Judge Null, a police court judge of Huntington. In an article by Mr. Joseph D. Ihmsen in a recent issue of the Gazette Times of Pittsburgh, from which we quote, Judge Null tells how beneficial have been the results following the enforcement of the new law:

Judge Null had always accepted the saloon and had not a thing to say against the saloon business, for he was not responsible for the legalization of the traffic. "But I voted for prohibition," he said, "when I was confronted with the necessity of deciding whether I, personally, as a voter, should or should not license the saloon. I am of German descent. I see nothing wrong in taking a glass of beer, have taken a glass myself and probably would take another one, but I would never vote to legalize the liquor traffic. I know of no man here who voted for prohibition who would undo the work he helped to do, should there be another vote on the question, and I personally know scores of men who voted against prohibition who would be for it should they have the opportunity to say whether or not the saloon should be again legalized."

A year ago Judge Null predicted that there would be less drunkenness in Huntington as a result of prohibition; that many drunkards would become men again; that moderate drinkers would soon feel abstinence to be no deprivation; that the liquor men who were filling up Ashland and Catlettsburg, Kentucky, with saloons, in anticipation of a big trade from this section of West Virginia, would be disappointed. When the judge was reminded of his forecast of a year ago, he said, "Those predictions have come true, and in some respects the results have exceeded my expectations. Fortunately, I have the evidence in black and white to prove my assertions. Our police records show that, whereas during the years antedating prohibition, 100 to 140 drunks were arrested every month, the monthly average during the past twelve months has been 40 to 70. Half as many drunks as before. The average number of arrests per month for all sorts of petty crimes used to be 370 to 385; since July 1, 1914, the monthly average is shown to be 160 to 170 cases. Isn't that a pretty good showing?

"But conditions are even better than the police books show. When we had 30 legalized saloons, at least 1,000 cases of intoxication a month were never heard of officially. The drunks were ordered off home by the policemen. But now—well, the police arrest every man who shows signs of intoxication, and I fine them or put them to work on the street, if they can't pay their fines. I think I can fairly argue from the comparative infrequency of arrests for drunkenness that there are more than 1,000 fewer cases of intoxication a month than there were prior to the coming in of prohibition."

A year ago it was said that Huntington would sorely miss the $30,000 which the city annually got from the saloons; that property would depreciate in value, general property valuations would go down, and the burden upon the general taxpayer would be increased. Judge Null was asked about that.

"Our fiscal year begins on July 1. In 1913-14 the tax was 65 cents on the $100 worth of property; 1914-15, the first year of prohibition, the tax was 64 cents, a decrease of one cent. The increase in the value of property in 1914-15 took care of the deficit which otherwise would have arisen from the loss of the saloon license money. The taxes will be 65 cents, probably, next fiscal year—but you've seen our new city hall, and we are going to have an up-to-date police station that will have to be financed. I and other men have duly pondered the prediction that the loss of revenue from the saloon would be missed by the city; we have looked up and compared figures, and we have come to the conclusion that the $30,000 we don't get any more is offset by the reduced expenses of taking care of crime and criminals. Cabell county knows to its cost that a crime committed by a drunken gang can run up $10,000 in court expenses that the taxpayers must meet."

As a man of affairs Judge Null might be expected to know whether prohibition has hurt business, and he was asked that question. He replied:

"Fewer of our dealers in supplies for the home have failed during the past fiscal year, the first of prohibition, than in any one previous year, even though times have been close, and money hard to get and our factories and shops have been working short time."

All Liquor Is Barred in Defenses of Paris

Military Governor Forbids Dealers to Sell to Soldiers in the Camps

General Gallieni, the military governor of Paris, is reported to have issued an order forbidding the purchase by or sale to soldiers or officers of whatever grade in the intrenched camp of Paris of any alcoholic liquors whatsoever.

Offenders will be cited to appear before the police courts and military tribunals. Liquor dealers violating this order will be punished by a temporary suspension of their licenses on the first offense and revocation on the second offense.

British Curtail Liquor Sales in Mine District

The Associated Press reports that besides limiting the hours during which intoxicating liquor may be sold in towns where the government has taken over control of the sale of liquors, the board of control appointed to deal with the munition areas has ordered that there shall be no treating and has prohibited the giving of credit for liquor. The sale of liquor in licensed houses is permitted only between the hours of noon and 2:30 p. m. and between 6 and 8 o'clock in the evening. No orders may be given or accepted for spirits to be consumed off the premises on Saturdays and Sundays and only between noon and 2:30 p. m. on other days. The penalty for contravention of the regulations is fixed at six months' imprisonment and a fine of $500.

Mexican Towns Go Dry

Most of the towns along the Bavispe and Sonora rivers in eastern and central Sonora, Mexico, are reported dry because of the prohibition edict issued recently by Gen. Calles, the Carranza commander.

Alcohol the Enemy of Education

That alcoholic liquor is education's greatest enemy and stumbling block is the expressed belief of Mr. George T. Powell, president of the New York State Horticultural Society, as stated in an address before the graduates of the Horticultural School for Women at Ambler, Pa.

"Rum," said Mr. Powell, "has proved Europe's curse, and today America is spending a billion and a half dollars for alcohol. Our greatest institutions of learning find drink their chief competitor, as in all economic problems.

"Women's influence may bring about a solution of this momentous question. Her study of the support through the soil of the increasing population of the earth and her study of the unrest among the laboring classes are all signs of a better day. The day is not far distant when women are going to bring pressure to bear that will eliminate the drink evil."

Rum Responsible for Sixty Per Cent of Divorces

The records of the courts of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, according to the North American of Philadelphia, show that sixty per cent of the 100 divorce proceedings now pending are due to the alcohol evil. In the majority of cases the husband is accused of being addicted to the use of liquor, which led to abuse, neglect or desertion.

Prohibitionists Win in Alberta By 20,000 Majority, the Province Votes to Bar Out Liquor

(By The Associated Press)

Edmonton, Alberta, July 22.—By a majority of almost two to one, the province of Alberta, in a plebiscite vote under the new direct legislation act, has declared in favor of the proposed liquor act, prohibiting the sale of liquor throughout the province. All the cities except Lethbridge went "dry," Edmonton showing a majority of 3,600 and Calgary about 3,300. The new liquor prohibition act goes into effect July 1, 1916.

New Use for Stereopticon and Automobile

A successful method of outdoor temperance education has been in use for some time by the Unitarian Temperance Society in Boston. A lantern is placed on the hood of a motor car at the back. When the machine stops a sheet is hoisted in front, on which are thrown twenty-five lantern slides telling simply what alcohol is and what it costs. When the car was used in Boston last summer 500 men often gathered around it of an evening and were in this way instructed as to the nature and effect of alcohol.

Gratifying Decrease of Crime in Growing Prohibition City of Berkeley

"The growth of crime in Berkeley, California, seems to be in inverse ratio to the growth in opulation," declares Chief of Police Vollmer of this prohibition city of the West. Figures show that ten years ago with a population of 26,000 the number of arrests for the year was 310, while last year with a population of more than 65,000 there were but 291 arrests. "When we grow to 200,000," explained the chief, "we won't have any crooks at all, which is a comforting thought," adding as an afterthought, "Maybe it isn't so comforting after all. Perhaps they won't need a chief of police."

A Liquorless Independence Day in Arizona

With a prohibition law in Arizona which has been in force for only seven months the Independence Day celebrations this year were of a different order from those of former years. Bisbee, the largest mining camp in the state, reports the most successful celebration in its history and that without saloon money or drunken men. Phoenix, with 10,000 population, drew 10,000 people to the celebration at its park. Only five persons were arrested for drunkenness, and many who were on the outlook for drunken men, a sight all too frequent in former times, saw not one the whole day through. The mine owners who solidly opposed statewide prohibition are now without exception in favor of it. "I voted wet but I would not vote to have the saloon return," is the familiar verdict of citizens in every part of the state.

Brewery to Manufacture Malted Milk

It is announced through the general press that Coor's brewery, located at Golden, Colorado, on August 15 will discontinue the manufacture of beer, and employ the same force of men in the manufacture of malted milk. The plant is said to represent an investment of a million dollars.

They Listened!

The "efficiency" argument in favor of prohibition may be the popular one at the present time, but the "human interest" element in the anti-liquor movement will sometimes win where everything else fails. The Minneapolis (Minn.) Journal tells the following touching incident of one of the recent county option campaigns:

"No campaign for county option is likely to develop a more dramatic incident than that which occurred in this village before the recent election. Adams is and has been the wettest of all wet spots in this part of the state. When dry speakers from Austin attempted to speak on the streets here they met with some trouble and one of them was seized by a big saloon man and dragged toward a saloon. He refused to enter and finally escaped. In the meantime about fifty men and boys approached a second speaker who stood on a dry goods box addressing the crowd and heckled and hooted him.

"Into the crowd that stood before the speaker staggered a young man who fell in the dirt of the street. A well-dressed woman of the village, a former school teacher, pushed her way to the front and pointing to the drunken man, said:

"'There lies one who was the flower of the young men of Adams. He was respected by all of you. He is as kind a brother when not drunk as a sister ever had. That drunken man is my brother. I am his sister. The saloons have made him what he is. Men and women of Adams, as that man's sister, I beg of you to give these men from Austin a hearing.'

"Within twenty-four hours the story was known throughout the southern tier of townships of Mower county and the dry vote was greatly augmented on election day."

Indiana Board of Health May Inaugurate Anti-Alcohol Campaign

According to the Indianapolis News, a fight for some sort of drastic action against alcoholic beverages by the state board of health of Indiana may be started by Dr. James S. Boyers, president of the board.

Indiana's health officers have already spoken in condemnation of the liquor evil, a conference of two hundred health officers of the Hoosier state having heretofore passed a strong resolution to the following effect:

"A diminution in the consumption of alcohol by the community, according to those who are in a position to know and to judge, would mean less tuberculosis, less poverty, less dependency and less pressure on our hospitals, asylums and jails. Drinking cuts into the support of the family. The drinking of parents weakens the vitality of children. Drinking mothers lose twice as many babies as do sober mothers. More alcoholism is found in the parents of feebleminded children than in the parents of normal children. The children of drinkers develop more slowly and do poorer school work than do the children of abstainers."

WHY MICHIGAN MADE A GAIN

MRS. MYRTA E. LOCKWOOD
State Recording Secretary

First of all we tried our best to follow the plan of Mother National and secure our share of the gain in membership. Every one of the twelve districts made a net gain notwithstanding local losses and the promotion of nearly two hundred loyal workers. Our field workers were kept busy. Our efficient leader, Mrs. E. L. Calkins, personally won eight hundred active and one hundred ninety-six honorary members.

The Institute department has been thoroughly worked. Mrs. Perkins, the Institute superintendent, held seventy institutes, with twenty-three Sunday services, securing 388 active and 150 honorary members.

Michigan's proportion of the 50,000 increase was 2,600. This was apportioned to the local unions and the result was the splendid gain of 2,263, as shown by the treasurer. To counties making a gain of fifty, blue ribbons were given; for a gain of twenty-five and less than fifty, a red ribbon; counties holding their own, white. About sixty counties were organized. Of these, twenty-three won blue ribbons, ten, red, and twenty, white, and we sang with enthusiasm "Hurrah, for the red, white and blue."

Efficiency institutes are planned for the coming year and the goal is 20,000 members by the next roll call—June, 1916.

"Michigan's going dry,
Michigan's going dry.
Pass along the watchword
Michigan's going dry."

The call goes round among the 15,261 members:

"My—My—My—V-I-C-T-O-R-Y—
We must work to make Michigan dry."

20th CENTURY RED MAN READY TO FIGHT "FIREWATER"

It speaks well for the future of the American Indian that the generation now being educated in our schools and colleges is possessed of a deep-seated hatred for alcohol. The Indian students of Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kansas, have written some forceful essays on the subject of the drink evil, and one by a seventh grade pupil, from which we quote, tells of a strong determination to lead his people in a victorious war against John Barleycorn:

"I am ready to be one of Gideon's 300 to fight against our common enemy—alcohol—so that I will not be a beggar. I am going to stand against it. If it is put before my eyes I will gladly remember that I have lived in the prohibition state of Kansas, and that the people there have taught me not to take any kind of drink. I am going to try hard to fight this liquor away from my people back home, so that we might have prohibition among the Indians there, like Kansas. Every time they get drunk there is always a fight. Women and children drink as men do. My people need help along this line. Today I am living without parents. This liquor is the cause of that and they try hard to get us in this trap. My father was found under the snow by a farmer who happened to drive to town after the snowstorm. What was the cause of this? Alcohol. Alcohol is the cause of nearly all crime. Let us brace up and fight against our common enemy who is killing our parents."

PLEA FOR PROHIBITION FROM THE NEGRO

The better class of colored people are waking up to the harm alcoholic drink does them and their race. In some cases they plead with the white voters to outlaw the liquor traffic for their protection. The Calhoun (S. C.) Advance recently published an eloquent appeal from a negro of that county to his white friends and neighbors to vote for prohibition next September.

The letter reads as follows:

"For the last thirty years I have hardly let a single day pass without being under the influence of whisky. During the revival services conducted by Rev. McLendon in St. Matthews I became convinced that I myself was the worst enemy that I had. I was converted under his preaching and since that time I have not touched a drop of whisky, and so help me God, I do not expect to touch a drop as long as I live.

"I have been spending at least thirty cents a day for whisky for the last twenty-five years. I got Mr. Wannamaker, president of the St. Matthews National Bank, to calculate this for me and see what amount of money I would have had, had I saved this money, and I find that had I deposited thirty cents a day for twenty-five years in the Farmers Bank and Trust Co., The Home Bank or St. Matthews National Bank at four per cent interest, at the end of ten years I would have had $1,471.56; at the end of twenty-five years I would have had $6,382.47 and at the end of fifty years I would have had the amazing amount of $54,162.14.

"We beg that our white friends vote this state and county for prohibition in September, that they do not permit a blind tiger to sell a drop of this awful stuff that is ruining our race. We know that the white people are the best friends we have and we cannot think that they will permit the sale of this awful stuff to continue and thus unfit us to live among them as we should.

"When we are called to the great beyond, will the great God hold us responsible for using whisky, and not hold our white friends responsible for permitting it to be sold?"

GOVERNOR CAPPER'S BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR THE CHILDREN OF TOPEKA

The "kiddies" of Topeka, Kansas, were the guests of that good friend of prohibition, Governor Arthur Capper, on July 14, the occasion of his fiftieth birthday. More than 6,000 children from tiny toddlers to sixteen-year-olds enjoyed the hospitality of the governor. To insure the pleasure of the little people Governor Capper leased for the day nine moving picture theaters with the provision that only high grade films be shown. Automobiles were supplied for crippled and shut-in children and they were thus enabled to have a part in the governor's birthday party. Ice cream was provided in abundance. The street cars carried free of charge the governor's guests, and special policemen and firemen were detailed to see that no harm befell the little ones.

Governor Capper not only upon his birthday, but every day of the year is planning and working for the interests of the children, in urging and enforcing laws for their protection. It is his proud boast that he is governor of a state which has more than half a million boys and girls who have never been contaminated by the sight of an open saloon.

MISSOURI ACTIVITIES

MRS. FANNIE L. TAYLOR

The women of Missouri are learning more and more the value of co-operation in all organized efforts. More and more they realize that "united we stand." At the convention of the state Equal Suffrage Association, after an address on "Co-operation" by Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, Missouri's W. C. T. U. president, the association voted jointly to launch the suffrage campaign for Missouri in 1916. A conference was held by the officers of the two organizations and plans for the campaign formulated. It was decided to begin at once the educational work. The plans include the simultaneous circulation of petitions, both organizations to keep records thereof; to make it a real educational campaign, each local union in the state is asked to take franchise as its leading state work, making suffrage the dominant note for the campaign months, but still continuing vigorously to educate for National Constitutional Prohibition. Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer, a suffrage lecturer of especial ability, will hold suffrage schools throughout the state and do all kinds of campaign work, under a happy arrangement which will benefit both organizations. Each organization will furnish speakers and carry its own financial responsibility. The last afternoon of the state convention at Sikeston, Mo., September 17, will be a suffrage rally. Mrs. Lillian Mitchner, president Kansas W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Helen G. Miller, president Missouri Equal Suffrage Association; Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer, and a long array of Missouri talent will participate.

Champ Clark Sees Suffrage for Missouri

Hon. Champ Clark, speaker of the House of Representatives, recently faced a band of suffragists in a hotel lobby in San Francisco and pledged allegiance to their cause generally. He said: "I expect to see Missouri a suffrage state soon and I am going to help."

There are those who think Missouri should work for a Congressional resolution for a national constitutional amendment for suffrage, while others wish to continue campaigning in each state for individual state action. Missouri has chosen the latter course, which seems most practical.

Fewer Saloon Applications in Kansas City, Mo.

Wilbur F. Hall, secretary to the police commissioners, in speaking of the 540 applications for saloon licenses to be passed on as compared with 616 at this time last year, said: "The increased police regulation has taken a lot of business away from the saloons. That combined with the tendency of the general public to avoid the use of liquor is slowly putting the saloon out of business. Corporations and business houses have placed a ban on liquor and the men are slowly learning that the less whisky they drink the more money they earn. It is only a matter of a few years before the saloon will be a thing of the past." Mr. Hall might have added, "With the W. C. T. U. women praying, working, remonstrating, petitioning, having the names of dead men and non-residents stricken from saloon petitions, agitating, educating and singing 'We Want Our City Dry' the years will soon dwindle to months."

A Kansas City liquor man said very recently, "I must 'make my pile' in the next two years, for by that time it will be too late in my business."

The annual picnic of the Kansas City (Mo.) Loyal Temperance Legion was held in Budd Park on Miss Gordon's birthday. Two silver medal oratorical contests were held as a part of the program, giving the public a favorable impression of L. T. L. work. A fascinating tale of a little boy's big imagination was one number of the program. Other readings and songs, and

(Continued on Page Eleven)

KANSAS A STATE OF SQUARE DEALS

GOVERNOR CAPPER IN ADDRESS AT PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION EXTOLS BENEFITS OF PROHIBITION

Like a true son of Kansas Governor Capper never neglects an opportunity to proclaim the glories of the "sunflower state" and to extol the prohibition law. On July 19, he made the principal address on the Kansas Day program at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. In an eloquent recital of the state's progress, he said:

Kansas Has Proud Record

California has invited us to come here —with all the rest of the world—and to "put our best foot forward." I wish that I might, today, make a fitting exhibit of what Kansas really is and what Kansas stands for. Kansas—

The state which sends more boys and girls to university, college and public school, in proportion to population, and fewer men and women to prison and jail than any other state.

The state which has the lowest percentage of crime, poverty, immorality, insanity, imbecility and drunkenness.

The state which was first successfully and completely to wipe out the abominable saloon traffic.

The state which for thirty-five years has not had a legalized saloon or brewery, and now has eighty-eight city and county jails that are empty, forty-seven poor farms and almshouses that are unoccupied, twenty-eight counties in which the criminal courts have not had a prosecution in more than a year.

The state which was first to declare unanimously through its legislature, its state officials and its entire delegation in Congress for Nationwide Prohibition (and National Prohibition is coming in less than ten years, just as sure as the sun shines).

The state which has the lowest death rate in the United States, only seven to the 1,000, a percentage constantly decreasing, notwithstanding we have more motor cars in proportion to population than any state.

The state which has the largest per capita of wealth—almost $2,500 for every man, woman and child within its borders.

Cleanest, Soberest Commonwealth

The state which holds the world's record as a producer of wheat—a single crop of 185,000,000 bushels—exceeding in value twice over all the gold and silver mined in the United States and Alaska in an entire year, and enough to feed every family in the United States for at least twelve months.

The state to which the jury of awards of your great international exposition only the other day, awarded one grand prize and seventy-eight medals for the surpassing excellence of its agricultural exhibit.

The one state which has more than a half million boys and girls who never saw an open saloon.

The finest, cleanest, soberest, happiest, most prosperous commonwealth in this Union.

This is the exhibit of Kansas I should like to make to the people of the world in your beautiful exposition, and I freely confess I am proud to be the chief executive of such a state; and especially proud to be the first native Kansan to become its governor; the first to be chosen by the votes of Kansas women. It is an honor of which any man may be proud.

—Topeka Capital

GOVERNOR CAPPER AND SOME OF KANSAS' FUTURE CITIZENS

"I am immensely proud of the fact that Kansas has more than half a million boys and girls who never saw an open saloon."

And Kansas Is Prosperous

We are told by the kings of finance in Wall street that Kansas is today the most prosperous state in the Union. This is true. We have 205 millions of surplus wealth piled in our banks and savings institutions. But better and nobler than all this material success is the high standard of citizenship, the fine spirit of justice and fairness that animates the soul of every true Kansan with a little more fervor, I am sometimes tempted to think, than the citizen of any other state.

The true greatness of Kansas, as of any state, lies in the moral fiber of its people. Kansas is a great state because it is populated by great-hearted men and women. The pioneers who won the wilderness for us were hardy men and women, strong of heart and great of soul—they laid the foundation for a great state. It was Kansas that led the way in the nation's great struggle for human freedom, and for more than a third of a century the Kansas conscience has been in the forerank in almost every effort to elevate the moral, social and educational standards of the nation. In Kansas a genuine effort has been made to incorporate in our body politic, fundamental moral ideas, and we have endeavored to base our laws and our institutions upon the eternal truths that tend to righteousness.

Little Nearer Square Deal

I honestly believe that Kansas today comes a little nearer than any other state in the Union to giving every man, woman and child within its borders evenhanded justice, a square deal and an equal chance in every department of life.

And this has been brought about by the character and stability of the Kansas people; it is because our Kansas citizenship is made up of men and women dominated so largely by Christian ideals—right living, high thinking, decency, honesty, sobriety, industry and the noblest things of life. Their patriotism and their high ideals are reflected in our laws and our institutions.

Our history from the first day down to the present is filled with deeds of heroism and self sacrifice. In the field, on the street, in the railway yard, we find every day men and women who are ready to lay down their lives in the service of humanity. It is not necessary to go to the bloody battlefields of Europe to find heroes, nor to the camps and hospitals of that sorely beset continent to find true heroines. I know that we have them in Kansas and in California —men and women of heroic strain, who in living their daily life, in doing their part in the world's work, in maintaining the high standards which are our ideal, are showing as great heroism as was ever shown in storm or battle.

Good To Live In Kansas

If it is good to live in Kansas it is because the people of Kansas have made it so. Kansas people have never dodged a difficulty nor refused to face an issue. Kansas now is a good place in which to live largely because thirty years ago we dared to make the open saloon an outlaw, because we were not afraid to attack a curse as ancient as human history and put it from us forever. I am immensely proud of the fact that Kansas has more than half a million boys and girls who never saw an open saloon. And now that National Prohibition and world-wide prohibition are coming just as surely as tomorrow's sunrise, Kansas has done, is doing, and will do more to bring this great blessing about than any other state.

NOVEL METHODS OF THE 1915 SUFFRAGE CAMPAIGN

JANE A. STEWART, Philadelphia, Pa.

Probably never before in the long and stirring history of the woman suffrage movement has there been so notable a campaign year as the current one of 1915.

While a greater number of states have been involved in previous campaigns, this year outclasses all others in the importance of the communities both as regards size and influence. The winning of but a single one of the four states aligned in this year's suffrage struggle means the breaking down of the solid arch of "slave states ranged on the Atlantic Coast."

Suffrage forces in each one of these four states are thus keenly desirous of seeing their state the first free state in the East and the leader in the movement for the political emancipation of woman. This natural desire is manifested most vividly in the great variety of their efforts, which are spectacular and original, and worthy of wide emulation by reformers everywhere.

Native American Women Denied Rights Freely Granted Untutored Newcomers

The plea for suffrage is usually eloquently vocal; but it can be eloquently mute. This was shown in the United States District Court in New York City recently when the oath of allegiance was being administered to newly naturalized citizens. Thirty women in their collegiate caps and gowns (with yellow sashes bearing the inscription, "Votes for Women") led by the president of the College Equal Suffrage League, appeared and watched the proceedings which in two hours made voters out of thirty-three aliens, endowing these untutored newcomers with the sacred rights of citizenship denied to the intelligent native American women.

"We women whose fathers fought and died for this nation, must work years in vain and are forced to plead with these foreigners to grant us a voice in our own country's affairs," said one. "Could anything be more unfair and humiliating?"

The printed suffrage appeal takes on striking forms, as in the case of the New York Women's Trade Union League's "Workingmen—Help," a remarkable call to the workingmen to show their faith in woman suffrage by their vote on November 3, declaring that "it is one thing to be on record for 'votes for women' and another thing to work actively for it so as to make it a living fact. This we ask you to do now."

"Suffrage" gardens of yellow flowers showing the words "Votes for Women" are seen in all the campaign states. In New York the suffragists have significantly added to their gardens, blue flowers for victory.

STATUS OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

FULL SUFFRAGE

Wyoming	1869
Colorado	1893
Idaho	1896
Utah	1896
Washington	1910
California	1911
Arizona	1912
Kansas	1912
Oregon	1912
Alaska	1913
Nevada	1914
Montana	1914

PRESIDENTIAL AND MUNICIPAL SUFFRAGE

Illinois	1913

STATES TO VOTE ON SUFFRAGE AT NEXT GENERAL ELECTION

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts

STATES TO VOTE IN 1916

Iowa, South Dakota, West Virginia

All sorts of novel devices have been conceived for raising suffrage funds. An "Earners' Day" for special work in Albany was marked by the conducting of special "jitney" bus service for that occasion. Suffrage melting pots have been particularly popular and are good clearing houses for otherwise useless old trinkets.

Blue birds, suggestive of happiness and success, are a feature of the Massachusetts campaign. The blue bird, made of thin tin, has a back of dark blue and a yellow breast, on which is printed "Votes for Women, November 2." These suffrage songsters appear on trees, posts and fences, and in conspicuous places. In response to the request, suffrage pennants float on crafts of all kinds on the waterways of the suffrage campaign states.

Suffrage Billboards

Suffrage billboards, calling on the voters to support the amendment, have been placed in every city and in hundreds of towns in New York state. The poster design is a young woman holding a trumpet in black and white outlined on a bright yellow background, with the words, "Vote for the Woman Suffrage Amendment, November 2, 1915."

Life insurance policies to help suffrage is another New York idea, the benefits to go to the state suffrage campaign fund should the insured die before election day.

The New York campaign is notable for the great army of workers. It is estimated that there are 2,000 volunteer workers who are giving their whole time. Many teachers in all four states are devoting half their vacation period to suffrage work. New York has a few paid organizers, and no less than 200 volunteer speakers, fully one-half of them men, including lawyers, judges and teachers.

The reading of "An Appeal for Liberty" at the foot of the statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island and at various points in the city marked the suffrage Fourth in New York.

Pennsylvania's Justice Bell

In Pennsylvania, the greatest feature of the 1915 suffrage campaign is the "Justice Bell," or "Suffrage Liberty Bell," as it is also called. This great bell is a replica of the famous Liberty Bell, except that its clapper is chained, it has no crack, and it bears an additional inscription, "Establish Justice." This bell began in June a state-wide tour, covering every county, which is to continue until fall, when it is earnestly hoped to ring the bell in Philadelphia in celebration of a suffrage victory in the state of Pennsylvania.

SUFFRAGE NOTES

During the final week of the suffrage campaign in New Jersey, Hon. W. Y. Morgan, lieutenant governor of Kansas, will tour the state in the interests of votes for women. Mr. Morgan has seen the workings of suffrage in his home state and is offering his services in this campaign in order to secure political freedom for women and to bring to other states the benefits that have come to Kansas as a result of the vote of the mothers of the state.

"I believe the universal enfranchisement of women a great forward movement in democracy bound to come and speedily," is the prophecy of Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, who addressed a suffrage meeting in Buffalo on July 13. In accepting the invitation of the Buffalo women he wrote, "I am very anxious that you shall win in New York state and shall be glad to come to speak for you at my own expense and without compensation."

The Toledo (O.) Blade has recently called attention to the importance of the suffrage question as indicated by the amount of space given it in the public press. "Measured by printed material," says the Blade, "the subject of equal rights is surely the foremost question before the world. The war in Europe takes up a good deal of our conversation. But we began talking woman suffrage long before Europe began to have convulsions and it will be discussed years after the war drums have ceased to throb. The roots of the European war are said to go back to the days of Frederick the Great, to have developed strength and tenacity in the times of Napoleon. But the roots of the rebellion of the women go far deeper in time than we have any printed record. They have grown while man fought over the boundaries of his land, struggled for loot and taxes and power, contended for trade and the mastery of the seas."

Although the National Grange every year goes on record for suffrage, and a great many of the state granges take like action an underhanded attempt is being made to influence the farmers of the United States against equal suffrage and in favor of liquor and certain "big business" interests, through articles sent in the form of free plate matter to country newspapers. The American Press Association in sending out a notice of warning against such articles asks country newspapers to watch closely any plate matter that is sent to them. The principal articles are under the heading, "Know Thy Country." One is an attack on equal suffrage, "Why Is Woman Restless?" They are issued under the name Agricultural and Commercial Press Service and some of them are signed by Peter Radford. A previous attempt made not long since by Mr. Radford and others under the name of the National Farmers' Union was unsuccessful and was given up. They are now making a second effort, and every editor is asked to be very sure that space in his paper is denied these vicious interests.

GOVERNOR CARLSON'S TRIBUTE TO WHITE RIBBONERS

Governor George A. Carlson of Colorado, in his address at the recent Anti-Saloon League Convention, paid a beautiful tribute to the heroic constructive work of the women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of his state. Speaking of the early dark days of the movement against the legalized liquor traffic, he said:

"When the victory for National Prohibition is finally won, when it is universally agreed that the greatest achievement of the twentieth century was the elimination of this colossal vice that so menaced our government and civilization, and the future historian goes back over the records of the past to bestow the laurels of praise for the deserving, he will give high mention to that little band of women who by sacrifice and devotion kept the issue alive when it was but a faint flame flickering in a hostile night of error."

State Made Dry by Women's Votes

"The dry forces in Colorado," said Governor Carlson, "did not gain any consequential victories until 1893, when the right of suffrage was given women. Three towns, dry on that date—eight years later thirty-three towns dry. This has been the experience of every suffrage state, and if there were no other reason for equal suffrage, this would be sufficient. The mothers and daughters of our homes know more than men of the frightful devastation of drink. They bear the brunt. The drunkard is a poor provider and a cruel husband. The burden of his excesses falls upon the wife and children. Take from the politics of our states and nation the insidious influences of the liquor interests and nation-wide equal suffrage would prevail within a year's time. The mother who sees her family and home disintegrating, who because of the saloon or wine room helplessly watches her boy or girl, in whom is wrapped all her hopes and ideals, on the road straight to the penitentiary or the house of ill-fame, does not forget on election day.

"Let others tell you that the mothers of your children will prove incapable, or become coarse, cold or neglectful in the home if given the ballot; those who for nearly a quarter of a century have actually observed the enfranchised women at work, know that she can sense the enemy of the home more quickly and will fight him with more telling effect than the husband, and while preserving all her natural feminine charm and sweetness, she will become even more devoted to the man who has allowed her ampler means and fuller power for the protection of their common fireside. The state in safeguarding and preserving the health and morals of the young is but doing a mother's work. We need the blending of the mother heart and the masculine judgment and will to sustain and guard our homes."

Three hundred dollars saved, a gain of eight pounds in weight, a better appetite, a voice twice as strong as formerly, one hour more of sleep each night and 100 per cent more "pep," is the way Rev. James W. Lee, presiding elder of the St. Louis, Mo., district of the Methodist Episcopal church South characterizes the results of a year's abstinence from tobacco, after having been a smoker for more than forty years. William M. Sloane, the superintendent of the St. John's M. E. Sunday school of St. Louis, and general manager of the McElroy Sloane Shoe company, also gave up tobacco at the same time because of a challenge from Dr. Lee, then his pastor, and both men are unanimous in their verdict as to the benefits of the year of abstinence from tobacco although Mr. Sloane at the outset had no desire to quit smoking.

EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

A SALOONLESS PLANET

We have become accustomed to the fighting motto: "A saloonless nation by 1920." The Christian Endeavorers, in their great Chicago convention, have raised another and more far-reaching battle cry: "A Saloonless World by 1930." It is a heroic and forward-looking ambition that has taken possession of them. If their hopes are fulfilled many of them will be still on the sunny side of middle life with the prospect of many years under the happy rule of universal prohibition. If it is to come so soon many an older person will pray, "May I be here to see it."

A traveling man, some years ago, asked a white ribbon lady what was the meaning of the letters "W. C. T. U." When she had explained, he said: "I thought it meant 'We claim the universe.' She laughingly accepted the interpretation. The Endeavorers apparently wish to make the claim good.

Let us have, if possible, a saloonless, and a warless planet. When this comes to pass shall the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and their Christian Endeavor allies attack the other planets? Yes, we will begin on the red planet Mars, our nearest neighbor, and make him no longer the planet of bloody war, but the symbol of universal goodwill.—Lewistown (Ill.) Democrat.

STATE W. C. T. U. CONVENTION CALENDAR

South Carolina, Orangeburg, second week in September.

Maine, Skowhegan, Sept. 14-16.

Missouri, Sikeston, Sept. 14-17.

Oklahoma, Oklahoma City, Sept. 15-17.

Kentucky, Bowling Green, Sept. 17-22.

Wisconsin, Eau Claire, Sept. 17-21.

South Dakota, Ipswich, Sept. 17-22.

Colorado, Denver, Sept. 22-24.

North Dakota, Carrington, Sept. 23-27.

California, (Northern), Oakland, Sept. 27 to Oct. 1.

Montana, Livingston, Sept. 28 to Oct. 1.

Kansas, Newton, Sept. 28 to Oct. 1.

Maryland, Rockville, Sept. 29-30.

New York, Ithaca, Sept. 30 to Oct. 4.

Tennessee, Martin, Oct. 1-4.

Pennsylvania, York, Oct. 1-4.

Oregon, Newberg, Oct. 5-7.

Washington, Seattle, Oct. 8.

North Carolina, Raleigh, Oct. 8-12.

"MOVIES" POPULAR IN PROHIBITION COMMUNITIES

The "movies" have proved themselves a weapon against the saloons, according to W. R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film corporation, writing in the Chicago Daily News. His conclusion is based on observations made during a six months' tour of the United States. Instead of spending his evenings at the saloon, "the poor man's club," the tired laborer now takes his wife and children to the picture show, Mr. Sheehan says.

"It seems a far cry from the drink evil to the motion picture industry," he continued, "yet the 'movie' is doing much to eliminate the saloon. I was amazed by the prosperous condition of photo play houses in prohibition states or communities under local option and in many instances a magnificent theater has supplanted a prosperous saloon.

"As an illustration, I remember the case of a wholesale liquor dealer in Seattle, Wash., who had made a fortune in the business. His was the largest trade in the state; a great deal of it was with Alaskan towns in which he had practically no competition.

"Now that Washington has gone dry this man caused to be erected a $500,000 theater on the principal corner in Seattle for the exclusive exhibition of motion pictures. When it is finisned this house will accommodate about 2,500 persons and in point of elaborate furnishings will rival the best theaters in the country.

"That man knew what he was doing and his case is only one of many who have come to recognize the force of films on the public life of the country. The public must find some place for relaxation after a strenuous day's work and is deciding in favor of the 'movies,' to the consternation of the saloon men."

"A SLUMP IN LIQUOR MEANS A BOOM IN OTHER TRADES"

Arguing on the question of nationalizing the liquor traffic in Great Britain, Hon. Leif Jones, member of Parliament, in an address at the great annual meeting of the National British Women's Temperance Association in London, said:

"A good deal is to be said for the nationalization of certain trades, but surely you only propose to nationalize trades which are useful, trades which are wealth-producing, trades which the country wishes to carry on, not trades of which wise people in the country wish to make an end altogether. The drink trade is of this nature. It is called a trade, but it is not a trade in the true sense of the word. It is a parasitic trade, a trade which lives upon other trades. The success of the drink trade means that other trades are suffering. If I may put it in the language of the stock exchange, 'a slump in liquor would be a boom in other trades,' and to propose to nationalize that trade would be to be guilty of a direct contradiction to the whole progress not only of national well-being, but of the whole progress and tendency of the temperance movement during the last seventy or eighty years."

"I think that inside of ten or a dozen years the United States will be dry and the women of this country will have the right to vote on all questions. It is coming as sure as tomorrow morning." These were the words of ex-Congressman Charles M. Thomson of Chicago, a member of the sixty-third Congress on a recent occasion.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department. THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, July 29, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

Miss Anna A. Gordon, National W. C. T. U. president, returned to Evanston Thursday, July 22, after an absence of a few days in the East. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Elizabeth P. Gordon, who it is hoped by her many friends in "the classic town by the lake" will spend some time at Rest Cottage.

"PROHIBITION'S ONWARD MARCH"

A revised edition of the valuable leaflet, "Prohibition's Onward March," illustrated with the latest prohibition map of the United States, is just off the press. Every white ribboner should provide herself with a copy for reference. Price, two cents each; per 50, 20 cents; per 100, 30 cents. Order of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Ill.

CHICAGO'S RIVER DISASTER—ITS LESSON

The shadow of an overwhelming disaster and sorrow rests upon the city of Chicago. Early last Saturday morning as the over-loaded, unfit steamer "Eastland," with its 2,500 excursionists—employes of the Western Electric Company and their friends—was preparing to steam down the Chicago river into Lake Michigan, it heeled over in its dock and cast its precious human freight into the water. Probably one-half of the victims, imprisoned in state-rooms or cabin or caught under the boat, lost their lives. Added to the grief for loved ones and sympathy for those who are bereaved is the consciousness of the community that the destruction of these hundreds of lives was absolutely inexcusable, and that the city and Government stands condemned for wilful neglect and reckless carelessness. The leading newspapers of the city are unanimous in acknowledging that the awful catastrophe is "proof of a great community's criminal heedlessness" in failing to safeguard the crowds who during the summer months throng the lake boats. President Wilson has ordered a thorough investigation by the Department of Commerce of the cause of the catastrophe. Mayor Thompson and Governor Dunne of Illinois, who were both at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at the time of the disaster, have called off all preparations for the observance of Illinois Day at the Exposition, and are hurrying home to aid in the work of relief and investigation. The acting mayor immediately issued an order closing all places of amusement in Chicago for two days following the calamity.

"While we Chicagoans have been lamenting Europe's prodigal destruction of human lives," says the Chicago Daily News, "our own ill-regulated institutions have developed this great disgrace, to shame our slovenly and slothful disregard for the elementary principles of safety. Surely it is high time for us to sweep before our own doors in humility and penitence."

The sympathy of the nation goes out to the stricken friends and families of those who met an untimely death in the awful accident, and the lesson of the heart-breaking catastrophe ought to rest heavily upon the consciences of every great city. "Disregard for the elementary principles of safety"—what community is not guilty of similar neglect, not alone in the matter of overloaded boats, but in the toleration of health and life-destroying institutions of every type. What shall it profit a city, though every year it add to its population, though it grow in wealth and power, if it permit by negligence and culpable ignorance any practice or policy, any business or traffic, which shall cause waste or loss of the very thing for which the municipality exists—the well-being of its citizens?

ALAS FOR THE COUNTRY CHURCH!

Unless somebody checks the flood of prohibition enthusiasm that is obsessing the intellects of the pastors of our country churches those heretofore valued institutions will soon be only a memory of "the good old days!" This is the theory on which "Rev." F. E. J. Lloyd bases an absurd dissertation on "The Prohibition Movement and the Country Church," printed in pamphlet form, which is being somewhat widely circulated. The little folder bears so plainly the ear-marks of the liquor interests that it is hardly necessary to remind our readers, into whose hands it may come, that the "Rev." Lloyd, who is advertised as a "prominent divine," has been for some time working for the liquorites. He is said to have gained his prominence by leaving the Episcopal church to become a Roman Catholic and later deserting that church to return to the Episcopal fold.

The author works himself into a fine frenzy over the condition of the churches, which he claims have been practically blotted out of existence by pastors who insisted on preaching against the liquor traffic and the drink evil and gives it as his conclusion and conviction that "the prohibition movement by its latest developments and the astonishing hold it has secured on the country preacher has done more than any other single agency of modern times to weaken the influence and nullify the appeal of the rural church and, as in numberless cases, to completely close its doors." He confesses to an agony of spirit over the spectacle he witnessed in last year's state-wide prohibition campaign in Ohio—dry banners adorning the walls of churches, bearing such sentiments as "The church is opposed to the liquor traffic," and sees in such a demonstration the destruction of the churches.

This causes the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate to suggest that if the country churches should actually perish in a prohibition campaign, it would be in order to write over their doors, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." But, says the Advocate, "if they prove unfaithful in the conflict with the conspiracy of politics and greed it will be true of them as it was of Sardis, 'Thou hast a name that thou livest, but thou art dead.'"

The Continent (Presbyterian) takes the statements of what it characterizes "a fool pamphlet" even more seriously and admits that it "makes a sportsmanlike foe feel once more that he would really like to lend the liquor men a supply of brains just to lower their handicap a little in the anti-saloon battle." "Certainly if they had any brains at all," says the Continent, "the liquor folks would know better than to use a 'tract' containing Mother Goose nonsense like this, 'The country church must choose between prohibition and Christianity.'"

There seems no occasion to lie awake nights worrying over the injury that will be done to the cause of prohibition by the circulation of "Rev." Lloyd's literary effort. On the contrary, it is quite probable that the perusal of it will cause country pastors and parishioners to show their righteous indignation at its insolence by a little more energetic and enthusiastic service for prohibition.

WILL YOU ADMIT IT TO YOUR HOME?

Were a solicitor for a liquor firm to call at your home and press upon you the merits of the various alcoholic beverages carried by his concern, you would indignantly refuse him admittance. Were a representative of "the trade" to urge upon you by repeated letters his bottled goods, you would immediately throw them into the waste basket. Yet at this very moment you may be harboring in your home a more insidious form of solicitation in certain pages of one of the popular magazines, which may fall into the hands of your son or daughter and their young friends. There can be no difference of opinion among right-thinking people as to the propriety of allowing in the home a magazine which devotes a goodly part of three pages of its advertising section to the promotion of the sale of alcoholic drinks. This is what the Cosmopolitan Magazine for August offers to its readers, on pages 84, 96 and 103. In this day and age when so large a proportion of the popular magazines have declared that they will not accept liquor advertising this lapse on the part of the Cosmopolitan seems inexcusable and we suggest that every subscriber or reader of this periodical enter a protest against it. On the opposite page we give a list of magazines which, in response to letters sent out by the Temperance Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church some time ago, stated their "no-liquor advertising" policy. It might be well to call the attention of the Cosmopolitan to this list, which includes virtually all of the high class magazines.

CONFERENCE APPROVES "HOBSON AMENDMENT"

At the conference of national temperance leaders held recently in Washington, D. C., to consider the form of an amendment to the Federal Constitution to be presented to Congress, after full discussion of different forms of amendments, by a vote of 126 to 8 it was decided to adopt the wording of the "Hobson amendment." It was definitely provided that this vote by representatives of the leading temperance organizations of the United States should be advisory only and not in any sense mandatory. A representative committee of nineteen was appointed by the presiding officer, Dr. A. J. Barton, to confer with the leaders in Congress who are to champion the measure as to the exact phraseology of the amendment to be presented at the next session of Congress. On this committee the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be represented by Miss Anna A. Gordon, National president; Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National vice-president-at-large; Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, National Legislative superintendent, and Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the Kentucky W. C. T. U.

HIS CHALLENGE ACCEPTED

When Charles A. Windle, leading campaigner for the liquor interests, speaking recently in Albert Lea, Minnesota, seized a Bible and shook it above his head, defying any person in the audience to quote a passage from it which favors prohibition, a woman in the gallery arose and in a voice audible all over the auditorium, quoted, "Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." Mr. Windle in his bewilderment at this unexpected acceptance of his challenge, demanded, "What's that?" The verse was repeated without a quaver, and the burst of applause which followed was the longest and loudest of the evening.

"MOVEMENT FOR ENLIGHTENMENT"

Before we can hope for National Constitutional Prohibition the 100,000,000 people of this nation must be instructed concerning the nature and effect of alcohol. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which was the pioneer organization in the work of education and which is continuing with unabated energy the dissemination of this knowledge, rejoices that one more agency is to campaign definitely for the enlightenment of the thousands of men and women who yet are in darkness on this all-important question. Most heartily will it co-operate with the National Abstainers' Union, representing the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in its efforts to educate the people and to secure signers to a total abstinence pledge.

From its inception the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has emphasized the value of pledge-signing among old and young.

The new movement has the support of some of the ablest state officials of the nation, for among its charter members are Governor Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania, Governor Capper of Kansas, Governor Carlson of Colorado, Governor Ferris of Michigan, Governor Gates of Vermont, ex-Governor Glenn of North Carolina, Governor Hammond of Minnesota and Governor Kendrick of Wyoming. The temperance people of the United States will be disappointed if at the conference of governors to be held soon in Boston some definite action in favor of temperance is not urged by these champions of total abstinence.

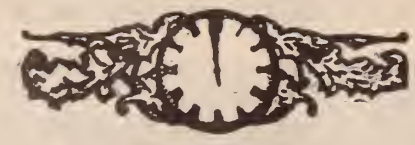
EPISCOPAL CONFERENCE FAVORS PROHIBITION

The Ogilvie conference of the Episcopal church of Wyoming in session recently in Cheyenne adopted a resolution favoring National Prohibition as the most effective method of dealing with the liquor problem, and commending statewide prohibition as a means toward the larger good of nation-wide prohibition.

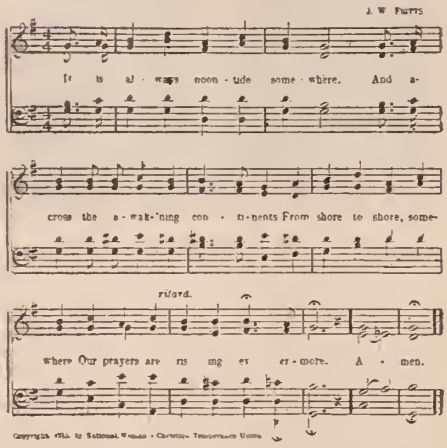
MAGAZINES WHICH EXCLUDE LIQUOR ADVERTISEMENTS

REPRINTED BY REQUEST

Argosy, New York City.
All-Story Magazine, New York City.
Associated Sunday Magazine, New York City.
American Boy, Detroit, Mich.
American Homes and Gardens, New York City.
American Review of Reviews, New York City.
Arts and Decorations, New York City.
American Magazine, New York City.
American Sunday Monthly Magazine, New York City.
All Outdoors, New York City.
Black Cat, Salem, Mass.
Boys' Magazine, Smethport, Pa.
Book News Monthly, Philadelphia, Pa.
Business, Detroit, Mich.
Countryside Magazine, New York City.
Cavalier, New York City.
Christian Herald, New York City.
Century, New York City.
Collier's Weekly, New York City.
Current Opinion, New York City.
Country Life in America, Garden City, N. Y.
Country Gentleman, Philadelphia, Pa.
Everybody's Magazine, New York City.
Fra, East Aurora, N. Y.
Garden Magazine, Garden City, N. Y.
Good Health, Battle Creek, Mich.
House and Garden, New York City.
Harper's Magazine, New York City.
Hearst's Magazine, New York City. (Beer not answered).
Independent, New York City.
Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa.
Illustrated Sunday Magazine, New York City.
Lippincott's, New York City.
Little Folks Magazine, Salem, Mass.
Leslie's Weekly, New York City.
Literary Digest, New York City.
Munsey's Magazine, New York City.
Metropolitan Magazine, New York City.
McClure's Magazine, New York City.
National Geographic Magazine, Washington, D. C.
National Magazine, Boston, Mass.
Out West Magazine, Los Angeles, Cal.
Outlook, New York City.
Popular Mechanics, Chicago, Ill.
Physical Culture, New York City.
Philistine, East Aurora, N. Y.
Popular Science Monthly, Garrison, N. Y.
Railroad Man's Magazine, New York City.
St. Nicholas, New York City.
Scientific American, New York City.
Suburban Life, New York City.
Saturday Evening Post, Philadelphia, Pa.
Sunset Magazine, San Francisco, Cal.
Short Stories, Garden City, N. Y.
System, Chicago, Ill.
Technical World, Chicago, Ill.
10 Story Book, Chicago, Ill.
Watson's Magazine, Thomson, Ga.
Wide-World Magazine, New York City.
World's Work, Garden City, N. Y.
World's Advance, New York City.
West Coast Magazine, Los Angeles, Cal.
Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.
Yachting Magazine, New York City.



Time of Prayer—Noontide



MEDITATION CORNER

The infallible recipe for happiness is to do good; and the infallible recipe for doing good is to abide in Christ.—Henry Drummond.

Cultivate joy as much as you cultivate honesty and uprightness.—Andrew A. Bonar.

Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest. Matt ix, 38.

"Labourers"—not people who watch you, only seeking to criticise your method of manipulating your machine; not dilettante people who will speculate on the origin of evil; but people who will work from the dawn until the stars appear. "Labourers!"—Charles Brown.

God can do nothing great for a life that shrinks from supreme difficulty. The question for us is: Have we let the Spirit lead us into hard problems? Have we let Him urge us into tasks for which we ourselves have not the capacity, except as we rely on Divine wisdom and power? Have we crept out of the challenge of the Spirit on the plea of our modest estimate of our ability? If so, we must suffer the penalty of diminished personal development. No amount of devotional life can make up for a retreat from practical, actual, difficult tasks in life.—John Douglas Adam.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, National superintendent, who has just returned from a trip to Alaska and British Columbia, was a welcome visitor at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters, last week.

The provincial legislature of Saskatchewan, Canada, has recently passed a measure giving women municipal franchise on the same terms with men, and the assurance has been given by Premier Scott that the full dower act is to come into existence shortly.

On July 1 the Oregon Short line discontinued the sale of all liquors on its trains. Its route is now largely through prohibition territory or territory which will be liquorless after the first of the year

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON, EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

JULY 31—White Ribbon Missionary Day (Birthday of Mary Allen West)
AUGUST 3—Fresh Air Mission Day (Birthday of Lady Henry Somerset)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

SUPERINTENDENTS

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Dear Sunday School Workers:

"Defeat through Drunkenness" is the title of the third quarterly temperance lesson which appears September 19 and is found in I Kings 20:1-21. The march of the devastating army of Benhadad is a picture of the hosts of intemperance which are invading our own country. The powerful, half-savage army left behind them whole villages, farms and orchards destroyed; men, women and children were stricken with unmerciful hands. Equally unmerciful is the demon intemperance as it ravages the country, on every hand dealing death and destruction.

In the study of the lesson with its comparisons, we should give place to the consideration of the forces now at work to overcome the demon intemperance. The call of God for the "young men of the princes of the provinces" suggests to us the importance of enlisting the young people of today in the warfare against strong drink.

Proper emphasis of this point in the Sunday school will open the way for a young people's rally in the afternoon of September 19. Let a special call be made by our superinterdents, in co-operation with the temperance superintendent of each school. Plan a pleasing program to draw both young men and women. Let the plans of the Y. P. B. be given and endeavor to crystallize the interest awakened in an organization.

The one feature of the work for September 19 is the effort to have the youth of our country appeal to Congress in the interest of National Constitutional Prohibition as a safeguard for them. The petition given on this page, is to be signed by all members of the Sunday school under twenty-one years of age. Petition blanks should be given to every teacher with the request that the petition be read in class and duly considered and then signed by the pupils. All signatures should be sent to Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, National superintendent of the Sunday School department of the W. C. T. U., who will mount and prepare them for presentation at Washington. Petition blanks are furnished at postage rates (12 cents per 100 postpaid). Unions should furnish these to the schools and every white ribboner is hereby requested to secure blanks and be responsible for the work in her respective Sunday school.

An "Open Letter to Sunday School Workers" has been prepared, the use of which will introduce the matter to every teacher and superintendent. Price, 25 cents per 100 postpaid. The Sunday School department appeals to the unions to make this work possible and enable us to let the voice of the youth as well as that of the voter be heard in Congress. We can have millions of names if every one helps a little.

The time for annual reports is drawing near. Report blanks are ready and will be sent for postage at 12 cents per 100. Order them early and in quantities sufficient to reach all unions. Let us endeavor this year to have a complete report of the work of the department. That will mean that supplementary letters are sent with reports giving full details of departmental work as our report blanks are limited in questions.

Again we urge the use of the Quarterly Budget which contains material helpful to all officers and teachers in the Sunday school and a program most suitable for a young people's rally. Price of Budget, 15 cents or 50 cents per year (in advance).

The program for World's Temperance Sunday, November 14, will be issued in season for use in October by those who prefer to do so. The generous offer of the National to furnish a free program for the Sunday school greatly cheers our hearts. The program will be issued and handled by our National Publishing House.

Let me make one more appeal in the interest of our Sunday school petition to Congress. Send at once for blanks and "Open Letters" and keep up the work every Sunday till all the young people have signed the petition. This work will be continued through our November Temperance Sunday.

Yours in loyal service,
STELLA B. IRVINE

115 Walnut St.,
Riverside, California

RESCUE WORK
MRS. LURENDA B. SMITH

The time is passing quickly and annual reports must be in earlier than usual this year as the National Convention meets October 9-14. I urge, therefore, that reports of any and all work done be sent to me by September 20. Will you not aid me in making this year's report the very best ever given? A magnificent work has been done and is still in progress. Let all lecturers for the organization feel it a duty and pleasure to send a letter or postal telling of their work along rescue lines. This has been a great year. Please tell me about it.

Ottawa, Kansas

SUNDAY SCHOOL PETITION

To the Members of Congress of the United States of America, Washington, District of Columbia:

We, the undersigned young people, members of the Sunday Schools of the various states, desire to say that we are trying to fit ourselves for the duties of citizenship. In order to become good and useful citizens it is necessary that we should have healthy bodies, clean minds and clean characters.

With this end in view, we are doing our part by diligent study in day school and Sunday school, by useful work on farms, in mills, mines, factories and stores. It is our earnest desire to prepare ourselves for faithful and efficient service when we shall be called upon, as men and women, to assume the burdens now being borne by our elders.

Much has already been done to make this possible for us. Schools have been furnished for all, homes for those who are needy and hospitals for the sick. Provision has been made for the sanitation of our cities and our homes. Quarantine regulations have been established to pervent the spread of disease, not only among us but even among cattle and sheep. Liberal appropriations have been made for the protection of game, the preservation of the forests, fruit trees and grain crops against the ravages of moth and blight. We are thankful for all that has been done to make our beloved country a good place in which to live.

But, honored sirs, there is prevailing in our nation a deadly disease, carrying thousands to untimely graves; a disease that is filling our homes with sorrow and misery, our almshouses, hospitals and insane asylums with impoverished, sick and demented persons. This disease is alcoholism, and against its ravages we have no adequate protection. The poison which produces it is sold in practically unlimited quantities. The vendors are protected by law in a traffic which is the source of a great majority of the sickness, poverty and crime, and a barrier in our path to usefulness.

We appeal to you, fathers and brothers, to eradicate the cause of this disease; to make it unlawful for any one to sell or traffic in any manner in alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes. We appeal to you to give us the opportunity to grow up in an atmosphere free from this pestilence.

As the future citizens of these United States, we pray for protection from this dreadful contagion and we earnestly plead for

NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION

City .....
State .....
Denomination .....

NAMES

If desired, the above petition may be clipped and attached to blank paper on which names may be written.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 9-14

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

1. Tickets to Seattle are good for return until December 31, 1915.

2. Delegates from east and south of Chicago are advised to purchase tickets from starting point through to Seattle, as baggage may be checked through, and transfer to Chicago is provided without expense.

3. If undecided about return route, send to H. A. Gross, General Passenger Agent, North Western R. R., 148 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill., for circular entitled "Forty Ways to and from California."

4. Tickets from New York allow a choice of return route from Chicago, so it is not necessary to return by going route unless preferred.

5. Stop-overs are granted at many points west of Chicago, so that if care is taken in choice of return route, those who desire to visit friends will be able to do so without additional expense.

6. Baggage tags will be provided for all who travel on the "White Ribbon Special" from Chicago, and baggage so tagged will be accessible to passengers en route.

7. The "White Ribbon Special" will leave the North Western Station in Chicago at 7:15 p. m., Tuesday, October 5, 1915. Passengers should plan to arrive in Chicago in ample time for transfer of baggage. Get dinner before boarding the train.

8. In making reservations always state plainly the kind of accommodations desired, whether standard Pullman or tourists' sleeper; where you will board the train, and whether there will be gentlemen in the party.

9. An itinerary for the return trip will be announced later. This will include San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, the Grand Canyon, a stop at Albuquerque and Colorado Springs, then to Chicago. Watch THE UNION SIGNAL for details and keep the transportation notes for reference.

10. Remember that when your ticket is purchased you must not only designate your route in going to Seattle, but whether you are going to San Francisco and your return route.

11. Make your reservations early. Checks should accompany specific orders. Such checks should be made payable to the Chicago & North Western Railroad. Send New York draft or postoffice Money Order.

12. Delegates from California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho in purchasing tickets for Seattle should ask for certificate. These must be signed there and a fee of fifty cents must be paid. Return tickets can then be purchased at one-third rates.

ELLA A. BOOLE,
Chairman Transportation.
KATHARINE K. ADAMS,
Secretary.

MISSOURI ACTIVITIES

(Continued from Page Four)

an address by Mrs. Sylvester Wells on "Patriotism and Prohibition" entertained and instructed the audience, and all declared it to be the "best ever" picnic.

Policewomen

The W. C. T. U. policewoman's bill became a law on June 23. The Kansas City Star named this law as the most important enacted by the state legislature last winter. W. C. T. U. and club women are asking that the women be appointed. Kansas City Council of Clubs will ask for six and are working for the appointments.

Lafayette union, St. Louis, Mo., is doing fine contest work. With the proceeds of one contest UNION SIGNALS will be placed in homes.

Harrisburg union held a gold medal contest, clearing $30. Miss Angie Taylor won the medal. A special "dues day" brought good returns from the members. This is a progressive union.

At the Jasper county institute, Miss Berthe Bowers of Creston, Iowa, was the speaker. An address by a missionary from India was also an attractive feature.

The first matron's oratorical contest ever held in the state by a colored W. C. T. U. was given at the negro Baptist church in Springfield by the Eliza E. Peterson union. Contests will be continued until the diamond medal is reached.

Poplar Bluffs union has been commended by the superintendent of schools for its excellent S. T. I. work. It gave six silver and one gold medal and a five dollar cash prize to white schools and three silver and one gold medal to colored. This union has gained fifty-two new active members and conducts a regular column in one of the daily papers.

In Fredericktown, under the auspices of the Scientific Temperance Instruction department, 300 essays were written in the schools, and eight medals were awarded.

Mrs. Carrie Lee Carter Stokes, Los Angeles, Cal., made a flying trip to Missouri, arriving July 1 for campaign work at Clinton, Mo. She gave all of her time to that location with the exception of two addresses one Sunday in Kansas City, and left for her western home on July 26.

In Loving Sympathy

White ribboners throughout Missouri and her comrades elsewhere feel deep and loving sympathy for the bereavement of Mrs. Lizzie O. Middleton in the homegoing of her husband, Robert O. Middleton, in Kansas City, Mo., June 21, following an illness which lasted only about two hours.

AMONG OUR WORKERS

Mrs. Lillian Mitchner, president of the Kansas W. C. T. U., has recently left her home state for Pennsylvania where she will spend the greater part of the summer in furthering the "Votes for Women" campaign.

Mrs. A. C. Zehner, of Dallas, Texas, formerly a National organizer, now with the Ellison and White Chautauqua, recently gave a most excellent Christian Citizenship address in Portland, Oreg. She wore the white ribbon and paid an eloquent tribute to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and to Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, president of the Oregon W. C. T. U., with whom she worked in Kansas some years ago.

One hundred and fifty guests gathered recently in Glendale, Calif., for a banquet and reception to Congressman Charles H. Randall, a representative from a district which returned an 18,000 majority dry vote, and the first Prohibitionist ever elected to the United States Congress. Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, president of the Southern California W. C. T. U., and the mayor, a strong temperance man, gave short addresses, and the toast, "President Wilson," was drank in water. Following the banquet a program prepared by Mrs. Hattie Gaylord, a former president of the Glendale union, was rendered in the high school auditorium where representatives from each political party gave short speeches of welcome and "God speed" to Mr. Randall.

Mrs. Viola D. Romans, National W. C. T. U. organizer, is in Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, helping in the suffrage campaign.

Mrs. Lora S. La Mance, National organizer and lecturer, is doing most successful work in the South Dakota campaign. On Sunday, July 18, she gave four addresses in Sturgis, addressing two of the morning church services, one at ten and the second at eleven. In the afternoon she spoke at the Bare Butte schoolhouse and in the evening addressed a union meeting at the Presbyterian church, which was packed to the doors with a sympathetic and appreciative audience. At Rapid City she gave two addresses and organized a union, with Mrs. Lulu Musser as president.

CHANGE THE VIBRATION

It Makes for Health

A man tried leaving off meat, potatoes, coffee, etc., and adopted a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts with cream, some crisp toast and a cup of Postum.

His health began to improve at once for the reason that a meat eater will reach a place once in a while where his system seems to become clogged and the machinery doesn't work smoothly.

A change of this kind puts aside food that is slow to digest and takes up food and drink of the highest value, already partly digested and capable of being quickly changed into good, rich blood and strong tissue.

A most valuable feature of Grape-Nuts is the natural mineral elements (phosphate of potash, etc.,) grown in the grains from which it is made. These elements are absolutely necessary for the well-balanced rebuilding of body, brain and nerves.

A few days' use of Grape-Nuts will show one a way to physical and mental strength well worth the trial.

Look in pkgs. for the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a reason."

A VISION REALIZED

PART II

The state officers accepted the list of preëmpted counties and promised to begin at once to visit them one by one, and knit the few scattered unions into a stronger county unit. The plan provided that should the county need one or two unions in order to meet the requirements of the constitution, the state officer would help the local workers to go into new territory and create the necessary unions, and then weld the three together on a substantial working basis with county officers, superintendents, and if possible, a capable, tactful county "gleaner" to "gather up the scattered grain." This work was to be started early and carried on throughout the winter, spring and summer. In the fall a different officer should visit each county and help with its first county convention.

To the twenty-one well organized counties having from three to eight unions each, the president wrote in part: "For this one year I am going to leave you largely to your own resources. Your state officers will be busy speaking in the weaker counties and endeavoring to bring them up to your standard of excellence. Four of our state organizers will undertake the stupendous task of introducing the work into the twenty-five counties where we have no foothold at all, so they will not be available for work in your territory. You are at perfect liberty to summon out-of-state workers if you wish, but Mrs. Fenton, whose family cares are such that she cannot leave home for long periods, and Miss Prescott, who does not wish to do personal work, that is, to engage in a house-to-house canvass, will doubtless be at your service for special meetings.

"As one of your state officers, I suggest that through the efforts of local workers your county endeavor to double its membership and increase the number of its unions. Why not develop one or more house-to-house workers and pay them from your treasury to do under your guidance the same work the state organizers do under mine? If such workers are successful and meet the state requirements, there is no reason why they may not become state organizers, in time, for after all is said and done, no finer tribute has ever been paid the W. C. T. U. than that it is a splendid developer of women! Work out your county plans to suit yourself, but set a high standard and rise to it, always feeling quite free to talk it over with me or any of the other state officers."

The state president had learned more than one lesson in that brief talk with the National leader, among them one absolutely new to her, that of allowing those below her in office to "work out their own plans." Even yet she was skeptical regarding the outcome in some counties, but she argued that the National policy must ever be her policy and that if liberty is power to a state president it must mean the same thing to a county president and she determined that in the future she would share her liberty and power, and even her visions, with those who are in process of development!

The wisdom of this plan proved itself to the president more and more as the months rolled on, for the fact that no two counties worked exactly alike made the work more interesting to all, and an exchange of plans became the fad among county presidents and newly appointed county "gleaners." Some counties followed the old plan of each union organizing and mothering another union. Some sent out groups of women to different towns and neighborhoods to distribute literature, call at the houses, and give little programs in church or school house, eventually gathering enough members for a union in each place. Some employed a bright woman to give her leisure hours to soliciting members, riding over the rural districts with horse and vehicle. In many instances this woman was a teacher who was glad indeed to spend her summer in the open, earning a fair salary at a time when other teachers are unemployed. This part of the plan eventually gave the state three extra organizers, one of whom is among the National lecturers today.

Some counties tried the plan, "each one bring one," which greatly strengthened the unions but did not, except in the large towns, result in new unions. Many availed themselves of the privilege of Miss Prescott's splendid oratory, and

PROHIBITION VICTORY

STELLA B. IRVINE

Brightly beams the glorious dawning
Of a day we long to see:
When our nation now in bondage,
Evermore shall be made free.

Patriot voices strong and earnest,
Mingle in a just demand
"Prohibition" is their war-cry,
Echoing through all the land.

Friends of temperance, raise your banners,
Write the word in lines of gold;
Let the shining folds triumphant
Tell of warriors, true and bold.

Hard and long the conflict rages
Fierce the battle now begun;
Rouse, ye patriots, be not weary!
Victory shall yet be won.

CHORUS:

It is coming! It is coming!
Joyous day we long to see;
It is coming, surely coming!
Prohibition victory.

won members at the public meetings held by her, while others, at county expense, sent Barbara Fenton to speak on temperance at farmers' picnics, Sunday school rallies and missionary conclaves, and wherever men and women were congregated for the purpose of discussing big subjects.

How the membership grew! In some counties where the work had apparently been at a standstill for fifteen years the number of unions doubled and the membership trebled during those wonderful months of "gleaning."

While the county presidents were clearing their decks, and the state officers were getting in touch with the unattached unions, the four state organizers were preparing for their work in the unionless portion of the state. They were to go out at the beginning of the new year, but there were plans to make, maps to study, routes to arrange, and the troublesome problem of suitable apparel to be decided.

The first week in December they spent at the state president's home, working their system out together.

"I turn it all over to you," said the state president. "I shall simply guarantee you $12.50 each week for your services so long as the money holds out. With my share of work for the twenty-one counties that need a guardian and friend I cannot make your routes nor find your entertainment. I shall give you the list of counties you are expected to bring into the fold, and keep each of you in a county at least two weeks. You must not leave with less than three unions to your credit if it takes a month. There is no county in the state that cannot support three unions, and if you can get twice that many, stay! Then you must bring your unions together for an institute of one day, organize them into a county unit and set it working for more members and for prohibition votes.

"For years I have tried without success to SEND you into these counties. Now you are to take matters into your own hands and GO. You will not ask permission. You will simply appear, conquer and pass on.

"Study one county at a time. Select the places you most wish to organize,—towns of 500 and upwards first—perhaps. Write to the pastor of your own denomination in each town, telling him that you will be there on or about a certain time to represent the state W. C. T. U. for two or three days. Ask him to solicit free entertainment for you with one of his members who is especially interested in temperance. He will know, for preachers have ways of knowing such things. Suggest that he speak of your visit from his pulpit and to the other pastors. Give him to understand that you are working on a salary. You know how to work up your meetings as you go about from home to home; you know far better than I do, every step of the process. Your old plan cannot be improved on: calls all day the first day, notices posted in public places, invitations to pastors and perhaps a quarter of an hour with the editor, a visit to the school room the next morning, calls again till two, rest in the afternoon and the public meeting at night. The next day you call on the doubtful ones of the night before and meet in the afternoon all persons interested in organizing a union. Of course you will always collect dues from as many members as you can, for the reason that it takes at least five paying members to form a union.

You will send the treasurer every cent collected as dues, offerings, personal contributions from the occasional rich sympathizer or as subscriptions to the papers. Do not burden yourself with accounts or other people's money. I will see to it that your expense account is honored each week and that your salary is promptly paid.

"When your collections do not pay expenses, do not worry. That is not your risk. Do your best to raise money, to be sure, but remember that this is a membership campaign and not a money crusade.

"If you get ill, go home and rest, but do it with the intention of going back. Try to make friends for us even when you can not win members. We shall go over the field again and again and the pioneer can make the path a stony road or a pleasant thoroughfare for her successor."

Thus the plans were laid. Varied they were, to be sure; deviated from in many instances, but adhered to whenever and wherever possible because they had been thoroughly discussed and well understood, and because they were better than any that came to the minds of others at the time.

It was early in January that the workers got down to business with one accord, but by the last of February the whole people were "taking notice." Such phenomenal success had never been known in the history of the state. People began to say that the day had truly come when right should triumph; and went out and joined the W. C. T. U., because it seemed the only thing to do! It became popular. The little white bow became a familiar ornament on the gowns and wraps of all kinds and conditions of women. The officers were beset with calls from the scattered unions, urging them to push the or-

(Continued on Page Sixteen)

From west to east, from south to north,
We boys and girls are marching forth
To lay the liquor traffic low.
With happy hearts we are afield,
We're boys and girls who never yield,
The liquor traffic now must go!

Chorus:
In Nineteen Twenty comes the day,
Comes the children's happy day;
In Nineteen Hundred Twenty
There'll be prohibition plenty
When Columbia drives the drink away.
—A. A. G.

"LITTLE TURTLE"

STORY-LESSON

CHRISTINE I. TINLING

If you were to visit the city of Fort Wayne, Indiana, you would see among other fine buildings a handsome court-house. On the front of it are many statues of men who have been famous in the history of their state. Side by side with these noted Americans stands the statue of an Indian.

This famous red man who has a place among the white men was named "Little Turtle." Just why he had that odd name I cannot tell you. There are several kinds of turtles to be found in the swamps, such as the soft-shell turtle, the map turtle, the box turtle and the snapping turtle. But the commonest kind of all is the little turtle, and it attracts attention by its bright color. Some people think that our friend, "Little Turtle," came by his name because he was a queer-looking puny baby. But anyway he got it and kept it till he died.

"Little Turtle" belonged to the tribe of the Miamis. Once they were one of the strongest of the Indian tribes. A vast and beautiful tract of country was possessed by them. The soil was fertile and it was easy to grow what they needed. But chiefly they depended for food on the wild game in the forests. In the great rivers and lakes there were plenty of fish. Then, too, there were wide prairies on which they hunted the elk, the buffalo and the red deer. So it was an easy thing in those days for the red man to get a living.

Through and through the vast hunting-grounds was a network of trails. These trails were very narrow paths, for the Indians traveled single file. The paths were beaten down in the same rough way that the animals will beat a path down to the water. But the Indians knew their country thoroughly and generally found the best routes, and sometimes it happened that the white man coming later laid down his fine roads right along the Indian trail. The Miami town where Fort Wayne now stands was at a point where many trails met and was quite an important place.

The face of "Little Turtle" may be seen inside as well as outside the court-house. Many relics and curiosities are preserved in that building, and among them is a painting with the title, "The Treaty of Greenville." This treaty between the American general, Anthony Wayne, and the allied Indian tribes, was signed considerably more than a hundred years ago. In the picture you may see the general seated with his officers beside him, and a number of Indian chiefs, some standing round and some sitting on the ground. Among them you could easily pick out "Little Turtle" in the center.

There had been some hard fighting between the Indians and the white men. Sometimes one side won and sometimes the other. One day there was a battle in a wood. The ground was covered with trunks of trees which had probably been blown down by a cyclone. The Indians hid in ambush there but the white men came up and defeated them. General Wayne was too much for them. He came so swiftly that the Miamis called him the "Wind," but the Delawares called him "Blacksnake," because that is the most cunning among animals. This fight was known as "The Battle of Fallen Timbers." After it the Indians felt it was of no use to struggle longer and they made peace. If ever you go to Fort Wayne be sure to visit the court-house and look at this picture of "Little Turtle" and the other Indians signing the treaty with the white men.

"Little Turtle" stayed little all his life. But though he was short he was well-built. His large forehead and bright eyes spoke of a keen intelligence and his big chin showed he had plenty of determination.

One special thing about him was that he was always eager to learn. He never lost a chance for gleaning information. That is a very good habit to have. Suppose you try to cultivate it. When you do not know the meaning of a word, for instance, instead of being content to be ignorant, ask someone, or look it up. Learn to use dictionaries and reference books and to find your way about in a library. Then, whether you go to college or not, you will become educated.

"Little Turtle" did not have such opportunities as you have, but he used those he had and became wise. Even when he was a boy the people of his tribe and of others beyond thought a great deal of his opinion. His father was chief of the Miamis and when he died "Little Turtle" succeeded him. He was a born general and was as noted for his courage as for his skill. He won many battles and once he defeated an army of white men half as large again as his own. But when that general came whom they called the "Wind" and the "Blacksnake," "Little Turtle" reluctantly had to yield. Once he had signed the treaty of peace with the white men he became their faithful and unchanging friend.

"Little Turtle" saw very plainly that the coming of the white man would make it necessary for his own people to change their way of living. They could no longer keep to themselves the woods and streams and always have plenty of fish and game and wild fowl, and hunt the large animals on the prairies. The white man had changed all that and taken possession of the country for himself. "Little Turtle," like a wise chief, tried to teach his people to make the best of it and to earn their living in other ways. He thankfully accepted help when it was offered. The Friends of Philadelphia, sometimes called Quakers, sent him two ploughs and some other tools. Later he said in a speech that he had used them till they were worn out, and added, "'It is the real wish of your brothers the Indians to engage in the cultivation of our lands and although the game is not yet so scarce but we can get enough to eat, we know it is becoming scarce, and we must begin to take hold of such tools as we see in the hands of the white people."

When white men settle in a country they do not always teach the natives to live better lives. Often by their bad example they make them worse than they were before. "Little Turtle" soon found to his sorrow that the people of his tribe were learning from the white men to drink whisky. They brought the furs that they had taken in hunting and exchanged them for strong drink. They would part with anything and everything to get it. The "fire-water," as they called it, quickly killed them. "Little Turtle" was so distressed that he did not know what to do. He said, "This liquor that they introduce into our country is more to be feared than the gun or the tomahawk. There are more of us dead since the treaty of Greenville than we lost by the years of war before it, and it is all owing to the introduction of this liquor among us."

Another time "Little Turtle" and another chief named "Five Medals" sat down and between them wrote a letter to beg that the rum-trader might be prevented from coming to sell his liquor to their tribes. The letter said "if he does, your red brothers are lost forever."

"Little Turtle" did much more than write letters. He took long journeys to see the white men who ran the government and to plead with them to help his Indians to live sober and industrious lives. At one time he and some other chiefs made a trip to Baltimore. They were entertained together in a white man's home. "Little Turtle" led the procession as they entered the parlor and behaved like a polished gentleman, and made a neat little speech when he was introduced to the ladies.

On this occasion, we are told, he wore a blue cloth suit with gilt buttons and a buff waistcoat. He had on leggings and moccasins and there were gold rings in his ears. He also had a red military sash around his waist and a cocked hat with a red feather in it. No doubt you think he must have looked rather funny, and I suppose he did. But he was so gentlemanly and polite in all his ways that no one thought of laughing at him. They could only wish they had as much grace and dignity themselves. After all, the best manners are not put on but spring naturally from a noble character. At one time "Little Turtle" had a bad attack of the gout. That is a disease that people who live luxuriously often get. Someone jokingly remarked to "The Turtle" that he had a complaint that belonged to great folks and gentlemen. "I

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

BUSY SUMMER DAYS IN THE LONE STAR STATE

Special Correspondence

In spite of the recent floods, the Texas W. C. T. U. is pressing toward the goal, "National Constitutional Prohibition in 1920." Our state president is spending her vacation lecturing at various Chautauquas in the north and east. The unions have been using her last convention speech on their programs and carrying out her suggestions.

A short time before Mrs. Curtis left Texas she held a meeting in Denton for the Interdenominational Missionary Society and also attended the meeting of the Sociological Congress in Houston and the woman suffrage convention in Galveston. Of these latter she said, "At times I felt that I was in our own W. C. T. U. convention, they were so similar in many respects, only the men did the talking, while the women observed St. Paul's injunction to 'keep silence.'" Just before her departure Mrs. Hightower tendered Mrs. Curtis a reception. Two interesting numbers on the program were the dedication to our cause of four little children, and the presentation of life membership certificates to Mrs. Gaines and Mrs. H. M. Price, two faithful members well worthy of this distinction.

Fort Worth Central W. C. T. U. still rejoices that one of its most popular departments is the Bible in the Public Schools. The S. T. I. essay contests in the public schools, in charge of Mrs. Claudia Hightower, state corresponding secretary, are proving an improvement on other years. Flower Mission day was observed by a visit to the jail with flowers, literature and words of encouragement. Recently a beautiful new book case was presented to the emergency hospital through our Flower Mission superintendents, Mesdames Harvey and Rogers. A book shower to fill it is now being planned. Fort Worth Central is doing a good work with billboards, the posters being frequently changed. At present there is an immense "up-to-the-last-moment" map of the United States hung on a public, much traveled street. During the late flood one of these billboards was standing on somewhat higher ground than many of the houses and other signs. After the water subsided it stood all alone, and created comment from passers-by.

Pearl Street Methodist Church recently had a very interesting "get together" meeting in which many W. C. T. U. women participated. Mrs. L. T. Knight conducted the exercises and Mrs. Niess, formerly a missionary in India, gave a very interesting talk.

Mrs. C. B. Megrail, one of our new members, is winning golden opinions from all sorts of people by adding to our numbers in Rains and Hunt counties.

Recently Miss Mae Carton, president of the Woman's Forum in Dallas, passed to her reward. Miss Carton was largely responsible for the Willard Home for working girls in Dallas. Mrs. E. M. Waits, the wife of one of our best loved pastors, and a faithful member of the W. C. T. U., has also recently been promoted.

At a recent meeting of the Missionary Federation of Fort Worth, composed of all the woman's missionary societies of the city, the Y. W. C. A. and the W. C. T. U., its name was changed to the Church Women's Federation. When it was learned that the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company had decided to withdraw its support for the maintenance of a travelers' aid at the Texas and Pacific station, the federation and the Y. W. C. A. agreed to assume the whole financial responsibility for continuing it.

Vernon union is congratulating itself on the completion of a handsome fountain soon to be unveiled. This is the second W. C. T. U. fountain established in Texas, the first, in Denison, having been erected in memory of Mrs. S. C. Acheson, the second president of the Texas W. C. T. U.

Crepe Paper Napkins

Gold or Pink Border with W.C.T.U. Monogram in Gold

Use These for

Luncheons
Porch Parties
Sociables
Picnics

Price per 25, 20 Cents. Per 100, 75 Cents

Drinking Cups

A Folded Cup Made of Wax Paper

Price per Dozen, 10 Cents. Per 100, 50 cents

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House
Evanston, Illinois

AUSTRALIAN WHITE RIBBONERS IN CONVENTION

Special Correspondence

The ninth triennial Australasian W. C. T. U. convention met in Adelaide at a time when the South Australian white ribboners were rejoicing at the splendid expression of temperance sentiment which had been given by the overwhelming majority of votes cast, in favor of the six o'clock closing of liquor bars. Lady Holder, president of the Australasian W. C. T. U., gave a graphic account of the proceedings of the Fifth World's Convention held in Brooklyn in 1913, at which she was a delegate, as was also Mrs. Helen Barton, of Glasgow, who was in attendance at the Australasian convention and added much to the interest of the meetings.

Welcome socials were arranged for the delegates at North Adelaide, Glenelg, St. Peters, Semaphore, and Knightsbridge, the various local unions in each district uniting in inviting them to tea. These bright affairs were made the occasions of capital informal speeches by the local mayors and ministers and other prominent citizens who had rendered signal service in the recent "six o'clock" campaign.

At a public meeting in the Baptist church many of the fine W. C. T. U. speakers of Australia were presented to the audience, and the "White Ribbon Choir" which had charge of the music, was accorded universal appreciation.

By decision of the convention a letter was sent to each of the state governors of Australasia urging his abstinence from alcohol during the period of the war in conformity with the example set by King George. The letter declared that "in the Commonwealth of Australia alcohol is rendering unfit for service a considerable percentage of men who enlist, men who, free from the temptation to take liquor would bravely face death for the defence of the Empire."

The field day exercises of the L. T. L. at Victoria Hall were much enjoyed by the little people who rallied in full force and went through the program with the precision of well-drilled soldiers. The flight of butterflies, with their bright wings and light movements, charmed the onlookers. Five little pictures of Frances Willard, showing her interest in her surroundings, her games, her pets, her country and temperance, were prettily depicted.

"LITTLE TURTLE"

(Continued from Page Thirteen)

always thought I was a gentleman," he said simply. And so, in truth, he was.

Washington invited "Little Turtle" to visit him in Philadelphia, which was then the national capital. It was a difficult journey but "The Turtle" arrived in due time. Before he left, Washington presented him with a fine sword and a silver medal. On one side of the medal there was a likeness of Washington and on the other side the picture of a turtle. The President also employed a celebrated artist to paint the portrait of his Indian friend.

"Little Turtle" visited Congress to plead for the prohibition of the liquor traffic among the Indians. For the same purpose he also went before the legislatures of Ohio and Kentucky. To his great joy the assembly of Indiana Territory yielded to his earnest request and the very first law it passed was one to protect the Indians from the curse of rum.

"Little Turtle" always wanted the best for his people. Small-pox was very common among the Indians and great numbers of them died of it. "The Turtle," in one of his visits to the white men, heard about vaccination and how much sickness it prevents. Immediately he went to a doctor and had himself and also the members of his party vaccinated. He took the vaccine back to his tribe and thus saved the lives of many of the Indians. You see he was always ready to learn and willing to do new things when necessary. So it is not surprising that he thought of trying the remedy of prohibition when his people were attacked by the plague of drink, which is so much worse than small-pox.

At last "Little Turtle's" work was done and he died in his old home place and was buried in the orchard. White men bore his body to its resting-place and did him high honor. They carried the muffled drum, and played the funeral march and fired salutes over his grave. According to Indian custom his weapons of war were buried with him, and the medal that Washington gave him was laid beside them. Later, when Americans had built up the city of Fort Wayne, "The Turtle's" memory was honored, as we said before, by a statue on the front of the court-house.

There is one more thing to speak of before we leave him. Though he was a great warrior and a great leader and a wonderful help to his people he never forgot that without God he could do nothing. So while he worked and talked against strong drink, he prayed against it too. He once said, "I hope the Great Spirit will change the minds of our people and tell them it will be better for them to cultivate the earth than to drink whisky." Without the Great Spirit none of us can do any good. So every day when you pray to Him, will not you, too, ask Him to change the minds of our American people, so that they will see the harm of alcohol and make an end of it?

Pennants, Hats and Buttons

for National Young Campaigners

The PENNANTS are 18 inches long, made in red, white or blue felt.

The HATS are made of blue felt, with the letters Y. C. P. in white.

The BUTTONS are red or blue, with letters.

PRICES

1 pennant,	1 hat,	1 button	.$ .20
25 pennants,	25 hats,	25 buttons.	4.00
100 pennants,	100 hats,	100 buttons.	15.00
1,000 pennants,	1,000 hats,	1,000 buttons.	130.00

PENNANTS

10 cents apiece $7.00 per hundred
8 cents each if 25 are ordered.

HATS

10 cents apiece $8.00 per hundred
9 cents each if 25 are ordered

BUTTONS

3 cents each 100 for $1.50
25 for 50 cents 500 for $5.00
1,000 for $9.00

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:

A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

NEW LEAFLETS

For General Distribution

The Brewer's Slaves (Illustrated)
Behind the Bars for Life
Prohibition's Effect Upon Revenue and Business.

Size 6x9 inches

Price per 50, 12 cents; per 100, 20 cents

Consumption of Liquor Decreasing
Drink and Divorce

Size 3½x6 inches

Price per 50, 10 cents; per 100, 15 cents

POSTER LEAFLET SERIES

Reproductions of posters in small leaflet form

1. Which Will You Protect?
2. Do You Know These Facts?
3. Alcohol
4. Beer
5. Drink Robs the Working Man
6. The License Voter Gets What?
7. Attention Voters!
8. Figures Tell
9. Saloons Increase Taxes
10. The Trouble Manufacturing Co.
11. Compare These Figures
12. Boys and Girls
13. Not by My Vote
14. State Prohibition and Local Option
15. Railroads and Alcoholic Liquors
16. The Factory and Alcoholic Liquors
17. The Man Who Drinks
18. A Business Proposition
19. The Liquor Traffic Must Go

Price per 100, 10 cents

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

"High Joe" or The Logger's Story

By J. BURRITT SMITH

Striking, pathetic, convincing—and a vote-maker. Called "The Uncle Tom's Cabin of the Temperance Reform." Sixteen editions issued.

Paper, 35c; cloth, $1.00

Busy World Publishing Co.
22 S. Henry St. Madison, Wis.

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

EDUCATING VOTERS IN CONNECTICUT

MRS. E. B. KENDRICK

Vacation time is near and Connecticut white ribboners are busy finishing up the various odds and ends that are left over from the activities of the winter. Reports at county conventions show unusual endeavor, and better still, excellent results. In most of the counties L. T. L. work has had special attention. Windham and Hartford counties have doubled their legion membership and others have made substantial gains. Many of the Legions, assisted and encouraged by the mother union, have given demonstrations. One leader has given hundreds of the little "Liquor Traffic Must Go" stickers to the children, asking them to pass them on to others not members. Increased interest in prize essay and medal contests is reported in every county. Warehouse Point W. C. T. U. presented an evening's entertainment, combining an L. T. L. demonstration, a silver medal contest and the awarding of the prizes in the essay contest. There have been over seven hundred essays written by pupils in Hartford county during the year, a great gain over last year. On the program of nearly all the county conventions were medal contests, New Haven county holding a matron's reading contest.

Ingenious Plans For Raising Money

The Connecticut state treasurer is full of enthusiasm, therefore the unions live in a sort of expectant attitude for the "next." Recently came the word that there was to be a poster day, covering the entire state. The unions very generally responded and posters were placed where those who run (or auto) may read. Then came the tapes for the "yard of dimes." Each yard holds forty-five dimes and white ribboners are now soliciting dimes from butcher and baker, and the treasurer makes no protest if an extra dime is sent for good measure. Willimantic union joined in the general celebration of Old Home week, with floats, banquets and all the et ceteras. A good plan has been adopted by a temperance society of Seymour: A large bill board has been erected, and it is to be used to display scientific temperance posters, to be changed weekly. That means fifty-two temperance lectures to continuous audiences. Captain Richmond P. Hobson spent nearly all of May in the state, speaking in twenty-two cities and large towns. He drew large audiences, presented thoughtful arguments, and undoubtedly made friends for the prohibition cause. He was invited to speak before the general assembly and took advantage of his opportunity to impress upon his hearers some scientific facts concerning the effects of alcohol and the need of a prohibitory law. He also spoke to the ministers and others at the Interchurchmen's luncheon in Hartford.

The state president, Mrs. C. B. Buell, has attended and addressed each county convention, speaking in favor of the constitutional prohibition amendment and urging persistent effort for increased membership. Mrs. Mary B. Wilson has returned to the state after several years' residence in Philadelphia. She is a general favorite and all are pleased to welcome her "home"

The Connecticut legislature, which meets biennially, has adjourned sine die and sine much of anything else to its credit. It was an intensely partisan body and didn't hesitate to gloat over the fact. A bill asking for $20,000 for a woman's reformatory was "turned down"—excuse, no funds—but a commission was appointed consisting of the leader of the senate, the speaker of the house, and four other politicians with a clerk, to make a revision of the statutes and $42,000 was appropriated for salaries of the commission. Experts claim that one-third the amount would have been ample. One of the measures before the excise committee was a bill to allow a two per cent beer to be legislated into a temperance drink and sold at soda fountains and in candy stores. Perhaps no one thing shows the trend of public sentiment better than the fact that the bill received very little consideration from members of a committee who are not generally selected because of their temperance tendencies. The excise committee had between thirty and forty bills for consideration. A bill was passed raising the license fee from $450 to $750, and in small towns from $250 to $410 with twenty-five per cent to go to the state. A lamentable act! Another bill passed provides that no new license shall be granted to any person not a citizen of the United States. The hearing on the prohibition amendment was attended by a large body of representative people and splendid arguments were presented. The committee brought in a favorable majority report and when the vote was taken it stood sixty-five for and eighty-two against, with many of the friends of the amendment absent. They had been led to believe that the vote was to be put over. The rulings of the speaker and his general attitude during the discussion have been severely criticised. There was a bill before the judiciary committee proposing that tin plates be placed on saloons and disreputable places, the plates to have the name of the owner of the property thereon—a desirable bill, but of course such a bill couldn't get by a Connecticut general assembly. This legislature refused to pass a mothers' pension bill, a bill allowing women to vote on the license question, a bill to reduce working hours for women, a bill to raise the age of consent from 16 to 18 years, and a number of other measures which would have made for better conditions. A bill asking for an amendment to the state constitution allowing women to vote equally with men was defeated, by only a very small majority.

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75
Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:
THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

A WORD TO THE WISE

With home duties, W. C. T. U. duties, and church duties clamoring simultaneously for your attention in these busy summer days, do not allow yourself to forget for an instant the importance of THE UNION SIGNAL to the all-round temperance worker. Would you, local president, be glad to have every member of your union enthusiastic, intelligent and capable? A never-failing prescription is the reading of the official paper. A systematic and generous study of it will make the kind of white ribboner that can stand her ground in any discussion of the temperance question and has ample and satisfying reasons for the faith that is within her. Urge once again that each member of your union supply herself with this indispensable aid. To interest those who are not familiar with the paper, call their attention to certain articles in your own copy which will be likely to attract them especially. See that those who lead the meetings are supplied with copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and they will quickly appreciate its value in planning an interesting program.

THE UNION SIGNAL has a two-fold mission. It will not only educate white ribboners along temperance lines, but it will make prohibition voters of the men in your community. For this purpose the Campaign Edition is particularly recommended. Why not follow the example of a Missouri union which used the proceeds of a medal contest for subscriptions to the SIGNAL. The influential men of your community should be supplied with the paper, the mayor, the aldermen, the preachers, the Sunday school teachers, the doctors, the editors of your papers, the business men and voters generally.

One way to bring to their attention our none-such temperance paper is through the liberal use of marked copies. Secure a supply of SIGNALS and mark the articles that would be likely to interest voters of different classes and professions.

THE NEW SUBSCRIBER

Have you, old subscriber, secured the new subscriber for the weekly edition of THE UNION SIGNAL and thus become a member of the Win One Circle? If not, will you at once find the new subscriber so that your name may be enrolled in the 1915 Win One Circle and the new subscriber have the paper she has needed and ought to have had long ago?

Many are wanting and asking for the information to be found in THE UNION SIGNAL, but do not know where to find it. Old subscriber, you know and can help someone to this information by getting that new subscriber.

WIN ONE CIRCLE, 1915

452. Mrs. Belle Peters, Perkins, Okla.
453. Mrs. Della Hoose, Painesville, Ohio.
454. Miss Jennie Weldon, Hampton, Conn.
455. Mrs. Jessie B. Potts, Clarinda, Ia.
456. Mrs. Belle C. Kimball, Kirkwood, Mo.
457. Mrs. W. L. Hyde, Marietta, Ohio.
458. Mrs. H. A. Carpenter, Apponaug, R. I.

BREEZES FROM THE PINE TREE STATE

Special Correspondence

The inspiring influence of the county conventions is being felt in Maine. We were especially fortunate in having as our convention speakers Miss Elizabeth P. Gordon, National W. C. T. U. organizer, who is well known in this state, and Mrs. Emma H. Howland of Massachusetts, who is also a National organizer. Not only in their evening addresses, but by their helpful suggestions during conventions have they endeared themselves to our women. New members were gained in nearly every meeting addressed, as would be expected after so many years under such marvelous leadership. Maine is one of the best organized states, therefore sweeping gains are not readily made. An especially fine L. T. L. was organized by Miss Gordon at Bar Harbor. When the question of a leader came up Miss Gordon asked the children whom they wished to take charge and they promptly selected a winsome teacher who had accompanied them from one of the schools to the church. The young woman graciously responded to this unexpected expression of love and confidence. Miss Gordon writes, "During my four weeks' tour and in the stirring conventions I felt that the members of the W. C. T. U. of the dear old Pine Tree State were reaching out helping hands to each other and including in the loving greetings all the women of the state—in conventions assembled. Every mention of woman's ballot for Maine was warmly applauded. All were deeply interested in contributing to the Stevens memorial fountain fund. I was privileged to address a fine new union at Hartford, lately organized by Mrs. Quimby. This was its first public meeting. The attendance was large and the success of the meeting was due to the up-to-date arrangements of the officers."

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon
Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."
Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room
Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50
THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

$2.50 PER DAY SALARY PAID ONE LADY in each town to distribute free circulars and take orders for concentrated flavoring in tubes. Permanent position.
J. S. Ziegler Co., 7 G East Harrison, Chicago.

459. Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson Jackson, Magnolia, Del.
460. Mrs. H. F. Harmon, Sandover, Md.
461. Mrs. S. M. Reed, Plymouth, Mich.
462. Mrs. Eleanor P. Green, Freeport, Ohio.
463. Mrs. Mary Wilkinson Coles, Moorestown, N. J.
464. Mrs. Oretta Carpenter, Chittenango Sta., N. Y.
465. Mrs. C. L. Jones, Winnfield, La.
466. Mrs. Mary C. Groesbeck, Round Lake, N. Y.
467. Mrs. Sidna Rose, Vienna, Ill.
468. Mrs. G. F. Hooper, Palmyra, Wis.
469. Mrs. Jennie E. Carley, Tower, Mich.
470. Mrs. Olin R. Plummer, Chester, Pa.
471. Mrs. J. L. Bradley, Eagle Rock, Va.
472. Mrs. B. B. Ward, Montclair, N. J.
473. Rose A. Davison, Fredericktown, Ohio.
474. Mrs. Etta Smith, Corning, Iowa.
475. Mrs. Julia F. Andrews, Crandon, Wis.
476. Mrs. Ellen Omundson, Viroqua, Wis.

A Wave of Prohibition
FACTS AND FIGURES
ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new
PROHIBITION FAN
(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth
by
Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is
36 Fans, $1.00
Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

A VISION REALIZED

(Continued from Page Twelve)

ganization of counties, so that the workers might go into untried sections and help with the gain.

Some of the organizers secured 150 members in a single county and left a full-fledged county union of six splendid local unions fully equipped for carrying on department work.

Two counties in the state where no union had ever been organized, wrote to the president asking that theirs be among the favored counties visited.

And the money came: It came as dues, it came as contributions, it came as collections from meetings, and it might have swamped the treasury had it not been for traveling expenses and salaries to the workers!

The state president grew thin as the season advanced, but she declared that it was the burden of joy that lightened her weight! She learned during that remarkable year to smile and smile constantly, for every message she received was one of victory. Her women were faithful and worked even as she did herself, and believing the plan to have truly been a vision, they obeyed its provisions and respected its conditions with an exactness that surprised and delighted even the National head.

And the outcome of it all was one of the finest years of work recorded in the history of any state by reason of the gain in membership and gain in public sentiment and efficiency of workers.

When the state president at the following National Convention reported a gain in her state of 5,756 members, what mattered it that the lines in her face had deepened somewhat and a becoming little hollow had been scooped in each cheek. The joy of achievement exceeded the labor and uncertainty of the past months, and the victory was worth far more than the price.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., AUGUST 5, 1915 | No. 32

Russia Saves $900,000,000 by Prohibition

Reports from Banks Show Savings of People Almost Equal Receipts of Government from Alcoholic Liquors

London, July 27, 4 a. m.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Petrograd says:

"Finance Minister Bark seeks authorization to issue state securities amounting to $600,000,000 beyond the sum at present allowed. He says that the returns of the savings banks to the beginning of July showed $900,000,000 above last year, which is almost the same amount as the treasury lost through the prohibition of the sale of alcohol.—The Chicago Herald.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASHINGTON
OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

OUR NATIONAL CONVENTION CITY

CHILDREN'S PLAYGROUNDS IN SEATTLE

HELEN N. STEVENS

One of Seattle's Playgrounds

Some years ago when the city was still young the women of Seattle decided that the coming generations should be provided for in the way of ample playgrounds for the children. It was demonstrated conclusively that parks and playg.ounds could be secured, at a minimum cost, at the time a city was being laid out, whereas older cities, lacking forethought, had been compelled to pay fabulous prices for these twentieth century conveniences. The women's idea was acted upon and Seattle has the distinction of being the second city in the United States in respect to its playground system, the city of Chicago alone surpassing it. Every residence district, urban and suburban, has one or more well equipped playfields. An extract from the Seattle park board's annual report thus describes them:

"Playgrounds have been given most generous attention and it is doubtful if there is another city in the United States of double Seattle's population which can boast of having expended nearly a million dollars on playgrounds as Seattle has done. The city owns twenty-three playgrounds, ranging in size from a city block to thirty acres in area, and two additional sites are in course of acquisition. Twelve of these playgrounds have been substantially improved with modern outdoor gymnasium equipment of steel and the other recreation facilities of a modern playfield. Men and women supervisors are in charge from May until October of each year.

"Four playgrounds are provided with recreation buildings or field houses, making possible all year-round work. These buildings are modern in every respect, providing gymnasiums, libraries, club rooms, assembly halls, etc., and while not so elaborate as the Chicago recreation buildings, are being operated very successfully along the same general lines.

"Another recreation feature, not possessed by many cities, is the Alki Point Bathing Beach, comprising a half mile of salt water frontage on the entrance to the harbor, where is operated the only municipally owned bathing beach on the Pacific Coast.

"While the bathing season lasts but four months, more than seventy-two thousand people utilized the bath house last season while hundreds of thousands of people visited the beach to enjoy the band concerts and the promenade which combine to make this marine view park the most popular recreation feature of the system during the summer season.

"If one could spend a week at one of the buildings watching the different groups coming and going, each making its own particular use of the facilities offered, he would obtain, as in no other way, a true perspective of the public recreation problem as we are attempting to handle it. The most encouraging feature of the work is the fact that clubs, societies, and other young people's organizations are beginning to take notice of their own social and physical needs and are seeking the recreation buildings to work out their individual problems."

Alki Point Beach Pavilion

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION NOTES

Seen and Heard at the W. C. T. U. Booth

On a recent afternoon an elderly man wearing the cap of a Shriner, entered the W. C. T. U. booth at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and after a few words with Miss Mary Brown, who is in charge, remarked, "In five years there will be no more need for your work. In five years a glass of liquor cannot be bought in this country. It is all right; I am willing. I've been through the mill and I know."

School teachers in attendance at the Exposition are finding the W. C. T. U. booth an interesting place, and every effort is being made to supply them with anti-alcohol and anti-cigaret material, which will be useful in the school room.

—

Representatives of three foreign governments have recently come to the booth for temperance facts and figures. The visitor from the Netherlands asked for publications and statistics which his country can use in its temperance work, and a member of the Swedish Commission requested two copies of all W. C. T. U. literature, with the assurance that methods new to the commission and applicable to conditions in Sweden will be incorporated in their own plans for welfare work. The secretary of the Federation of Temperance Societies of Denmark called at the booth with a card of introduction from the husband of Mr. Johanne Ottosen, a leader in white ribbon circles in her own country and one of the delegates to the World's Convention in Brooklyn.

—

From time to time during the summer liquor dealers have visited the exhibit. A young man accompanied by a friend, both liquor men, discussed the whole subject earnestly with Miss Brown and promised another call at the booth.

—

A resident of Phoenix, Arizona, on a recent visit to the booth, claimed that for the first six months of this year with no saloons in his state there had been but two murders as contrasted with forty-five for the corresponding period of last year. Of the 1914 murderers 70 per cent were drunk when the crime was committed, and this year one of the two was drunk on whisky which had been brought in from an adjoining state.

Closing Des Moines' Saloons Puts Money in the Treasury

The last report of the inebriate asylum at Knoxville, Iowa, shows that since Des Moines outlawed the saloons, the contributions of Polk county to that institution have fallen off tremendously. "From an economic standpoint alone this demonstrates that the saloon is a burden rather than an asset to the taxpayer," says the Des Moines Capital. "It is costing Polk county $1,000 less a quarter to pay its share for keeping up the Knoxville institution than before the county went dry. Not long ago The Capital published figures showing that under the dry regime, court costs have decreased and crime has fallen off to a remarkable extent. Working conditions in Des Moines were never better than today and money that formerly went to the saloon now goes to the family. It has taken this country a long time to learn that the saloon is an economic waste."

Decrease in Crime in Alabama's Capital City Under Prohibition

Montgomery, the capital city of Alabama, has a population of about 50,000 people, yet in the two weeks following the going into effect of the prohibition law there were no arrests for drunkenness. The Montgomery Journal of July 13 comments on the successful enforcement of the new law as follows:

"There has been no drunkenness in Montgomery, and a decided decrease in crime since the prohibition law went into effect July 1. The records of the police department show a decided decrease in the number of arrests. It is an especially noteworthy fact that there have been few arrests made for violations which are usually prompted by over-indulgence in intoxicants. The police blotter does not contain a single case for drunkenness and the officers declare that they have not seen a drunken person on the streets since the saloons were closed. It is also noticeable that there have been few arrests for disorderly conduct since the first of the month, and this showing is considered by the police to be to the credit of prohibition, most of the cases of disorderly conduct being brought about by intoxication. Most of the one hundred and six cases noted by the police since the first of the month have been for trivial offenses, such as collision and offenses of petty larceny. The officers on the night reliefs report that there is little opportunity for work after eleven o'clock at night, as there are few people on the streets. Most of the prisoners now serving as city convicts were sentenced before the first of the month, and it is expected that when their sentences are served out the convict gangs will receive few prisoners from the police. Old officers on the force declare that they have never seen such a decrease in crime, and the good behavior of the city is attributed principally to prohibition and to the able manner in which the county and the city officers are enforcing the law."

The Revenue Could Be Spared

The retail liquor dealers of New York will pay into the state treasury this year twenty-two and a half million dollars. Nobody doubts that the state could spare this sum or a greater one for an equivalent of sobriety and moral strength.

—New York Evening World.

Missouri Mining County Votes Dry

An important victory for prohibition was scored on July 23, when St. Francois county, Missouri, voted to outlaw the saloons. The county, located just south of St. Louis, is said to have been a battle ground of the wet and dry forces for many years. It is in the heart of the lead mining district and contains several unincorporated mining towns.

A noteworthy feature of the victory was that a part of the majority was rolled up in the largest mining centers, showing a strong labor vote as well as farm vote against the saloon. The Kansas City (Mo.) Times commenting on the result of the election, says:

"Although the brewery and whisky influence in the legislature was strong enough to block the passage of the bills aimed at the saloon, every election except one since the legislature adjourned has returned a dry majority.

"The one wet victory was Monett, where the returns showed a wet majority of seven, although the drys have since contested the election on account of fraud. Dry victories have been:

Taney county	700 majority
Miller county	1,468 majority
St. Francois county	900 majority
Carrollton	185 majority"

Success of Prohibition in Arizona

Mr. A. R. Buckman, Secretary of the Temperance Federation of Arizona.

The transformation that has taken place in Bisbee, the liveliest camp in Arizona, is wonderful. Every building that once had a saloon is now occupied by some other business. The membership of the Y. M. C. A. has been greatly increased and improvements amounting to $10,000 have been decided upon. A new Y. W. C. A. is about completed, costing close to $20,000.

Police officers say that where seven months ago we had from twenty to forty persons in our jails per month, we now have only from two to four; and one month there were none in the Lowell jail.

An ex-saloonkeeper not long ago while talking to a friend pointed across the street to an old customer of his, saying: "That is the first time in fifteen years I have seen that man dressed up and the reason is because we are out of business."

A little boy was asked, "What are you eating, Johnnie?" "I have a doughnut," was the reply. "Papa is catching up and we have doughnuts at our house now that the saloons are gone."

A mother of six children in paying for fifty dollars' worth of groceries said, "This is the first time since we were married that the children have had the clothes they needed and our bills were all paid."

No Liquor for Indiana National Guards

Governor Ralston of Indiana is said to be responsible for an order issued by Adjutant General Bridges, commander-in-chief of the Indiana militia, insisting that Ft. Benjamin Harrison, the summer camping ground of various regiments of the Indiana National Guards, both cavalry and infantry, shall be conducted entirely without intoxicating liquors. Nothing stronger than lemonade will be permitted at the refreshment stands outside the camp. Last year's camp was also dry.

Druggists Pleased with Ban on Alcohol in United States Pharmacopeia

"Under no circumstances would I take out a retail liquor license to handle whisky should the proposed change go into effect. I think that a majority of druggists will agree with me when I say that the present $25 license is a burden because it really hasn't paid us to handle the stuff for the last five years," declared an Elkhart (Ind.) pharmacist to a representative of the Elkhart (Ind.) Review, the other day in referring to the recently reported purpose of the national pharmacopeia committee of physicians to omit brandy and whisky from the new edition of the United States Pharmacopeia.

Only Few Doctors Cling to It

"Until five years ago," said the druggist, "whisky was an ingredient of many medicines. Physicians would nearly always prescribe it as one of the principal ingredients of a cough syrup and it was part of many medicines for different diseases. Now, oils and balms of various kinds take the place of whisky and only a few of the old school doctors prescribe its use. Why, a large number of prominent brands of patented cough syrups whose main ingredient was whisky in one form or another have substituted non-alcoholic substances for the liquor. You have possibly noticed on some of the famous patent medicines that additional copyrights have been applied for. This means that they have been compelled to reduce the alcoholic ingredients in them to a minimum."

Many Hail Proposed Change

The druggist's assertions were made after a traveling man attempted to "josh" him about losing a good paying part of his business. The traveling man said that he had heard many druggists over the country declare that they would be glad if the pharmacopeia committee would take the reported action, for it would prevent their competitors from forcing them to bother at all with the stuff, which is becoming more and more unprofitable, not to mention the loss in respectability which the whisky-selling druggist suffers.

Another Elkhart druggist said he had long considered the feasibility of cutting out the whisky, regardless of the proposed action relating to the pharmacopeia. "I'm disgusted with all that sort of business," he said.

Government Begins Fight on Alcoholic Medicines

The United States government recently began a crusade against alcoholic medical preparations, which, while masquerading as medicines, are in reality used as beverages in dry territory where wines and liquors are not to be had. According to the Washington (D. C.) Times, a list of 246 preparations which have been examined in the Internal Revenue office and found "to be insufficiently medicated to render them unfit for use as a beverage," or which, in other words, can be taken by the wine or whisky glass full as well as by the teaspoon, was given to each Internal Revenue collector. All collectors were advised that a special tax will be required for the sale of any of the preparations named in the list, even though such sales should be for medicinal and not bibulous use.

Moreover, collectors are instructed to aid the bureau in its crusade by securing and forwarding the bureau officers in Washington samples of preparations which they have reason to believe are or may be used as beverages.

W. C. T. U. NEWS FROM ACROSS THE SEA

The Scottish white ribboners have instituted a Catherine Forrester-Paton white ribbon missionary department, with Miss Boe of Alloa as superintendent.

In spite of the famine which is devastating certain sections of Palestine, especially Jerusalem and its vicinity, the work of educating the children along total abstinence lines continues with unabated vigor. One of the missionaries writes:

"In a prize essay contest on the subject "Why We Should Try to Prevent the Increase of the Drink Habit," open to all the preparatory schools of Jerusalem and vicinity, with prizes for the best two papers in Arabic and the best two in English, the two English prizes were taken by boys and the two Arabic prizes by girls."

In anticipation of the approaching coronation which is to be held in the historic capital of Japan, Kyoto the Japan W. C. T. U. is making plans to prevent the usual excessive drinking in connection with the festivities and the participation of geisha girls at public functions. The Japanese white ribboners believe that in this progressive age these customs should be changed to pleasures of a higher character. In promoting this reform they are counting upon the influence and sympathy of Count Okuma. premier of Japan, an honorary member of the W. C. T. U., and the Hon. Mr. Saburo Shimada, president of the Kakusei (Purity) society, who has been elected to the high office of president of the House of Commons. While all the towns and cities throughout Japan, including her territorial possessions, will hold festivities for the coronation, Kyoto will be the center of the celebration, which will probably last at least forty nights. The streets will be filled with strangers, and it is expected that shrewd money makers will have many places for rest and amusement where all kinds of drinks will be attractively displayed and cheaply sold. For the protection of the masses the W. C. T. U. has planned to have a spacious tent where the tired may rest and be served with refreshing non-alcoholic drinks.

The South African white ribboners are rejoicing in the arrival in their midst of Miss Lochhead. She comes from her beloved Scotland to spend two years in South Africa, where she expects to organize many new unions and develop the work along various lines. She has been welcomed to her new field at many delightful meetings. On May 29, accompanied by Miss Emilie Solomon, president of the Cape Province W. C. T. U., she left Cape Town for Port Elizabeth, expecting to hold meetings at many points along the way.

The failure of the United States government's income, long visible in the customs receipts, has extended to internal revenues as well. "Ordinary" internal revenue, chiefly from alcoholics and tobacco, is about $600,000 less so far this year than for the same days in 1914. The influences of the European war seem to have been conducive to economy and sobriety here, which can hardly be regretted, however inconvenient to federal government financiers.—The Chicago Herald.

Miss Hardynia Norville writes that the boys' L. T. L. in Montevideo, Uruguay, has an enthusiastic young leader, Prof. Horacio Duro. He is a prominent educator, greatly beloved by his five hundred students. He gives open air talks to the boys and leads them in their sports.

Wounded soldiers have a friend in Signora Camperio, who is remaining in Milan, Italy, for the summer to give aid to the sufferers. To interest the girls of Italy in the white ribbon cause and to enlist them as members, Signorina Bersoni has written a very valuable leaflet. Signorina Zaccaria does not lose any opportunity to make excellent use of the press. New members at Ancona and Bologna are credited to the efforts of Signora Severini, who is an ardent advocate of temperance.

Moradabad was the scene of the nineteenth annual W. C. T. U. convention of the United Provinces of India. Two public meetings, one in Hindustani and the other in English, created interest. Books on hygiene and scientific temperance instruction are being placed in many schools of the provinces and literature in the vernacular will be furnished to the primary and village schools. The national convention will meet in November at Punjab.

Prize Float of Cozad (Neb.) W. C. T. U.

NEBRASKA WHITE RIBBONERS OPTIMISTIC

MRS. L. S. COREY, Correspondent

In the observance of Patriotic Day in Nebraska, each succeeding year the temperance spirit pervades the programs more and more. This year has been a record breaker for the third, fourth and fifth of July patriotic gatherings and picnics. Temperance subjects were on most of the general programs. University Place, the home of our much-beloved state W. C. T. U. president, held its first large patriotic celebration on the fifth, presided over by Mayor Jason L. Claflin, husband of our leader. The speaker of the day was ex-Governor Aldrich, whose entire speech was permeated with temperance sentiment.

Mrs. Adelaide Rood, our state organizer and lecturer, was the principal speaker at a patriotic picnic at Upland, while Mrs. Annetta Nesbitt and others participated in many open-air meetings in different parts of the state. We present to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL one of the pictures of a W. C. T. U. float that was awarded the first prize. It was prepared by the Cozad W. C. T. U. The state W. C. T. U. feels very much gratified over the recognition given our forces in Nebraska. It is a good omen for the prohibitory amendment campaign which is now fully launched—for we have our petitions printed and are getting them to our women and men to circulate.

Institutes and medal contests are being held in great numbers, and the Sunday schools are awakening to their opportunities and to the importance of the part they are to take in the great bloodless battle to be fought in 1916. On July Fourth, one Sunday school observed the day in a most unique way. Many of the great movements were represented by flags which were furled, or rolled, until the speaker chosen for each had given a selection, when the flag was slowly unfurled. The temperance flag was pure white, and "The White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner" was recited, with the exception of the last verse, which was sung. The entire program was most effective and inspiring.

The churches, women's aid and missionary societies have already shown their interest in the amendment campaign by asking for speakers to outline a plan whereby they may prove efficient allies.

Our state president is kept more than busy with her heavy correspondence, outlining plans for various societies, booking speakers, and filling appointments. Altogether, we are a very hopeful, optimistic lot of women.

ALBERTA, CANADA, VOTES FOR PROHIBITION

260,000 SQUARE MILES ADDED TO NORTH AMERICA'S DRY TERRITORY

The stirring days of the province-wide prohibition campaign in Alberta, Canada, reached a fitting climax on July 21, in a vote at the polls which returned approximately a 20,000 majority ballot for a discontinuance of the liquor traffic after July 1, 1916. This great newly white territory is somewhat larger in area than the combined dry states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. As it extends vertically north of the line separating the United States and Canada it seems practically a continuation of the three white states which lie immediately to the southwest.

Notwithstanding the fact that Alberta enjoys the protection of the British flag and is entirely apart from the United States, the liquor interests use the same tactics and employ the same kind of speakers of which they have made use for a quarter of a century in the United States. And just as no campaign in this country would be complete without a full recital of the woes of prohibition Kansas so in Alberta the citizens were entertained with detailed accounts of the poverty, crime, imbecility, unhappiness and misery rampant in the great state of Kansas because of the self-imposed burden of its prohibitory law. But Governor Capper was fully equal to the occasion for the chief executives of Kansas for many years have been well drilled in answering just such attacks upon their state by the liquor men of every section of the United States and other countries.

The liquor men's campaign song, sung with unvarying monotony in the Alberta campaign, contained five verses—the usual five which are their mainstay in every effort to withstand the onslaught of prohibition, namely: personal liberty, higher taxes, the baneful effect of prohibition upon the farmer, the hopeless conditions in Kansas, and the fact that prohibition doesn't prohibit.

As in other campaigns the liquor men were not above any underhanded method which held out a promise of votes for their side. Because of a report that soldiers in camp would not be permitted to vote on the plebiscite, the liquor interests circulated among them typewritten letters supposed to originate with the soldier and with a line for his signature. These letters were to be sent by him to his friends urging them to vote against the prohibition bill and making the statement that the moral reform people had fixed it so that the soldiers couldn't vote and therefore, as a personal favor, they wanted their friends to vote against the prohibition bill.

In the campaign in Alberta both the prohibitionists and the liquor forces brought in speakers from the United States who worked shoulder to shoulder with the local campaigners. C. A. Windle, a leading speaker for the liquor interests in recent campaigns in the United States, was sent to Alberta. As one of the features of the last days of the campaign in Calgary he debated the prohibition question with Rev. F. W. Patterson of Edmonton in the Victoria Park grandstand.

Long before the time scheduled for starting the debate the grandstand was packed with an audience keyed to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. As a preliminary to the opening of the debate Mr. Windle, big, corpulent and thick-voiced, shook hands with Mr. Patterson, the clear-voiced, clean-cut advocate of the prohibition bill. Each man was typical of the cause he represented. Throughout the three-hour debate Mr. Patterson closely observed the rules and taking the arguments in logical sequence proved the following points to the complete conviction of far more than eighty per cent of the audience:

"That the proposed liquor act is in accord with and does not violate any of the rules of constitutional procedure.

"That it will prohibit the sale of drink for beverage purposes in the province.

"That the act does not violate any privilege of personal liberty.

"That it is in harmony with ideals of British justice, because the law was aimed at protecting the public from evils which were a social menace, but did not attempt to make a man righteous by act of parliament.

"That while no provision could be made for compensation in the proposed act, the liquor men were poor sports if they cried out on that account for it was a principle of the contract into which they entered when they accepted their license that it was liable to cancellation without compensation under certain circumstances.

"That prohibition is perfectly in harmony with Christian principles."

To prove the degrading effect upon the people who engage in the business Mr. Patterson cited the desperate attempts that were even then being made in Alberta to corrupt the ballot so that the election might be secured to the liquor men at all costs.

In one of the most eloquent periods of the evening Mr. Patterson answered Mr. Windle's personal liberty arguments. He showed that the world had made considerable progress in freedom since the time of the Magna Charta to which Mr. Windle had referred. The principle given then, the temperance speaker explained, was the abhorrent principle of individualism—every man for himself. Today a new freedom has dawned, the era of brotherhood. It is the day of solidarity, he declared, and prohibition is inseparable from the principle of this new freedom. Now men are beginning to take interest in their weaker brothers, they are beginning to look after the welfare of the community. Mr. Windle's well-known arguments were taken up one by one and torn to bits by the prohibitionist. At the last he wilted down to a state of incoherence. Cornered at every turn, held up to scorn on his blasphemous quotations from the Bible which he used freely to bolster up his case, and challenged on the false statements which had been sent broadcast throughout the province by the liquor workers, he became completely bewildered and in place of summing up his case in the closing fifteen minutes remaining to him he exclaimed: "It is for you people to decide between the Bible and the Koran on the drink question." So incensed had the audience become by this time that Mr. Windle whispered to the chairman to close the meeting, and the indignation of the audience was held in check by the chairman who announced the singing of "God Save the King." As the hymn ended the audience stood on the seats and cheered and cheered again for "Prohibition and Patterson," and although a fearless liquor man tried to start a cheer for Mr. Windle he met with an eloquent silence. This debate was a pronounced victory for the prohibition forces, and doubtful voters were won to the prohibition ranks in considerable numbers. It was, as one of the papers said, "the greatest demonstration that Calgary has ever seen and the biggest single incident in the entire campaign." "It was worth thousands of votes to the drys," was the admission of a prominent licensed victualler.

The newspapers helped mightily, many of them doing valiant service in the prohibition ranks. The Calgary News-Telegram gave generously of its space for prohibition propaganda. The Morning Albertan of Calgary, editorially and otherwise, urged its readers to vote Alberta dry. Across the top of each page before election appeared a headline, "A vote for Liquor Act is a vote for prohibition," or "Vote 'Yes' on the Liquor Act. 'Yes' Means Dry."

All the usual campaign methods were employed by the dry forces. Literature of various kinds to interest voters of every class was prepared and distributed by the Alberta Temperance and Moral Reform League. Prohibition songs were written for the occasion and used at the various demonstrations, parades, etc.

The W. C. T. U. women did much to further the campaign. For months before the day of election educational work was steadily carried on through the public press, the distribution of literature and house-to-house visitation. A series of temperance cartoons was circulated throughout the province so that they appeared in the newspapers of a great many of the towns.

Another factor of great influence was the endorsement of the prohibition measure by the medical men of Calgary who thus placed themselves in the front rank of efficient and up-to-date physicians who are everywhere declaring the evil effects of alcoholic beverages.

Edmonton's Successful Parade

A most successful parade, at Edmonton, with 15,000 people and nine bands participating, is reported. The liquor interests are said to have bought up two of the leading bands of the city. A mammoth parade at Calgary was also one of the spectacular events of the campaign.

Although the population of Alberta is largely Roman Catholic and there are also many foreigners, to no one race or religion is the victory due, but to the fact of a united front against the common enemy.

Election day results were more than a compensation for the efforts of the temperance forces. Calgary and Edmonton voted dry by upwards of 3,000 majority each. Lethbridge, Medicine Hat and other large cities also returned dry majorities.

After this magnificent victory it is easy to believe that Canada as well as the United States will be entirely free from the liquor traffic by 1920, and that the whole of North America will before many years fly the stainless flag of prohibition as a welcome addition to the colors of its various national banners.

"ALBERTA FOR CHRIST"

There's a conflict on—will we stand the test?
"Alberta for Christ," in the Great Northwest;
With the Lord of Hosts as our strength and might
Let us ne'er retreat—keep up the fight.

Chorus

Onward, ever onward, trusting day by day,
Ours shall be the vict'ry, for Jesus leads the way;
Onward, ever onward, there's a fight for us to win,
Alberta must be conquer'd from the hosts of sin.

For His glorious cause we will live or die;
"Alberta for Christ" is the battle cry;
We can never lose for our cause is right,
Let us forward go—keep up the fight.

Till the victr'y's won and the crown's in view,
"Alberta for Christ" rings the watchword true;
We will look by faith for the dawning light,
Hold the cross on high—keep up the fight.

Prohibition Float of Oakland (Iowa) W. C. T. U.

Suffrage Float of Oakland (Iowa) W. C. T. U.

GIVE THE WOMEN A SQUARE DEAL

CONGRESSMAN EDWARD E. TAYLOR OF COLORADO

(Excerpt from Address in House of Representatives)

The enfranchisement of woman is a constructive measure. It is the next logical step in the political evolution of this country. No opportunity should ever in our country be closed to any human being who has the capacity to work therein. It is a disgrace to this country and to this enlightened century to longer disfranchise the patriotic and intelligent womanhood of this Republic. There never was a time in the history of the world when the mass of women was so intelligent, so right living, and public spirited. The world has never enfranchised as patriotic a class of people as the American women are today. Patriotism is not confined to the male sex. Let us be big enough, broad-minded enough, humane enough, and honest enough to treat the women of our country as fairly as they are being treated in China. Let us be men enough to give the women a square deal. Let us show to the world that we believe in the Declaration of Independence. Let us evolve our male oligarchy into a twentieth-century democracy.

Ordinarily the light comes from the East, but in the matter of the enfranchisement of the best half of humanity, I am proud to say, the light is coming from the West. Eastward the woman's star of empire takes its way.

There is no more possibility of the right of equal suffrage being taken from the women of any state that has tried it than there is of returning to negro slavery in this country. One is just exactly as likely as the other. The human race is not going backward.

The highest requisites for voting are intelligence and morality, and our women have more of both of these qualities than have the men.

Throughout the civilized world wherever women have been given the right to vote they will continue to vote.

The Woman's Motto Is "Onward"

The women of the world will continue to advance. The man or woman who tries to stop them will be justly relegated to oblivion. You politicians would better remember these three statements, because you will have occasion to reflect upon them. This is an age of individual liberty, and the male sex is not humanity, but only half of it.

There will be no backward movement in the fight for equal rights. Not one foot of ground that has been gained will ever be surrendered. And the people who try to make a little temporary notoriety by an attack on the sex are doomed in the end to disappointment, defeat, and ignominious humiliation. The continued disfranchisement of women is a relic of antiquity that belongs to other days. Purblind politicians and people who cling to prejudice in spite of facts as plain as the noonday sun may keep on fighting and misrepresenting the good women of the suffrage states, but they are becoming ludicrous relics of the age of feudalism.

In every civilized country on the globe the women are fighting for their rights. They are gradually winning everywhere. The day is soon coming when they will take the place belonging to them—squarely beside the men in the settlement of all public matters.

There will never be any surrender of any of the rights she has secured. There will be no retreat sounded. Their slogan is "forward, march." And the whole world will rejoice and be benefited when they achieve their ultimate victory.

Basic Reasons

Just as sure as the night follows the day this enlightened Republic will extend the right of franchise to women in the very near future, for three basic reasons, namely: First, because it is absolutely right; second, because wherever tried it has proved an unqualified success, and third, because it is not only expedient but the industrial, political, and social conditions of this country are rapidly making it imperatively necessary for the preservation of humanity.

STATUS OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

FULL SUFFRAGE

Wyoming	1869
Colorado	1893
Idaho	1896
Utah	1896
Washington	1910
California	1911
Arizona	1912
Kansas	1912
Oregon	1912
Alaska	1913
Nevada	1914
Montana	1914

PRESIDENTIAL AND MUNICIPAL SUFFRAGE

Illinois	1913

STATES TO VOTE ON SUFFRAGE AT NEXT GENERAL ELECTION

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts

STATES TO VOTE IN 1916

Iowa, South Dakota, West Virginia

WOMAN'S PLACE AND WORK

Resolution passed by the World's and International Society for Christian Endeavor.

Among multitudes of the hopeful signs of our times, all of them pointing to a better day in the world in general, and in North America in particular, is the growing popular recognition and legislative acknowledgment of the place and privilege of womanhood. Called of God to the motherhood and training of the generations, women are supremely concerned for the well-being of the race, which is essentially the highest success of the greatest of all enterprises, true maternity. Whatever tends to thwart womanhood's high calling, therefore, women are bound to combat, and no weapon which will make her conquest the more sure and complete should be withheld by the right-minded lover of his kind. Christian Endeavor, which has never drawn lines of division in service, whether on account of sex or nationality or race, will do nothing now to stem, but will instead do what it may to swell the rising tide of public sentiment in favor of giving to trained and worthy women everywhere, aided by righteous manhood, the opportunity, against all foes of childhood and the home, to defend their young and their firesides, and to promote the moral, mental, and physical sanitation of society.

PROMOTING SUFFRAGE AND PROHIBITION BY PARADES

The two floats pictured on this page were decorated by the W. C. T. U. of Oakland, Iowa, for the Independence Day parade in that city. The one shown on the left carried eighteen girls dressed in white, with sashes of the national colors, who represented the eighteen prohibition states. As the parade passed through the streets, they sang, "We'll Make the Map All White."

The float shown on the right carried twelve girls, dressed in white with yellow sashes, representing the suffrage states. The driver impersonated the Goddess of Liberty. The occupants of the float in melodious tones assured the crowds through which they passed, "It's a short way to woman suffrage, and we're almost there." This float was awarded the second prize, $5.00.

Chautauqua, the Birthplace of the W. C. T. U.

Temperance Week and W. C. T. U. Week Very Popular

MRS. MARY B. WILSON

Kellogg Hall

On a rainy day in August, 1874, a little company of women, representing several states, gathered in a tent in Miller Park, Chautauqua, N. Y., to pray for the temperance cause. A vision came to them from above, revealing that the time had come for the women to take a public stand on the side of temperance. A call went from this handful of women to the women of the nation, to meet for conference and possible organization, in Cleveland, Ohio, in November. The result was the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Today the 500,000 active members are looking with brightened eyes and quickened hearts to the goal for which they have worked—National Constitutional Prohibition.

In the early days there came to Chautauqua a gifted woman, Mrs. Anne Kellogg, who was devoted to the temperance cause and an enthusiastic Chautauquan. After her death, her son, Mr. James Kellogg, wishing to show honor to the memory of his mother, erected Kellogg Hall, and presented it to Chautauqua, dedicating it to the twin causes—education and temperance. The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union maintains headquarters in the parlor at Kellogg Hall, where visitors are always welcome, and where free literature can be obtained.

Meetings are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, at 3:30, under the auspices of a unique union, known as the Frances E. Willard Federated Union.

Temperance Week and W. C. T. U. Week, for the season of 1915, have gone into history, but the interest created by the wonderful addresses given must spread over the entire land, for all states are represented on these grounds.

The work done by the men in the great temperance campaign was presented from four viewpoints, Governor George A. Carlson of Colorado giving labor experiences; ex-Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee, personal and religious ideas; Dr. Herbert A. Gibbons of France, the effects of the war; and Mr. J. Denny O'Neil of Pennsylvania, the political aspect. Large audiences of men and women listened to these speakers, and the many affirmative nods and the hearty applause were signs that the truths were falling into good ground and would bear fruit in the home towns of the listeners.

The part played by the women was ably presented to the large audiences at the Woman's Club by Miss Margaret F. Irwin, recording secretary of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., whose subject was "The Present Status of Prohibition in the United States;" by Mrs. Ella M. George, president of Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., who spoke on "Home Protection," and by Mrs. Lulu Loveland Shepard, president of the Utah W. C. T. U., who told of "A World-wide Movement."

Afternoon meetings were held also, when still other phases of temperance activity were given to the public. One program of much variety was arranged by the president of Chautauqua county W. C. T. U., Mrs. Flora Sterling, and was given by her co-workers to a delighted audience. A member of the only Italian Y. P. B. in this country, so far as can be ascertained, Mr. Nicholas Traficante of Jamestown, told in graphic language of the work among his people.

Addresses were made through the week by Mrs. Frances W. Graham, National musical director, and vice-president of the New York W. C. T. U., on "The Trial Jury;" by Mrs. Addie B. Parsels, chairman of the National Board of Organizers and vice-president of Pennsylvania on "Wrongs and Rights," and by Mrs. Shepard on "Suffrage and Temperance."

Mrs. Graham added to the interest of her meeting by singing some of her well-loved songs. Another meeting was made unusually interesting by the presence of the "First Lady of the Land," Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson.

The audiences increased in size until, on the last day, the renowned Hall of Philosophy was filled to its capacity, many people standing throughout the stirring, thrilling address by Mrs. Shepard. A noted club woman of the South brought beautiful yellow poppies for the suffrage meeting.

A new phase of co-operation was presented when a proposition was made by the representative of the Community Motion Picture Bureau of Boston to show films of temperance stories. Mr. Niles gave at the Boys' Club House "The Spenders," "Drink's Lure," "The Fairy and the Waif," and "Your Girl and Mine." He also used each day a section of the Scientific Temperance Instruction slides now handled at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters. These motion pictures and S. T. I. slides would doubtless prove just as effective elsewhere as at Chautauqua, and W. C. T. U. women would be wise to avail themselves of this modern and attractive way of presenting truth.

Hall of Philosophy

John Wesley's Name Misused in Beer Ad

Great Reformer Was One of the Most Radical Temperance Men of His Day

Few men of his day were such radical temperance men as John Wesley. In his journal we read of two persons expelled from the Methodist Society for retailing liquors. In another entry he speaks almost with rapture of certain prohibition settlements in Ireland: "I suppose that such towns are scarce to be found again in England or Ireland. There is no cursing or swearing, no Sabbath-breaking, no drunkenness, no ale-houses."

In his pamphlet, "On the Present Scarcity of Provisions," he attacks the subject from a point of view which is exactly that of the Twentieth Century. "Why," he asks, "is corn so dear? Because huge quantities are used in distilling. 'But,' says an objector, 'the King's revenue depends on the taxation of spirits.' Oh, tell it not in Constantinople that the English raise their royal revenue by selling the flesh and blood of their countrymen!"

In Mr. Wesley's sermon on "The Use of Money" he assails the legitimacy of the liquor-sellers' trade:—"Neither may we gain by hurting our neighbor in his body. Therefore we may not sell anything which tends to impair health. Such is, eminently, all that liquid fire, commonly called drams, or spirituous liquors. It is true, these may have a place in medicine; they may be of use in some bodily disorders, although there would rarely be occasion for them, were it not for the unskilfulness of the practitioner. Therefore such as prepare and sell them only for this end may keep their conscience clear. But who are they? Who prepare them only for this end? Do you know ten such distillers in England? Then excuse these. But all who sell them in the common way, to any that will buy, are poisoners-general. They murder his majesty's subjects by wholesale, neither does their eye pity or spare. They drive them to hell like sheep; and what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men? Who then would envy their large estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them; the curse of God cleaves to the stones, the timber, the furniture of them! The curse of God is in their gardens, their walks, their groves; a fire that burns to the nethermost hell! Blood, blood is there; the foundation, the door, the walls, the roof, are stained with blood!"

Is it not astonishing that a big brewery should use this man's picture in connection with its advertising?—From Bulletin of the Research Department of the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, August 5, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National vice-president-at-large, has been spending a few days at Rest Cottage as the guest of Miss Gordon, on her way to fill Chautauqua engagements in Nebraska.

"FAIR NUMBER" OF SIGNAL, AUG. 26

The August Campaign Edition will be a "Fair Number" and will be especially valuable for distribution at county and state fairs. It will be illustrated with numerous original and telling cartoons. Send in your orders in advance. A special price of $1.50 per 100 is offered.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO MISS IT?

Are you planning to attend the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Seattle, Washington, October 9-14? If not, why not? It is confidently expected that this convention will be the best National W. C. T. U. convention ever held. You say you cannot afford the trip across the continent? Put it the other way, can you afford not to take it, and thus miss the inspiration and education of the great gathering; the opportunities for conferences and conversation with the leaders on the way, and the marvelously beautiful scenery along the route going and returning, with the delight of visiting the wonderful Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco? Think it over and decide to be one of the happy company who will journey westward on the "White Ribbon Special" early in October.

THE "TERRIBLE CONSEQUENCES" OF PROHIBITION

The editor of the National Liquor Dealers' Journal recently took occasion to tell its readers of "the terrible consequences of trying to make people morally better by process of law," which he says "are being thoroughly exemplified by the operation of the prohibition law in West Virginia." He referred, of course, to the adroit devices of liquor dealers in getting liquor into the prohibition state. His statement that these efforts to violate the law prove "the inherent weakness of prohibition" is of course too absurd to need refutation. On the contrary, they are the best possible evidence of the strength of a law, the evasion of which taxes so severely the ingenuity of the law-breaking element.

We imagine these so-called "terrible consequences" will be quite lost sight of by the general public, which has been reading in the newspapers of the really vital "consequences" of the enforcement of the law, namely, that a twelve months' test of it has shown a fifty per cent reduction in arrests, and an incidental saving along economic lines resulting from a reduction of expenses for police force, cost of courts and jails.

Precisely this kind of "consequences" of the attempt to make men better morally by law is being diligently sought after by every municipality and state in the land, although some are so short-sighted that they fail to see that an elimination of the legalized liquor traffic from their civic life will be the shortest way to attain the desired end.

PROHIBITION AND THE HIGH PRICE OF MEAT

Someone—of course it could not have been the liquor interests—has suggested through the press that the recent rise in the price of meats is due to the scarcity of refuse grain from distilleries, used for cattle feed, this lack being caused by the rapid increase in prohibition territory. Commenting on these reports, Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular says, "This is a question which brings prohibition right home to the table of the rich and poor alike, but the professional prohibitionist or the fanatic will tell you that they would rather see people starve or that meats should go to one dollar a pound rather than that the liquor business should be regulated. We can well afford to disregard the prohibitionist, the agitator and the crank in this important question of the cost of living by going direct to the consumer with the facts, showing him how prohibition is making him pay prices for meats greatly in excess of what he formerly paid when distillers' grains were used for cattle feed. The cattle raiser, by being compelled to buy grain for feeding, is creating a larger demand for corn and other grains, which means higher prices for meats, which the consumer must pay. This is only one more and another phase of the impracticability of prohibition."

A number of replies to such a preposterous claim immediately occur to one's mind: First, those informed state that only a small proportion of the cattle raised in this country are fed on the distillery refuse; second, it is common knowledge that the high price of meats is accounted for alone by the enormous demand of the European armies, to meet which approximately 4,000 steers are said to be sent abroad daily; third, even admitting that prohibition is responsible for the rise in meat prices, according to dietitians and physicians such a result should not be considered other than a blessing, for we are being continually warned by these guardians of our health that there is far too much meat consumed and that by a restricted meat diet one would avoid many malignant germ diseases. However, aside from these satisfactory explanations, it occurs to us that the liquor men in the paragraph quoted above are presenting a convincing answer to their oft-repeated objection to prohibition on the farmer's account, namely, that prohibition will deprive him of his market for grain and corn. If, indeed, the cattle raiser is compelled to buy more grain to feed his stock because of the doing away with distilleries and breweries, will not the farmers of the country be benefited by this increased market for their products, and it is trite and obvious to say that that which benefits the farmer will work down the line and benefit the merchant, the baker, the candlestick maker, and every concern dealing in the necessary commodities of our common life.

"Going to the consumer with the facts" as Bonfort's suggests, is precisely what every prohibition advocate desires, and if that consumer be even moderately intelligent, the outcome will be an investigation of the results of prohibition, which is tantamount to a conversion to the cause.

THAT $900,000,000 ARGUMENT!

If any of your fellow citizens ventures to suggest that National Prohibition would be inadvisable and impractical for the reason that the government cannot possibly exist without the revenue from the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors, do not attempt to argue the question but gently whisper, "How about that $900,000,000 deposited in the savings banks of Russia since the prohibition edict went into effect?" Clever indeed will be the individual who can explain away this stupendous proof that the elimination of the liquor traffic has a definite and substantial economic value to a community or a nation. Once and for all it disposes of the theory that in the event of prohibition the money now spent for liquor will be squandered in some other equally foolish fashion, for on the authority of the minister of finance of Russia we are assured that since prohibition went into effect the Russian people have actually saved and deposited in the savings banks of that country a sum practically equivalent to the amount formerly received by the government from the sale of alcoholic liquors.

In the face of this "dollars and cents" demonstration of the economic benefits of prohibition, what citizen of the United States or of any other country can urge logically the "necessary for revenue" argument?

ALCOHOL AND THE BAYONET CHARGE

No better illustration of the diabolical effects of alcoholic liquors upon human passions has come to our attention than the incident related by Jane Addams of the methods used to force young soldiers in some of the European armies to make the bayonet charge. Miss Addams, upon her recent return from her peace pilgrimage to the leading nations of Europe, in speaking before immense audiences in New York City and Chicago, tells of the horror and fear which paralyze the whole being of the young men in the fighting ranks when they are ordered to charge with the bayonets against the enemy, and the rebellion of spirit which takes possession of them when they are commanded to engage in this barbaric method of warfare. In many instances execution of these orders is secured only by giving to the men absinthe or some alcoholic liquor which deadens the powers of self-control and releases the brute passions. Under the influence of the liquor the nature of the man is changed to that of a blood-thirsty savage and, without hesitation, he advances into the hand-to-hand butchery.

Thus alcohol lends to war the most revolting touch which the human mind is capable of imagining.

And the manufacture and sale of this deadly narcotic, which nerves a man to become a murderer of the most ruthless type, are licensed and legalized in Christian America! !

FRANCES WILLARD'S WORK RECEIVES RECOGNITION IN HISTORY TEXT BOOK

When the state board of education of California recently adopted Mace's History of the United States as the standard for the beginning of history study in the fifth grade of the grammar schools, they demanded as a condition to its acceptance that the work be revised to give some place and prominence to the illustrious women of the nation. This the publishers agreed to do. Women's votes, it is whispered, are responsible for the action of the board.

Frances E. Willard and Harriet Beecher Stowe are of course among the noted leaders whose services to the world will be recognized in the history.

MEMORIAL FOR CLARA BARTON CONTEMPLATED

An appeal is being made by the Legion of Loyal Women, of which Clara Barton was a charter member, to the patriotic women of America to aid a movement for the erection in the city of Washington of a memorial to the founder of the American Red Cross organization. It will be remembered that Clara Barton not only initiated this work of relief in times of war but widened the scope of the Red Cross work to cover all calamities.

PROHIBITION SENTIMENT IN NEW MEXICO

Mrs. Katharine B. Patterson, National superintendent of Proportionate and Systematic Giving and a resident of Santa Fe., in a letter to National Headquarters writes concerning the situation in New Mexico that prohibition sentiment in New Mexico was never so strong as it is today. The governor and supreme court judges coming out squarely, as they had never done before, means much to the cause. One of the judges who had always taken a social glass and was a member of the Santa Fe Club, which has a bar, after election resigned from the club and declared there would be no more booze for him. The mayor of Santa Fe closed the bar in his hotel, the largest hotel in the city, and one saloon man went out of business and another one is going as soon as his license expires. The work and effort in the Santa Fe campaign paid a thousand times and the white ribboners are not discouraged. Miss Harriet Henderson, state W. C. T. U. president, invited the men who fought so courageously in the recent campaign to speak at the state convention in Albuquerque July 21-22.

LIQUOR PROPERTY DEPRECIATES IN VALUE

"It is a well-known fact that the business of making and selling intoxicating liquors is at the best problematical at the present time," is the statement of the Manufacturers' Appraisal Company of Cleveland, O., in a report filed recently in accounting for an estimated depreciation of a million and a half dollars in the value of the properties of the Hoster-Columbus Associated Breweries of Columbus, O., which went into the hands of a receiver in December, 1914. The report continues, "The possibility and, in fact, the probability of prohibition in the near future by national or state legislation, added to the existing dry local legislation in a large part of the field which formerly offered profitable markets for beer—all these considerations require that depreciation should be considered in addition to that due to ordinary mechanical deterioration and obsolescence." According to the appraisal, the "reproductive" or original cost of the brewery buildings, equipment and machinery amounted to $3,430,825.46. The "present" value is $2,641,047.62. The "probable" value, due to the uncertainty of the continuance of the traffic, is $1,052,517. Thus, it will be seen that the difference between the "reproductive" value and the "probable" value is $2,378,308.46, and the difference between the "present" value and the "probable" value is $1,588,530.62.

SUFFRAGE NOTES

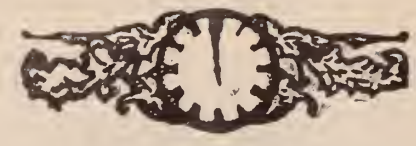
Miss Bernice McCoy of Idaho has been elected state superintendent of Instruction and a member of the state land board. In holding this office she controls nearly 2,000,000 acres of land—school territory.

Former United States Congressman, Frederick S. Deitrick, has recently changed his attitude on the subject of woman suffrage and now declares that he strongly believes in it, saying, "In the first place we tax women but give them no voice in the spending of their money."

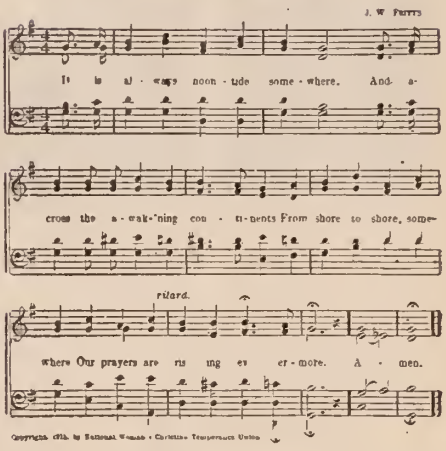
The state of Arizona has in Mrs. Okla Noonan a woman live stock inspector said to be the only one in the world.

IDAHO BREWERY CHANGED TO ICE PLANT

The Idaho Falls Brewery Company is reported to have concluded plans to convert the several buildings of its plant into a cold storage and ice manufacturing plant.



Time of Prayer—Noontide



BEAUTIFUL HOUR OF NOONTIDE

By REV. E. S. UFFORD

Tune, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere"

Somewhere the hands are lifted,
Somewhere the faith is strong,
Somewhere the haze is rifted,
God hears and sees the wrong.

Chorus:

Noontide, noontide,
Beautiful hour of noontide;
On land or sea, we bow the knee,—
Beautiful hour of noontide.

Somewhere the day is brighter,
Somewhere the foe must run;
Somewhere a heart grows lighter,
Someone the curse will shun.

Somewhere the ranks are filling,
Close by the fountain-side;
Somewhere the true and willing,
Close to the pledge abide.

STATE W. C. T. U. CONVENTION CALENDAR

Minnesota, Fairmont, Aug. 24-27.
South Carolina, Allendale, Sept. 2-5.
Vermont, Barton, Sept. 8-10.
Maine, Skowhegan, Sept. 14-16.
Missouri, Sikeston, Sept. 14-17.
Oklahoma, Oklahoma City, Sept. 15-17.
New Hampshire, Somersworth, Sept. 15-17.
Kentucky, Bowling Green, Sept. 17-22.
Wisconsin, Eau Claire, Sept. 17-21.
South Dakota, Ipswich, Sept. 17-22.
West Virginia, Fairmont, Sept. 21-24.
Virginia, Lynchburg, Sept. 21-24.
Colorado, Denver, Sept. 22-24.
North Dakota, Carrington, Sept. 23-27.
California, (Northern), Oakland, Sept. 27 to Oct. 1.
Montana, Livingston, Sept. 28-Oct. 1.
Kansas, Newton, Sept 28-Oct. 1.
Washington, Colfax, Sept. 28-Oct. 1.
New Jersey, Montclair, Sept. 28-Oct. 2.
Rhode Island, Westerly, Sept. 28-30.
Kansas, Newton, Sept. 28-Oct. 1.
Maryland, Rockville, Sept. 29-30.
New York, Ithaca, Sept. 30-Oct. 4.
Arkansas, Forrest City, Oct. 27-31.
Tennessee, Martin, Oct. 1-4.
Pennsylvania, York, Oct. 1-4.
Oregon, Newberg, Oct. 5-7.
Washington, Seattle, Oct. 8.
North Carolina, Raleigh, Oct. 8-12.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

The liquor interests are preparing for their campaign in Ohio by taking a copy of the 135,000 names on the initiative petition filed with the secretary of state.

The Stemper bill, providing that only one saloon license shall be issued for each 500 inhabitants or fraction thereof in any town, city or village, has passed the Wisconsin legislature. Heretofore the ratio of license to population was one to every 250 inhabitants.

To prevent further rioting during the strike of the Standard Oil and Tidewater Oil Company employes at Bayonne, N. J., the saloons were ordered closed by Mayor Garvin.

The French Chamber of Deputies, it is reported, has passed a measure empowering all civil and military authorities to restrict or entirely prohibit the sale of spirituous liquor in any district where it is deemed advisable in the interests of national defense.

As an indication of the attitude of the medical profession toward alcohol it is significant that forty-one of the physicians of Oshkosh, Wis., have put themselves on record in writing as condemning the use of alcoholic beverages and declaring that "organized medicine should initiate and carry on a systematic, persistent propaganda for the education of the public regarding the deleterious effects of alcohol."

Carrollton, Mo., voted dry by a majority of 185 out of 541 votes.

The very latest disease, known as endarteritis obliterans is said by physicians to be caused by the use, among other things, of alcoholic drinks. Its effect is to cause first the arteries and finally the veins of the feet or hands to fill with a fibrous exudation and the common treatment has been to amputate the affected foot or hand.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U., 1730 CHICAGO AVENUE, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. LITERATURE BUILDING

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, JAMESTOWN, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
*MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON EVANSTON, ILL.

*Promoted.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RED LETTER DAYS

AUGUST 28—(Birthday of Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes)
SEPTEMBER 28—Children's Harvest Home (Birthday of Frances E. Willard)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASH., OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

ACTING TREASURER'S REPORT

FRANCES E. WILLARD MEMORIAL FUND
LILLIAN STEVENS CAMPAIGN FUND

FRANCES P. PARKS

The following contributions to the Memorial and Campaign Funds have been received since last report; in each case $2 unless otherwise stated:

Florida: Miami $2.72, Bradentown $3.75, St. Cloud $5, St. Augustine $2.20, West Palm Beach, Zephyrhills, Interlachen $1.25, Palmetto, Oxford $1, Frostproof $1.15, Tallahassee, Key West $3, Lake Weir, Daytona, Winter Garden, Eustis, St. Andrews, Riverside (Jax), Springfield (Jax) $3, DeLand, Oneco, Belleview, Palma Sola, Avon Park, Webster, Kendrick, Terra Ceia, Oak Grove $2.25, Lakeland, Umatilla, Hernando, Ocala, Tampa Heights, Candler, St. Petersburg, Clermont $3, De Funiak Springs, Ft. Myers $2.20, Lake City, Tampa (Gary) $1.25, Lynn Haven, Jacksonville $10, Conway, Arcadia, Manatee, Winter Park, Cottage Hill $1.75, Micanopy, Orlando $4.51, Gainesville, Sunshine Y (Tampa), Cocoanut Grove, Clearwater, Ft. Lauderdale. Total $124.03.

Virginia. Bridgewater, Leakesville, Guinea, Allison, Berryville, Shiloh $1, Keysville, $2.55, River View $1, Berkley $1, Chatham, Bowling Green, Central Hill, Manassas, Salem, Hinton, Harborton, Onley, Farmville, Capron, Burkville, Beech Grove $1, Manassas L. T. L. $1. Total $39.55.

Maryland: Baltimore $3.02, N. Baltimore, Carrie Daugherty W, Cathcart W, $5, Calvary $1, Conqueror, Druid Hill, Hampden $5, Hampden L. T. L. $1, Ida Carlisle W, John B. Gough W, Lafayette Sq. $2.50, L. M. N. Stevens W, Mary R. Haslup W $3, Mt. Royal $5, Neal Dow W, Roland Park, St. Paul $4.15, Walbrook $3, Willard, Allegany Co. $6, Anne Arundel Co. $4, Baltimore Co. $10, Carroll Co. $15, Cecil Co. $10, Frederick Co. $24, Harford Co. $12, Montgomery Co. $14, Queen Anne's Co. $13, Tri. Co. T. D. C. $22, Washington Co. $4, Tri. Co. W. S. W. $6.10. Total $192.77.

New Jersey: S. Orange, Pennsgrove, Hackettstown, Delaware, Phillipsburg, Belvidere, Hope $1, Newark (Gordon), Little Falls, Hasbrouck Heights. Total $19.

Maine: Fayette $1.40, Monson, Silver Mills, Greenville, Parkman, Dover & Foxcroft, Norway, Rumford Center, Enfield, Howland, Bangor, Waldoboro, Wescasset, Bremen, Danforth, Boundary, Carys Mills, Patten, Mapleton, La Grange, Mars Hills & Blaine Y. P. B., E. Corinth, Passadumkeag, Charleston, Winthrop, Amity & Cary, Mars Hills and Blaine, Island Falls, E. Windham, No. Union. Total $59.40.

West Virginia: $28.

Vermont: $35.

Oklahoma: $5.

Tennessee: Chattanooga P. P., Milan, Awalt, Greenbrier, Dyer, Clarksville, Memphis (F. Willard) $3. Total $15.

Kentucky: Wilmore, Campellsburg, Lexington (Arlington, Central), Millersburg, Maysville, La Grange, Smiths Grove, Ashland (Willard), Crofton, Turner Station, Oakland, Falmouth, Louisville (M. P. Hunt), Lone Oak. Total $30.

Ohio: Marlboro, Nelsonville, Delta, Granville, Marion Y. P. B. $0.15, Hopedale, Jackson, Canal Dover, Cleveland (L. Stevens), Shepard, Center, Cleveland (F. Willard W, F. Willard L. T. L. $1.50), Westerville $6.16, Williamstown (Lucy Van Kirk), Raymond $1, Lore City, Arcadia, Fitchville $1, N. Fairfield, Marietta Township $1.55, Arlington Marysville, Belmore, Amesville, Fairfield $1, Urbana $3, Warren, Kings Creek. Total $57.36.

S. California: Needles.

Delaware: $3.

Michigan: $140.77.

South Carolina: Bishopville, Paxville $1.30, Manning $6.62, Johnston $1.90, Prosperity, St. Matthews, Conway, Leesville, Utopia, Saluda, Scranton, Georgetown $1.55, Florence $2.10, Marion, Newberry, Harmony $3, Edgefield $2.41. Total $33.88.

Connecticut: Ellington, Stanford, New London, Wethersfield, Groton, Central Village, E. Danbury, Pawcatuck $1.10, New Milford, Jewett City, Deep River, Durham, Shelton, E. Hampton, Danbury (Central), Mill Plain, Essex, Middletown, East Haven, Seymour, Goshen, Waterbury, Meriden (W, Y. P. B. $1), Bridgeport $10. Total $58.10.

Colorado: Denver (Highlands, Campaign, Berkeley, Colfax, Y. P. B., Central), Pueblo (Central, East Side), Akron, Littleton, Steamboat Springs, Ft. Morgan, La Jara, Leadville, Eaton, Olathe, Loveland, Colorado City, McCleve, Arvada, Durango, Limon, Center, Bristol, Fountain, Laporte Palisade, Hugo, Delta, Victor, Colorado Springs (F. Willard, North End), Holbrook Valley, Flagler, Boulder, Julesburg, Hotchkiss, Clifton, Leroy, Florence, Elizabeth, Colona, Smith Cassell, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford $10, Walsenburg, Rocky Ford. Total $100.

Kansas: Oneida, Asherville (S. M. Foote). Total $4.

East Washington: $10.

New York: Brockport $4, Chili, Greece, Henrietta, Penfield, Rochester (Central, 6th Ward $3.83, 9th and 10th Wards, 12th Ward, 15th Ward, 11th Ward, 18th Ward, 19th Ward), Rush, Spencerport, Webster, W. Webster, Champlain, Ellenburgh Depot, Lyon Mt., Perrys Mills, Peru, Rouses Point, Marathon $1, Circleville, Goshen, Middlehope, Middletown, Montgomery, Newburgh, Port Jervis, Walden, Warwick, Pawling, Pleasant Valley, Wappinger Falls, Brooklyn (First, Union-on-the-Hill $1.50), Fabius, Bedford Hills, Mamaroneck, Mt. Vernon Jr, Port Chester $3, Carlton Y. P. B., Transit, Georgetown $1, Central Bridge, Charlotteville, New York City (Fordham, F. E. Willard, Ft. Washington, Harlem, Headquarters, Hope, Lathrop, West End, W. Harlem), Easton, Ft. Ann, Ft. Edward, Greenwich, Hartford, Hudson Falls, N. Granville, Salem, Dundee, Keuka Park, Middlesex, Potter, Rushville, Huntington, Lindenhurst, Quogue $1, Westhampton Beach, Hamburg, Dryden Y. P. B. $1, Forest Home Y. P. B. $1, Buffalo (Riverside) $1.50, Groton, Trumansburg, Veteran, Utica (First), Canton, Brasher Falls, Colton, De Kalb Jct, Gouverneur, Hermon, Nenvelton, Lawrenceville $1, Madrid, Massena, Nicholville, Norfolk, Norwood $2.25, Parishville, Potsdam $3, Raymondville $1, Rensselaer Falls, Richville, W. Hermon, Winthrop. Total $201.08.

New Mexico: $4.

Nebraska: Omaha (F. Willard).

CAMPAIGN FUND

Massachusetts: Holyoke W. C. T. U. $18, Mrs. W. A. Prentiss $1, Mrs. S. Suhauck $1. Total $20.

Connecticut: Goshen $2.60, Warehouse Point $1.50, Meriden $12, Deep River, Mystic, Hartford County $15.25. Total $35.35.

Florida: Apalachicola $1.80, Bradentown, Tallahassee $1.63, De Land $1.42, Palma Sola $1, Eustis $0.50, Winter Park $1.20, Springfield (Jax) $1.50, Lee $1.13, Kendrick $1, Clermont $5, Raiford $0.50, Key West $2.42, Manatee $1.23, Mrs. Abbie Wilcox $1, Jacksonville $1.90, Oak Grove $1. Total $17.64.

New Mexico: $1.

West Virginia: $8.38.

New Jersey: $10.30.

Vermont: $10.24.

Oklahoma: $14.90, Mrs. Emile Lebus $1, Mrs. Rebecca McCord $1. Total $16.90.

Virginia: $41.65.

New York: $36.21.

South Carolina: $18.28.

Ohio: $1.63.

Southern California: Riverside $3.

Massachusetts: $20.

Maryland: $35, Mrs. Laban Harper $1, Mrs. Della Cooper $1, Miss Caroline Read $1, Miss Mary S. Jump $1. Total $39.

Illinois: $48.95, Mrs. Emma Coleman $1, Mrs. H. T. Mace $1, Mrs. Mary McGlasson $1, Mrs. Oben Cook $1. Total $52.95.

Colorado: $24.35.

Kentucky: Carlisle $0.37, Walton $0.32, Stanford $1, Butler $0.50, Nicholasville $1.15. Total $3.34

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 9-14

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

HOW TO PURCHASE TICKETS

Those who are to make the trip to the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Seattle on the White Ribbon Special will need to decide before purchasing tickets whether they will attend the expositions in California, and also their return route.

Through tickets may be purchased east and south over any convenient route via Chicago; west of Chicago parties may join the Special at any convenient point, but reservations must be made in advance to secure accommodations.

Delegates and visitors from Minnesota, North Dakota, and Montana will use the Northern Pacific R. R.

Those who are to take the White Ribbon Special to Seattle, and do not plan to go to California will purchase tickets to SEATTLE over the North Western and Union Pacific lines via Omaha, Granger and Portland. The return trip may be made by the same route or any preferred line. Tickets from Chicago, $62.50.

Those who are going to California will purchase tickets to SAN FRANCISCO over the route of the White Ribbon Special to Seattle, then via Oregon and Washington Navigation R. R. and Southern Pacific to San Francisco. There is choice of train or steamer between Portland and San Francisco, and preference must be indicated at time of purchase of ticket. The official party will go by train and stop at Roseburg, Oregon, over Sunday.

A booklet published by the North-Western R. R., entitled "Forty Ways to the California Expositions," will be sent free on application, and individual preferences can be met in choice of return routes.

For the convenience of the party the Transportation Committee recommends the return via Southern Pacific to Los Angeles with a side trip over the Sante Fe to San Diego (furnished free, but application must be made when ticket is purchased); from Los Angeles over the Santa Fe to Colorado Springs with a side trip to the Grand Canyon from Williams, Arizona, cost $7.50 extra, a stop off at Albuquerque, Colorado Springs, and Denver if desired, thence via North Western route to Chicago. The price of this ticket, exclusive of the trip to the Grand Canyon, is $80.00.

All tickets must be validated at destination, Seattle or San Francisco, cost fifty cents.

Baggage tags for the White Ribbon Special will be furnished if asked for when reservations are made.

Further information will be cheerfully furnished on application to Miss Katharine K. Adams, 1730 Chicago Ave., Evanston, Ill., or to Mr. H. A. Gross, General Agent, North Western R. R., 148 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill. Either of these will make reservations.

ELLA A. BOOLE, Chairman Transportation.
KATHARINE K. ADAMS, Secretary.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, president of the Indiana W. C. T. U., and her daughter, Miss Lois, were recent visitors at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters.

Mrs. Neal B. Inman, the author of the story this week, is a prominent white ribboner of Oregon.

Miss Agnes E. Slack, honorary secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., asks that we call attention to the fact that her address at Ripley, Derbyshire, England, must also include the words, "Caxton Buildings."

MRS. SEBERRY SERIOUSLY ILL

The many friends and white ribbon comrades of Mrs. Cora E. Seberry, for many years a National organizer and lecturer, will be grieved to learn of her very serious illness. She is being tenderly cared for in the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. E. Drake, 333 Lincoln Road, Brooklyn, N. Y.

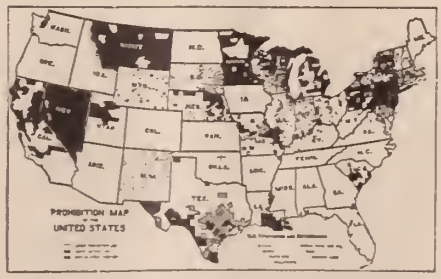
ANOTHER ANTI-BEER FANATIC!

A warning against the intoxicating qualities of beer has come from an unexpected source. All that the temperance advocates and eminent physicians have been saying as to the harmfulness of beer is amply corroborated by that apostle of personal liberty, T. M. Gilmore, president of the National Model License League. In a recent statement published in the Chicago Tribune, he says:

"I know there is a widespread popular impression that beer and wine are less harmful because of their lesser alcoholic contents. But this idea overlooks the way in which those beverages are consumed by the average drinker. Beer, with an alcoholic content of but 4 per cent, seems much weaker than whisky, with 40 or 45 per cent of alcohol. But are equal quantities imbibed? Not at all. The man who drinks beer takes a big stein, maybe two or three big steins. The man who drinks whisky drinks a quantity relatively much smaller, most frequently largely diluted with charged water."

WARN THE COUNTRY EDITORS!

Falsehoods and misrepresentations by the page, the column, or the paragraph are being sent out to the country press by the publicity department of the Liquor Dealers' Association of Cincinnati, with the assurance that all they desire is "a fair presentation of their side of the prohibition question," and that the matter sent may be relied upon absolutely. Every white ribboner should feel a personal responsibility in warning the editors in her community of the nature and source of these articles, and offer in their place to furnish some of the excellent material sent out by the Publicity Bureau of the National W. C. T. U.



EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

The World Outlook for August is a temperance number and contains much valuable material, finely illustrated. The cover page shows a green dragon being attacked and overcome by a plumed knight. The periodical is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, 150 Fifth Ave., New York.

KANSAS SPEAKERS "BOOST" FOR PROHIBITION

Governor Capper of Kansas is a veritable apostle of prohibition and never does he lose an opportunity to say a good word for the prohibitory law and recommend it as a panacea for national ills. On the occasion of his recent trip west he was the guest at Salt Lake City of the Kansas Klub of Utah which took charge of the governor and his party and after a sight-seeing trip around the city tendered the governor a banquet. "Every Kansas speaker boosted for prohibition," said one correspondent in writing of the event, and Governor Capper was quite as eloquent as usual in praising the state.

"Loyalty to state means loyalty to nation," said the governor. "This is a nation of patriots and there never will be traitors. In Kansas there are more boys and girls in the public schools and less men and women in jail than in any state in the union in proportion to population. It is the state wherein the lowest percentage of illiteracy exists and where there are fewer paupers and fewer millionaires. It is the state which was first to wipe out the abominable saloon and its representatives were the first to introduce a bill for nation-wide prohibition. I want to say to you now that in ten years there will not be a saloon in the United States. We have thirty-eight empty county jails, twenty-seven empty county poor houses and in twenty-two counties of the state there has not been a criminal prosecution in a year. It is the happiest and cleanest state in the union."

The Temperance Educational Quarterly should be ordered directly from the headquarters of the Bureau of Scientific Temperance Investigation, Hartford, Wis., rather than from National Headquarters. The price of the Quarterly is 50 cents a year.

"THERE IS THAT SCATTERETH, AND YET INCREASETH"

NEAL B. INMAN

A bleak wintry day with prospect of unsurpassed loneliness caused Mrs. June to turn from her window to the cheerful fire burning in the grate, as the doorbell rang. Hastily smoothing her hair and adjusting her apron, already perfectly in order, she hastened to throw wide the door with the friendly exclamation, "O, I never was so glad to see you! You've brought your work, I see, sweet token of a long day of enjoyment, instead of the lonesome hours I was anticipating," and she hastily led her most intimate friend to the fire, helped to divest her of her wraps and put her into the most comfortable chair the room contained.

Mrs. Bloom replied, "Yes, I've come for all day, and I wish it might be for always, you seem so free from care over here."

"What now," said Mrs. June, "why those clouds upon your brow? You are not in the state of mind today that the Psalmist was when he said, 'in the multitude of my thoughts within me, Thy comforts delight my soul.'"

"I never knew David said that," said Mrs. Bloom, "and it is a beautiful text, but then, you know, he was never president of a Ladies' Aid society and nearly driven to distraction with the fact that the money for the church insurance is overdue, and we must, just must, get up some kind of a dinner or entertainment to raise that money. I absolutely cannot think of one thing new to do, to make the occasion appeal to outsiders, that we may draw a crowd. My brains are in a whirl and I felt I might do something desperate, if left to myself all day. You always seem so peaceful and calm. No church debts annoy the life out of you, and yet it is your church, and I can't see why every member isn't just as much interested as the few of us that bear the burdens and almost work ourselves into our graves. Frankly, I confess to you, I believe some of our 'dear departed' have done that. This constant pull and haul for the finances of the church is getting to be almost unbearable."

"Then why not stop, as I did? After 'twenty years at hard labor,' my eyes were opened, and I found 'the more excellent way,'" said Mrs. June.

"The more excellent way!" said Mrs. Bloom. "If you have found that, surely the Lord sent me to you today, and as I am as blind as a bat to your meaning, I want you to lead me into that same way right now."

"I shall be delighted," cheerfully responded her hostess; then after a short silence, as though not knowing just where to begin, she said, "Oh, if only our church folks were tithers, the way would be in full view!"

"Tithers?" exclaimed Mrs. Bloom, "what's that?"

"Didn't you ever hear of the tithing system for raising money for church work and charity?"

"No, never, but it sounds wonderfully good, and even now I see the morning light is breaking," remarked Mrs. Bloom. "Go ahead and tell me all about it."

"Why, the tithing system is God's plan for financing the church, and the Jews knew no other way. It is simply giving a tenth of all one's income—ten cents out of every dollar and a penny from every dime that comes into your possession to be called rightfully your own. Of course, going on to larger things, there are ten dollars from every hundred and one hundred from each thousand to go into the treasury of the Lord for Christian work. Isn't it glorious that he only demands the smaller amount for his share and gives us the larger one?"

"Ah, me!" exclaimed Mrs. Bloom, "you don't think for one minute that there is a man in our church, be he ever so rich, that would be willing to practice that system in these days, do you?"

"Yes, if rightfully approached and helped to see it as a Christian duty, men and women, too, would be glad to begin proportionate giving, and give it systematically, instead of the haphazard way so long in vogue. There are many in the churches now who practice tithing, and some make it one condition of membership, and they go around with happy, smiling faces, casting all their care on the Lord. You see, it is a divine command, not to be treated lightly or given the go-by."

"Where do you find that command? I never read it, but then, there is many a command, I fear, I never saw or read, but I am like dear Sister Fletcher, who was bewailing her inability to pray in public. When she was told to practice at home and then she could, she said, 'Why, I never have time to pray, it takes me all my time to plan church dinners!' It is about so with my Bible reading," said Mrs. Bloom, sadly.

"In the third chapter of Malachi," said Mrs. June, reaching for her Bible, as she spoke, "and in the tenth verse, we find these words, 'Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord, of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.'"

"Well, that is plainly a command," said Mrs. Bloom, "and a blessing attached to it, but it is so imperative. Why have not the preachers been preaching sermons on that kind of giving? They don't. I never heard one in my life, but I would like to, very much."

"I do not know all the reasons the different ministers may have," responded Mrs. June, "but one who was my pastor many years ago, told me, when I asked him to preach upon that text, that he wouldn't dare to do so, because he feared his members would think he was drumming up his back salary. I heard one sermon on the text, 'Will a man rob God?' when I was a young girl, and the speaker was so enthusiastic that after that I always wanted to tithe, though I did not for many years."

"Are there any more texts relating to tithers in the Bible as plain as that one?" Mrs. Bloom asked.

"Plenty of them, but you had best look them up in your home. There are so many things I want to tell you now," answered her friend.

"Well, your theory is glorious, but I would like to know about the practical side of it. Are you acquainted with anyone who practices giving a tenth now?"

"Indeed I am, and all have a lovely story to tell relative to their deciding for that way of giving, as well as the history of its success. My own story is one of the sweetest," said Mrs. June.

"O, tell it, and maybe it will help me to exercise the required faith," answered her friend.

"Well, it was this way. Our Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the year 1892 held its state convention in the town where I lived, and as we have over forty departments of work, one of the most needed is proportionate and systematic giving, or, in other words, the tithing system. There is such a great cry for money to do our temperance work, that we are trying very hard to inspire our people all to become tithers. The state superintendent of this department was a minister's wife, and she told how this duty was made plain to herself and husband at a time when they were very poor and overwhelmed with debts, and it did not seem possible for them to give a tenth of their small and poorly paid salary, neither did it seem right for them to refuse the call, when made so plain to them. So after much prayer and consultation, 'once more faith stepped out on seeming void and found it solid rock.' And she related how their debts had all disappeared, their salary was increased and a holy calm pervaded their household, where before there was vexation of spirit in trying to make ends meet. Then others told their stories, and each bore testimony to increase of money for temporal things. It was a wonderful hour, one freighted with great responsibility to me, as I then saw how I had all those years indeed been robbing God. You know, Satan is wily, and he approached me upon the subject of dress, of which I would have been fond, had I had money to satisfy my cravings, but we were too poor to allow more than the barest necessities, and my tempter filled my mind with questionings as to how I would have anything to wear if I took up that silly notion of paying God his own. But conscience would not quiet down and my struggles were frightful between that which I desired to do, and stern necessity. One afternoon, while I was feeling my duty altogether too plainly for comfort, yet refusing to yield, I stood by my window looking out, and idly picked up a small magnifying glass lying near, and watched a fly crawling upon the window pane. Becoming interested, I looked around for something else, and took a buttercup that lay in a saucer upon the table with some others, and put it under the glass. To my intense surprise, it was crested over both stamens and petals with beautiful diamonds that glistened and sparkled in prismatic splendor. The spirit made the application to my own case, and I thought, 'O, if God can so wonderfully clothe the homely little spring flower, how able he is to supply my needs, if I only follow him where he leads me!' And my soul sank in sweet homage at the feet of my Lord; the battle was won. The dollars and dimes came in slowly and far between, but O, the ecstasy I found in depositing the dime from the dollar, or the penny from the dime, in the little receptacle prepared for it. The fact that I was 'co-worker with him' and financial partner, made me tread the earth like the child of a king. Since that time there have been hundreds of dollars in my tithe, but never for a moment did I forget to spend it as He directed, and my clothes are all provided with a lavish hand, and my needs are all supplied.

"Now, dear, let us have lunch, for I know you are hungry, and then I will tell you more about the wonderful things of God, along the line of tithe-giving."

No sooner had the ladies returned to the living-room, than Mrs. Bloom remarked, "Now begin, please, Mrs. June. I really do not feel that I can waste one minute. What you are telling will surely be a savor of life to me, if I follow it out, and with God's and your help, I fully intend to do so."

"Some more testimonials?" Mrs. June asked.

"O, yes," said Mrs. Bloom. "It all seems so clear to me as you tell what others have done."

Her friend said, "Well, you remember that purse-proud old Dr. Doolittle that used to be a member of our church years ago. The preacher became exasperated with him one time and called him 'Old Money Bags,' not to his face, however. Mrs. Doolittle was a tither and tried so hard to make him tithe too, but his excuse was, that he would like to be a tither, but could not afford it. They tried for many years to pay for a home, but always, just as it seemed that they had reached the goal, something happened and the home was swept away. Finally there came an evangelist to hold

(Continued on Page Sixteen)

A CAMPING TRIP AND WHAT CAME OF IT

IN TWO PARTS—PART I

JENNIE N. STANDIFER

Charley Ward was busy packing fishing tackle in a box for a trip down the St. John river with his friend, Dick Logan. After a while his mother brought a parcel and tucked it away in a corner with the injunction: "Don't open this until Sunday, Charley. There is something to tempt your appetite and something to keep you from being lonesome when you can't fish."

"Much obliged, mother," replied Charley.

"And here is your lunch for today," said Nell. "Angel cake and chicken sandwiches will go very well until you begin to feast on fish."

"They surely will. It was good in you to remember us, sis. There's the wagon for the box. Goodbye, all!"

When he reached the pier, Dick was sitting in the stern of the boat, puffing a cigaret. Charley held up the lunch box. "The best food ever, Dick. We won't have any more civilized cooking for a week."

"We'll manage. I'm famous as a maker of corn hoe-cakes. And look here!" Dick produced an oblong bundle wrapped in brown paper.

"Your lunch?" inquired Charley. "I told you not to fix any."

"Didn't, but I knew we'd need a man's great consoler. A cigaret is indispensable to—"

"Not to me, Dick. They make me sick."

"You'll get over that if you keep trying. You and Jim Bell were the only boys in our class last session who didn't smoke. You'll have to get out of such sissy ways now that your high school days are over. How will you get along at college unless you can join your chums in a smoke? You must learn how on this trip, Charley."

Down the smooth, blue river the boys rowed, keeping in the current to avoid the entangling roots of the water hyacinths.

"Strange about this water plant," remarked Charley as he gave the boat a sudden turn toward the current. "It is beautiful and attractive, yet a menace to travel since it has gained headway in the river. It's too bad it was ever brought here."

"Whose fault was it?" asked Dick languidly, between puffs of smoke.

"A lady who was visiting in England procured some bulbs for a friend. They grew readily in ponds, and some one experimented with them in this river—running water. The result is that navigation is seriously hindered and it costs thousands of dollars annually to dredge the river. To get rid of this plant is a problem for the wisest men. It proves how little things may become—"

"There comes a launch around the bend, Charley. Leave off sermonizing and pull to the right."

Charley flushed at the note of contempt in Dick's voice but did not again mention water hyacinths.

At noon the boys stopped in a little cove near which was a spring and partook of the delicious lunch prepared by Nell. Folded neatly under the dainty food were two periodicals for boys, famous for their wholesome stories.

"Now wasn't that thoughtful of Nell!" exclaimed Charley as he proffered a paper to Dick.

"Don't want anything so solid on an outing like this," laughed Dick. "I'll snooze while we lay off for an hour."

"You're always sleepy, Dick. Why aren't you wide-awake and on the lookout for ways of improving yourself? You might—"

"There! Spare me, son. Save that sermon for our return trip. In the meantime see if I don't get as much good out of this jaunt as you."

An hour later Dick awakened and the journey was continued down the river. They reached their destination about sundown and soon pitched tent.

"There's a cabin beyond that grove of palmettos," said Dick, who had been camping with his older brother the year before, "but they are very ignorant people. We will get the boys to show us the best fishing places, but there will be no need to have them around."

"No, we won't want them," agreed Charley. "This is a grand place to camp—spring water, shade, firewood and everything we need to be comfortable. We will catch fish for supper the first thing. I'm hungry as a wolf."

"Down the smooth, blue river the boys rowed"

"So am I, old man."

It was the delightful work of a half hour for the young anglers to land enough perch and trout for supper. They were preparing the fish for cooking, when a shaggy-haired, bearded, jean-clad man came tramping through the underbrush.

"Evenin'," he grunted.

"Good evening, Mr. Hobbs," replied Dick. "Don't know me, do you? You will remember I was here last year. This is my friend, Charley Ward. Stay and take supper with us."

"No, thankee. I gotta take these fish home for the ole 'oman to cook for weuns supper. Come to see us while you're in camp."

"Thank you. We will come by and get the boys to show us the best fishing holes." The man passed on down the path, and Dick continued: "You should see the 'ole 'oman,' Charley. She hasn't left these diggings since she married and came here twenty-five years ago. She's a kind of Mrs. Noah in her dress and manner. Their nearest neighbors live twelve miles down the river."

"Poor woman! I don't believe I care to see her."

"Her two sons, Jake and Pete, have never been to school, and are regular yahoos. They go to town about once a year when the old man pays taxes. But how those fellows can fish! I never saw their equal. We'll g t them to help us make some big catches so we will have something to tell about. There! The last fish is ready for the pan. I'll fry them while you fix up our sleeping bunk."

The following three days were filled with joys known only to the true lovers of fishing, but on Saturday afternoon while some distance from their camp, the young fishermen were overtaken by a sudden downpour of rain. Both were soaking wet before they could reach the shelter of their tent. To add to their discomfort they found their bedding and extra changes of clothing damp. A fire was kindled, but the blankets were only partially dried.

Charley awoke next morning with a severe headache, and shivering with a chill. It was still drizzling.

"We will have to go down to the Hobbs cabin after all," declared Dick. "It is very uninviting, but any kind of shelter is better than this when a chill is creeping up and down your spine."

Dick helped Charley over to the two-room shack and they were cordially welcomed. Three beds, some rude chairs and a table were the only furnishings of the house. Mrs. Hobbs was stoop-shouldered and faded-looking, but her eyes were kind and her voice motherly, thought the sick boy. She soon made him comfortable in one of the puffy feather beds and after the chill passed, he fell asleep to awaken hours later with a high fever. There was no one in the room except Mrs. Hobbs. She was bending over something on the table and talking to herself:

"I ain't heard a mention of the day for nigh onto ten year and here it is, 'For Sunday,' plain as the nose on yer face. When I useter go to meetin' I had a hat and a purty dress and—"

"I want water, please," begged Charley weakly. The woman started in confusion, but did as she was asked."

"Want anything to eat?" she inquired kindly. Charley said he didn't feel hungry.

"'Tother man brought you that little box on the table, 'fore he went fishin'."

"Went fishing? Why it's Sunday."

"He went with my ole man and the boys. They never pay no 'tention to what day it is. I ain't hardly thought of Sunday for years till I see Sunday writ on that box."

"My mother fixed that box for a pleasant surprise. If you'll hand it to me I'll open it."

(To be continued next week)

HAVE YOU TRIED THE DE BOUTVILLE HALF SPOON

which is advertised on another page? It is a most useful article for the kitchen and sick room. If your Union wishes to make money for local or campaign funds, write to the company for special terms to your union. Such an article should find a ready sale among your neighbors, benefiting them as well as your treasury.

NEW JERSEY W. C. T. U. COMRADES IN INSTITUTE

New Jersey state W. C. T. U. held its annual summer institute at Ocean Grove on July 20. The weather was perfect, the programs interesting, and the audience all that could be desired. In addition to many numbers by state workers there was a noontide Bible reading by Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, who took for her text "Be filled with the Spirit," and gave her audience an inspiring and uplifting message. In the afternoon Mrs. Armor, in her usual vigorous style, delivered an address on "The Irrepressible Conflict." One could not have listened to her prophetic words without feeling that there is victory in the air for the prohibition forces.

Miss Gordon Gives Greeting

A delightful surprise came in the presence of our beloved National president, who dropped in upon us unannounced and gave us a few words of heartfelt greeting.

At the evening session Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, speaking in her inimitable manner upon "Votes for Women," held a large audience spell-bound. Surely if there were "antis" in that vast company of people they must have been brought to a realization of the untenableness of their position as Miss Shaw demolished one by one their flimsy arguments.

"MAKING THE MAP WHITE" IN LOUISIANA

Special Correspondence

First Institute Work in State Proves Successful

The first of a series of five June institutes was held in Welsh by Jeff Davis parish. The attendance was good and the delegates were welcomed by Miss Edrie Doan and by seven little girls who sang a song. The response was given by the president, Mrs. Lionel Bertrand. Mrs. Wilkins, a former state president, offered a resolution endorsing woman suffrage, and pledging the aid of members of the W. C. T. U. in securing the franchise for women. Mrs. J. B. Lee presented the need of better temperance teaching in the Sunday school.

At an animated medal contest, which was one feature of the program, Miss Helen Stagg carried off the honors. Mrs. W. S. Norwood, state organizer, rendered valuable service, and delivered several fine lectures.

Mrs. Kate E. Wilkins conducted a school of methods, two white ribbon recruits were dedicated, and a model L. T. L. meeting was conducted by the children. The music was exceptionally good. Raymond, a new union, extended an invitation for the next convention, which was unanimously accepted.

A solo musical contest was a pleasing feature. Miss Olive Scoggis was the successful contestant. Rev. O. P. Harnish addressed an appreciative audience on "The Prohibition Situation in Louisiana."

The mid-year executive meeting, in connection with an all-day institute, was held in Alexandria. Important subjects were discussed, and plans for establishing the work at the port of entry in New Orleans were considered.

Fourth district institute was held in Winnfield, where exists one of the most alive and enthusiastic unions in the state. A membership contest was in progress, which promises a good ending. The editor of the Winnfield Times is also mayor of the town and an honorary member of the union. He has dedicated two columns of his paper to the temperance cause and the union has the privilege of filling the space.

Judge Moss is also an honorary member, and helps the women in many ways. His address on states' rights was sound doctrine, and was appreciated by a large audience, as was evidenced by rapt attention and applause. The young and popular pastor of the Presbyterian church rendered valuable assistance, in prayer and song, delivering on the last night a short and excellent address.

Fifth district institute at Haynesville was short and to the point. The local women responded beautifully to all that was required of them, and notwithstanding the fact that the weather was warmer than usual, the attendance was large, and every prospect pleased. On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Norwood delivered a fine address to a large audience. A large L. T. L. was organized at Winnfield and at Haynesville.

First district institute was held in Amite City. Half the unions in the district were represented, and the institute was a great success from start to finish. The delegates from Tangipahoa parish decided to form a parish organization and tour the parish "Flying Squadron" fashion. An editor spoke authoritatively on "The Power of the Press." A fine reading by Mrs. Gates of Loranger, the organization of another new union, splendid singing, and enthusiastic addresses by Mrs. Norwood and others, added to the interest. A number of subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL, and The Young Crusader were secured at each place. Mrs. Norwood was present at all five meetings, Mrs. A. C. McKinney, state president, was at three of the institutes, and rendered valuable help. Considering the fact that this is the first time institute work has been undertaken in earnest in Louisiana the results were very gratifying.

Mrs. M. C. M. Jones is touring the state and is meeting with marvelous success as a house to house visitor. As a result of her work, thus far, eleven new unions have been organized and the cause strengthened by the addition of new recruits. We hope to be able, in the near future, to add our state without spot or blemish to the list that is fast "making the map all white."

IN THE CURRENT MAGAZINES

McClure's for August, "The Hardest Ride a Man Can Take," by Maximilian Foster.

Everybody's for July, equal suffrage number, "Suffrage a World Wave."

The "DeBoutville" Half Teaspoon

Every local union can handle this article, to their financial advantage.

"Accuracy in measuring is the secret of successful cooking."

Indispensable in the Kitchen
Invaluable in the Sick Room

Solid Nickel Silver, for kitchen use (no brass), 25c
Std. A-1 Silver Plate, 50c. Solid Silver, $2.50

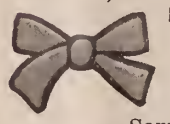
THE DE BOUTVILLE COMPANY
P. O. Box 295 Fitchburg, Mass.

W. C. T. U. PINS

A NEW PIN

Reproduction of the popular Scotch pin, in two styles
SCARF OR STICK PIN
BROOCH PIN
10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00

Loop Bow Pin, white enamel on sterling silver, with letters W. C. T. U.
Price, 60c; per doz. $6.50.
Smaller pin, same style
Price, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.20



Flat Bow, white enamel on silver, without letters
Price 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35
Same style on gilt
Price 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00

Blue Enamel Button or Pin for honorary members (State whether button or pin is desired)
Price each, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.75

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

A Wave of Prohibition

FACTS AND FIGURES

ready to be set in motion throughout the country by the use of the new

PROHIBITION FAN

(Octagon in shape; 7 x 8⅝ in.)

Prohibition map, date of adoption of prohibition by various states on the one side, printed in black; on the reverse side in blue, with white letters surrounded by an artistic arrangement of white ribbon border, the appeal

Protect Our American Youth by Prohibiting the Liquor Traffic

These fans are put up in packages of three dozen (36) and the price is

36 Fans, $1.00

Owing to difficulty in handling and shipping, the smallest order we can fill will be three dozen. Prices on larger quantities will be cheerfully furnished.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

SANITARY DRINKING FOUNTAINS

¶We make a large variety of ornamental Drinking Fountains for man and beast.

¶Special Prices to Charitable and Temperance Societies.

The J. L. Mott Iron Works
118-120 Fifth Ave. New York

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

Copyright by the J. L. Mott Iron Works

MANY L. T. L.'S OBSERVE MISS GORDON'S BIRTHDAY

The widespread and enthusiastic observance of July 21, the birthday of Miss Anna A. Gordon, leader of the Loyal Temperance Legions of the world as well as prosideut of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, has given to the children's work a new impetus. As a result of these meetings hundreds of new Legioners are enlisted in the war on King Alcohol, and other hundreds of little people will receive The Young Crusader. One of the many birthday greetings received by Miss Gordon told of the addition of one hundred new members to the Legions of New Mexico as a birthday offering to her. In Evanston, her own home city, during the afternoon of July 21, children's meetings were held in six different churches under the direction of Mrs. DeCoudres, president of the Marcy W. C. T. U. Among other birthday remembrances Miss Gordon was the recipient of a bouquet of forty silk flags of the nations in which Loyal Temperance Legion and W. C. T. U. enterprises are carried on, with a prophecy that through the work she is doing among the children of all nations, the world will soon be free from slavery to John Barleycorn.

"THREE OF A KIND"

GABRELLA T. STICKNEY
National W. C. T. U. Organizer

"I am glad you gave me such a warm welcome rather than a cool reception," was a double truth voiced by a guest at the triple birthday party giveu by the Pasadena (California) W. C. T. U. federation, July 21, as the sun was unusually generous with its heat that day. Sheltered in a grove of wild oaks, close by the dry bed of a stream that at the rainy season roars, rushes and destroys, surrounded by high hills and distant mountains, catching the laughter and shouts of the merry crowd in the near-by plunge, members and guests of the W. C. T. U. held their annual picnic. This year it was in honor of the birthdays of our National president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, of Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, state president, and Miss Mary E. Stewart, state treasurer. "Aunt Mary," formerly of Young Crusader acquaintance, introduced as Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, now of Alhambra, gave a most interesting talk on the child life of Miss Gordon, and many others contributed pleasant reminiscences of our honored leader. After Maurice Lindsley, a Loyal Temperance Legioner, read "The Birthday Lady," many responded to the invitation to send her their subscriptions to The Young Crusader. With prohibition songs led by Miss Lois Smith and a talk on "Week Day Sunday Schools" by Mrs. Grace Dutton, who has made such a success of one, we came to the lunch hour. Three birthday cakes adorned the table. The one for Miss Gordon was cut by Mrs. Fry, while Mrs. Irvine and Miss Stewart "put the knife to the heart" of their cakes. The afternoon program was under an immense oak tree on the terraced hillside. The L. T. L. was again represented by Clarence Burke and Paul Erikson who pleaded their cause well. Mesdames Chaffin, Cartzdafner and Booher sang "A Saloonless Nation in 1920" as most appropriate to follow the fine address on "Peace," logical and firm, given by the state president, who at its close, received from the local presidents a shower of pledge cards representing eleven new members as her birthday surprise.

Mrs. Julia D. Phelps, president, and Mrs. Frances Davenport, corresponding secretary, represented the Los Angeles County W. C. T. U. and Mrs. Cooper, of Brooklyn, gave greetings for her union. Miss Ethel Phelps, daughter of the county president, responded to her introduction with the words given at the beginning of this article. The members of the eight unions in the Federation cooperated so cordially that naturally the picnic was a great success.

HERE AND THERE

The children's work in Arizona has recently received an impetus through the organization of a new Loyal Temperance Legion at Phoenix with a membership of 200. The organization of this legion is due in a large measure to the efforts of Miss O. M. Pendleton.

Clinton, Mo., voted dry on July 23 by a majority vote of 227. Mrs. Carrie Lee Carter Stokes, National W. C. T. U. organizer and lecturer, has been working there continuously since July 1 under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. S. E. Hudson, county president, in reporting the victory, writes that Henry county is now entirely white.

The annual convention of the South Carolina W. C. T. U. will be held in Allendale, September 2-5.

Mrs. Imogen F. H. La Chance, president of the Arizona W. C. T. U., and her daughter were among recent callers at National Headquarters. Mrs. La Chance, who lives in Phoenix, reports that the prohibition law is being enforced in her part of the state and that officials are cooperating with the temperance people in freeing the commonwealth from the liquor curse.

The department of Journalism of the University of Oregon has recently been the recipient of copies of THE UNION SIGNAL dating from 1875, the gift of Mrs. Louise Howe Johnson, a subscriber since the publication of the first copy. The gift was tendered through the Creswell union of which Mrs. Johnson is a charter member. It will be preserved in the journalism museum.

Mrs. Eugenie Horne, wife of the pastor of the Presbyterian church of Blytheville, Ark., has trained a class of forty-five or fifty children who, in Young Campaigners' regalia, sing temperance songs and take part in contests in surrounding towns and villages. This work has created much enthusiasm, and many automobiles have been offered to take the children from place to place.

Miss Mary A. Lynch, state president of the Thurman union of North Carolina, with the assistance of Mrs. Adelaide T. Goodno, president North Carolina W. C. T. U., organized in Raleigh recently a union, a Y. P. B. and an L. T. L. Miss Lizzie Pope is the president of the new union and Miss Julia Amec will superintend both the Y. P. B. and the L. T. L.

W. C. T. U. ACTIVITIES IN TENNESSEE

Sixteen departments of W. C. T. U. work were represented in the poster parade at the institute of the Benton county (Tenn.) W. C. T. U., Mrs. Olivia Robins, president. The speaker on this occasion was Mrs. Silena M. Holman, state president. The L. T. L. enlivened the program with songs and recitations. A large gain in the membership of the unions participating is reported. Camden W. C. T. U. has increased its membership materially by means of a contest. A Y. P. B. of twenty members has been organized. Big Sandy union, which by the way has doubled its membership, under the direction of Mrs. Della Cantrell, president, had a fine Flower Mission program ou June 9. Fifty Loyal Temperance Legioners of Big Sandy were proud to have a part in the Independence Day parade. A hundred visits to the sick and suffering are reported to have been made by the Mt. Vincent union Flower Mission department. The L. T. L. of which Mrs. Gertrude Highfill and Mrs. Annie Craucy are secretaries observed Miss Anna Gordon's birthday with an outing and picnic.

NEW LEAFLETS

Substitutes for the Saloon
Advertise Your Speaker
Price per 50, 20 cents; per 100, 35 cents

* * *

Prohibition's Onward March
Revised to date
Price per 50, 20 cents; per 100, 30 cents

* * *

Beer from an Economic Standpoint
Truth About Beer
The Brewer's Slaves (Illustrated)
Behind the Bars for Life
Prohibition's Effect Upon Revenue and Business
Size 6x9 inches
Price per 50, 12 cents; per 100, 20 cents

* * *

A Plea from a Saloonkeeper's Daughter
Consumption of Liquor Decreasing
Drink and Divorce
Size 3½x6 inches
Price per 50, 10 cents; per 100, 15 cents

* * *

POSTER LEAFLET SERIES

Reproductions of posters in small leaflet form

1. Which Will You Protect?
2. Do You Know These Facts?
3. Alcohol
4. Beer
5. Drink Robs the Working Man
6. The License Voter Gets What?
7. Attention, Voters!
8. Figures Tell
9. Saloons Increase Taxes
10. The Trouble Manufacturing Co.
11. Compare These Figures
12. Boys and Girls
13. Not by My Vote
14. State Prohibition and Local Option
15. Railroads and Alcoholic Liquors
16. The Factory and Alcoholic Liquors
17. The Man Who Drinks
18. A Business Proposition
19. The Liquor Traffic Must Go

Price per 100, 10 cents

NATIONAL
W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

One-half of one bottle of wine or two to four glasses of beer a day depress every form of intellectual activity.—Prof. J. J. Abel, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

Alarmed at the progress of the anti-alcoholic movement, it is reported that a meeting of the Liquor Traders' Association has resolved to close all cafes in France if further restrictions are placed on their business.

Sanitary Drinking Fountains

Also Drinking Fountains for Man and Beast.

Special prices to W. C. T. U. and all Charitable Societies.

This Fountain was erected by the W. C. T. U. of Luray, Virginia.

Write for Catalogue

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS
56 & 58 Park Place
NEW YORK

Circulation Department

THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.00 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly 25c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 25c a year
Sample Copies to Subscription Solicitors, Institutes or Conventions, sent free upon request.
Single Copies, 2c each. Per 100, $1.75
Subscriptions to Foreign Countries:
THE UNION SIGNAL - - - $1.52 a year
Campaign Edition (monthly) 37c a year

THE YOUNG CRUSADER - - - 37c a year
Address Evanston, Ill.

A WORD TO THE WISE

With home duties, W. C. T. U. duties, and church duties clamoring simultaneously for your attention in these busy summer days, do not allow yourself to forget for an instant the importance of THE UNION SIGNAL to the all-round temperance worker. Would you, local president, be glad to have every member of your union enthusiastic, intelligent and capable? A never-failing prescription is the reading of the official paper. A systematic and generous study of it will make the kind of white ribboner that can stand her ground in any discussion of the temperance question and has ample and satisfying reasons for the faith that is within her. Urge once again that each member of your union supply herself with this indispensable aid. To interest those who are not familiar with the paper, call their attention to certain articles in your own copy which will be likely to attract them especially. See that those who lead the meetings are supplied with copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and they will quickly appreciate its value in planning an interesting program.

THE UNION SIGNAL has a two-fold mission. It will not only educate white ribboners along temperance lines, but it will make prohibition voters of the men in your community. For this purpose the Campaign Edition is particularly recommended. Why not follow the example of a Missouri union which used the proceeds of a medal contest for subscriptions to the SIGNAL. The influential men of your community should be supplied with the paper, the mayor, the aldermen, the preachers, the Sunday school teachers, the doctors, the editors of your papers, the business men and voters generally.

One way to bring to their attention our none-such temperance paper is through the liberal use of marked copies. Secure a supply of SIGNALS and mark the articles that would be likely to interest voters of different classes and professions.

SIGNAL SENT TO PUBLIC OFFICIALS

"Our union sends the Campaign Edition to our six pastors, the board of trustees and the sheriff," writes a member of the Catskill (N. Y.) W. C. T. U.

GIFT THAT SPREADS PROHIBITION FACTS

"My husband and another honorary member of our local union have donated to the W. C. T. U. a large number of prohibition fans for distribution in the churches," says a New York white ribboner.

A PRIZE WORTH HAVING

"Please send THE UNION SIGNAL to Mrs. Martha Hoyt of 2150 East 7th St., Long Beach, Calif. This is the prize won by the Central Union for the collection of 5,265 lines of temperance items for the local press."

CORNELIA ADELE TEAL,
County Press Superintendent.

"THERE IS THAT SCATTERETH, YET INCREASETH"

(Continued from Page Twelve)

meetings in their church, and Mrs. Doolittle was so burdened for her husband that she went to the evangelist and asked him to preach a tithing sermon for his last night there, and have the people pledge themselves to pay their tithe. This he was glad to do, and it was a gracious meeting, and the sermon couldn't be excelled. At the close, he asked all who would begin to pay tithes from that time to meet him at the altar for prayer. Twenty-eight responded and the first one there was Dr. Doolittle. It was marvelous, how soon he was able to finish paying for their home, and begin a bank account. Today he is a prosperous business man.

"I have a friend who says she cannot wear out her clothing any more and gives it away to be rid of it—as a result of tithing. She and her sister are partners in business with a man who is not a Christian. The ladies were tithing their private incomes and finally persuaded him to do likewise, and he was so rejoiced at the ease with which he could respond to the calls for charity, that they all agreed to tithe the business for one year, and the increase was a thousand dollars more than it had ever been before. He said, he had no desire to return to the old way. I know of a church, where men and women are really saved in the good old-fashioned way. At one time their membership was less than one hundred, and they decided to build a small church on some lots they already had, and planned it so they might add to it as their congregation increased. It is modern, with stained glass windows, and very neat and attractive. It cost them only eight thousand dollars, as the brethren did a large share of the work. They paid for it, and raised sixteen hundred dollars for missions that same year, and not one chicken pie stripped with veal did they have. Neither were there any millionaires among their membership."

Both ladies laughed over the chicken pie joke, and Mrs. June continued: "There is a solemn thought right here, if I did laugh. I remember one time reading where Jesus drove the buyers and sellers all out of the temple, 'and would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.' (Mark 11-15-16.) As I read that my door of vision opened and sitting with closed eyes, I beheld a long array of tired, jaded women come from somewhere near, and go up the hill of Zion, trailing behind them a lot of kitchen utensils, such as bean-pots, baking-pans, coffee-boilers, etc., as trophies of the Christian warfare, to lay at the feet of Heaven's King. It was all they had gleaned in the harvest fields of life; and I read not long ago, that a preacher said that if only the women would stay at home, the male membership would defray the expenses of the church gladly, but while the women are so determined to bake and stew, the men are going to submit."

Both women sat silent for some time, then Mrs. Bloom said, "If we all did that, where would come in our church sociability?"

Mrs. June answered, "I never found much sociability among the pots and kettles of a church dinner, and it surely is not to be found in tramping from door to door soliciting a cake or pot of beans for the big church dinner. Malachi has a good recipe for sociability in that same chapter—he is still talking about the benefits accruing to the tither—'Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another.' Think of that—time to go to prayer meeting, and enjoy it, too, and speak of the wondrous things our heavenly Father has done for us. 'And the Lord heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.'"

After some little thought Mrs. Bloom said sadly, 'O, if I wasn't so poor, but I feel I have nothing to begin tithing with; if my husband would only give me a share of his earnings, I could then undertake tithing, but as he buys the provisions and clothing and pays all expenses, how can I do anything? I know of other women also, who never had a nickel for church finances until they began to help with the dinners."

"O," said Mrs. June, "don't you know the Bible says, 'If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that which a man hath and not according to that which he hath not?' So if we hold ourselves ready, we shall see wondrous things. I am reminded of an elderly sister in the church, whose husband was a drunkard, who every Saturday night gave her what money she would need for household expenses for the coming week, and woe betide her if she overstepped her allowance. His share of his wages went over the bar of the saloon. This new duty was made very plain to her, as she listened to that wonderful sermon that night, and she was one of the twenty-eight who pledged themselves at the altar. Just then there was not a cent in sight, but she said, 'I'll be willing, and maybe I can do something.' She remembered that in buying supplies, she always bought the best, so decided in the future to buy second best, as many good people did, and she had money for her tithe, also a nickel a week missionary money for her mite-box. She died some years ago and the Lord was true to His promises. Loving hands ministered to her necessities in her long illness, while her face shone with the joy within."

"If we only had the money that belongeth to our King,
If the reapers of God's bounties all their tithes would only bring,
Then the windows of the heavens would fly wide at his command,
And he'd pour us out a blessing that would overflow the land."

—Pacific Christian Advocate.

The Complete Poems OF Mary A. Lathbury

POET LAUREATE of CHAUTAUQUA and a loyal and devoted member of the WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The book contains all of her lyrics and hymns and also
Portraits of the Author
Introduction by Bishop JOHN H. VINCENT
Foreword by Dr. W. GARRETT HORDER of England

Price, $1.25 Postpaid

THE NUNC LICET PRESS
920 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, Minn.

POST CARDS 20 FOR 25c

Artistically printed verses. Your own selection of the following four kinds:
A Prayer.
To My Son.
For Your Birthday.
A Birthday Message.

THE KEADMA COMPANY Rogers Park, Ill.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Vol. XLI | EVANSTON, ILL., AUGUST 12, 1915 | No. 33

OUR CONVENTION CITY

Photo by Curtis and Miller, Seattle

See Page 2

VIEW OF NORTH SEATTLE
FROM VOLUNTEER PARK

NATIONAL W.C.T.U. CONVENTION, SEATTLE, WASHINGTON
OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

OUR 1915 HOSTESS CITY

Seattle in the Making

Cuts by Courtesy of Park Board of Seattle

Mt. Rainier

Seattle began its existence as a seaport. The first settlers came by water, and these pioneers of more than sixty years ago, as they looked out over the finest harbor in the Northwest, saw down through the years to the Seattle of today, and here at the point where "the course of the empire" would be compelled to halt, they established the beginnings of a city destined by nature, as they believed, to be a great seaport. The faith of the early pioneers was handed on to their children and communicated to those who came to east in their lot with this prosperous colony on the shores of Puget Sound. The faith in the future of Seattle has been kept alive and has grown even faster than the city itself, and today, when it has reached a population hovering around the 300,000 mark, when sixty steamship lines and eight transcontinental railroads make it their terminus and trans-shipping point, the people of Seattle are looking forward to a time when their city will be one of the five largest in America.

The energy and optimism of the citizens of Seattle have come to be known as the Seattle spirit. This "Seattle spirit," the outgrowth of the faith of the early settlers, has overcome tremendous difficulties and has been the means of wonderful development. In 1870 the city was practically a rambling village covering a more or less extended area. In 1889 a great fire destroyed the business section, entailing a loss of $7,000,000. This disaster was immediately converted into a blessing. From a town of more or less frontier aspect, with rambling temporary buildings, there sprang up with astonishing rapidity a city of modern business blocks. This was accomplished in the face of great obstacles. The visitor who notes the fine business streets which the city's residents claim are the best lighted in America, and comments on the tall buildings—the L. C. Smith, forty-two stories, is the highest in America outside of New York—is amazed to learn that much of the business section has been created during comparatively recent years by the tearing away of formidable hills. These hills were dotted with buildings, and on one of them stood the most magnificent hotel of its day in the entire Northwest. The hills blocked expansion, however, and it was decided that they and all upon them must go. The huge hotel was torn down and hydraulic rams washed the hills away at an expense of many millions. For years the city bore the burden of the staggering costs, as well as the great inconvenience of constant regrading in the very heart of its business section. Miles of level streets, lined with imposing modern business buildings, today testify that it was worth while.

An equally important work which was completed more recently was a system of formidable and complicated harbor improvements, of which the Lake Washington canal is probably the most interesting. This canal connects a deep lake twenty miles long with tidewater and increases the harbor frontage of the city from fifty to one hundred and fifty miles. The locks are nearly equal in size to those of the Panama canal and will be operated free of toll by the Federal government. Miles of docks, built by private enterprises and the Port Commission of Seattle, line the waterways and make possible the shipping of cargoes valued at upwards of $100,000,000. The estimate for the year 1915 is $150,000,000. Seattle also has a large harbor ferry system for Lake Washington.

Play Festival, Volunteer Park

AN ILLUMINATING DEFINITION

"The men engaged in the liquor traffic are fond of referring to it as 'The trade,'" said Clinton Howard, in one of his ringing speeches in the Alberta campaign. "It is not a trade. A trade is an exchange of commodities, value given for value received. What value does the bar give to its customers in exchange for the money it gets? None. The patrons of the bar would be better off if they spent the money without consuming the goods. They would be better off if they got nothing at all for their money. What kind of a trade is it that leaves its patrons better off if they left the place after paying the money without taking along the goods? The patrons of the bar would be better off if they sent the money to the bar by mail or express and left the goods barreled and bottled under cork and bung. It is not a trade.

An Economic Desolation

"They call it a business. The Czar of Russia calls it 'an economic desolation.' What is it that makes good business, keeps labor employed, factories busy and wages high? Orders. Orders for immediate and future delivery. The commercial traveler is out for orders. He represents the manufacturer. The manufacturer depends on the retailer, and the retailer depends on the customer with needs to supply and money to buy. In what way does the liquor traffic affect business? It diverts $90,000,000 from the legitimate channels of trade in Canada every twelve months. Alberta last year poured $12,000,000 down the sluice hole of vice, and we are aiming to divert the channel of that stream into the cash registers of the butcher, the baker, the grocer and other legitimate and beneficent channels of trade, and we are told that this will hurt business! If twelve million dollars spent over the bars of Alberta makes good business, why not double their number and spend $25,000,000 and have better business? The gambler who takes your money and gives you nothing in return is a saint compared with the licensed bar.

When a man goes into a gambling den he either gets something for nothing or nothing for something. A man who gets something for nothing is a thief, a man who gets nothing for something is a fool, but the liquor traffic takes your money and gives you worse than nothing in return.

It Is Not a Business

"What is business? Business is a service rendered for profit. The men engaged in the grocery and drygoods and furniture lines of trade are rendering you a service and are entitled to a legitimate profit. You want the goods more than you want the money, they want the money more than they want the goods. You exchange values for a legitimate profit. That's business. A man can engage in that without sacrificing his religion, without damaging his character and without losing his self-respect. He does all three when he runs a bar. And they call it business! Business is a service rendered for profit; charity is a service rendered without profit. What is the liquor traffic? Profit without service, and profit without service is a crime. The liquor traffic is a crime. It not only takes exorbitant profit without service, millions of dollars every year, which would be a crime if it gave nothing in return, but it gives to society in return for the money it gets poverty, disease, insanity, idiocy, impurity, criminality, corrupted politics, wrecked homes and destroyed manhood. It takes millions of dollars from the pockets of the people and it costs the people other millions every year for what the liquor traffic gives them in return. The liquor traffic robs a man of his money, and commits an assault upon his person, his character, his family, his home, his country and his God. It is a national criminal on the highway of this Christian Dominion."

AN APPEAL TO REASON

Prof. Irving Fisher Tells Results of His Study

Every scholar who investigates with unprejudiced mind the merits of the liquor question reaches the conclusion that alcohol is an unmitigated evil. Dr. Irving Fisher, professor of political economy in Yale university, in a twelve page pamphlet which has recently been brought to our attention, gives the result of his study of the liquor problem. He says:

"In studying the conditions of health and efficiency during the last ten years, the conditions which enable an athlete, for instance, to be at his best, I have had occasion to examine the conflicting popular ideas concerning alcohol. I began the study quite willing to be convinced that alcoholic beverages have some virtue. But I have ended in the conviction that they have none, and I have found that this conclusion is almost universally reached by those who have examined the facts.

"These facts demonstrate that a man who takes alcohol, in even a moderate degree, is harming himself physically, mentally, morally and economically.

"The best recent statistics indicate that even moderate drinking is harmful. The results of the medico-actuarial investigation based on statistical data from forty-three American life insurance companies covering an experience of twenty-five years show (1) that individuals who took two glasses of beer or a glass of whisky or an equivalent amount of alcohol in any form, each day, showed a mortality eighteen per cent higher than the average of the group; (2) that the mortality among those who had indulged in occasional alcoholic excesses previous to their application for life insurance was fifty per cent higher than the average, which means the loss of four years to such lives; (3) that men who acknowledged the habit of indulging somewhat freely, but who were still considered acceptable for insurance, showed a mortality of eighty-six per cent higher than the average."

With this brief review of actual figures, he addresses himself to the members of his own classes and to college men generally. He dwells at some length on the effect of alcohol when used by athletes:

"That alcohol increases fatigue is now commonly recognized by athletes. Alcohol gives no increase of muscular power. It is not what we can properly call a stimulant, but a depressant. It is apparently a stimulant, because it puts to sleep the nerves that indicate fatigue, so that the person thinks himself relieved of fatigue. What it does is to make one unconscious of his fatigue. Various kinds of tests and exercises have proved that alcohol is a decided hindrance to muscular or athletic power.

"Financially, a young man is a distinct loser if he indulges in the use of alcohol. He loses money, the power to earn money and the power to keep employment worth while.

"If personal hygiene is a duty, it is the duty of every man to recognize the danger from alcohol to himself and to society. Instead of copying the habits of others, he may consider the responsibility of causing others to copy his. Today this requires very little courage. For so far has the anti-alcohol movement in the colleges proceeded that a man who frankly opposes its use is more respected than the man who condones it."

Motor Car Company Wants No Drinkers

Alexander Winton, founder and president of the Winton Motor Car company, of Cleveland, Ohio, says the rule barring users of liquor from his plant has been enforced since the factory opened and expresses the belief that no well regulated factory can afford to employ men who drink even in moderation.

"We do not allow any man to enter our plant with liquor on his breath or to drink at any time, if we know it," says Mr. Winton.

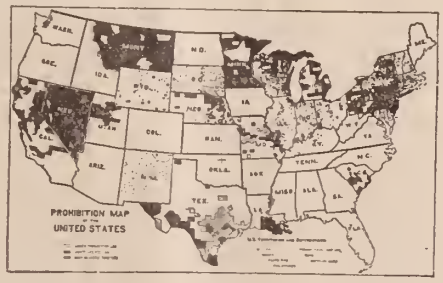
"No well regulated plant can afford to employ men who drink. Men who use liquor cannot be at their best and certainly cannot do efficient work if they are even slightly under alcoholic influence.

"I believe the use of liquor by employes will curtail the output of any plant, but we have never employed drinking men and so we have no means of comparing our product under any other than the present conditions."

The Winton plant employs about 1,200 men in Cleveland and almost an equal number in other cities.

The Worn Out Argument

A metropolitan "booze hoister" writes a newspaper in his home town, advancing the vast revenue derived by the government from the liquor traffic as an argument against prohibition on a national scale. That same line of talk has been sprung as an argument against a dry town, against county option and against state-wide prohibition, and is about as logical in one case as in another. Of course the merchandising of wet goods yields considerable revenue where it is regulated by the city, state or nation, or by a combine of these forms of government. But everyone knows who pays that tax; it is the people who purchase the stuff, and not the dealers, and the revenue part of it is a very small part of the price paid; indeed, all the money spent for liquor—and it is an enormous sum— is only a small part of the price. It is paid for not alone in money, but in health, morality, efficiency, happiness and other things more important than the money spent. The states that have gone dry are running along fairly well without the revenue from such a source.



EIGHTEEN PROHIBITION STATES

Maine	West Virginia
Kansas	Virginia
Oklahoma	Washington
North Dakota	Oregon
North Carolina	Colorado
Georgia	Arizona
Mississippi	Iowa
Tennessee	Arkansas
Alabama	Idaho

Recent Victories

St. Mary's county, Maryland, on August 3 voted to outlaw the saloons, thus making fourteen of the twenty-three counties wholly dry. Of the remaining counties all but one are dry in part.

Haddon township, Ind., including the towns of Carlisle and Paxton, voted dry by a majority of 338 at an election held July 27, an increase in dry votes of 74 over an election two years ago. Five hundred women and children took part in parades in Carlisle in the morning and afternoon of election day, and throughout the township women served sandwiches and lemonade at the polls. The township has been dry for eight years.

The State board of Education of California, to insure compliance by the teachers of the state with the scientific temperance instruction law and to provide them with proper material, has issued a bulletin which is to be distributed to the 15,000 teachers in the California schools. This bulletin, which deals with the subject of alcohol and efficiency, quotes the anti-alcohol utterances of the European rulers and army and navy officers.

Prohibition Summer Resorts

Along the sea-coast of black New Jersey Bishop Heller has pointed out that there are seven no-saloon spots. They are: Belmar, Avon, America-World Camp Meeting Ground, Bradley Beach, Bradley Park, Ocean Grove and Asbury Park. These are successful summer resorts despite the absence of liquor.

Asbury Park, N. J., is known by name at least to all white ribboners. It is a dry resort, not so easy of access from New York city as Brighton Beach, yet Asbury Park prospers each season, while all of the hotels at Brighton Beach, with one or two exceptions, are in the hands of rec ivers.

Long Beach, Calif., a widely known summer resort, has only good words for prohibition and its financial effect on the city. In twelve years under prohibition it grew from a village of 2,000 people to a city of 45,000 Its mayor, in a letter dated some months ago, says, "Apart from our climate and unique location we have no greater asset than that of a dry town. I believe fifty per cent of our population came here because no liquor is allowed to be sold."

"Machine Gun Squad"

Lantern slide brigades are among the recent and most effective institutions in the nation-wide campaign for prohibition undertaken by the national committee on prohibition. Squads of college students and members of the various state Y. M. C. A.'s, armed with stereopticons mounted on tripods, are now at work in Massachusetts and Minnesota. The lanterns are small and round like a teloscope and resemble in appearance a machine gun which has occasioned the nickname for the men of "machine gun squad." Their ammunition, however, consists of nothing more destructive than pictures and facts on prohibition of a wholly constructive character. Each stereopticon is furnished with sixty slides illustrating the practical side of total abstinence in terms of dollars and cents and labor. Two young men accompany each machine. The idea originated in California and it is expected that next year the slides will be shown in every non-prohibition state in the Union.

Independence Day Parade at Ketchikan, Alaska

The small water-wagon shown in the parade was the cause of a display of emotion on the part of the liquor dealers. Catching sight of it, just before the march started, the saloonatics put a beer keg on a wagon, placed a demijohn on top of it, draped the whole thing with black crepe, and as the temperance people started on their way, fell in just behind them. The incident set tongues in motion in favor of prohibition for Ketchikan. May it go dry!

TEMPERANCE 5,500 YEARS AGO.

MRS. JULIA R. PARISH

A foreign exchange has this interesting paragraph: "There is still in existence an Egyptian papyrus of the date of 3,500 before the Christian era which contains the following caution: 'My son, do not linger in the wine-shop or drink too much wine. It causeth thee to utter words regarding thy neighbor which thou rememberest not. Thou fallest upon the ground, thy limbs become weak as those of a child. One cometh to trade with thee and findeth thee so. Then say they, 'Take away the fellow for he is drunk!'" This is believed to be the oldest temperance lecture in existence.

Results were seen by these men of other days but not the cause of these results. Looking at the temperance question as we see it today one wonders at the stupidity of the ages and more at the stupidity of the present generation, for it is an incontrovertible fact that many "fall upon the ground"—"many limbs become weak as those of a child."

To the Woman's Christian Temperance Union came the sensible thought of finding out why they fell upon the ground; why the weak limbs; why the confused brain; why the redness of eye; why the sure deterioration of the drinker. So the experts were set to work and the laboratory became at once one of the strongest allies of the temperance cause. Today the cause has its "triple alliance" in the verdicts of "thus saith God, thus saith science, thus saith reason." Physiology has been a potent division of the great army, reason has been a sort of right wing, and now the batteries of the temperance forces must be made to go deeper than the body and they must bring out the fact of the ravages of alcohol upon nerve cells and through the nerve cells to the delicate influence of nerve degeneration upon the seat of consciousness—to the jumble in the "path of transmission" caused by the great destroyer. Surely ours is a high mission. It is infinitely higher than legislation, though we are pushing that with all possible zeal. The molding of the conglomerate mass of humanity into a healthful and sane public opinion is a Herculean task, but there is no such word as "fail" in our vocabulary. So let us keep our three allies active and some day a better public brain and a clearer public conscience will be our reward.

> It is not a question of personal rights, but a question of family cleanliness; it is not a question of states' rights, but a question of national sanity; it is not a question to be compromised. We can close the saloon absolutely. I have seen it done in my own state of Tennessee, in my own home town of Memphis.. We can put the brewer out of business; we can save our young men and young women. This republic was founded on liberty, not license, and the record of dry Kansas made side by side with wet Missouri, which shows five times as much wealth per capita, twice as much taxable wealth, and $10,000,000 available surplus school funds should convince any one that prohibition is the best policy.—Ex-Governor Patterson of Tennessee.

VOTE THE SALOONS OUT FOR THE SAKE OF THE YOUNG MEN, IS PLEA OF MURDERER

Max Schiff, who is under sentence of electrocution at an Ohio penitentiary for murder, is using the closing days of his life in an effort to warn others against the saloon, the rock which wrecked his life. He says that when he was not quite seventeen he entered the saloon of his brother-in-law to assist in the business, and there he met and became familiar with criminals. In an open letter to Mat Glaser, a former saloonkeeper, now allied with the dry forces, he gives the story of his life, and in it he places the blame for his present condition upon liquor. The closing paragraph of his letter is as follows:

"I have requested that this letter and all matters pertaining to my case be thrown upon the screen so that parents and young men and women will realize the dangers of the saloon. In my cell is a fellow-Russian, also awaiting the death penalty. He killed people while drunk. This is the personal liberty that the 'wets' are advocating. They allow you the personal liberty of drinking, but when drink has gotten you in trouble they desert you. The only men that come to your rescue are the moral people who do believe in bettering mankind. Dear people, vote the saloon out of the country for the young men's sake. Drink only makes degenerates and brutes out of human beings. Think of the home rule they talk to you about and then draw a picture in your mind of my home and ask yourself the question, who ruled my destiny, the home or the saloon?"

PRINTERS AND STRONG DRINK

It has been but a few years since there was a universal opinion that printers were large consumers of intoxicating liquors. For a man to state that he was a printer by trade was almost an indication that he was also a drinker. And in those days it was a fact that many printers, along with other skilled workers, were users of spirituous beverages to a considerable extent, and it was common for one to meet craftsmen who possessed strong liking for the "cheery (?) cup."

During the last decade, however, the great majority of artisans, especially workers in the printing trades, have seceded from The Ancient Association of John Barleycorn and have formed in its place The Improved Order of Abe's Ale. The liquor forces have not been able to clearly understand this remarkable reformation, but even the dealers in delirium tremens can see the handwriting on the wall.

The writer, who has been employed in some of the smallest as well as in some of the largest printing establishments in the country, has noted how rapidly drinking is diminishing among people engaged in the printing and allied trades, not to speak of workers in other industries. It is not too much to foretell that within a few more years it will be difficult to find an intelligent printer constantly addicted to the use of spirituous drinks. Printers everywhere are taking advantage of the big dividends paid by total abstinence.

In one large printing plant with which the writer was connected recently, only seven men out of a force of more than one hundred were not total abstainers from strong liquors, and only one of the seven was what is usually termed a "periodical."

In the composing room of a well known publishing concern, out of a force of seventy-two typographers only two were drinkers and these were of the "moderate" variety.

In still another publishing house, after "diplomatic" inquiry during a year's period, the writer discovered that with the exception of eleven the workers in all departments were "steady riders on the water wagon," and had been for years. More than two hundred people work in this establishment, and only eleven were patrons of strong drink.

This is not a Sunday school temperance lecture. It is a short paper on efficiency. When the average person takes a drink or two of whisky, for example, he is immediately less efficient in his thoughts, words or actions. Skilled workers know through observation that when a craftsman habitually indulges in strong drink, no matter how highly trained in his art he may be, sooner or later his work becomes inferior, and eventually the "blue envelope" comes through incompetency—Typographical Journal for July.

BOYS BANISH TOWN'S SALOONS

Georgetown, Ohio, although it gave a small majority against the home rule measure at the election last November, became automatically wet under the Beal law. Twenty high school boys who belong to a club having as its object the welfare of the town decided that the saloons must go from their community. With the aid of the teacher of a Bible class in the Presbyterian church to which more than half of the boys belong the club members procured petitions to have an election called, and with a thoroughness worthy of imitation they went from house to house by twos and secured signatures. After the election date was set both sides worked earnestly to bring out a large vote. The boys by personal interviews won to the dry cause men who had always before voted wet, and in some instances personally escorted to the polls the prohibition recruits. A victory of three to one for the dry forces rewarded their efforts.

Prohibition Demonstration in Hillsboro, Oregon

In the three-day celebration of Independence Day in Hillsboro, Oregon, the W. C. T. U., acting on the advice of Mrs. C. J. A. Jump, a former white ribboner of New York now living in California and at that time a visitor in Hillsboro, presented an exhibit of the Evangelistic, Press, Flower Mission and Peace departments of the W. C. T. U. There were three floats—the first a draped auto in which rode the officers of the local union carrying a "National Constitutional Prohibition" banner. The gaily decorated Flower Mission float contained eighteen young girls wearing on their heads wreaths and strewing blossoms as they rode. Eighteen young women in a float each wore across the front of her dress the name of a prohibition state. A woman in black, wearing the badge, "United States," and carrying a banner, "Vote Me Dry in 1920," rode in the last float. The whole exhibition attracted a great deal of attention and was awarded by the management the first prize.

"VOTES FOR WOMEN" AMMUNITION

GOVERNMENT AND SOCIETY WILL BENEFIT THROUGH WOMAN SUFFRAGE

HON. FRANK W. MONDELL, U. S. Congressman From Wyoming

Like the shot fired at Lexington, the act of the Wyoming legislature forty-five years ago, amid the snows of a little mountain town on the crest of the continent, has echoed around the world. Since then, and largely as a result of the causes then set in motion, the idea of equal suffrage has spread widely over the earth. In our own land twenty-one states have granted their women partial suffrage, in twelve states and one territory women now enjoy full suffrage rights, and more states are on the way. In due and logical course of events we are now to pass upon the question of giving the American people an opportunity to determine whether the rule of equal suffrage shall become the law of the nation.

If the unanimous testimony of experience and the convincing logic of successful demonstration are to be our guide, there can be but one opinion as to the benefits to government and society through the granting of the franchise to women. From every American state, from every foreign nation that has invited its women to participate in government, through the medium of the ballot, the testimony is all but unanimous, emphatic, and enthusiastic concerning the benefits and improvements to government and society which have followed and attended this extension of the franchise.

Go where you will in the lands of universal suffrage—among the free and hardy Norsemen; in the pioneer states of this Union; in the advanced and progressive commonwealth of Australia; and you will find but one opinion, and that enthusiastically favorable. The new and feeble notes of disapproval in any or all of these regions are of lesser volume and consequence than those which voice the opposition to any one among our most cherished and firmly founded institutions. Civilized society under free government has for generations been advancing steadily toward the practical application of the great truth penned by Jefferson, that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, by granting participation in government to all citizens who are subject to the tax burdens of government, and who must render obedience to and seek protection under the law. The only limitations in this advancing movement of enfranchisement, save the one of sex, have been directed to the exclusion of convicted criminals, the mentally deranged and incompetent, the grossly ignorant. We now seek to disassociate from these categories of crime and misfortune the daughters, the wives, and the mothers of men.

STATUS OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

FULL SUFFRAGE

Wyoming	1869
Colorado	1893
Idaho	1896
Utah	1896
Washington	1910
California	1911
Arizona	1912
Kansas	1912
Oregon	1912
Alaska	1913
Nevada	1914
Montana	1914

PRESIDENTIAL AND MUNICIPAL SUFFRAGE

Illinois	1913

STATES TO VOTE ON SUFFRAGE AT NEXT GENERAL ELECTION

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts

STATES TO VOTE IN 1916

Iowa, South Dakota, West Virginia

WHY THE "QUEENS OF THE HOME" SHOULD VOTE

HON. J. W. BRYAN, U. S. Congressman From Washington State

The home argument is the master reason why women should vote. If they are queens in the home they should have a voice in framing rules under which they must exercise their sovereignty. It is very hard to think of a law that does not affect the home. The price of food, the quality of the milk, the rate of rent—all these things affect it directly. Are not the women interested in the enactment of pure-food laws? Under legislative enactments designing ones have put profits above honesty. They have poisoned food to make dividends. They misbranded drugs, patent medicines, and every form of household necessities. Tomato catsup was composed of putrid ingredients. Frozen and desiccated eggs were placed on the market. Black olives were manufactured of decomposed substances. Ice cream was treated with boric acid. Coffee was poisoned with lead chromate. Flour was bleached with nitroperoxide. Olive oil was mixed with cottonseed oil. Flavoring extract was diluted with wood alcohol. Spices were combined with foreign material. Milk, skimmed and watered, was sold at full price. Peas, chicory, and cereals were mixed with coffee. Flour and shells formed a part of chocolate and cocoa. Cane syrup was diluted with maple syrup. Candy was finished with shellac coating. Habit-forming drugs were sold under pretense of curing disease. Yet women have no interest in legislation.

Women, you say, are queens of the home; they would lose that valuable privilege and honor if they were to vote. Do you suppose a mother is not more interested in pure milk for her baby than in being cajoled with the empty title of "queen"? If pure milk can only be had by proper sanitation rules and health regulations, does not common sense suggest that those who best understand and most earnestly desire pure milk should have a voice in who makes the rules?

But they say women would be unsexed if they had the ballot. They were still women after 9,000,000 and more had been tortured to death as witches. The white-slave traffic prospered all those years until an awakened sentiment compelled the passage of the Mann Act and abatement laws in several states, and the suffrage state of California led in the enforcement of the Mann Act, but the women survived it all. A more ridiculous argument could hardly be suggested. Women brave all the hardships of pioneer life; they survive the horrors of war, panics, hard times, poverty, and all that, but to vote once every year or two would make them masculine. One who does not live in a suffrage state and a suffrage home can not understand how unspeakably senseless the suggestion is.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

"It is glorious to man a Lifeboat, but better to build a Lighthouse"

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER, National General Secretary Young People's Branch, Evanston, Ill.

5,000 NEW MEMBERS BEFORE THE YEAR CLOSES!

MRS. ROSS HAYES SCHACHNER

A certain Wisconsin high school has this for its motto: "Impossible is un-American." Do you believe this, young people? You do if you are real, thorough Americans (and I'm sure you are) and believing it, we shall have our 5,000 new members ere this year closes and neither hard times nor hot weather shall prevent us.

Mail has not ceased to come to me during the summer days, and so I know that always, somewhere, someone is busy from Maine to Washington. And somehow, here in the very center of the land, I can feel the pulse of your enthusiasm and your "greater-than-ever" activity. Please do not forget, in the midst of all this activity, that I can not prove your advance, when the day for reporting arrives, save by your paid-up membership. If you have ten members in your Branch, will you see that dues are collected for ten members; if you have fifty members, will you do the same and see that the money is sent on through the proper channels? We shall thus be proud of the result.

Surely those 20,000 men in Paterson, N. J., who at the close of Billy Sunday's great "Booze" sermon arose and thereby declared that God could count on them in this fight against the liquor traffic did not reserve the summer months as a vacation period. Having given our word to God that we will do all in our power to discourage the use of and traffic in intoxicating liquors, let us exert our powers in August as well as in December—in other words, let us be "everlastingly at it."

There was never such ample cause for our encouragement. Whereas a few years ago young people generally were indifferent to reform movements and tabooed any alliance with the temperance reform in particular, looking upon it as a movement confined to their elders, they are now volunteering their services and performing them right loyally. Read in this Y. P. B. edition the accounts of various state Y. P. B. meetings, as well as the opinions of college men along temperance lines and they will speak very loudly for themselves! Think of it! 3,000,000 Christian Endeavorers (and we are all in reality Christian Endeavorers) through the 10,000 delegates at the recent international convention in Chicago, pledged themselves to work for "A Saloonless Nation in 1920 and a World with every Nation Saloonless in 1930." Can the day of National Constitutional Prohibition be far off when so many young men and young women, valiant and strong, are spending their best efforts in its behalf? Let us measure up, dear young people, to the full stature of Christian citizens, and laying aside every weight "run with diligence the race that is set before us."

To Local Presidents—A Word

We wish all Branch members read THE UNION SIGNAL. There are some, however, who do not. And for fear that the above appeal concerning dues may not reach them otherwise, will you not kindly look into the matter for your Branch, urging that all dues be sent in promptly. This will swell your report as well as theirs.

OHIO YOUNG PEOPLE IN MID-YEAR INSTITUTE

GRACE LEHENTALER, Corresponding Secretary State Y. P. B.

The annual mid-year institute and training school of the Ohio Y. P. B. was held July 13-15 at Lakeside, a beautiful place on Lake Erie, which is very attractive because aside from the pleasures the lake affords a fine Chautauqua program is given each evening. The institute opened with the state Y. P. B. president, Mr. Rae Vaughn, presiding and fifteen counties represented. The county secretaries' hour was helpful. The topics discussed were "Five Most Important Departments to Work," "Is Our Pledge Too Strong," "How to Answer the Sweet Cider and Soft Drink Questions," and "How Keep Branches Alive and Active." Our loved National secretary, Mrs. Ross Hayes-Schachner, was with us, and by her enthusiasm and eloquence inspired us anew. The state superintendents' hour was most valuable, each exploiting "How to Push My Department." Mrs. Schachner delivered an address on "How Can Young People Best Advance Civic Righteousness?" She said the best way was by gaining new members for our society, as righteousness is what our organization stands for. She presented to our state secretary, Mrs. Mary S. Powers, a beautiful prize for the best report in April. A question box followed, conducted by Mrs. Powers.

In the afternoon of the second day the session opened with a roll-call of Branches, each giving "Best Work and Greatest Problems." Mrs. Schachner delivered an address on "How Best to Aid in the Campaign for National Prohibition?" This was very helpful and was followed by a discussion of plans for our state campaign. The topics of the study course, dues, and "Federation for City Branches" were also discussed by members of local Branches.

The morning session on the fifteenth, a combination of Y. P. B. and L. T. L., was in charge of Miss Mary B. Ervin, state and National secretary of L. T. L. work. In the afternoon the Y. P. B. had charge of the program in the auditorium. Mrs. Ross Hayes-Schachner gave an address on "A New Patriotism." "We honor the old soldiers for fighting for their country," she said, "but the young men now are fighting for their country against the liquor traffic with ballots instead of bullets." Living pictures given by the young people followed. The first was "Columbia," partly covered with black spots to represent the wet states. The young men voters were taking off the black spots when woman suffrage came in and helped to get them off faster. The next was the "Booze Agents' Rehearsal," in which the young people represented Gin, Beer, Whisky, Wine, etc., and each repeated a dirge because the physicians are not to use it any more. The last was the burial of "John Barleycorn." At the side were signs reading "John Barleycorn's Bier." Young people followed singing a funeral dirge. A young man representing the liquor traffic took flight when he saw "John Barleycorn" was dead.

The institute closed with a banquet in the evening. Toasts by the young people to "Our State W. C. T. U. and Y. P. B. Officers" and to "Our Campaign," and short talks by Mrs. Schachner, Mrs. Powers, the state secretary, Mrs. Jaite, the state W. C. T. U. treasurer, and Mrs. Frances E. Fuller, state W. C. T. U. vice-president, made an interesting program.

Ohio Young People versus the Liquor Traffic

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH

Young People of the "Keystone State" in Conference

PENNSYLVANIA YOUNG PEOPLE MEET

MISS EDNA SMILEY, State Y. P. B. Secretary

The Y. P. B. convention of Pennsylvania, which convened in Wilkes Barre, June 21-25, meant much to its young people. Memories of the beautiful consecration service on the first morning, conducted by Miss Eckman, Evangelistic superintendent, will always abide in the hearts of the hearers.

The question, "How May Results Be Accomplished in Anti-Narcotics," was ably discussed by Claude Edgett, department superintendent, by Prof. Hart, and by other persons. It was thought wise to furnish education in regard to Coca Cola and other "soft drinks."

"The work of temperance," said Miss Carrington of Philadelphia, "is to 'take the world for Christ'; God and the Church are for us." She gave the colored woman's opinion that if the first woman could turn the world upside down, the present women can turn it back again. Our intention is to strike out this curse, to stamp it out, and stab it hard. May God hasten the time when bells from every steeple shall ring out "Freedom From King Alcohol."

The lecture, "Personality Is Power," given the first evening by Dr. Charles Wesley Burns, a former state president, was greatly enjoyed. Many examples of great personalities were given but none the less great was our "Queen Mother," Mrs. Elma M. Preston. "Twenty-five years from now," said Mr. Burns, "we can say she was the power back of our organization. The saloon germ must be destroyed before we can hope to destroy the saloon. The means of destroying the germ is by converting the masses. Booze is on the run. It has been kicked out of Russia and France. Back of all this has been some great personality."

Mr. and Mrs. Varney, who have delighted audiences in many states, spent one day at the convention. Mr. Varney in his address on "Ridding Ourselves of Habit" gave several valuable suggestions.

The seventeenth chapter of Matthew was the key-note of Mrs. Varney's service. "Young people must be taught," she said, "passage after passage, for the time has come when all must be personal evangelistic workers." Vision is needed in all lines of work. Christ came from communion with God to do service to man. In this same spirit we should act. The cause of much backsliding is that after we have received a vision we fail to come down and serve. We are often tempted when climbing upward to go back to earth and worldly things. We must keep on climbing and come at last to the mountain where we can look abroad on all the grandeur of God's creation. We cannot cure feeble-mindedness but we can find the cause. We must drive out alcohol and its evils from our state and nation. Alcohol is back of all need for welfare work."

In closing her address Mrs. Varney invited all who wished to consecrate their lives to Christ and the cause of temperance to come forward. A great solemnity came over the audience and many responded.

Six contestants orated in the Burns' contest held one evening. The first prize of ten dollars was awarded to Mr. Chaplin; the second prize to Miss Anna Michener.

The last day of the convention was devoted to recreation at one of Wilkes Barre's beautiful parks.

ANOTHER STIRRING MESSAGE TO YOUNG PEOPLE FROM DANIEL A. POLING UTTERED AT THE CHICAGO CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

The campaign cry that by 1930 strong drink must be banished from every portion of the globe was raised by Daniel A. Poling, acting president of the United Society for Christian Endeavor, who four years ago put up the motto, "A Saloonless Nation by 1920."

"Millions are now persuaded," he said, "that by 1920 the legalized liquor traffic in this country will be a black memory of a barbarous past. But it is no time to lay down our arms. Even before one victory is completely won let us lay plans for further conquests. With Russia under prohibition already, drastic regulations in England and Germany and France, and with the United States dry in 1920, we can go forward in ten years until there is not a legalized saloon on the face of the earth.

"It is for us, the young people of the world, 3,000,000 strong, to sound forth the new battle cry. Let us push forward until there is not a legalized saloon on the face of the globe. We can do it by 1930 if we will."

"How dare you champion a thing you can't pray for?" demanded Mary Harris Armor recently of an audience at the First Methodist church of Erie, Pa. "How dare you say, 'Thy will be done on earth,' and go out and sign a liquor license application? How dare you pray, 'Deliver us from evil,' and put a stumbling block in the path of your neighbor's son? You do these things," continued Mrs. Armor, "every time you excuse the liquor traffic, every time you vote for the liquor interests, every time you put your name on an application for licensing the sale of liquor in your community."

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, MISS ANNA A. GORDON
MANAGING EDITOR, MISS JULIA F. DEANE
CIRCULATION MANAGER, MISS ADDIE A. AUSTIN

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors to The Editorial Department, THE UNION SIGNAL, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

SUBSCRIPTIONS may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittances of $1 or under.

THE DATE on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires.

REMITTANCES should be made by draft on New York or Chicago or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
FOREIGN POSTAGE 52 CENTS ADDITIONAL
CAMPAIGN EDITION (MONTHLY) 25c A YEAR

Address all business communications to

THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., postoffice as second-class matter.

463

Evanston, Illinois, August 12, 1915

National W. C. T. U. Convention, Seattle, Wash., October 9-14, 1915

GOAL FOR 1915—FIFTY THOUSAND NEW MEMBERS

A GOOD INVESTMENT

A safe and profitable investment is always worth considering. Such an one is the National W. C. T. U. Convention proposition. Read carefully the Transportation Notes on page 11. Ponder well the unusual attractions offered on the going and return trip and the remarkably low rate for which the journey can be made. It would be difficult to find a more advantageous way in which to invest the amount of money required. It will pay you dividends of satisfaction, information, education and inspiration.

The trip across the continent and the stops at the five principal cities on the Pacific Coast: Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego, alone will be a liberal education.

The opportunity for association with W. C. T. U. leaders, for interchange of ideas and plans, and general enlightenment as to methods will be invaluable to every member of a local union.

The cause of prohibition in your community cannot fail to be promoted by your attendance at the great National Convention. The inspiration you will receive from the eloquent speakers on the program, as outlined in the Convention Call on this page, will give to the movement in your home town or city a mighty impetus.

Do not delay writing at once to Miss Katharine K. Adams, Evanston, Ill., concerning your sleeper reservation on the White Ribbon Special.

The Official Call for the Forty-Second Annual Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 9-14, 1915

The Forty-second Annual Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the Plymouth Congregational Church, Seattle, Washington, October 9-14, 1915.

The first meetings of the Official Board and Executive Committee will be held Saturday, October 9, morning and afternoon. The Convention will open Saturday evening and close Thursday evening.

Membership of the Convention

Article V. of the constitution of the National W. C. T. U. provides that "the meeting shall be composed of the Executive Committee, one delegate-at-large from each auxiliary state union, one delegate from every five hundred paying members of auxiliary state unions, state vice-presidents-at-large, state corresponding and recording secretaries and treasurers, National lecturers, chairmen of standing committees, the editors of state W. C. T. U. papers and state secretaries of the Young People's Branch and state secretaries of the L. T. L. Branch. Territories and the District of Columbia may be represented on the same basis.

"The Young People's Branch of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union in each state shall be represented by its Branch secretary, and one delegate for every 500 young women paying dues. The Loyal Temperance Legion Branch of the National W. C. T. U. shall be entitled to one delegate-at-large from each auxiliary state union and one delegate from each auxiliary state union for every one thousand members having paid $50 into the National treasury; all such delegates to be active members of the W. C. T. U. and active workers in the L. T. L."

According to Article IV. of the constitution, the Executive Committee consists of the General Officers of the National W. C. T. U., the presidents of states, territories, and the District of Columbia, the general secretaries of the Young People's and L. T. L. Branches of the W. C. T. U., the board of superintendents, the board of organizers, the evangelists, the managing editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, the managing editor of The Young Crusader, the director of the Bureau of Publicity, the National press correspondent, and the National musical director.

Special Features

On Saturday evening welcomes from prominent men and women of the hostess state and city will be given. On Sunday morning the Annual Sermon will be delivered by Dr. Hugh G. Ross, the pastor of the Convention church. On Sunday afternoon platform speakers of our own organization will be heard. The Sunday evening speakers will be The Right Reverend Walter T. Sumner, D. D., Bishop of Oregon, and Daniel A. Poling, acting president of the United Society for Christian Endeavor.

The President's Annual Address will be given on Monday morning, at ten o'clock, and will be followed by the reports of the Corresponding Secretary and the General Secretaries of the Branches. Commencing Tuesday, October 12, the regular meetings of the Convention will be held only in the afternoon. Each morning in the Convention hall department institutes under the auspices of the Board of National Superintendents will occur.

Attractive and varied programs have been arranged for the evening meetings. On Monday evening, (World's W. C. T. U. night), distinguished speakers from abroad will address the Convention, and there will be a demonstration by children.

Tuesday evening the program will be furnished by the National Board of Organizers and Lecturers.

Wednesday evening a grand diamond medal contest will occur, and on Thursday evening the Convention will close with a jubilee by the states making notable gains in membership.

Let us greet our hostess white ribboners and our Pacific Coast comrades with a large, representative assemblage, gathered from all sections of our land. Each state in the far east, south and north will find it well worth while to send a full quota of delegates to Seattle and to the National Temperance Council demonstration at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. It will be a rewarding trip.

As we observe the day of prayer for our convention, let us earnestly beseech the King of Kings to give to the warring nations the spirit of Him who came to bring peace upon earth, good-will to men. Let us pray that our councils may be divinely guided and that our organization may become a still greater power among the mighty spiritual forces that have for their inspiring program the world-wide triumph of total abstinence and the complete destruction of the legalized liquor traffic.

ANNA A. GORDON,
President.
FRANCES P. PARKS,
Corresponding Secretary.

THE CALL TO PRAYER

